9 PERSONS MEET VIOLENT DEATHS

Three Youths Burned to Death at Weston in Disused Building

(By The Canadian Press)

Nine persons met violent deaths in eastern Canada during the weekend. Three youths were burned to death near Toronto, three persons were injured fatally in traffic accidents, a hunter died of gunshot wounds, a miner was crushed to death in a rock fall and a youth was killed in a shooting accident.

Robert Duncan Campbell, 17, John Hopkins, 19 and Kenneth Rhodes, 16, all of Weston, Ont., were burned to death early Saturday when fire destroyed a disused building formerly used by an athletic club at Weston.

Water Switzer, 48, of Toronto was killed early Sunday when struck by a car while walking along a highway near Scarborough, a suburb of Toronto.

Overturn of Car Fatal

Pte. Carroll J. Howes of Pine Camp, U.S.A., was killed and two other persons seriously injured Saturday night when a car overturned on the Ottawa-Prescott highway near Kemptville, Ont.

Two-year-old Lise Laberge of L'Ange Gardien near Quebec City died Saturday of injuries suffered when crushed under the wheels of an automobile.

Frankie LeBlan, 34, former well-known hockey player of Dalhousie died in a hospital at Campbellton, N.B., Saturday after he was shot while hunting.

Crushed beneath a fall of rock, 63-year-old Jules Devereaux was killed Saturday while at work in No. 24 colliery of the Dominion Coal Company.

Leo Fugure, 15, of Campbellton, N.B., was killed Sunday when a rifle dropped to a barn floor while he was target shooting.

St. Andrew's Church Extends Call To Rev. T. G. Hornsby

Meeting for the purpose of choosing a minister from a number who had preached on call since the departure of Rev. W. J. Walker last June, congregation members of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Friday evening voted unanimously to call Rev. T. G. Hornsby of Owen Sound to Belleville.

As the result of the meeting the call has been extended to Mr. Hornsby, although this morning session officials of St. Andrew's Church had not yet been notified of his acceptance. A communication from Mr. Hornsby confirming acceptance of the call to Belleville is expected momentarily.

Mr. Hornsby has been minister at the Owen Sound church for a number of years, it was learned, although his previous charges were not known by local session members. Mr. Hornsby is married with two children. A daughter was recently married, while their son is of collegiate age.

"PICKLE PACKERS LEFT IN PRETTY PICKLE"

Portland, Ore., Oct. 18 (AP)—The Oregonian Portland newspaper, gave this report of the harvest situation: "Pickle packers' prospects of getting pickel pickers to pick pickles for pickle packers to pack are poor. Pickle pickers let pickles go to rot to partake of pleasant pickin's in war production, leaving pickle packers without pickles to pack and in a pretty pickle."

9 Harvard Planes To Drop Leaflets Over the City

Nine Harvard planes will roar low over the city on Tuesday afternoon dropping thousands of Victory Loan pamphlets and heralding the approach of a mechanised convoy, which will parade through the city streets shortly after five o'clock.

The convoy appropriately termed a Victory Armored Column will enter the city from the west and tour the city after a brief pause at the Market Square.

With the armored column will be a crack precision squad of the Royal Canadian Air Force numbering some forty-five men. This squad will give demonstrations of their famous drill at various points in the city.

The convoy will be composed of two "jeeps," two universal Bren gun carriers, a field artillery tractor with a twenty-five pounder gun and four other armoured vehicles.

Following the tour of the city the convoy will halt at the Market Square where the vehicles will be open to the general public for inspection from six p.m. until nine p.m. Trained men of the Canadian army will be in attendance and explain the workings of the various vehicles to all who evince interest. The convoy will remain in the city overnight and leave for eastern points on Wednesday.

The Market Square, City Hall officials announced today, will be closed off from Front to Pinnacle Streets from three o'clock until nine o'clock Tuesday night, and the driving public is requested to refrain from parking automobiles in this space during that time.

O.V.C. Inspected By Major Wismer

Immaculate in their trim uniforms of blue, the Belleville and Peterboro units of the Ontario Volunteer Constabulary earned high words of praise from Major I. F. Wismer, D.C.M., Croix de Guerre, Deputy Superintendent of the O.V.C., following an official inspection here yesterday. Major Wismer was assisted in the inspection by Major Harold Seldon, Belleville, District Inspector.

The Belleville unit was in charge of Lieutenant Arthur Seymour, while the Peterborough detachment was under the command of Captain A. Aulthouse.

Before the keen eyes of the inspecting officers the units gave demonstrations of First Aid and drill. The Peterborough units gave an interesting demonstration of the convergence of a unit upon a given point through the medium of automobiles. The demonstration was given without uttered words of command.

Major Wismer stated that he was greatly impressed with the work being done here and was pleased with the local unit's efforts in connection with the Civil Defence Committee.

Both units made a creditable showing despite the fact that the Belleville unit's numbers were cut down considerably due to a number of its men being assigned for traffic duty with city and provincial officers during the Victory Loan Parade yesterday afternoon.

In connection with that, all officers including the city police under Chief Walter Probert and the Provincial Police earned the appreciative comments of Victory Loan officials for the efficiency with which they controlled both vehicular and pedestrian traffic during the parade.

Seven United Nations Merchant Vessels Sunk During the Past Week

(By The Associated Press)

At least 233 persons were dead or missing in an intensive stepping up of submarine warfare last week which claimed seven United Nations merchant vessels in the western Atlantic, official announcements disclosed, but 280 others were rescued and safely landed at Allied ports.

The most spectacular torpedoing occurred when U-boats ranged into Canadian coastal waters to sink the ferry steamship Caribou, in that area's greatest marine disaster of the war. One hundred and thirty-seven men, women and children perished in the sinking, the tenth reported in those waters.

Southward, the Brazilian government reported the loss of two freighters to undersea raiders operating off the South American coast. The sinkings marked Brazil's 20th. and 21st. marine losses since early this year.

Reports from West Africa, where United States troops recently have been landed and R.A.F. patrols are hunting enemy submarines along the West African bulge, point to launching of an intensified U-boat campaign to cut off the Allied supply line around the Cape of Good Hope to the Red Sea. Announcements revealed that a fleet of new-type German U-boats, driven from the warship-patrolled North Atlantic, now are being supplied by bases in neutral territory, presumably the French Ivory Coast, and are preparing for a large-scale campaign in North Africa and the Middle East.

Almost certain signs of successful Allied counter-blows against the submarine menace in the western Atlantic were shown in Marine Underwriters' reductions on cargo war risk rates between United States and Latin American ports. However, an increase of voyages between United States, African and several far eastern ports apparently measured the potential Axis strength in those areas.

Successful U-boat attacks announced since Oct. 11 included two American merchantmen, two Brazilian, one British, one Panamanian and one unidentified Allied.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Oct. 19 (CP) — Gold stocks recorded another decline on Toronto exchange today. Industrials were off narrowly and base metals posted minor gains.

Golds weakened .55 and issues declining 3 to 5 cents were Kerr-Addison, San Antonio, Upper Canada, MacLeod-Cockshutt, Macassa, Leitch, Aunor and some others. Dome and Hollinger gained slightly. Waite Amulet and Ontario Nickel were stronger.

Hiram Walkers common dropped 1⅛ to 46. The preferred was down ¼ to 19. Canadian Car pfd., Brazilian and Consumers Gas were other weak spots.

WALL STREET

New York, Oct. 19 —(AP)— The stock market was a narrow and leaderless affair today but its undertone remained relatively steady despite minor loss of ground by some of the pivotal issues.

Absence of any volume selling was regarded by brokers as a good sign in view of the recent broad upswing and the general concern over the outcome of the presently developing Japanese offensive on Guadalcanal.

Aircrafts drew a little support at slightly higher levels as did some Specialties, Copper and Rails. Steels and Motors were a bit backward at times and near the fourth hour trends were uneven. Trading activity was well under last week's average.

Stocks giving a fairly good account of themselves included Sears Roebuck, Glenn Martin, Sperry, Air Reduction, American Can, Owens-Illinois, Phelps-Dodge, Kennecot, Santa Fe, Erie, Great Northern and Chesapeake & Ohio. Inclined to dip were Bethiehem Steel, General Motors, U.S. Rubber and Eastman Kodak.

Livestock

Toronto, Oct. 19 (CP) — Cattle trade was slow on the livestock market here up to mid-session today and 25 to 30 cents lower on slaughter cattle. Veal calves, lambs and sheep were steady. No price was established for hogs.

Weighty steers sold at $9.50-$10.75; butcher steers and heifers $9-$10.26; butcher cows mostly $7-$8.50, with canners downward to $5.25; fed yearlings $10.50-$11.75; stockers $9-$10.75 with stock veals up to $11.50.

Calves sold at $15-$15.50 for choice vealers with other grades downward to $10 and grass calves mostly $9.

Sheep traded at $3.50-$9.

Hogs closed previously at $16.35 dressed weight at yards or plants.

Montreal, Oct. 19—(CP)—Cattle 1,443; calves 2,519; hogs 2,086 and sheep 6,705.

Good steers $10.25-$11 and mediums $9.25-$10. Heifers $7-$9.50 with a top of $10 and a few fed calves $10-$12. Good cows $8-$8.50, mediums $7.25-$8 and commons down to $6.50. Canners and cutters $5-$6.25 and common bulls $7.25-$8.

Calves 25 to 50 cents lower, veal calves $11-$14.50. Drinkers $9-$10.50 and drinkers and grassers in mixed lots $7-$9 with bulk $8.50 to $8.75. Yearlings $6.50-$7.25.

OCCUPIED LANDS

The Fighting French news agency said the Vichy government, unsuccessful in its efforts to recruit enough workers to satisfy German demands, had agreed to naturalize the secret police agents to facilitate their work.

Pierre Laval's Legionaries and members of the pro-Nazi French popular front of Jacques Doriot will co-operate with the Gestapo men, who will operate in small flying squads, the agency declared.

Registration Begins

This reported move coincided with an announcement by the Paris radio that registration of all men between 18 and 50 for forced labor would begin today in the unoccupied zone under a decree issued by the Vichy government September 19. Women between the ages of 21 and 35 also are subject to call "to effect all labors which the government may judge useful in the higher interests of the nation."

The Vichy radio, meanwhile, broadcast a warning to Frenchmen saying it is their duty to answer German calls for manpower in order to avoid "fresh painful military action and avert new catastrophies."

Laval himself, was reported back in Vichy after an urgent week-end conference with German officials in Paris concerning disorders which broke out last week at Lyon Chambery, Annecy and Amberieu as a result of his efforts to sell his countrymen into bondage.

Laval in Tough Spot

Fighting French sources intimated Laval was in a tough spot, for they said his efforts to comply with German demands would only provoke fresh violence.

A Vichy announcement said one Frenchman had been executed by a firing squad at Lyon Saturday for "an attack against the external security of the state" but did not make clear whether there was any connection between the execution of last week's disorders.

Reports from various sources told of strong measures being taken by German occupation authorities in other lands to put down unrest and meet the threat of a possible Allied invasion.

In Norway, dispatches from Sweden said the Germans have ordered all Americans placed under arrest, presumably to prevent their working with Norwegian patriots engaged in sabotage.

The same sources said all shipping entering the Norwegian port of Stavanger has been placed under strict control "as a precaution against a generally-expected Allied invasion or landing."

Afraid of Invasion

In Holland the Germans were reported to have executed 15 Netherlanders for recent acts of sabotage and were said to be speeding a mass evacuation of the population from coastal areas where invasion defences are being strengthened.

From the Vichy radio came a report that Karl Hermann Frank, German Secretary of State for Bohemia and Moravia, had ordered the relatives of "all Czech agitators who have taken refuge in London" to be sent to concentration camps. Frank warned the Czechs that wholesale executions have not wiped out the "blood debt" they owe as a result of the assassination of Reinhard Heyrich, Gestapo hangman responsible for countless executions throughout Europe.

This ominous statement was followed by a Reuters news agency dispatch from Zurich reporting that seven Czechs had been executed at Prague for possession of hunting rifles, trading on the "black market," high treason and "Communist activities."

Airfield Still Intact

bombs, including many 1,000 pounders, on enemy ships. In the last four attacks a cargo vessel was strafed and set on fire and seven flying boats were destroyed or damaged.

"The last raid saw enemy vessels burning fiercely as the result of earlier attacks," the communique said.

An indication that the airfield on Guadalcanal was still intact despite recent bombardments by enemy surface vessels and air raids was seen in yesterday's navy communique which reported that army flying fortresses and navy and marine corps aircraft repeatedly attacked enemy troops assembled in force on the northwest end of Guadalcanal.

The navy said fighters and anti-aircraft batteries wiped out a flight of 14 enemy bombers that raided the airfield with an escort of eight fighters Saturday morning. Two of the fighters also were shot down.

The same afternoon, however, another group of about 15 enemy bombers and a number of fighters carried out a second raid with better luck, for them. Only one enemy bomber was reported probably destroyed. United States losses in the two raids consisted of one plane.

Tempo Stepping Up

Australian headquarters said the tempo of ground fighting in New Guinea is stepping up as Australian jungle troops encountered resistance in their push toward the Japanese base at Kokoda. Within 12 miles of their objectives, the Australians met Japanese counter-attacks, all of which were repulsed with heavy loss to the enemy.

Closer home, in the Aleutian Island area, the navy reported two Japanese destroyers were hit during a low-altitude attack by army "Marauder" bombers October 16. When last seen northwest of Kiska, both destroyers were on fire and being abandoned by their crews.

Canadian planes have been active in this area but the communique did not say whether they participated in the October 16th. assault.

Kidney Acids Rob Your Rest

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They turn and toss—lie awake and count sheep. Often they blame it on "nerves" when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons from the blood. If they are faulty and fail, poisons stay in the system and sleeplessness, headache, backache often follow. If you don't sleep well, try Dodd's Kidney Pills—for half a century the favorite remedy. 103

HEROES OF DARING DIEPPE RAID RETURN TO CANADA

Capt. Ronald Murray of Kingston, putting in a first telephone call in Montreal after his arrival in Canada with 16 other Dieppe veterans. It was his duty to look after the wounded as they were brought back to the barges, bombs falling on all sides.

Capt. Dennis Bult-Francis of Westmount, Que., in Montreal with his wife whom he hadn't seen for two years. One of the heroes of the Dieppe raid, just back in Canada, Capt. Francis says he owes his life to Private Teesdale of Hamilton, Ont., who picked him up after he had been struck by a shell. Each had one good leg, so they made a three-legged race of it over the beach to join their barge.

On the front line defences of Guadalcanal Island, in the Solomons, United States Marines man a sand-bagged advance position, waiting for expected Japs' attack.

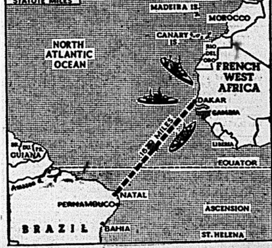
"UNCLE JOE" CHECKS ON HIS SHARPSHOOTERS

Lieut.-General Joseph Stillwell, American commander of the Chinese army that fought the Burma campaign, is shown "campaign-batted," checking over a group of his men who are trying out their new American rifles on a rifle range somewhere in India. General Stillwell has re-organized and re-equipped his forces for his comeback fight in Burma. He promised the Japs he'd come back when he led the remnants of his forces on the now historic trek to India.

BOMBER LOADED AT GUADALCANAL

The strategic airfield on Guadalcanal Island is the locale of this busy scene — marines bomb-up a bomber for an "operational" flight against Jap ships and bases. The field is a busy one these days as the planes shuttle back and forth on their missions of destruction against anything Nipponese, in effort to break up the Jap offensive against the Solomons.

ALLIED CONVOY REPORTED OFF DAKAR



An Allied convoy is reported off the coast of the Vichy French port of Dakar in West Africa. The map shows Dakar and its geographical relation to Brazil, only 1,620 miles away. Reports say that Allied forces are also concentrated in Gambia, close to Dakar, on the West African coast.

Expect Auchinleck For New Assignment

London, Oct. 19 (CP Cable) — Reuters News Agency reported from New Delhi today that a new and important assignment for Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck, who was relieved of his command of the British forces in the Middle East in August, is expected to be announced shortly.

Discontent Fires Already Burning Freely in Italy

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Four high Allied spokesmen, three of them Americans, took the offensive against the Axis last week on a front not shown on the maps.

That is the war-of-nerves front. There is no ban on speculation about what is doing or brewing there. On the contrary, war-of-nerves technique as practiced by the Nazis is designed to enlist that prime safeguard of democracy, freedom of speech and publication, in enemy service. It depends on wide publicity and discussion of its outgivings in the country attacked.

There being no such freedom of public discussion in Axis countries, the effect of the Anglo-American psychological counter - offensive which reached a new high last week is difficult to judge. There can be small question, however; that Prime Minister Churchill in London and President Roosevelt, War Secretary Henry Stimson and Attorney-General Francis Biddle on this side of the Atlantic, all timed their shots. They were aiming at German and Italian nerves already raw with apprehension over the approach of another war winter and deferred hopes of a decisive Axis victory.

Smoke of Discontent.

Biddle's announcement of release of Italian origin nationals in the United States from the rigors of enemy alien classification was openly a bid for Italian public disaffection, not only with the Axis fellowship but with the Fascist regime in Italy, which placed that yoke on Italian shoulders.

There is plenty of smoke to indicate discontent fires in Italy. A hasty trip by the Nazi Gestapo chieftain, Henrich Himmler, to survey Italian winter war morale prospects is significant. Swiss informants say he was to pave the way for another Hitler-Mussolini confab, this time over failure of Italian occupation forces to suppress revolt in the "conquered" Balkans.

Even more factual was one assertion in both the Churchill and Roosevelt utterances that has a very definite bearing on military second-front prospects—and Hitler's own efforts to soothe German alarm on that score cannot be ignored. The British and American war leaders have before now joined in saying that shipping to carry the fight to the foe is the greatest bottleneck on the second-front pathway, wherever it leads. They now have joined in saying that obstacle is being removed.

Allied merchant tonnage building in August and September "substantially outweighed losses" to U-boats, Mr. Churchill said, although Nazi under-sea warfare still remained "the greatest problem for the United Nations."

"We are getting ahead of our enemies in the bitter battle of (sea) transportation," was the way Mr. Roosevelt put it.

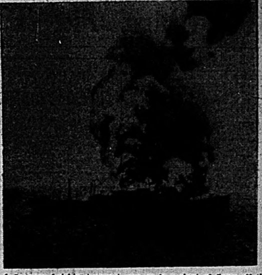
Those are flat, factual statements that the means of hitting the enemy on any or all chosen fronts is coming to hand.

Stimson's war-of-nerves effort was perhaps the most significant of all. In urging extension of the army draft to lads of 18 and 19, he revealed 1943 plans for an American army of 7,500,000 men streamlined in age as well as training for shock action—for attack, not defence.

Stimson's break-down of that potential force into its air, ground and service troop components, however, was the thing that must haunt the dreams of Germans who hear of it. Substantially a third of it, 2,200,000 men, will be assigned to the air force.

Just what that might mean in American combat planes in the air next year Nazi military experts probably can deduce. It is the personnel companion piece for the American 1943 plane production rate goal of 125,000 ships.

JAP SHIP BURNS OFF AUSTRALIA



A Japanese freighter-transport goes up in a sheet of flame off the Queensland coast of Australia after she was chased by an Australian auxiliary cruiser. The crew set fire to the ship as the cruiser caught up with her. Later the guns of an Australian warship finished the job—sending this Nipponese hulk to the bottom.

WILLKIE INTERVIEWED AT WHITE HOUSE

Wendell Willkie is interviewed in the reception room of the White House, Washington, D.C., after his hour and a half long conference with President Roosevelt on return from his 31,000-mile globe-circling tour of the United Nations. Mr. Willkie has been urging the opening of a second front.

Twenty-Five Killed As Plane Undershoots British Airdrome

London, Oct. 19 (CP)—At least 25 persons were believed to have died as a result of an air crash yesterday near a railway station when an R.A.F. plane undershot an airdrome, nosed over and burst into flames.

Men, women and children leaving trains scattered wildly as the plane struck. Women and children were among the casualties but the complete toll was not known.

Whitewash Recipes For Farm Buildings

This is the time of year to get poultry houses and other farm buildings ready for winter, and one of the operations in preparation is a thorough whitewashing. It is not a difficult job if a few simple rules are followed. Here they are:—

Get quick lime or lump lime for whitewash in hard lumps, freshly burnt and not air slaked. Air slaked lime will not stick. Hydrated lime may be used. One 50-pound bag will make about the same amount of whitewash as one-half bushel of lump lime. The following are standard recipes:—

(1). Into a large clean tub put one bushel of lump lime, and slake it with boiling water, covering it during the process to keep in the steam; strain the liquor through a fine sieve; then add 3 lb. of commercial sulphate of zinc, 1 lb. of alum, and 2 lb. of common salt, the alum and the salt being previously dissolved in hot water.

(2). Slake ½ bushel of lump lime with boiling water in a barrel, strain and add ¼ peck of salt dissolved in warm water, 3½ lb. flour made into a thin paste with boiling water and add ¼ lb. glue dissolved in warm water. It is recommended that this whitewash be applied hot.

The surface to be whitewashed should be free from dirt or grease. Just before applying the whitewash dampen the surface, so that the coating will not set too quickly.

The whitewash may be applied with a brush or sprayer. If a sprayer is to be used, the whitewash should be strained through two or three thicknesses of cheesecloth.

If the whitewash is to act as a disinfectant, add 1 to 2 ounces of crude carbolic acid to each gallon of whitewash.

VAST UNREST AGAINST AXIS SEETHING IN EUROPE

Spirit of Revolt Is Indicated Among Frenchmen

Italian Alpini Regiment Mutinies At Gorizia When It Is Ordered to Russia

NAZI DESERTIONS

LONDON, Oct. 20 — (CP) — Reuters News Agency reported today under an "Italian Frontier" dateline that an Italian Alpini regiment had mutinied at Gorizia, in Northern Italy, when it was ordered to the Russian front.

The report said the ringleaders were shot by the Fascist military and that the troops were embarked forcibly without arms.

LONDON, Oct. 20 — (CP) — Reports from Berne today indicated Pierre Laval will make a broadcast at Vichy tonight to urge Frenchmen to accept his program of forced labor for the Germans, a program which the fighting French say has stirred a vast underground army numbering upward of 2,000,000 Frenchmen to a point where they are ready for a mass revolt.

While the Berne listening post in neutral Switzerland heard rumors that Hitler had called Laval to Berlin to report on failure to provide the numbers of French workers that Germany wants, observers did not believe such a development was likely at this time.

The fighting French said Laval either must back down upon his plan of forcing 150,000 French skilled workers to go to Germany or be thrown out of office on a wave of revolt, in which case the German army would probably march into unoccupied France and oust the Vichy Government.

Paris announced over its German-controlled radio last night that all male Frenchmen between the ages of 18 and 50 are being registered for labor service by the Nazis. It said: "Failure of the voluntary recruiting plan means for France replacement of the voluntary system of compulsion, the further splitting of France . . . it means being cruelly hit and finally no further release of prisoners".

German-inspired sources sought to convince the French there are fresh Anglo-American threats to the security of their African Empire. One such report declared the United Nations have landed Canadian and United States troops at British Gambia, 100 miles south of the French West African port of Dakar.

This report lacked any confirmation and was put out by Paris Axis circles presumably to muddy the waters. Many times during the war the Axis propaganda machine has told of Canadians landing here and there throughout the world.

Mutinies in Norway

Elsewhere is occupied Europe there were these developments:

Norway — Reports told of mutinies, desertions and suicides spreading among Hitler's army of 200,000 occupation troops. At Kirkenes, a Norwegian source said, 1,000 Germans rebelled at an order to go to Russia and one of every 10 was ordered shot but the firing squads refused to shoot their comrades and the garrison was sent to concentration camps.

Belgium—The Germans were reported erecting barbed-wire barriers around gasoline dumps and living quarters because of fear of Allied invasion and increasing sabotage.

The Netherlands — Queen Wilhelmina's government in London advised the people at home they must expect heavy Allied aerial attacks on German-controlled transport facilities.

Austria — Increased sabotage of railways is reported.

German Radio Says Nazis Prepare List

London, Oct. 20 —(CP Cable)— The Daily Mail yesterday quoted the German radio as "warning" that a list of United Nations men which Germany holds responsible for "war crimes" and ill-treatment" of German prisoners is being prepared and that those listed would be punished after the war.

The newspaper said the Nazi radio hinted that Germany may scrap the Geneva Convention on treatment of war prisoners and leave herself free to treat captives with whatever harshness she thinks fit.

AUSSIES REPULSE 3 COUNTER-BLOWS IN NEW GUINEA

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Oct. 20 (CP)—Japanese forces, driven back through the gap in the Owen Stanley mountains of New Guinea, counter-attacked three times yesterday near Templeton's Crossing, an Allied communique reported today, indicating they had reached a point where they hoped to make a determined stand against the Allies.

All three counter-blows were unsuccessful, the communique said. For several days the Allied forces have encountered increased Japanese resistance in the Templeton Crossing area. Although details of the fighting were not announced, there were indications that Japanese casualties had been relatively large.

It was believed a bombing mission against Japanese concentrations in this area was carried out last night, but no reports on the action have been received.

Allied aircraft, after striking heavy blows at Japanese bases in the northern Solomon Islands and New Britain and attacking enemy naval formations, were inactive yesterday except for reconnaissance activities, the communique reported.

Templeton's Crossing is about 12 miles south of the Japanese base at Kokoda on the northern slope of the mountain range.

AUSTRALIANCORPS FIGHTING IN CHINA

Country Multiplies Tank Strength 100% in Last Twelve Months

Sydney, Oct. 20 —(AAP)— Herbert Evatt, Minister for External Affairs, today disclosed in a speech that Australian troops are fighting in China.

The detachment in China is small, he told the annual conference of the Country Press Association.

He emphasized the part Australian men are playing in the war. They are fighting in Britain, New Guinea, the Middle East and "even China," he said.

Australia has multiplied her tank strength nearly a hundred-fold in the last 12 months and the position of aircraft is much the same, he said.

The government knows, he said, that tremendous hardships are being borne by Australians at home but it has hardened its heart when it considers the hardships suffered by Australian soldiers outside Australia.

"We were criticized at one stage for being too pacific minded," he said. "That was during the period when we had to concentrate upon urging the necessity for reorganization of our resources so that they could be brought to vital points in greater strength.

"It was not a selfish course, for no man could truthfully charge against the Australian government that Australia has not taken a full part in this world war."

Austrian Archduke, 4 Other Students Find Harvesting in West Tough

Huxley, Alta., Oct. 20— (CP) — Archduke Rudolph of Austria is "sure a swell fellow, but he can't pitch bundles," said Mrs. J. M. Cummings, a farmer's wife here.

Mrs. Cummings said last night that the Archduke and four others, all from Laval University who came from Quebec to help with the harvest, found the going too tough on the farm.

"They only lasted half a day." The work was too heavy and their hands all blistered, she said.

Mr. Cummings said he took them to nearby Trochu Saturday after their hands had healed and they got jobs on another outfit it could not be learned today how they are getting along.

Mrs. Cummings said the young men were willing enough but were only "college boys" when it came to harvesting.

"They didn't know how to put a bundle on a rack," she said. "They couldn't drive or hitch up a team to a wagon. After half a day they were all in."

The Archduke was treated "just like an ordinary harvester" while he was on the farm but he slept in the house instead of in a bunkhouse.

U. S. WARSHIPS CHALLENGE JAPS IN THE SOLOMONS

In Two Days of Aerial Combat Jap Losses Raised to 340 Destroyed Planes

DUMPS BLOWN UP

By JOHN H. WIGGINS

Washington, Oct. 20—(AP)—American warships, suddenly reappear in the Solomon Island communiques, have thundered a challenge to Japanese preparations to capture Guadalcanal.

First evidence that United States soldiers, sailors and marines awaiting a full-scale assault for their island airbase were supported by heavy naval units came last night in a navy announcement of an effective sea bombardment of enemy positions and ammunition dumps on Northwestern Guadalcanal.

Throughout the same day, Oct. 17, planes blasted at the Japanese island foothold and for three days, beginning Oct. 16, Allied bombers from Australia repeatedly pounded the strong Japanese force of warships, transports and cargo vessels in the Shortland Island area.

In two days of aerial combat, Japanese losses in the Solomons were raised to 340 destroyed planes. Eight enemy bombers and 11 Zero fighters of a 40-plane force were shot down in an attempt to bomb the airfield on Guadalcanal.

In a raid on the enemy base at Rekata Bay on Santa Isabel Island, 115 miles north of Guadalcanal, army flying fortress bombers and navy-marine fighters strafed and burned 12 Japanese seaplanes caught on the water and shot down a large Japanese flying boat and a twin-engined enemy bomber.

Smaller Choice Cigarettes Planned

Ottawa, Oct. 20—(CP)—Smokers are likely to have a smaller choice of cigarettes and cigars if a plan for simplification of the tobacco industry, understood to be now under consideration, comes into effect under the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

While there is no suggestion the quantity of smokes would be seriously reduced, restriction of the present variety of brands would considerably reduce manpower needs of the industry it is estimated.

Princess Elizabeth Shoots 3 Deer

LONDON, Oct. 20 — (CP Cable) —Princess Elizabeth during a Balmoral holiday stalked deer for several days on the mountains, it was disclosed today, and one day "bagged" three. She shot them with a rifle.

The Princess used a telescope for sighting the deer and counting their points. The biggest one she got within counting distance of was a 10-pointer.

British Attacks Sink Or Damage 530 Axis Subs Since War Began

London, Oct. 20—(CP)— Britain has "an actual record of attacks which have resulted in the sinking or damaging of over 530 Axis submarines" since the war began, A. V. Alexander, first Lord of the Admiralty, said today.

Mr. Alexander giving a war commentary at Caxton Hall, said this total included some attacks by United States Forces but did not include those either by the Russians or by France before June, 1940.

"We have had much discussion in recent months about a second front," Alexander said, "but we must always remember that our ability to secure this depends directly upon the degree of control we exercise at sea as well as in the air."

He said the war against the U-boat still is "our greatest problem."

He said that the United States and British shipbuilding programs "afford me more grounds for confidence in our final victory at sea over Germany and Japan than any other factor," although "we must fight on as we have fought" until the programs are completed.

Saying that the Allies needed control of the sea to "carry the war to the enemy as we mean to do," Alexander declared also that "we must expect the enemy's effort at sea. . . .To increase, but, I assure you, so will our countermeasures increase."

ALL BUSINESS FEELS PINCH OF WAR ECONOMY

New Moves Being Made to Channel Labor and Supplies

MAY CLOSE PLANTS

Ottawa, Oct. 20 (CP) — New moves to channel labor and supplies into a concentrated war effort, including possible closing of some non-essential plants, are expected to arise from important manpower discussions now under way.

Officials of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board and National Selective Service—two government organizations which hold wide powers over the everyday life of the Canadian citizen—are working on the problem of cutting down nonesesntials and putting workers where demand is most urgent.

It was learned yesterday that wholesale and retail administrators of the Prices Board are discussing manpower economies with representatives of the various trades who compose advisory committees. A curtailment program involving the closing of some stores is likely but before it gets under way the recommendations from these discussions will go to the Price's Board industrial division.

Develop Pooling Fund

Also in prospect is a policy of assisting plants which have to close down through the development of a pooling fund. Such a system already applies to the newsprint industry and it is likely to be extended to other branches of business affected by war economy orders.

A spokesman for the Prices Board said it was impossible to estimate how many business places might be affected by the orders. In co-operation with National Selective Service, the board is giving first consideration to the type of manpower and other facilities which can most readily be transferred to the war effort.

Industries to be Compensated

Industries compelled to cease business or curtail operations probably will be compensated under the pooling system, similar to that organzide in the United Kingdom.

Newsprint Administrator R. L. Weldon of Montreal, already has power to allocate production and shipments among various newsprints mills as equitably as possible and subject to the over-riding consideration of war demands. Within the newsprint industry a special fund has been created into which mills which operate above a basic level will make payments, and out of which mills which are closed down or curtailed in their operations will receive payments in lieu of orders for newsprint.

It was believed here that this system—in which no government funds are involved—will be extended to cover other industries whose difficulties are similar to those now faced by newsprint operators.

PREDICTS LONG WAR

New York, Oct. 20 — (AP) — Admiral Ernest J. King, naval operations chief, says the war will be long and there is "No cheap way" to win it "except by going in there and slugging." He told the Ohio Society of New York last night that the United States is fighting a two-ocean war with "just about a one-ocean navy," but that its second-ocean navy would be "well on its way" within a year.

NEWRESTRICTIONS ON ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES SEEN

Expected Hours of Sale, Manufacture of Beer, Wine, Will be Curtailed

BY END OF WEEK

Ottawa, Oct. 20— (CP) —Announcement will be made before the end of this week of new restrictions imposed by Dominion and Provincial authorities on the sale and manufacture of alcoholic beverages, The Canadian Press was told today.

The extent of the new regulations was not learned in detail, but it was understood there will be some curtailment of the hours beverage rooms and liquor stores may remain open, and that the Dominion will enforce further restrictions on the manufacture of beers and wines and regulate the release of spirits from bond.

Consultations among Dominion and Provincial officials have resulted in proposals which have been accepted by their respective governments, it was learned. These proposals will be put into effect following announcements this week by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board and the liquor control boards of the various provinces.

The restrictions have been decided upon a view not only of temperance but to make some of the manpower now used in the liquor and beer industry available for essential war work.

Raft Occupants Machine-Gunned By Nazi U-Boat

Saint John, N.B., Oct. 20 (CP)— Home after surviving the sinking of the torpedoed ferry steamship Caribou, LAC. George A. Daley said another survivor had told him that occupants of a raft were machine-gunned by the U-boat.

"A boy on one of the other rafts said that when the submarine surfaced it machine-gunned them and tried to ram them," said the 19-year-old airman.

He praised Newfoundland seamen who were returning home aboard the Caribou.

"There were 30 of them—sailors who hadn't been home in over three years," said Daley. "Only nine of them came through this alive. They were the bravest of the lot.

Some of the survivors got tired hanging on and being battered by the cold waves, and wanted to let go, but the men from Newfoundland kept them going.

"They encouraged us all the time. One of them jumped off a raft to give his place to a woman.

"The women were wonderful. Although the sea was growing rougher by the minute and waves were breaking over us constantly, those women kept calm and cool-headed and did their best to quiet the children who were terrified by the big waves."

TOBRUK SHIPPING ATTACK

Cairo, Oct. 20 — (AP) — United States heavy bombers again attacked Axis shipping at Tobruk yesterday and scored direct hits on at least two large merchant ships, a United States army communique said today.

BESIEGED FARMER ALLEGED SUICIDE AFTER SHOOTING

HIDES IN BARN

Aylmer, Ont., Oct. 20 (CP)—Police said that Fred Lobb, 65-year-old farmer-blacksmith, had shot and killed himself early today as they closed in on him in the barn of his farm home at Mount Salem, six miles southeast of here, following the fatal shooting last night of one man and the injuring of three others one seriously.

Lobb had barricaded himself in his barn after police said he shot and fatally wounded Raymond Chute, 22-year-old bridegroom of one month and stabbed and seriously wounded his adopted son, Herbert Wade, 40.

The blacksmith exchanged gunfire with police as officers with tommy guns and revolvers attempted to close in on the barn. Traffic officer Robert Witts of the London detachment suffered a gunshot wound in the face and Cpl. Frank Kelly, a St. Thomas provincial policeman, narrowly escaped injury when a shot pierced his hat.

The climax of the affair came about 2 a.m., police said, when officers tore open the big doors of the barn shone spotlights into the building from automobiles and advanced, tommyguns at the ready. They found no sign of life and on searching the loft, discovered Lobb lying face downward in the straw, his shotgun beside him. He apparently had taken the full charge.

Unidentified Sub Torpedoes Nazi Ferry Deutschland

Stockholm, Sweden, Oct. 20 (C.P.—Reuters)—Four German soldiers were killed, an unknown number drowned and 20 others wounded yesterday when an unidentified submarine torpedoed the German ferry Deutschland as it was transporting 1,000 Nazi troops across the Baltic Sea from Sassnitz, Germany, to Trelleborg, Sweden.

The ferry did not sink and was brought into Trelleborg, where the German troops were to be put aboard trains for return by sealed train to Norway. They were returning from furloughs in Germany.

The American-Swedish News Exchange in New York said ferry service on the Eassnitz-Trelleborg line was suspended immediately after the attack.

The troops on the Deutschland were being returned to Norway through Sweden under terms of a Swedish-German agreement which grants transit rights for sealed trains carrying unarmed German troops under certain conditions.

TIRES MORE VALUABLE THAN GOLD

Chicago, Oct. 20—(AP)— Sever C. Gebert told police thieves had slashed a tire on his car. They stole $800. worth of old gold, too, Gebert said. The gold was valuable, he said, "but the tire was in good condition and was even more valuable to me."

Britain to Add Very Small Proportion Barley, Oat Flour to Wheat Meal Loaf

London, Oct. 20 —(CP)— Britain —until now one of the few European countries still enjoying all-wheat bread—soon will have barley and oat flour added to its "national wheatmeal" loaf and, perhaps, potato flour later.

Continuing a campaign to make full use of domestic food resources, Food Minister Lord Woolton announced today that the government has decided "to take advantage of an abundant crop of barley and oats to add a very small proportion" to the nation's flour.

"We have made potato flour in small quantities," the addition of which to the national loaf would probably be of advantage," he said. "This, however, has not yet been produced on a nation-wide scale.

Autumnal Storms Check Air War Of Nazi Dive Bombers

Germans Turn To Ground Tactics Being Met With Point Blank Red Gunfire

PATROLS ACTIVE

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

MOSCOW, Oct. 20 — (AP) — Autumnal storms which howled down the bare steppes between the Don and Volga forced the great battle of Stalingrad back to the tactics of artillery barrage and infantry assault temporarily, and when the cold wind and rain died down today the Russians still were holding firm along their battered lines.

Battlefront dispatches said the air war of dive-bombers and swarms of fighters was resumed full scale after the short foretaste of winter which forced the planes of both sides from the air and gave the defenders a respite from at least one phase of the Nazi onslaught.

Turn to Ground Tactics

The Germans turned to ground war tactics of a generation ago, pouring down a three-hour artillery barrage and following it up with slashing infantry attacks in an effort to keep their offensive rolling.

The defenders met them with point blank gunfire and held firm in positions which the Nazis have failed to dent since Sunday night. The fiercest fighting centred in a northern factory district of the city.

The government newspaper said German long-range guns were shelling the Volga in an effort to interrupt these crossings.

Patrols Active by Night

"The Germans were repulsed, seven tanks were destroyed and 400 of the enemy were killed," the noon communique said.

Patrols cut into German strength by night.

"A part of 'X' unit in a night engagement destroyed 10 German planes and four mortars, smashed 13 pillboxes and dugouts and wiped out more than a company of German infantry," it was announced.

"Northwest of Stalingrad our scouts raided an advanced enemy outpost, killing 40 Germans and capturing two machine-guns. Our artillery smashed four enemy guns and a mortar battery and killed a large part of two German companies".

A cold rain, driven by a high wind, swept down from the north across the steppes on the Don-Volga corridor and the ruins of Stalingrad, a foretaste of approaching winter.

The army newspaper Red Star said the adverse weather compelled fliers of both sides to restrict operations, the outnumbered Russian pilots as well as the invaders.

Previously the German fliers had made as many as 1,500 flights in a day over a single Russian sector. Stripped of aerial support, the Nazi ground troops found harder going.

The midnight communique said the fighting was particularly heavy in the area of a factory. This presumably was the Red Barricade Gun Works or the converted industrial plant, red October in the northern suburbs. The communique did not specify.

"Our troops in the course of the day beat off all enemy attacks here, destroyed eight tanks and wiped out two battalions of enemy infantry," it was announced.

Eighteen Nazi tanks were declared destroyed and 400 men killed elsewhere in defence of the city. Local fighting persisted in the northwest.

While losses in men and machines told upon assault divisions in the seventh day of the renewed drive upon Stalingrad, a see-saw shifting of the fortunes of war was reported from the Western Caucasus.

Red Army detachments were forced from two villages southeast of Novorossisk, the communique said, while "on anther sector our troops repelled enemy attacks and accounted for about 1,200 enemy officers and men."

Russian marines, supported by warships and planes of the Black Sea fleet, were reported by the Soviet radio to have recaptured a height in the same area and wiped out about a battalion of a German troops.

The noon war bulletin said the Russians had wiped out more than a battalion of Nazi infantry and wrecked 19 tanks during the last three days in the Mozdok area, hard-held gateway to oil and communication lines of the Caucasus.

"In another sector," it said, "one populated place changed hands twice. The Germans finally were dislodged with heavy losses."

Sporadic engagements continued on the Leningrad front. Red Army artillerymen, scouts and snipers were credited with killing more than 200 Germans and destroying eight dugouts and nine supply trucks.

MRS. ROOSEVELT TO VISIT BRITAIN

Will be Guest of King George and Queen Elizabeth

London, Oct. 20 —(CP)— The Queen, recovered from a bronchitis attack, left Balmoral Castle, Scotland, last night with the King and their two daughters for Southern England where, newspapers reported, they will make preparations to welcome Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

While there was no official statement on the reported visit of the President's wife, authoritative sources were quoted as saying she was expected shortly. The first announcement of the trip will be made when Mrs. Roosevelt arrives in Britain, it was said.

The King and Queen extended an invitation to President and Mrs. Roosevelt to visit England during the Royal visit in the United States in 1939, the Daily Mail reported, adding that "plans had been made to receive the President's wife some days ago, but the trip was postponed when the Queen suffered an attack of bronchitis."

Newspapers assured Mrs. Roosevelt she would be a welcome guest.

The Daily Mirror published a 1,000-word personality sketch from New York entitled "America's Favorite 'Aunt.'" The Daily Herald devoted almost as much space to praising the energy of the President's wife.

The press reported that Mrs. Roosevelt would meet Prime Minister and Mrs. Churchill and make a study of the part British women are playing in the war. She will come as a private guest of the King and Queen, not as a state visitor, since she has no official status, it was stated.

Losing his balance while at work at the Fruit Machinery foundry on Front Street Monday afternoon, Mr. Charles Ernest Wilson, 182 James Street, fell to the floor and struck his back on an iron casting the resultant injury necessitating his removal to the hospital. An X-ray examination ordered by his attending physician, Dr. R. S. Gibson, revealed a crushed bone in his back and also a broken rib.

"It was just one of those things," commented an official of the Fruit Machinery Company this morning. "Had the casting not been in the position that it was, Mr. Wilson would not have been hurt." Mr. Wilson was standing on the floor of the foundry when the accident occurred.

RESIDENTS COMPLAIN OF EXCESSIVE SPEED

City police have received complaints from residents on Bleecker Ave., regarding the driving of motor cars at excessive rates of speed along that avenue The most serious part of the alleged offence is the fact that motor cars, presumably taxi cabs, are being driven from the C.N.R. station following the arrival of early evening trains, police stated as warnings were issued today against the recurrence of such practices. No further warnings will be issued, but summonses will be issued to subsequent offenders, Chief Probert added.

Noble Example Of Patriotism

An interesting human interest angle came to light yesterday during the canvass of a Victory Loan salesman. He called at a home where a lady well past sixty resided. She smiled and said, "If you are from the Victory Loan Committee, come in." Producing a ten-dollar bill from her purse, she stated she would purchase a $50 bond, with instalments of $18 monthly. "My husband," she said, gets only $16 a week, but we are trying to help. She opened a box which contained $195 in war savings certificates, and stated that they had been purchased through the family denial.

"We have not been to a show nor had any pleasure since 1940," she said. "We realise that if Britain loses this war we shan't have what little we have."

Canvassers entered the second day of the campaign enthused by this experience. They are getting a good reception, but realize that an average of a $100,000 sale each day means consistently hard work.

REPORT ATTEMPT MADE ON PAVELIC

Dispatch Says Bomb Planted Near Office of Head of Axis - Sponsored Regime in Croatia

London, Oct. 20 (CP)—A Reuters dispatch from Zurich Mon., quoted reliable sources as saying that an attempt had been made on the life of Dr. Ante Pavelic, head of the Axis-sponsored regime in Croatia, on Sept. 29 near Zagreb.

The assassin, the dispatch said, planted a time bomb near the entrance to Pavelic's office. Pavelic apparently was warned in advance and escaped, but six of his guards were seriously injured.

Mass arrests by the gestapo followed. The Germans claimed they located the man who planted the bomb, according to these advices.

Last week reports filtering out of Croatia said that followers of Dr. Vladimir Macek, leader of the powerful peasant party, were in revolt against Pavelic's regime. A well-organized force of 4,000 men was reported battling the latter's Brown-shirted Ustachi (Storm Troopers).

Albanian Mountaineers Fighting the Italians

London, Oct. 20 — (CP) — The News Chronicle reported in a dispatch from Ankara today that Albanian mountaineers have proclaimed an independent Albania and are fighting the Italians on three mountain fronts.

"A continuing revolt at Skappari menaces Italian control of Albania and the Duce has had to send additional planes, heavy artillery and infantry forces," the dispatch said. "In Central Albania, the patriots are reported to have engaged the Italians in particularly heavy fighting. There, too, the Italians sent reinforcements."

Reuters reported from Ankara that Serb patriots had captured the mountain villages of Kljuo and Mrkonitchgrad from Axis puppet forces and that a number of localities west of Earajevo had been cleared of Italian troops.

Singer of the Metropolitan Opera Assoc. Will be Heard in Belleville In First of Series of Outstanding Concerts

Norman Cordon, Bass-Baritone, Has Sung 297 Performances in Four Years

HARPIST COMING

Recently in our city, those people who desire that Belleville should have its share of good things, conducted a membership drive for Community Concerts—and as a result, there will be three outstanding musical events this season. Norman Cordon, bass-baritone, was born in North Carolina, made his operatic debut with the Chicago Opera Association, and the following season came to the Met. where he has to his credit appearances in many widely diversified roles. During his first four years he sang 297 performances of 43 roles, a record achievement. His extensive repertoire includes many well loved Negro Spirituals of his native south. "Cordon gave an example of beautiful singing, as is his wont. "New York Herald Tribune; "Cordon's voice has ample breadth and weight for the most ringing proclamation, permitting him to display the three-dimensional qualities of his art."—New York Sun.

White House Favorite

Second of the series is Mildred Dilling, harpist, whose engagements in recital and as soloist with symphony orchestras take her from coast to coast in the United States and Canada each year. Says the New York Times of recent Town Hall recital. "Miss Dilling's musicianship and sense of style were constantly in evidence, singing melodies, and a wide variety of dynamic effects. It is to be hoped she will make her recitals annual events." Her most notable record is that she has played seven engagements at the White House. Among her most famous pupils is Harpo Marx.

Best "Butterfly" in Years

Third is a young Philippine soprano, Enya Gonzalez who called by her managers the best Butterfly in years, makes her debut in the leading role of that opera this fall with the Chicago Civic Opera Company. Of her concert appearances in New York, says the Times, "She has charm, temperament, a voice, and a figure. She can dominate an audience." Toronto Saturday Night says, "The brilliant soprano made her third appearance in Toronto in little more than a year. Again she delighted every listener by the fervor, purity, and sweetness of her voice and by the piquancy of her exotic personality." "A sparkling exotic—a vivid, theatrical figure."—the Star.

Dates will be announced later. No single tickets sold as admission is by membership only.

Kinsmen Fag Fund Receives Donation From Long Island

Sound pictures showing the construction of the mammoth Portland, Maine, to Montreal, oil pipe line, one of the engineering feats of the age, were enjoyed by the Kinsmen Club at their semi-monthly meeting held at the Quinte Hotel Monday night. The pictures, which showed every phase of the construction of the oil lifeline to Canada, brought before the club members the magnitude of the project. Every detail from the breaking of the first sod to the final completion and pumping of crude oil into Montreal a year later was narrated. The sound picture was provided through the courtesy of the Imperial Oil Company, while the projector used was loaned by the Stewart Warner Corporation, President Buster LaBarr announced.

Of significance to Kinsmen war charity projects was a letter read from a Mrs. Wm. Dinsdore, of Long Island, N. Y., who had heard of the Belleville Kinsmen "Fag Fund" through relatives serving overseas and sent a contribution to the fund, which was acknowledged by Kin Matt Currie, chairman of the Fag Fund, last night. Kin Jeff Marvell, chairman of the recent Kinsmen "Milk for Britain" tag day, announced the gross receipts of the day amounted to $721.58.

President LaBarr welcomed Larry Brown, the club's newest member and pianist to Kinsdom. During the evening Kin Gardiner Duff acted as song leader while Kin Cliff Matthews collected fines as sergeant-at-arms.

White Gloves Presented To Justice Chevrier

No Criminal Cases Down For Sitting at Supreme Court Assizes

4 DAMAGE SUITS

Traditional white gloves, indicating no criminal cases were listed for trial, were presented to the Honourable Mr. Justice Chevrier at the opening of the Fall Assizes at the Court House here yesterday. The presentation was made by Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., on behalf of the Attorney General's Department.

"I must extend congratulations to the good people of Hastings County as I find no crime of serious consequence listed before this tribunal. It may reflect upon the good work of the office of the Crown Attorney and his associates. I sincerely hope for its continuance in these strenuous times and hope the citizens of this county will assist to their utmost in the successful prosecution of this terrible war," replied His Lordship.

Sheriff J. D. O'Flynn then informed the court the Grand Jury had been excused and dispensed with for the Assizes and a calling of the petit jury revealed all present.

Four Damage Suits Listed

Four damage actions, two of which had counter claims, constituted the docket and the proceedings opened with the case of Mrs. Gladys Smith, Belleville, versus the Holmes Transport Co. of Brockville. The action is for unstated damages, with a counter claim, resulting from a motor collision between a motor car driven by Mrs. Smith and a Holmes transport on the night of No. 11, 1941. The collision occurred two miles west of Napanee. The motor car driven by Mrs. Smith was owned by Arthur Knight, who was named one of the defendants in the counter claim. Mrs. Smith sustained a serious injury to her left arm resulting in it being practically useless, she alleges. Both drivers claimed to be on the proper side of the highway at the time of the collision. Mr. Charles A. Payne K.C., represented Mrs. Smith, while Mr. J. M. Simpson of Napanee, was the solicitor for the transport company. The case is proceeding today.

POLICE BLOTTER

Police apprehended a new type of drunk driver late Monday night, when a local citizen was found riding his bicycle along Station Street in such a zig-zag manner that his antics attracted the attention of police on patrol. The man was taken off the bicycle, more for his own protection, and later charged with intoxication. No mention of drunken riding was made in the charge, however. He will appear Friday.

3 Bikes Recovered

Three bicycles, that have been recovered when found abandoned by city police of a late date, are reposing at the police station awaiting identification by their respective owners.

Several Calls Answered

City police answered several calls where disturbances were reported Monday night, with the result three residents were apprehended on charges of intoxication. Other places saw mischievous children while at play annoying neighbours.

Cripps Declines Statement on Chainings

LONDON, Oct. 20 — (CP) — Sir Stafford Cripps declined today to make a statement in the House of Commons on reprisal chainings of British Empire and German prisoners of war.

Sir Stafford, Lord Privy Seal, was questioned by Earl Winterton, Conservative. Presumably his refusal was in line with Prime Minister Churchill's request last week that public discussion be avoided until negotiations for the unshackling of prisoners were concluded.

The Prime Minister proposed that both sides unchain the prisoners. The proposal is being conveyed to Germany through Swiss diplomatic channels.

Lord Winterton had asked Sir Stafford whether a statement on the chainings was contemplated before the house takes a short recess. Sir Stafford said no.

NO REQUEST RECEIVED

London, Oct. 20—(CP)—Richard Law, under-Secretary of State in the foreign office, told the House of Commons today that no request had been received to permit Rudolf Hess' wife to join him in internment in Britain.

Law added that if such a request were received it would be denied since the former Deputy Fuehrer of Germany is a prisoner of war and not entitled to "such facilities."

His statement was made in reply to Will Throne, Labor, who intimated in a question last week that Frau Hess had made a request to be allowed to join her husband.

Jap Plane Losses in Solomons Heavier Than at Midway

By WALTER CLAUSEN
Associated Press Staff Writer

PEARL HARBOR, T. H., Oct. 20 —(AP)—In her assault on American strongholds in the Solomons, Japan has already lost more planes than in the Battle of Midway, informed sources indicated.

Estimates of Japanese plane losses at Midway ran at least 200. Competent observers here say Allied planes and gunners have shot down more than that number of Japanese aircraft in the Solomons.

All reports are to the effect that Japan is attempting to build up the most powerful umbrella of planes it ever has assembled.

Massing of Japanese, sea, air and land power all point toward a Japanese goal of concentrating in the Solomons one of the greatest striking forces she ever has sent against any territory. In the last month or so, the enemy is believed to have landed at least 15,000 troops on Guadalcanal Island alone.

Included in the Japanese armada in the battle area are battleships, aircraft carriers, heavy cruisers, destroyers and tanks.

The fact that Japan has assembled such a powerful force significantly points to the value the Japanese place on the American-held Solomons base.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Christie, Foxboro, Celebrate 50th Wedding Anniversary

Attended by approximately twenty-five friends and relatives, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Christie, 5th concession of Sidney township, today, October 20th, celebrated the 50th anniversary of their marriage in their commodious farm home near Foxboro.

Many messages of congratulations upon attaining their 50th anniversary were received by the couple, while there were also beautiful gifts appropriate for the occasion. Friends from Toronto and Marmora attended the celebration.

Being married fifty years is all in the day's work for Mrs. Christie. When visited by a representative of the Ontario Intelligencer on Monday she was in the midst of preparing for the celebration. Still very active Mrs. Christie, nevertheless admitted that fiftieth anniversaries were celebrated only "once in a lifetime." Mr. Christie now 84, has been in failing health for a number of years.

Mr. and Mrs. Christie moved to Foxboro 23 years ago from Marmora township where the Christie family were engaged in farming four miles north of the village. Mrs. Christie is the former Sophia Beckstead, daughter of the late George and Elizabeth Beckstead of Dundas county, near Morrisburg.

U. E. Loyalist Stock

The Beckstead family are old campaigners according to Mrs. Christie. She is of United Empire Loyalist stock. Her great grandfather, Alexander Beckstead fought at Chrysler's Farm and her grandfather, Jacob Beckstead and his wife celebrated their 70th wedding anniversary. The original Beckstead homestead at Chesterville, Ont., is still occupied by the family after approximately 175 years.

Of late years Mr. Christie, owing to failing health, has been unable to do heavy work but until eight years ago attended Belleville market regularly. Mrs. Christie, with her son Russell, still attends market, the family in addition to general farming, carrying on a market gardening business.

Active in Church Work

Members of Foxboro United Church, Mr. and Mrs. Christie were both formerly active in church work with Mrs. Christie still being active in the various church organizations and in the Red Cross. Mr. Christie is a member of the L.O.L. and of the Oddfellows' Lodge, although he has not attended for several years.

Mr. and Mrs. Christie have but one son, Russell, at home and one grand child Reta Christie, now attending Belleville Collegiate. Mrs. Christie has two brothers, Mr. Lloyd Beckstead of Rosetown, Sask., and Mr. Earle Beckstead on the homestead at Chesterville. Mr. Christie has one brother, Mr. James Christie, Boswell Street, Belleville.

Colorful Ceremonies Mark Presentation of Commando Dagger to Mayor of Trenton

Trenton (Special)—Hon. G. Howard Ferguson who was to have spoken at Trenton's Third Victory Loan Rally met with a painful accident in Toronto on Saturday evening which prevented him from coming to Trenton. In his absence Mr. Ferguson very kindly arranged for Mr. R. L Wright, MA., of Toronto to take his place Mr. Ferguson was struck down by a car as he was crossing the street to mail a letter Saturday evening, and although injured, it is understood he is not in a critical condition. The Chairman of the Victory Loan, Mr. W. H. Ireland, and Mr. Wright both expressed their profound sympathy for Mr. Ferguson, and their hope for his speedy recovery.

Gives Stirring Address

Mr. Wright, who has lived in Canada for the past thirty years, coming here from Northampton, England, delivered a stirring address to the thousands who had gathered at the foot of Mount Pelion where the ceremony took place. He appealed to all present to strive to their utmost to put the loan well over the top, to work, save and lend every dollar possible to help the government to buy planes, ships, munitions, guns, tanks and all the necessary equipment with which to bring the fight to a final victory.

Group Capt. Keddie Speaks

In the absence of Air Commodore McGill of the Trenton Air Station and Group Captain Keddie, Officer Commanding 6 A.R.D. who were unavoidably detained through important business, the gathering was addressed by Squadron Leader Christmas who was for a considerable time in command of No. 1 Squadron of the R.C.A.F in the Battle of Britain Squadron Leader Christmas, who made but a few brief remarks, left nothing lacking in the minds of his listeners as to their duty towards this present Victory Loan. He told of the many and repeated bombings of Britain and of the splendid spirit of the people of that small island and challeged every one present not only to give, but then to give till they felt it, and finally not to fail until they had given every last dollar until it really hurt. "Not until then, said the speaker, will you feel that you are actually in the fighting line." He made special mention of the fact that not only had unarmed forces in the past given in a very generous manner to the Victory Loans by the Forces themselves had made a very considerable contribution, and expressed the hope that this generosity would be repeated. Squadron Leader Christmas said, "You have given your sons, now you must give the funds to provide the equipment to keep them in the air, on the sea and in the field."

$270,000 Trenton's Quota

The Commando Dagger was presented by Mr. Wright to Mayor H. R. Cory who accepted it on behalf of the citizens of the town of Trenton and pledged their loyalty to the fullest in this great cause for freedom. Mayor Cory said, Trenton's quota is $270,000 and a new bomber costs $300,000. Let us buy one and send it to Hitler with our compliments."

The invocation was by the Rev. J. L. Hutchinson, Vicar of St. George's Anglican Church, who with the R.C.A.F. and the Hastings & Prince Edward band led with the singing of "Onward Christian Soldiers" and "Oh God Our Help in Ages Past."

At the conclusion of the ceremonies the salute was taken by Colonel A. E. Bywater, Honorary Colonel of the H. & P. E. regiment and Squadron Leader Christmas.

The parade which was composed of veterans of the World War, R.C.A.F. band, Hastings & Prince Edward band, squadrons of the R.C.A.F. and R.C.A.F. (W.D.), Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment, Boy Scouts and Cubs was under the direction of Warrant Officer Strange of 6 A.R.D. Trenton Air Station, and was assembled at 2 p.m. on the grounds of College Street School, from where it marched to the Cenotaph at Mount Pelion.

During the ceremony squadron after squadron of bombers and fighter planes flew in formation over the mountain and this was an added reminder to all present of the seriousness of war in all it's grim reality.

Police Nab Three Suspects After Receipt Of Telephone Warning

TRENTON — (Special) — On Saturday evening a York Road resident who had just entered her home discovered that someone was trying to get into her house. She was all alone at the time, and becoming frightened, called a neighbor on the phone. At the time the neighbor was talking to someone else and she told the telephone operator her trouble and it was relayed to the police. The radio car was dispatched with constables Lozo and Morgan who took into custody three men whom they found on the premises and who gave their names as Jimmy Feldman, Dennis Deland, Roger Gariepy.

They were found to be in possession of a Ford sedan with a Quebec licence. When questioned Feldman stated the car belonged to his father and he had in his possession a Quebec driver's licence in the name of Gordon Feldman, age 27. Police were quick to sense that something was wrong. Feldman alleged to be 27, they could see was a mere lad in his teens. A call to the Montreal police by phone revealed that the car had been stolen from that city on Oct. 11th. This car from its appearance has been in several accidents and is probably wanted for some serious accident at some other point. The three were remanded to the County Jail on charges of vagrancy, by the J. P. to await the arrival of Montreal detectives.

Arrest Solves Bike Thefts

Twenty bicycles stolen from Trenton during the past ten days have been recovered with the exception of two or three. Nine were recovered on Saturday with the arrest of John Lambert of the Wooler Road. John is an old offender and the police started to check up on his movements and it was discovered by Constable Lozo that he had attempted to sell a bicycle in Codrington. A search was made for Lambert and through his arrest the nine bicycles were located, and the police have further hopes of recovering the remaining bikes. Lambert had been selling the bicycles far and near, some at Hastings, Frankford, Orland, Hilton, Belleville and several other country places. He had dismantled some and concealed them in the bushes. Lambert will likely appear in court on Tuesday.

House Raided

Early Sunday morning Trenton police raided an alleged gambling house on Quinte St. and arrested sixteen who will all appear in court on Tuesday.

Taxi Damaged

While stopped for a traffic signal at the corner of Dufferin and Dundas St., on Saturday morning, a LaMorre taxi driven by Carl W. Howe, Trenton, was badly damaged when struck from the rear by a truck owned by the Industrial Construction Co., of St. Thomas and driven by Kenneth Yoe of R. R. No. 1 Spartan. Passengers in the taxi were: Mr. and Mrs. Roy Goodwin, Heber St., Trenton, and Mrs. Goodwin is thought to have received slight injuries. The truck received a badly damaged bumper and grill.

Apples were quite plentiful ranging from $1.00 per bushel for cooking varieties to $2.25 for top grade MacIntosh. Best grade Talman Sweets brought $2.00.

A few farmers offered young pigs which brought as high as $9.00 each Potatoes were $2.00 per bag, cauliflower still plentiful at 10c up, onions 75c per peck, carrots 20c per basket, celery 10c per bunch or 15 for hearts.

Malta Defenders Shoot Down 2 Nazi Planes

CAIRO, Oct. 20 — (AP) — British fighters shot down two German fighters over Malta Sunday as Axis raiders continued to blast the rocky island but at a diminishing tempo, a joint headquarters R.A.F. communique said Monday.

The two air victories yesterday brought to 117 the number of Axis planes shot down over and around the island since Oct. 1.

The communique reported that the Axis bombers inflicted "very little damage" in yesterday's attacks.

PARIS RADIO SAYS BOMB THROWN

CHECK "GRIPPY" COLDS

METAL SHORTAGES VERY CRITICAL

Toronto, Oct. 20 — (CP)—Harry J. Carmichael, co-ordinator of production in the Department of Munitions and Supply, told a one-day meeting of nearly 1,500 Canadian munitions manufacturers here Saturday that shortages of vital metals are so critical manufacturers conserve "not pounds, but fractions of ounces."

He said it is vital that the use of materials, manpower and machines be drastically conserved if Canada is to remain a potent factor in the war.

"This is not an economic scare," he said, "This is an honest-to-God shortage of these things that are necessary to carry us on to victory."

Representatives of the United Kingdom and Canadian inspection board for the navy, army and air force told the gathering that all substitutions and changes in war equipment were rigorously tested and that the prime test was whether the quality was unimpaired by the change.

Losses Equalled by Building

Harvey McMillan, president of wartime merchant shipping, told the meeting that September was the first month since the beginning of the war that merchant ship production by the United Nations equalled the volume of ships sunk by enemy action.

Warning of the need for merchant ships, he said the United Nations now have less tonnage than the Allies had in 1917 and 1918. Mr. MacMillan detailed the conservation program in materials and labor which had been followed in the shipbuilding industry.

Tons of non-ferrous metals had been taken out of the specifications for each ship. "These things have been reduced to a lower level than any naval or shipbuilding specifications in use in the United Kingdom or the United States," he said.

Canada has reached her budget in ship-building and so far has sent fifty-seven merchant ships, each of 10,000 tons, to the sea, he said.

Mr. Carmichael stressed that the conservation program depended largely upon the co-operation and help of the inspection boards of the armed services, and he said their assistance "has been a real inspiration." He impressed on manufacturers the need for co-operation among themselves.

Early Christmas Mail Overseas

Everyone who contemplates sending Christmas parcels overseas should remember that November 10th is the deadline. A huge volume of Christmas mail for the Canadian armed forces overseas is anticipated and it is advisable that gifts be sent now, the earlier the better, to ensure timely delivery.

Parcels should be packed well and no fresh fruits should be enclosed. It is illegal to enclose matches, lighter fluids or any other inflammable substance. Such endangers all other parcels. The weight limit, as many know, for parcels to members of the Canadian fighting forces, is eleven pounds; to civilians, five pounds. It is also well to remember that smaller size and lighter weight parcels enable more Christmas gifts to be convoyed. Cooperate by packing carefully, wrap securely, address correctly, including return address and prepay postage.

Some Permanent Factors

In the present war modern science is playing a part never equalled in history. Even the youngest child knows a great deal about the latest inventions and devices used in war which were unthought of a few years ago.

Yet some of the oldest things find a place in modern conflict and hold their own even in a struggle of such proportions and of such explosive character as the modern mechanism of war.

Paramount of course is man, the enduring factor in spite of war's changes. It is the sailor, the soldier, the airman who are still preeminent over all the mechanism which man has invented. Despite the damaging nature of war, men of the forces stand up to the most destructive devices and willpower and spirit still rule.

Malta is an outstanding example of another of the permanent factors which outlive many generations of struggle. Malta is the symbol of a natural position which has from time immemorial occupied the brains of military chiefs and leaders. This rocky island has endured the utmost of air attack, and it stands a bastion against the Axis effort to dominate the Mediterranean. It defies the best laid schemes of the Huns and Italians. It guards the sea-lanes and has served Britain and the United Nations in a way which has surprised the world. Its people have been awarded the George Cross, a symbol paying honor to their courage. This island has held firm and in the skies above and about her dauntless British and Dominion airmen have held sway, damaging heavily the air power of the Hun. Malta too is a great haven for ships, an anchorage of the lifeline of Britain which preserves the Inland Sea and the control of North Africa. Today it serves as a defence, foils enemy plans as it has down the course of ages. All the fury of the enemy has not been able to prevail against this natural fortress, its indomitable people and the defence force.

Malta has been one of the great factors determining the course of the war towards victory by the United Nations.

Just recently news was cabled throughout the world concerning another of the unchangeables. The dispatch dealt with a bridge the Russians had built over the Volga, the floor resting over barrels and empty oilcans. A bridge of such a character was possible generations and centuries ago for bridges were one of the first developments of man as he set out on his conquest over the forces of nature. There was nothing in this bridge but the oilcans which was essentially modern. But that bridge has served Russia well and proven a thorn in the side of the Huns.

Tons of Axis bombs failed to destroy the bridge and bombardment delayed traffic only a few hours.

This is not to say that the old is necessarily equal or superior to the new. It means that some unchangeable factors exist. But war keeps step with scientific development, else nations would still be fighting with bows and arrows or more primitive weapons. Yet permanent factors exist, the human element, the position of strategic importance, and others which may be symbolized by the bridge in question, which time has not greatly changed. Today the importance of natural position is undoubtedly greater than it was the days of Alexander or Caesar and above the carnage man stands supreme in his ability to endure.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS . . .

MALTA

So stands the island fortress crowned with smoke and flame,
Battered and battle-scarred she looms in sullen pride,
Wave after wave the bombers strike; her rock is faith—
The faith of those who manned the answering guns and died.

Courage stands here to guard the gateway of the seas,
That bulwark in a world where nothing much is sure,
Citadel of the age to come; here Malta stands—
So long do courage, loyalty and faith endure.

THE FARMER AND THE VICTORY LOAN

One of the strongest tributes ever paid to the farmers of Canada was that from the Honoprable J. L. Ilsley, Minister of Finance, in addressing a joint meeting of Service Clubs in the city of Toronto last week.

"We must also look to the farmers of Canada for substantial help in our Victory Loan. I wonder if most of us realize how much the hardworking farmers of this country and their families have been doing in this war. First, they have supplied men—fine, able-bodied men—for the armed forces and for war industries. I am told that from a pre-war, able-bodied farm manpower supply of about one and a quarter million, no less than a quarter of a million have gone into the services or the factories. The others have worked harder and longer—with the help of older men, women and children, and have accomplished wonders in production. They have more than doubled our hog production, increased beef production by 20%, and cheese production by 60%. They have learned to grow relatively new crops like flax and soy beans to meet special shortages created by the war. They have grown far more feed grains to make possible the greater livestock production so urgently needed by Britain and ourselves. Although economizing in the acreage devoted to wheat, they have, by the aid of good weather this year, grown the greatest wheat crop in our history—and they are harvesting it in the face of an acute labor shortage. Canadian farmers alone are now able to supply Britain with all the wheat she needs, and with an amount of bacon and ham nearly equal to the total she obtained from all countries before the war. Many of us, in speaking of our wartime accomplishments, take a natural pride in the speed with which we have built up an army, a navy and a huge air force, and in the magnitude and excellence of our production of munitions and war equipment. These are more spectacular—more warlike—but they are no more surprising than the quiet but prodigious achievements of Canadian agriculture.

The high level of farm production, at fair and reasonable prices, is providing this year a gross farm income which although it is too early to estimate it with accuracy, will certainly rank well with that of the best years of the past. Like other business men, however, the farmers would from such income on farm are unable to spend what they did on machinery or buildings, because of the shortages of materials. Like other consumers, they are unable to buy all they would like to buy these days for themselves. Consequently they too will have funds available for investment in Victory Bonds. We have some new arrangements worked out—notably the Victory Ticket plan—which make it much simpler and more convenient for the farmer to fit the purchase of Victory Bonds into his business. In supporting this loan, the farmers of Canada will be able to serve in a double capacity—as producers of vitally needed foodstuffs, and as a pillar of war finance. In addition, of course, they will be improving their own position, building up reserves for the days when machinery can be replaced or extended and when we can enjoy the better life to which we look forward."

JUDGMENT

Grains appear so little
Till the ton is weighed.
Not by jot or tittle
Should judgment be made.
Be not quick to scoff it
When a blunder shows,
Time may shop a profit
At the ledger's close.

All that really matters
Is the sum of all.
Oft the mightiest batters
Fail to hit the ball.

Men forget the errors
With the winning run.
Failure has no terrors
When the vict'ry's won.

Hasty censure's silly.
Wait for "good" and "bad."
From the mire the lily
And the rose are had.
God, the judge of all men,
Waits for life to close.
Rightly great and small men
No one living knows.

May Attempt To Wrest Burma From Japanese

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Intimations from India that an Allied attempt to wrest Burma from Japanese control may be in the making tend to recall President Roosevelt's recent fireside chat assertion that diversion attacks for the relief of both China and Russia are on the United Nations' war agenda.

"That, however, like second-front preparations in Europe, hardly can be an immediate matter. It could not develop in time, for example, to affect the situation of American forces in the Solomons awaiting a formidable Nipponese attempt to retake Guadalcanal Island, although it might prove an added deterrent to Japanese attack on Russia. By the same token, the chances that an Allied second front in Europe can be opened in time to aid Stalingrad's defenders do not seem bright.

Malta Unsoftened.

It is only in the third crisis-laden war theatre, in Egypt, that there is a clearly discernible possibility of early Allied offensive which could deeply influence developments on other fronts, including Russia. Nor is there much doubt that behind the furious and sustained Axis bombing of Malta lies Nazi expectation of such an attack.

One out of every thirteen Axis planes sent against Malta during the last eight days has been shot down and many more so severely damaged that they never reached home. The minimum known enemy plane loss in that period, leaving damaged craft out of the reckoning, is set at 117 as against 28 British ships downed.

There is no indication whatever that the mass air attack has softened up Malta for ultimate capture, or that the Axis expected it would. Its purpose is clearly to neutralize Malta as a threat to Axis convoys to Libya carrying reinforcements and supplies for Rommels stalled African corps.

Nothing short of growing danger that Rommel might be crushed by an impending Allied counter-offensive unless heavily bolstered without delay could seem to warrant such lavish expenditure of air power against Malta.

Miracle of Repair.

Between the lines of every press despatch from Cairo run intimations that, aided by American technical forces as well as air units, the British have achieved a miracle of repair to battered battle and transport equipment. There is no suggestion even from Berlin that Axis submarines on the Cape of Good Hope supply route have done any material damage to the flow of goods and men to the Middle East.

Backed by the obvious fact that Anglo-American air power dominates the African war scene, these circumstances seem fully to justify Axis fears of an impending Egyptian second front. Once it is opened and meets with any initial success, Nazi withdrawal of air power from Russia to meet the threat must follow. It seems unquestionable that it is only to Africa and to the close approach of winter that the Russians can look for immediate help.

Skipper Smokes Pipe on Rail While Shells Fall

Kingston, Ont., Oct. 20 —(CP)— A Canadian army doctor who was aboard a hospital ship half a mile off Dieppe during the combined operations raid on that German-occupied French port related last night how the skipper of the ship inspired his whole crew by sitting on the bridge rail, feet in the air, nonchalantly smoking a pipe while bombs fell around the craft.

Capt. Ronald B. Murray of Kingston and Owen Sound, Ont., Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps, said in a broadcast the skipper, whom he did not name, "was as cool as a cucumber and wasn't even wearing a steel helmet.

Bob Bopman of Ottawa, of the London Staff of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, questioned the ship's captain as he sat on the rail.

Capt. Murray said at the height of the action a mess boy brought him a message from the captain, saying "Your tea is ready." Capt Murray went on deck and joined the skipper.

"He immediately got into a discussion with me about some kind of rare poppies he was trying to grow back in his garden in Kensington . . . I found it awfully hard to concentrate on horticulture at that moment. When tea was over I went back to my post."

"The great majority of the wounds were slight and the lads came cursing aboard over their rotten luck in being knocked out of action," he said. "I distinctly remember one red-headed fellow from Les Fusiliers Mont-Royal after I had bandaged his wounds, pleading for an opportunity to get back into action. He was a good fellow and typical of that whole French Canadian regiment."

A BADGE OF HONOR

The chevron is one of the most honorable insignia that any American can wear.

Chevrons denote the most important and essential men in the military service.

It is conceivable that war might be carried on successfully without commissioned officers, but successful war without privates and non-commissioned officers is inconceivable.

In the U. S. Army the chevron of a first-class private is one bar, of a corporal two bars, and of a sergeant three bars.

"Chevron" has been used as the name for the distinguishing mark on the sleeves of non-commissioned army officers since about 1813.

The original meaning of "chevron" in English was a beam or roof rafter.

In this sense the term came to us from the French.

But when "chevron" passed from French into English it already meant a roof rafter.

The plural denoted the couples of the roof which meet at the ridge.

In heraldry and decorative art a chevron was a charge on the escutcheon and consisted of a bar bent like two meeting rafters or a V-shaped figure upside down.

Zoologists call certain V-shaped bones chevrons, and in Norman architecture moulding that zigzags or is ornamented with such figures is known as chevron moulding.

The Quartermaster Corps of the U. S. Army is buying millions of cotton and wool chevrons for the sleeves of the shirts, coats, and overcoats of first-class privates and non-commissioned men.

Each private in the army rating chevrons gets four for his cotton shirts, three for his fatigue shirts, one for his field jacket, two for his wool shirts, one for his wool coat, and one for his overcoat or mackinaw. Also two wool and two cotton chevrons a year are required for each soldier for maintenance. These chevrons cost from four to eleven cents apiece.

Chevrons on army and marine uniforms are worn with the peaks upward, while chevrons on the uniforms of petty naval officers are worn in reversed position, with the point downward to distinguish them from equivalent ranks in the army and marine corps.

Trousseau Trove

A striped lace fabric of Val effect is used for this negligee. Deep V neckline is softened with ruffles, and both sash belt and sleeves have ruffled plastron trimming. Graceful despite curtailment of material.

By PRUNELLA WOOD

The negligees which are permissible under wartime fabric restrictions are shorter and not so lush in the skirt as those that went before. But they lose nothing in either charm or comfort as the model, above, reveals.

A shorter skirt gives a break to a pretty ankle and slipper; a narrower skirt keeps fresh and clean longer. If you live in a warm climate, the lace negligee above will double as breakfast coat; if you are coping with Jack Frost, call it a trusseau item for the present. . . but remember, lace is hardy for all its sheerness, and when spring comes in again, this garment will still be pretty and useful.

Fashion Flashes

SOMETHING NICE to wear with the tailored suit is the small tricorne in bright colors. A nice model, worn tilted well forward, is done in a pink, rose and sheer plaided sheer woolen.

PRETTIER THAN EVER is the verdict of those who have seen the newest lingerie. Yellow rayon crepe is used for an ankle length nightgown with white lace for neckline edging, for hemline border and for diamond-shaped midriff inserts. White roses embroidered in the midriff inserts.

VERY GOOD, if not as luxurious as the more impressive furs, are those well-styled coats of Persian paw, featured this season. A good model is done on fitted lines with slashed pockets making a modified peg-top line.

PERK UP your dark frocks with a pretty woolen jacket for informal evenings. Designed for this purpose is a fitted jacket of raspberry ice woolen trimmed with tiny tassels of jet beads.

STILL HERE and very much so are evening fashions designed for important furlough evenings. A snug sweater top is the feature of a pretty dinner dress. In mauve-pink crepe, it is embroidered all over in tiny mauve and silver butterflies. Long slim mauve woolen skirt.

ALL READY to give long and faithful service is the alligator shoe available in various styles and colors. Choose skins for their pliability and you'll have a shoe that will stand by you and with you.

Former Pastor Returns For Anniversary Service at Madoc

Marmora — Large congregations attended the joyful and inspiring anniversary exercises at St. Andrew's United Church, Marmora, on Sunday, when Rev. Wendell P. Woodger, B.A., of Cobourg who commenced his pastoral duties at Marmora in the days of the last war, was the preacher for the day. Assisting the choir, were two lady soloists of Metropolitan United Church, Toronto. The one was Miss Flora Sanderson, a Marmora girl, who prior to joining the Metropolitan Church choir, was organist and soloist of St. Andrew's. The other was Miss Maisie Hunter who was making her first visit to the village. The church was beautifully adorned for the occasion with choice autumn flowers and foliage. Joining the congregation were many former members who now reside in nearby places. The subject for the morning's discourse was "Or, But, if and And." Two solos were rendered by Miss Hunter. The congregation was deeply impressed with the rendition of the solos and while appreciating the good services of Mrs. L. Green, as temporary organist, was pleased Mrs. W. R. Litt the regular organist at the organ again. The solos taken by Miss Hunter at the evening service were "The Holy City" and "Abide With Me." Miss Sanderson sang "O Lord, Have Mercy Upon Us." Choosing as his subject "Coming to the Light," the preacher spoke of the following things brought to the light or discovered through this war.

The indestructibility of the human spirit.

Spirit conviction is man's greatest weapon.

Every man on earth is important. No alum will ever again be necessary in a civilized world. The economic system can be mastered.

Man can work together. All the world is a unit. The government of the world is laid upon a body of ideals and convictions by which the world lives

Albert College Gridiron Squad Scores Impressive Win Over B.C.I. to Tie St. Mikes for Lead

SCORE IS 14-5

Albert College advanced into a tie for first place in the Bay of Quinte Interscholastic six-man football standing Monday afternoon when on their own booting grounds they defeated the Belleville Collegiate squad by a decisive 14-5 count.

Albert and St. Michael's are now tied for first place with a win each, both being at the expense of the B.C.I. squad who to-date have yet to get into the win column. The next game will be played at the Collegiate grounds on Wednesday afternoon.

In pure driving force the Collegiate lads proved no match for their Albert rivals during yesterday's game which saw a large number of the student body from the contesting clubs' schools witness the encounter. The Collegiate boys held their rivals to about equal terms during the first three quarters with the score at the half being 7-4 and at the third quarter 7-5 in favor of Albert.

During the final quarter, however, the Albert boys surged to the front with single points being kicked by Orr on two occasions and a touchdown by Waite. By a concerted effort the Collegians kept the Albert lads from scoring in the third quarter but they themselves faded in the final.

Albert Scores First

Albert drew first blood as the game got under way when Bruce Orr, classy College half-back, gained a rouge to put his team in the lead. This was equalled by B.C.I. a few moments later when Bateman booted over to tie the game, the quarter ending one-all.

Albert forged into the lead in the second quarter when to climax a determined push down the field Fred Aboud scored a touchdown with Orr converting for the extra point. Bateman returned with a placement kick for three points for the Collegians with the score at half-time being 7-4. Bateman kicked for a B.C.I. in the third quarter as they held Albert from scoring, but the one man advantage in reserve strength enjoyed by the winners showed to good stead in the final as the Collegians were held scoreless while Albert piled up a total of seven points.

RAY ROBINSON WINS DECISION

Izzy Jannazzo Hit With Everything But Posts But Stayed Erect

Philadelphia, Oct. 20—(AP)—Unbeaten Ray "Sugar" Robinson won his 37th straight bout at the Arena last night, but tough Izzy Jannazzo shared the crowd's cheers by absorbing all of Ray's Sunday punches without once hitting the canvas.

Robinson hit Izzy with everything in the book and though he saw the Birmingham, Ala., veteran totter in the first, third, fourth and ninth rounds, the Harlem jolter had to be content with a 10-round decision.

His toughness may have upset Robinson's immediate ring plans. Dr. W. B. G. Terry, physician for the Pennsylvania Athletic Commission, said after the scrap the Harlem dandy may have chipped a bone in his right hand. Dr. Terry planned to take several X-rays today.

Robinson weighed 143½ and Jannazzo 147.

All Pro Players Allowed to Play

Ottawa, Oct. 20 —(CP)— The National Defence Hockey League last night reversed an earlier decision and threw its doors open to all former professional hockey players stationed with army units in the capital. The rule previously imposed would have barred former professionals playing with the Ottawa Commandos.

In a move to balance teams the league decided to limit each club to two professionals. Units now having more than two pros will be allowed to name the two they will keep and those released will be allocated by the executive to other teams.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By CHARLES EDWARDS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, Oct. 20 — (CP) — Canadian sportsmen and women can be proud of the contribution they have made to the war effort. The Dominion Government has asked that sport be carried on in the interests of public morale but in some instances defence needs have outweighed those of morale. In two such cases, the Dominion found it necessary to take over the only indoor hockey rinks in Vancouver and Edmonton. Vancouver hockey has been switched to the New Westminster arena and in Edmonton it is certain there will be no senior hockey this year and doubtful whether the juniors will be able to operate on open air rinks.

Winnipeg and Montreal winter clubs have been taken over by the navy as barracks. Members will not begrudge the loss but for many in each city the winter clubs had been their chief source of recreation. In Winnipeg, at least, there is no similar club to which the figure skaters can turn. And Winnipeg had taken years to build a fine club, one which finally produced the Canadian and North American women's champion, Mary Rose Thacker. Now and for the duration, the club's skaters, the badminton and squash players, the bowlers and swimmers must pursue their favorite sports in less suitable quarters or find other recreation.

The expert says:

Bill (Niagara Falls Review) Scotheran comments on the sale of the American Hockey League veteran, Chuck Shannon, by Eddie Shore's Buffalo Bisons to Pittsburgh: — "Shore has carved himself a niche in hockey's hall of fame that will stand as long as the game itself; that is as a player, not a coach. He's got the brains and the ability but in trying to hook them up he's one of the hardest task-masters in organized hockey and it's a cinch a boisterous antic-loving guy like Shannon would never get on with the Shore temperament."

Incidentally:

While thousands of sportsmen throughout the country hunt ducks, the Vancouver Sun comes up with an excellent idea for salvaging brass from used shells. A box is located in the Sun sports department where hunters can drop their empties ... former Toronto Maple Leafs hockey stars now in the service will be brought to Toronto by airplane from wherever they may be based in Canada to participate in a Maple Leaf Gardens charity hockey game Oct. 29. Nick Metz and Syl Apps will choose teams from the Leafs, past and present. All expenses will be borne by the Gardens and the gross take turned over to war charities ... Doug Peden of Victoria, one of Canada's greatest all-round athletes and brother of Torchy, the six-day bike ace, has enlisted with the 27th battery, R. C. A.

N. H. L. Training Notes

(By The Canadian Press)

Coach Dick Irvin of Canadiens holds high regard for Buddy O'Connor his youthful centre man of last year's razzle-dazzle line. Irvin said the Verdun, Que., player rates with Boston's Bill Cowley as one of the best play-making pivot men in the business. The Habitant mentor, however, added that Syl Apps of Toronto Leafs is the best all-round centre man in the big time.

Colorful Tony Graboski who doubled at defence and on the front line for Canadiens and Washington Lions last season, is not expected to play hockey this season. Tony is studying to become a dentist in his home town, Hershey, Pa., and it is believed he will concentrate on working for a degree.

Mentor "Hap" Day of Toronto will build his team around the 10 members who are still left from last year's Stanley Cup. He has Turk Broda in goal; Reg Hamilton and Bucko McDonald for defence. Up front he has Sweeney Schriner, Bill Taylor and Lorne Carr; another line of Apps, Bob Davidson and Mel Hill and a third of Hank Goldup, Poile and Gaye Stewart.

New York Rangers got their first taste of starting and stopping in practice yesterday. Players dread this grind after a regular workout of 90 minutes. The players start from centre ice and at a signal are supposed to stop on a dime. After 5 minutes of this the boys are looking for a soft spot to rest the aching spots.

James C. Hendy, Editor of the National Hockey League Guide claims that the Ranger line of Lynn Patrick, Phil Watson and Bryan Hextall may not be 1-2-3 in point-making statistics this season, "but unless they are stopped by injuries they'll be among the first five."

To add a little incentive to the prediction the players have decided to pool $10 or more each with top point-maker taking all.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

London, Oct. 20— (CP) —The Royal Canadian Air Force softball season in Hyde Park is over but those thousands who turned up at each game to see what it was all about will tell you it was "a smashing affair." In short, Britons enjoyed their baseball entertainment, though in comparison to Canadian fans they appeared polite in the extreme as they clapped and "bravo'd" for good plays and chuckled at the players' chatter and the razzing of the umpires.

The season ended officially with the headquarters team crowned as R. C. A. F. champs. H. Q. beat a bomber squadron team.

Biggest "bomb" in the headquarters' final victory was LAC. Red Groves of Stratford, Ont. He slashed out six hits in seven trips to the plate. Three were homers. LAC. Bernard Joubarne of Ottawa pitched both games for the winners.

Only serious competitive event the war has left on Britain's golfing calender, The Daily Sketch National Women's Tournament, was staged over a Richmond course with most of the 62 entries in uniform. Transport driver Wanda Morgan, English champion and winner of the event last season, improved on her 1941 triumph by three strokes to card 75 and win the Scratch trophy. Victory made Miss Morgan the unofficial 1942 British Golf Queen. Francis Stephens, 18 and hailed as a future "world beater" took a first handicap prize, carding a net 70. Pam Barton, British and American titlist, went out in 34 but failed badly on the last nine and carded 44.

To pierce the male ego, just listen to this, fellows: Jean Nicoll and Audrey Cardinal won a lawn tennis challenge match against two Dulwich schoolboy cricketers, Trevor Bailey and A. W. Mallett, 6-2, 6-2, at Beckenham. After the match the boys' suggestion of a single-wicket cricket match to get revenge was declined with thanks by the girls.

And here's another gal who whipped all the boys—Sun Chariot, the sprightly filly owned by the king and first filly to win the St. Legar in 15 years. After she took the St. Leger—her third classic victory of the season, Steve Donoghue said she is the greatest racing filly of all time. Steve should know something about it because his career as a jockey and trainer goes back 40 years.

EXPERTS' CHOICE FOR SECOND WEEK IS OHIO STATE

Alabama Moves Up Into Third Place Over Michigan

DIXIE SECOND

New York, Oct. 20 —(AP)— Ohio State, with a record of four straight victories this season, remains the choice of the football experts as the United States No. 1 team in the second of the Associated Press's weekly polls.

Fifty-eight of the 119 sports writers gave the Buckeyes, who blanked Purdue 26-0 in their latest outing, first place on their ballots but 38 others decided the honor belonged to Georgia, a 40-0 winner over Tulane last Saturday.

The Dixie Bulldogs, second a week ago held the runner-up position, 1,030 votes to 973, but Alabama, which stopped Tennessee, 8-0, exchanged places with Michigan and occupied third place while the Wolverines skidded to fourth despite their 34-16 triumph over Northwestern.

That was the only change among the first seven of a week ago with Illinois, Georgia Tech and Wisconsin keeping the fifth, sixth and seventh rungs.

The remaining three places in the top 10, however, went to newcomers with Notre Dame climbing from 22 to eighth on the strength of the 28-0 shellacking administered the Iowa Pre-Flight Cadets; Santa Clara moving up from a tie for 15th to ninth by beating California, and Boston College nudging up from 11th to 10th following the Eagles' 7-6 victory over the North Carolina Preflights.

Pennsylvania, tied by Princeton; Colgate, drubbed by Duke and Washington State, loser to Southern California, were eighth, ninth and 10th a week ago.

Army and Texas Christian, neither defeated this season, failed to make the first 10 by 21 and 23 votes, respectively. They are in the second group along with Minnesota, Ucla, Texas, Mississippi State, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, North Carolina and Syracuse.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Oct. 20—(AP)—How can you figure out anything about this college football season? . . You just decide those Navy preflight teams are unbeatable when two of them get bumped off on one day—and the Iowa bunch by Notre Dame, which had been tied by Wisconsin and beaten by Georgia Tech. . . . Then a team like Duke, with no great record, comes up and pastes Colgate (just incidentally, this corner picked Colgate to win) by scoring one touchdown on an offensive play and four on things like pass interceptions and blocked kicks.

Walter Primrose, the concert violinist who had transcribed Bach, Beethoven and Brahms for the viola, is a regular at Madison Square Garden on fight nights and hollers just like any ordinary mugg. . . . If the new addition to Paul Brown's family, expected some time this winter, turns out to be a girl, the Ohio State coach says he'll name her "Scarlet Gray Brown"—which will sound swell if Paul winds up like most of his predecessors, coaching at some school whose colors are green and orange.

Quote, unquote!

Major Dick Hanley, former grid coach now in charge of the Marines' combat conditioning program: "We need rood, rough, tough men to win this war"

Mal Stevens, former grid coach now just a noted surgeon: "I don't know whether you can condition a man for fighting by flexing his deltoids but I know you can condition him by physical shocks."

Casual Comment by K.J.C.

NORM CHANDLER and Harry Burridge, of Toronto, were the umpires for the series and made quite a hit with the teams and fans when they appeared dressed in blue, with special heavy blue windbreakers, that were needed owing to the more winter-like weather. The late Charlie Hanna, then Mayor of Belleville, accompanied the Grand Trunks to Galt, along with at least a railway coach filled with supporters. The two teams lined up as follows in Galt: Belleville Grand Trunks, Ross, c.f.; Weir, s.s.; W. Mills, c.; H. Mills, 1b; J. K. Williams, 3b; Casey, r.f.; Meagher, 2b; Hagerman, l.f. and J. H. Williams, p. Galt Terriers, Grove, c.f.; Wilkinson, 2b; W. Graham, c.; Watts, l.f.; Evans, 1b; Hines, s.s.; Oliver, r.f.; G. Hines, 3b and W. Kress, p. Incidentally Wilkinson and Normie Hines were hockey players of note with Galt at that time, Hines later turning professional. Next game—Galt at Belleville. That one wasn't so favourable, however.

REMEMBER WHEN the Ottawa Roughriders lost the services of Tony Golab, one of Canada's finest grid iron stars, two years ago today? Golab suffered a severe back injury when the Riders defeated Toronto Argonauts 41 to 6 in a Big Four football clash the day before. Golab is now in the R.C.A.F. and played basketball last spring with Windsor versus the district R.C.A.F. cagers, winners of the senior O.B.A. title.

WHEN EARL McCREADY and Billie Watson square off in the Hume Arena ring Wednesday night don't look for any of that dock-walloper rasslin' antics. Instead the contestants are more liable to stick straight to orthodox grappling as a disqualification would be equally as bad as a loss in their drive for a shot at Champion John Katan's Empire crown. Both Watson and McCready are ring favourites here and should command the season's largest following.

A NEW THREAT LOOMED ON the City Interscholastic football horizon in Paul Goyette's Albert College junior sextette, who downed Skipper Mott's B.C.I. "Collegians" 14 to 5 yesterday. Last week St. Mikes blanked the Collegians 17 to 0 which should make Wednesday afternoon's Albert-Irish tangle at the Collegiate campus one of considerable interest. The Alberts held too much strength along the line of defence for the losers and used their excessive weight on the attack to score two touchdowns, Freddie Aboud starting the ball rolling in the second quarter and Jeff Waite adding a second try. Bruce Orr's educated toe accounted for a quartette of the winners' total scoring effort, as Orr outbooted Ralph Bateman. The losers' scoring was confined to a field goal kicked by Bateman and two rouges as Skipper Mott's squad just couldn't crack the heavy Albert defence. However, it will be interesting to see how the Irish speed will match the Alberts' power in their meeting.

There was revelry by night in Belleville 20 years ago with bands and parades as the city blew its top and hell broke loose in general. The reason for all of the bedlam—"The Belleville Grand Trunks had beaten the Galt Terriers in the first game of the 1922 senior O. B. A. Finals right in Galt". Faithful fans waited until the late train steamed into the old Grand Trunk station bearing Jack "Chief" Williams, the toast of the town, and his victorious team mates. It was a bitter cold day in Galt, so-much-so that tents were erected and oil stoves lit as the teams used the tents instead of players' benches between innings. The cold raw weather didn't agree with Chief Williams, who allowed four runs in the first two frames and Galt led 4-0 going into the fourth. However, the Trunks rallied in the top half of the fourth to score three as Chief Williams collected the only hit of the frame. Incidentally opposing Belleville's heralded Indian pitcher that day was Wilber Kress, on the Terriers' firing line. But Belleville won 7 to 1.

After the fourth the players became more climatized, as it had snowed earlier in the day, and no further scoring was in evidence until the ninth. With one out in the ninth Vern Weir and Peeney Mills were hit by pitched balls after Wicky Ross had strolled. Harry Mills came through with a single to score Ross and tie the count. Alex Watts muffled J. K. Williams' fly into left and Belleville went ahead. Then Babe Casey plastered a timely double to right and Belleville chalked up four big runs, enough to win the game as Galt only pushed one over in the last of the ninth. However, the Terriers didn't use their ace pitcher, Friendly Graham, who had been injured when hit with a batted ball in practice. Williams struck out ten that bitter cold day, while Kress whiffed seven. Owing to the weather Williams walked two and Kress three, but the latter hit four batters. Galt had five errors to Belleville's three, but everyone was happy as the second game of the provincial finals is then slated on the home lot.

THIS AND THAT—Tracy Shaw, who headed three Canadian junior championship teams for Oshawa, has accepted the post of coach of the senior O.H.A. Army team. . . Tracy Shaw played baseball for the Leaside team here 20 years ago in the old C.O.B.L. and in later years filled in in an emergency role with the Oshawa Generals. . . Lack of ice facilities at Montreal forced Art Ross to move his Boston Bruins to Cornwall for pre-season training. . . . Bob Davidson and Sweeney Schriner are reported as two of the first casualties at the Maple Leafs N.H.L. training camp at St. Catharines. . . John Wiele, veteran guard with the Detroit Lions, is an American Association baseball umpire in the summer months. . . Incidentally Cal Hubbard, who umpired in the 1942 World Series, played football for the Green Bay Packers long before he donned the umpire's blue.

The thrill of being a Yankee has never worn off for Spurgeon Chandler, pitcher.

Chandler got a thrill just hoping to be a Yankee. That was back in 1931 when Spud was tailback for Georgia and the Bulldogs were playing at Yankee Stadium in New York. It was Friday afternoon and Harry Mehre had his lads out for practice.

Chandler was missing. Mehre went looking and found Spud out there toeing the Yankee mound.

"Some day I'd like to be pitching from this mound," said Chandler to his football coach.

And he got his wish.

Base Hospital for Wounded Planes Built by U. S. in Heart of India

By PRESTON GROVER
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Somewhere in Central India, Oct. 20 (AP)—Three months ago this was just another piece of India sleeping in the sun.

Now it's a base hospital for wounded airplanes.

Here on a flat plain screened by rows of trees on all sides, a band of United States army engineers and technicians of the air service command have laid out a repair and supply depot that is putting new life into bombers and fighters, as well as the equally-vital ferry planes taking munitions to China.

The airfield and supply depot is the site of a small city 2 1-2 miles long, a mile and a half wide.

Diagonally across a section of it a stone-based runway is being built—capable of handling the biggest planes with the fullest loads.

The total ultimate capacity of the depot in terms of planes rebuilt and air forces supplied cannot be disclosed but it will be adequate, with its subordinate fields, to sustain a "big time show."

Service All Types of Planes

It isn't exclusively for Americans. It will service all types of American planes brought in either by Americans or Britons, but only those badly damaged.

"We'll take them only when they come in with their wings flapping," says the depot commander, Lt.-Col. John L. M. Des Islets.

The Cononel hails from Quebec, but he has lived in so many places in the United States it is hard to say which is his home.

Air Crew From Texas

Unlike the Colonel, however, most of the air service command here comes from Texas. The place smacks of San Antonio and Dallas.

Their job is to feed supplies to repair departments in the local depot as well as to advance depots as far away as China.

They supply anything from a briefcase to a bomb-door for a Flying Fortress, and requests come in on every sort of paper from scraps to regular forms. Formality is secondary.

It hasn't been all beer and skittles—this shaping of the airfield and depot. It was necessary, for instance; to move 13 mud villages. One village mound accumulated through generations will be scraped back into a lake formed when villagers scooped out mud a basketful at a time to build huts.

Picture of Laying of Montreal To Portland Pipeline Shown to Rotary

One of the outstanding engineering feats, the laying of a 234 mile twelve-inch pipeline from Portland, Maine to Montreal, Quebec, was shown to the Belleville Rotary Club on Monday through the medium of a highly interesting motion picture film.

The film was brought here by the representatives of the Imperial Oil Company and the machine provided through the courtesy of the Stewart Warner Alemite Corporation of Canada. Mr. Jack Warner, of that organization was the operator.

The film was productive of some rare photography. It shows the difficulties facing the engineers in preparing the site of the pipeline over the hills and mountains of Vermont, New Hampshire and the rolling valleys of Quebec. The mighty St. Lawrence and other rivers were spanned by the line after months of heavy, hard work.

The paths cut through the forests by the "bulldozers" were shown in detail, and the efforts of these powerful machines in clearing the way of heavy boulders as well as the giants of the forests was one of the features of the film.

The laying of the pipes, welding of the joints, the various methods of coupling were seen. Six powerful pumping stations relay the vital fluid from source to destination. The methods used to lay the pipe across 13,000 feet of the St. Lawrence River were also very interesting.

Another feature was the joining of the American and Canadian sections of the pipe at a place on the Quebec border where the joining was attended by patriotic ceremonies by both American and Canadian officials. Methods of bending the pipe to the contours of the terrain, the use of expensive machinery such as ditch diggers, and heavy tractors were shown in the film.

Mr. Warner was introduced by Rotarians "Mac" McLean and John Deacon while Fred Deacon expressed the club appreciation. President Lloyd Hicks was in the chair.

JOHN BULL'S TOMATO ISLAND

Newport, Isle of Wight—(CP)—The Isle of Wight, deprived by the war of its status as a holiday resort because it now is a prohibited area is fast becoming "tomato island" and this year's crop is between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000 lbs.

Every C.N.R. Employee Urged to Participate In Third Victory Loan

Montreal, Oct. 20 — Encouraged by a personal message from R. C. Vaughan, Chairman and President of the Canadian National Railways every employee of the system has been made aware of the opening of the campaign for the Third Victory Loan.

The message sent from Mr. Vaughan's office, distributed to every individual worker in the provinces of Canada and placed on all notice boards and in bulletin books reads as follows:

"Canada's Third Victory Loan is now open and the vital necessity for success will be apparent to all. You are urged to participate to the limit of your resources in order that the staff of the Canadian National Railways may demonstrate its wholehearted support of this most essential phase of the national war effort."

The campaign organization on the railways system, under the direction of D. C. Grant, Vice-President, finance, has been most comprehensive. Canvassers have been thoroughly instructed in their duties, coached as to proper methods of approach and armed with complete information concerning the loan and details of the subscription.

Purchases Made Easy

Plan providing for direct cash purchase or by means of payroll deductions spread over a six-months period. To reach each one of the more than 90,000 workers now with the company pay-rolls in Canada, a staff of canvassers approximation 4,000, have been selected and trained, these canvassers will meet their fellow workers in offices, shops, along the right-of-way, in telegraph services and hotels and no worker is too remote as to be beyond the reach of a canvasser ready to sell Victory Bonds. In a similar manner, canvassers have been appointed and trained in National Railways Munitions Limited and Trans-Canada Air Lines.

In the Motive Power and Car Shops at Montreal a number of booths have been erected in various salient points of these extensive shops so that the thousands of workers in this plant may do their "shopping" with the least inconvenience to the individuals and at a minimum loss of time from their important work of keeping the wheels rolling for victory.

GERMANIZING LORRAINE

London—(CP)—French names in occupied Lorraine now are being "Germanized," says the Swedish "Svenska Dagbladet." Monsieur Dupont will become Herr Brueckner, Gautier will be changed to Walther; Bour—Bauer; Zinguerley; Veber, Weber—and so on.

JAM ON WATERWAYS

London—(CP)—The traffic jam has been taken from the highway by patrol restriction but, with increased use of Britain's canals for transportation of munitions and supplies, the traffic jam has appeared on the waterways system.

24 FORMER BUND LEADERS GUILTY OF CONSPIRACY

Each May be Sentenced to Five Years and Fined $10,000

CALM IN COURT

NEW YORK, Oct. 20 — (AP) — Twenty-four erstwhile German-American Bund leaders, who Assistant United States Attorney Harold F. Corcoran said preferred the German Fatherland to the United States have been convicted of conspiring to advise resistance of selective service.

The 24 men, each of whom may be sentenced to five years in prison and fined $10,000, appeared calm in Federal court last night as a Manhattan housewife, Mrs. Marguerite Casey, chairman of a six-man, six-woman jury that deliberated nearly six hours, announced the guilty verdict.

Another defendant, Ferdinand Callsen, 57, deaf proprietor of a South Bend, Ind., grocery store and a former Bund unit secretary, was acquitted.

Among those convicted were the former National Bund Chief, Gerard Wilhelm Kunze of Camden, N. J., and Dr. Otto Willumeit, both of whom previously were indicted in Hartford, Conn., on charges of conspiring to send military data to Germany and Japan. Kunze had pleaded guilty to the charge and Willumeit had been convicted.

One Testifies for Gov't.

Gustav Hildebrand, former Secretary-Treasurer of the St. Paul, Minn., unit, who was not defendant, testified for the government.

The indictment also had been brought against these three, who pleaded guilty: William Luedtke of Saddle River Township, N. J., former Bund National Secretary who was the government's main witness; Karl A. Bachmann of Buffalo, N. Y., and John August Grill, Brooklyn.

The defendants were charged with conspiring to advise others to resist service under the Selective Service Act "until this law and all other laws of the country, which restrict the citizenship rights of Bund members are repealed." This referred to a draft law clause barring Bundists from jobs vacated by draftees.

Professor F. X. Finn of Fordham University, assigned defence attorney who served without compensation, entered a motion for a new trial.

Judge Alfred Barksdale, who will pass sentence tomorrow, told the jurors the verdict was "fully justified by the evidence and the law."

The defence had contended the Bundsmen had merely wished to test the draft law.

Fires Injurious To City Streets

Considerable damage is being done to city streets by residents who are inadvertently burning dead leaves on sidewalks and pavement, city hall officials pointed out today.

The fires destroy oiling on the pavement and are destructive to cement sidewalks This matter of burning leaves in such places is definitely against the city by-laws, officials said, in issuing a warning that the lighting of fires must stop.

"Leaves should be burned in backyards or piled up and left until city officials send trucks to collect them," one stated.

AT THE BELLE

"Crossroads"

Exciting pre-war drama, with a background of blackmail and intrigue in Paris, unites William Powell and Hedy Lamarr for the first time on the screen in M-G-M's "Crossroads," now at the Belle Theatre.

Powell, fresh from his humorous portrayal of Detective Nick Charles in the "Thin Man" series, makes a return to heavy drama. Miss Lamarr recently completed "Tortilla Flat," in which she co-starred with Spencer Tracy and John Garfield."

The Belle latest news Digest, described by Lowell Thomas, a color fun cartoon and, "For the Common Defence," a thrilling and thoroughly entertaining Crime Doesn't Pay story complete the program.

"Are Husbands Necessary"

Ray Milland has clipped the comedy jackpot in Paramount's comedy of dizzy domesticity, "Are Husbands Necessary", due next at the Belle Theatre. He's ably aided by Betty Field, who shares the stellar spot, and by exotic Patricia Morison, Eugene Pallette and a half dozen other top-flight film funsters.

Made from the best-seller Isabel Scott Borick novel, "Mr. and Mrs. Cugat," the picture presents the tall and handsome Ray in his top comedy role to date. As George Cugat, a young banker with a future and a slightly giddy wife, he frolics through some of the funniest scenes of his career. Betty, of course, is Mrs. Cugat and the sultry, blue-eyed Pat Morison is the "other woman," a man-mad divorcee who sets her cap for Ray and almost wrecks a happy home.

Much of the picture's comedy centres around the Cugat habit of "whiffling," telling little white lies. The twosome "whiffle" themselves into one tight spot after another—and then get out again by telling more "whiffles."

Ray's return to comedy follows his hit performance in the highly dramatic role of Stephen Tolliver in Cecil B. DeMille's "Reap the Wild Wind." He had a comedy part with Claudette Colbert and Brian Aherne in "Skylark" and he scored again with Paulette Goddard in "The Lady Has Plans." Reports have it that "Mr. Cugat" surpasses all the others.

Betty Field, fresh from "Kings Row" in which she played the neurotic Cassie, proves herself an excellent comedienne in this swiftly paced laugh film. "Are Husbands Necessary"? comes with the best of references as one of the year's top entertainment bets.

"Bullet Scars", Thrilling

"Bullet Scars", the gripping story of a small-town doctor who is trapped by a gang of ruthless killers, will show at the Belle Theatre as the companion feature attraction. CHAPTER 24

Marital Troubles

The house before which Stephen stopped the car was one quite similar to her own home; a large frame structure on a tree-flanked suburban street. And as Judith rarely walked up the path of her own house without some memory of childhood springing in her mind, so Stephen now must be remembering the dear, foolish, little things associated with his dead brother. For he was looking at the house and his thoughts did not include her.

"Shall we go in?"

An attractive young girl opened the door. When Judith stepped inside, she felt as though she had been here before, so perfectly had she imagined the home from which Stephen had come—its solid comfort, the old and, no doubt, prized furniture mingling with the new, the innumerable photographs of boys and girls in caps and gowns. She glanced around quickly, knowing that here, too, was the centre of a woman's existence.

She turned to Stephen and her face, briefly, wore a look of shock. For suddenly he seemed taller, and he did not look either hurt or confused but strong and capable, a man ready for a big job. He was the head of the family, the oldest son, who had come to "take charge"

There was no indication that the members of Stephen's family thought it odd that he had brought a girl home with him. On this, her first visit, in the confusion and grief and the coming and going of so many people, their names flung carelessly at her, she could identify them only by their faces and did not know his brothers and sisters from his cousins or the married from the unmarried. Only his brother's wife, Martha, the attractive girl who had admitted them and with whom she shared a room, did she come to know at all. Not until the funeral did she see Stephen's mother, a stout woman in black who looked at her with dazed eyes. In the interim she was busy answering the telephone, making telephone calls and admitting friends and relatives to the flower-filled living-room. Stephen she scarcely saw, the only personal remark he addressed to her was, "You've been wonderful. I don't know what I'd have done without you." That was on Sunday evening when he encountered her on the stairs on his way to his mother's room.

On Monday it rained and it was a sad group that stood beneath dripping umbrellas in a local cemetery and looked at the freshly dug earth and the rain-spattered flowers.

Judith stood back, her thoughtful eyes scanning the sad, strange faces. And perhaps because Stephen's was the only one she knew she looked at him as he lifted his eyes and gazed at her, his face for the first time refusing to reveal his thoughts. She did not know that the tenderness and pride he inspired in her were in her face.

When it was over, she rode back to the house with a school friend of Stephen's and his wife and then went directly to the room she had shared with Martha Larrabee and packed her bag. Though she had not spoken to him, she was certain that Stephen would remain home for a few days before returning to Clinton. She would take a train home immediately.

The big house was quiet. The family had dispersed and Mrs. Larrabee had been taken to the home of her sister until her own was in order again.

Judith came out of her room and was about to go downstairs when, across the hall in the study, she saw Stephen standing by the window and heard the deep sobs that shook his big body. She stood still, unmindful that she should not be standing there. But she had never seen a man cry before and the thought skipped through her mind that it was a gesture of weakness until it occurred to her that a man who has lost the capacity for tears has also lost his capacity for deep feeling.

"Judith."

He had heard her come out and close her door.

"Yes?"

He took out his handkerchief, ran it roughly over his face and turned around.

She did not know what impulse carried her across the room. Certainly she had no wish or desire to intrude. But she walked across the room and put her arms around him.

After a moment he said, "I'm sorry. You think I'm a big baby."

"No, no, I don't. I'm glad you can still cry. You've met this crisis beautifully with no awkwardness. You've done everything." She stepped back. "I'm going back to Clinton by train. Now. Don't bother with me. I'll get a taxi to the station."

"I'll take you to the station. I wouldn't let you."

"No. You're needed here."

"I can't thank you."

"Don't thank me for anything."

"I'll call you when I get back."

A little later he went down with her to the waiting taxi and when it drove off and she looked back, she saw him still standing on the sidewalk, a tall, solid figure in a dark suit, looking thoughtfully after the departing cab. Presently he dug his hands into his pockets, lowered his head and walked slowly back to the house.

On Labor Day, 1939, the four who had been at the seashore in July sat close to the radio in Ralph's car beside a tennis court and heard that England was at war. Four young people in white, they looked very grave and very young, knowing that while the men whose names would appear in history had caused the conflict, obscure people like themselves and their own generation would fight and die in it. After that they had no heart for tennis and little appetite for a picnic luncheon.

In their minds, as in millions of other young American minds, was the growing thought that the men whose names would go down in history, the evil men and the men with good intentions, had robbed them of their futures. In looking ahead they would pause and remember that they dare not look too far ahead lest their plans and dreams be devasted.

Judith's life remained steady. There was nothing in the pleasant busy days at the store or in the evenings spent either with her family or friends to make her either exceedingly happy or exceedingly unhappy though Emily's letters still gave her an inner glow and she knew that she loved Max no less intensely than she had a year ago.

Emily was going to have a baby and wrote ecstatically about the coming event. And when was Judith coming up to see them? How could Emily, happy, know that she still dreaded New York, Emily wrote that she had not seen Phyllis for months and it had been months since Phyllis had answered Judith's letter. Judith had written again, but Phyllis had not answered.

She loved Max no less intensely than she had a year ago. But how could it be still vital and demanding and insatiable? Long ago she had stopped telling herself that she was over it. It was absurd to lie to yourself when you knew that in every lonely moment Max spoke in her ear and that all lovely scenes and beautiful music sharpened her longing to see him.

One evening in December her mother called her to the telephone as she came in from work.

"Judith? This is Ames."

"Ames?" she laughed. "Stranger! Are you and Phyllis in Clinton?"

"I'm in Clinton. Will you have dinner with me?"

"I'd love to, but why not come out here for dinner and meet my parents? You haven't met them and they've heard me speak of you so often." This was, no doubt, a business trip.

"I'd love to do that, Judith, but—well, I haven't much time here. My train leaves at 8.30. Another time. But won't you come into town?"

"Very well."

They made arrangements for meeting at a certain restaurant and she went upstairs to change from the tailored business clothes to a green afternoon frock and one of those absurd little black hats with a veil she wore so well.

Ames looked the same, a tall, dark-haired, fine looking young man with whom any girl would be proud to be seen.

He took her white gloved hand and held it and looked approvingly at the slim, black Persian lamb coat she was wearing. "You're looking very well, Judith. Clinton agrees with you."

They went inside and after they ordered cocktails, she asked: "How is Phyllis? I suppose this is a business trip on which wives are supposed to have a demoralizing influence." But she knew instantly by the cloud that passed over his face that Ames wasn't the same.

He smiled wryly. Then, frowning, he said, "Frankly, Judith, I don't know how Phyllis is. I have not seen her since October. We've been separated since then."

Little Benny's Note Book

My cousin Artie stayed at my house all night last night, and this morning at breakfast I said, Boy, we sure had fun last night, didn't we, Artie?

We sure did, oh boy, Artie said.

Meaning after we had to go up to bed, and pop said, You made noise enough for a whole regiment having fun.

Well jimminy, pop, that's just what we were a regiment of Commandoes landing in Norway or some place off of invasion barges, I said, and ma said, It seems to me that's entirely too serious a subject to have fun about.

Well gosh, ma, we were serious enough about it, weren't we, Artie? I said, and Artie said, Sure, we put the light out and banged down on the floor off of those barges we didn't care what part of us hit first.

We even looked like Commandoes, because we bernt hunks of cork and blackened our faces to make us invisible in the dark, I said, and ma said, Oh for land sakes my goodness.

I understand there's no harder work than a Commando landing expedition, pop said. So you must of earned your night's sleep, he said, and I said, I'll say we did, pop, we were so tired we fell in bed without even having —the strength to wash off the bernt cork first.

Oh my goodness for land sakes, ma said, and I said, Sure, ma, that's what I started to tell you you'll find them in the wash.

What, find what in the wash? ma said and I said, The pillow cases. When I woke up and looked at them I thought it would be less of a shock for you to find them in the laundry hamper, so that's where they are, I said.

I'm getting out of here before I'm asked to officiate at a court martial, pop said.

London, Oct. 20 — (CP) — The Axis lost one of every 13 planes hurled against Malta last week and scores more were so severely damaged they had little or no hope of getting home, the Air Ministry announced Monday in an official recapitulation of the R.A.F.'s record bag in defence of the island.

In seven days 114 enemy craft were shot down against the loss of 27 Spitfires, the R.A.F. Middle East News Service said. Fourteen of the Spitfire pilots were saved. Only one Axis craft fell victim to anti-aircraft guns.

The enemy made 1,400 sorties—operation flights by single planes—against Malta in the week ending Saturday.

HOW TO RELIEVE PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY AND EASILY

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results your druggist will gladly return your money.

Flights of Planes Herald Victory Armored Convoy

Public Invited to Inspect Convoy This (Tuesday) Evening on Market Square

Leaving a trail of blue and white Victory Loan pamphlets in their wakes, nine gleaming Harvard planes roared over the city at noon today in a scheduled flight in support of the current Victory Loan Campaign.

The flight heralded the approach of a Victory Armored Convoy which detoured to Picton after parading the streets of Trenton. The Armored Convoy will arrive here at five p. m. and will immediately tour the city streets after pausing in the Market Square for a brief period.

Later, from six o'clock till 9.30 p. m. the convoy will be open to the public's inspection. Courteous military attendants in charge of the "jeeps", Bren gun carriers, artillery pieces and other mechanised vehicles will be on hand to explain the intricacies of the various vehicles.

The General Committee of the Victory Loan Campaign here extends a cordial welcome to the general public to visit and inspect the convoy during the above-mentioned hours.

Besides the nine Harvards that flew low over the city at noon today was another flight of nine Avro-Anson machines which appeared to be an escorting flight. The formations and low flying attracted the attention of thousands of city residents while the thousands of pamphlets which fluttered from the clouds added a fresh bit of patriotic color.

The Victory Convoy which arrives from the south at the above-mentioned time will remain in the city overnight and proceed on its journey eastward at nine-thirty tomorrow morning.

FIRST DAY TOTAL IN VICTORY LOAN IS $52,614,000

DETAIL SUBSCRIPTIONS

Ottawa, Oct. 20—(CP)—Subscriptions to Canada's Third Victory Loan totalled $52,614,000 up to the close of business yesterday, first day of the three-week campaign for $750,000,000, National Loan Headquarters announced today.

This figure is almost $11,000,000 above the average subscriptions of $41,700,000 needed daily in the 18 working days of the drive if the objective is to be attained.

The $52,614,000 worth of bond sales Monday includes the large subscriptions which were announced yesterday, today's loan statement said.

First day of the second Victory Loan early last spring yielded $51,334,000.

Highest corporate subscription announced this morning was a $15,000,000 bond order from London Life Insurance Co. of London, Ont. It was the biggest individual sale officially announced so far.

Other major sales made public by Loan Headquarters were:

Canadian General Electric Co., Ltd., Toronto, $3,000,000; Hudson's Bay Co., Winnipeg, $500,000; Canadian Celanese Ltd., Montreal, $1,250,000; Dominion Oilcloth and Linoleum Co., Ltd., Montreal, $1,500,000; General Steel Wares Ltd., Montreal, $600,000; Credit Foncier Franco - Canadien, Montreal, $600,000.

Ealterio Triplets Subscribe

The Ealterio Triplets at Halifax—Marie Elizabeth, Mary Louise and Marion Ann—were among the first subscribers to the loan. Their parents bought a bond for them on their fourth birthday last Sunday.

First purchaser in Dartmouth, N.S., was C. R. Brazier, prisoner of the German Gestapo for six weeks in 1940.

"If the Canadian people would only realize what brutalities the German mentality is capable of, the Third Victory Loan would be oversubscribed in a single day," he said.

John George Nicholson, confined to his bed for two years, was the first purchaser in Victoria County on Cape Breton Island. He had $300 saved, and put it all in bonds.

Many Ontario municipalities attained their objectives as early as eight o'clock yesterday morning.

Oshawa, Ont., reported that the first spot in its unit to obtain its objective was the Royal Canadian Air Force Training Centre. As a result personnel of the centre was invited by an Oshawa theatre to a complimentary showing of "Eagle Squadron."

As workers at National Loan Headquarters started tabulating the first day's returns last night they reported noting a tendency by big corporations to subscribe somewhat more heavily than in previous loans.

The minimum objective of $750,000,000 means an average of about $62 from every person in Canada.

Belleville Man Found After Being Lost in North Woods for 24 Hours

Little the worse for his experience, James Lafferty, Queen's Hotel day clerk, was back at his job this morning after being missing in the north woods for over twenty-four hours.

Lafferty, with six companions, left the city over the weekend for an outing, halting at the camp of William Adams, White Lake. Late Sunday afternoon, Lafferty became separated from his companions. He failed to return at night and a searching posse was organized headed by Provincial Constable Stanley Palmateer and which included besides Lafferty's fellow-hunters, Forest Ranger William Stringer and two experienced woodsmen, William and John Landry.

The missing man was found late Monday afternoon by William Landry at a point roughly three and one-half miles from the Adams' Camp. He had given up hope of finding his way out of the woods by daylight and was making a rough bed for the night, when discovered. The Adams' camp is situated about seventeen miles southeast of Bancroft.

Lafferty's twenty-four hour sojourn in the woods was a story familiar with expert woodsmen. It was another case of a lost man travelling in a circle, and Lafferty's own story of his experience substantiates this fact.

Separated From Companions

Interviewed this morning, he stated that he had become separated from his companions and continued walking until he came to a lake, which he later discovered was not the one associated with the camp. Continuing to walk for an hour he came to another lake. "It was a chain of small ponds and lakes that baffled me," he said.

Just before dusk he realized he was lost and continued until he found another body of water which was, as later events proved, the first lake he had seen. He made a rough bed of twigs, branches and dead leaves and settled down for the night.

On Monday morning he continued his travels and maintained them all day. Travelling in a circuitous route, he arrived at the original lake again late Monday afternoon.

Prepares a Bed

Realizing that darkness was near, he again prepared a bed, but decided to attract attention by yelling. He shouted and heard an immediate response from across the lake. A few minutes later William Landry walked through the underbrush to where Lafferty was resting.

He had had nothing but a sandwich to eat for some time previous to the time when he strayed into the woods.

He suffered somewhat from exposure as the temperature in the north woods at this time of the year is anything but summer-like.

His companions including Bruce Lattimer, Cleo Colling, Harry Rollins, Harry Knott and Orliff Lloyd, drove an automobile with its siren open for some time to attract the attention of the missing man, but the noise was unnoticed by Lafferty.

Deloro S. and R. Co. Subscribes $100,000 to Third Victory Loan

Enthused by the news that the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company Limited, Deloro, had made the first contribution to the Hastings County Victory Loan with the magnificent purchase of bonds amounting to $100,000, county salesmen started out Monday morning on their three-weeks' canvass of the city and county.

As was the case during the Second Victory Loan the Deloro Company under President S. B. Wright, R. A. Elliott and Lieut.-Col. Yates, all enthusiastic workers for the Loan, again heads the county contributions.

During the last loan, Deloro was one of the first villages to "go over the top" in its Loan objective.

The city response, on the opening day, General Campaign headquarters stated today, was well above that of the first day of the last Loan. While no official figures are as yet available, it was intimated that the amount subscribed yesterday was a generous one.

WALL STREET

New York, Oct. 20—(AP)—Unaffected by increased war tension and a sharp break in defaulted rail bonds, the stock market today resumed its long advance under leadership of the steels. The majority of the pivotals were up fractions to more than a point near the fourth hour.

At the best U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Du Pont and Johns-Manville had advances of a point or more. A few stocks retreated from best levels under profit-selling.

Other favored stocks were Youngstown and Republic Steel, General Motors, Patino Mines, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, Case, Harvester, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, American Can. and Eastman Kodak. Pennsylvania was a firm spot in the rail division.

Distillery issues were out of step with the general trend, losing a little ground on Washington discussion regarding liquor sale restrictions in army camp areas in connection with the proposed induction of 18-19-year-olds.

In the Canadian section Hiram Walkers fell 5-8, McIntyre Mines 3-8, while Canadian Pacific gained 1-8. In the bonds Canada 4s advanced 1-8.

Chief Constable Probert, Belleville, Honored by Friends at Trenton

Trenton (Special) — Chief Constable R. W. Probert, of Belleville was guest of honor at a joint banquet composed of Trenton's Rotary Club, Chamber of Commerce, Lions Club and Mayor and Council at the Hotel Gilbert on Monday evening with a record crowd in attendance.

Vicar Hutchinson, President of the Rotary Club, presided and in his opening remarks called upon Chief Constable William Bain who spoke in glowing terms of Chief Constable Probert who served in Trenton as Sergeant of Police for eight years prior to his appointment to Belleville. "While Sergeant Probert was in Trenton he was always a loyal, conscientious police officer and discharged his duties in a most efficient manner," said Chief Bain, "and his leaving is a decided loss to Trenton."

Mayor H. R. Cory was called upon to make a few remarks and spoke of the friendly and neighborly relationship which has always existed between the two police forces of Trenton and Belleville and said that although he was sorry to lose a member of the force to Belleville, still he knew Belleville was gaining a very valuable man in Chief Constable Probert.

Mr. E. L. Fraser, on behalf of the Trenton Chamber of Commerce spoke of the great influence which the police force at all times wields in our community and said they were only to be equalled by the clergy.

Presented with Chair

Mr. Harry Sager, of the Lions Club made the presentation of a beautiful easy chair to Chief Probert, who, in a few very fitting remarks, thanked all those present for their extreme kindness to him and said he was sure the spirit of good will and good friendship would always exist between Trenton and Belleville.

Group Capt. Keddie Welcomed

Squadron Leader Walsh of the R.C.A.F. introduced a most distinguished guest of the evening, Group Captain Keddie, Officer Commanding 6 A.R.D. who has just recently come to Trenton. Group Captain Keddie thanked the gentlemen present for the welcome they had extended to him and said he hoped they would carry the welcome idea through and open their homes to the many boys of the R.C.A.F. who were far from home, posted in Trenton. He said these boys were from all over Canada and our Allied countries and he was sure a warm welcome would be appreciated by them.

Group Captain Keddie also spoke of the Victory Loan and called upon all those present to do everything in their power to give the best implements of war possible to our fighting forces.

A vote of thanks was extended to Group Captain Keddie by Mr. W. H. Ireland on behalf of all the societies represented. Mr. Ireland, too, voiced his sincere regrets at the loss of Chief Constable Probert from Trenton and gave special praise to all the members of Trenton's Police Force and expressed the hope that the wishes of the head of the department would be carried out at all times.

U. S. WARSHIPS

No Effort to Reinforce Japs

Retaliating for the American warship bombardment which started fires on the enemy's Guadalcanal positions and set off ammunition stores, Japanese ships shelled United States installations on the northern coast of the island.

Meanwhile, the navy added, no recent Japanese attempt to reinforce their troops has been observed since October 15.

The Allied aerial offensive from Australia experienced a comparative lull yesterday after three cruisers and a number of other vessels were believed hit in a Sunday night attack on the Japanese naval formation at Buin on Bougainville Island in the Northern Solomons.

The Allied bombers, the Southwest Pacific Command announced last night, engaged in reconnaissance flights north of Australia and attacked at least one Japanese concentration in an undisclosed area.

Aussies Repel Attacks

Australian troops in New Guinea, continuing their battle against the invaders, repulsed three counterattacks about 12 miles north of the Japanese Kokoda base on the northern slope of the Owen Stanley Mountains.

The Rebata Bay raid by American planes included bombing of several Japanese anti-aircraft batteries. Fuel storages were set on fire. Two of three enemy transports previously damaged and beached on northwest Guadalcanal were destroyed by four direct bomb hits.

At the northern end of the Pacific war front, the sole Japanese foothold at Kiska in the Aleutians was rocked again with 15 tons of bombs, dropped by American fliers.

Army Liberator bombers smashed at beached ships in Kiska Harbor October 17 but results were in doubt because of an overcast. If any enemy aircraft were on the island, they remained on the ground and the anti-aircraft opposition was light, the navy said.

BESIEGED FARMER

Police said Chute was fatally injured at 9 o'clock, two hours after Lobb had stabbed Wade, his adopted son, following an argument over the sale of a cow.

With blood streaming from wounds over the heart, Wade staggered to the home of a neighbor for help.

Before police arrived, Chute and two others — Wallace Brackenbury and Royden Cathers — drove an automobile into Lobb's farmyard to have a ploughshare sharpened. They stepped from the car unaware of the stabbing and police said Lobb fired at them with his shotgun. Chute was struck in the chest and Brackenbury suffered a stomach wound, but Cathers, a school teacher, was not injured.

Cathers drove the two men to a doctor and Chute died while being taken to hospital. The condition of Brackenbury is not serious.

Lobb locked himself and his wife in his house and when provincial police from London, St. Thomas and Aylmer arrived, they said he fired at them from windows. Officers were reluctant to close in on the blacksmith, for fear he would injure his wife.

Late last night Mrs. Lobb escaped from the house and as she ran to the home of a neighbor, Lobb retreated to his barn where he barricaded himself.

O. V. C. Assists

After talking to Mrs. Lobb, officers decided to drive her husband from the barn. With Tommy guns and revolvers blazing, they drove in cars down the lane to the barn. Lobb returned their fire with his shotgun, injuring Witts and sending shots close to others. Officers then sent to London for tear gas to drive the blacksmith out.

Regular provincial police were reinforced by 12 members of the Volunteer Constabulary. A cordon was thrown arond the barn and officers barricaded roads leading to the farm.

Mrs. Lobb told police she had been in the barn with Wade, who went to the house. When she entered the kitchen he and her husband were arguing over the sale of a cow. They started to fight and she said Wade cried "Mother, come quick, he's drawing his knife."

The woman said she ran into the room and threw herself between the two men. She was cut slightly by the knife and Wade was bleeding from deep chest wounds.

PRAVDA URGES IMMEDIATE TRIAL OF RUDOLF HESS

Claims British Prisoner a Criminal Subject and Liable for Trial

STRONG EDITORIAL

MOSCOW, Oct. 20 — (AP) — A Pravda editorial demanding the immediate trial of Rudolf Hess, former Nazi leader now a captive in Britain, said Monday that "It must be finally established who Hess is now — a criminal subject to trial and punishment or a plenipotentiary representative in England of the Hitler government who enjoys inviolability."

The editorial in the Communist party organ reviewed the Oct. 15 statement of the Soviet Government calling for immediate trial and punishment of any German ringleader "Who, in the course of the war, has fallen into the hands of states fighting against Hitlerite Germany."

"The victims of Fascist atrocities must be revenged and this is an immediate necessity which should not be delayed."

"It is perfectly clear," it went on, "that there cannot be any waverings about the righteousness and basis for such a demand.

"One cannot agree with the opinions of some important Englishmen who, when speaking about the idea of an immediate trial for any leader of the Hitlerite gang who has fallen into the hands of any Allied Government, say there is as much to be said for this idea as there is against it.

Idea is Clear Says Paper

"The idea of an immediate trial is clear and against it nothing can be said which is not apart from living reality, from the demands of the people victimized by the Hitlerites and the masses of people in countries occupied by German troops, and from the demands of our duty to the victims of the Hitlerite hangmen and to ourselves.

"The lack of foundation for any argument against the idea of an immediate trial is discovered as soon as the question takes concrete form. If we judge by statements in the English press we see they have in mind the Hess case.

"It seems that because Rudolf Hess came to England in the uniform of a German flier that he already is not one of the most internationally notorious leaders of the criminal Hitlerite gang but just a plain prisoner of war.

"The well-known criminal Hess had only to put on the uniform of a Hitlerite flier and to fly to England and it seems he can count on the possibility of hiding from an international court."

A British spokesman last week in commenting on Russian demands that Hess be tried immediately, said such a trial would be impossible in wartime because, among other reasons, of the grave danger that Hitler would retaliate upon thousands of British prisoners and internees he holds in Germany and the conquered lands.

DIVIDENDS DOWN IN TEN MONTHS

Earnings on Investments Lower Than for Similar Period in 1941

Toronto, Oct. 20—(CP)—Dividends declared in Canada for the first ten months of 1942 total $221,300,000 or a decrease of $14,200,000, six per cent., from the corresponding period of 1941, the Financial Post estimates. Dividends in October will show a slight gain over last year on the basis of preliminary figures, the Post says.

NAZI ARMY "BLEEDING TO DEATH" — SMUTS

Red Army Strengthens Position At Stalingrad

Work And Fight In Cold Rain, Beat Off Enemy

German Losses Reach 70 Per Cent In Futile Attacks At Stalingrad

RED LINES UNBROKEN

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Oct. 21 —(AP)—Red army men were reported strengthening their positions at Stalingrad today, working and fighting in a cold rain that drenched the ruins, while beating off successively weaker attacks in the week-old Nazi offensive.

It was the 58th day of the siege and the eighth of the current Nazi drive which got under way last Wednesday after a short lull.

Maintenance of Stalingrad's lines unbroken since Sunday was indicated by the noon communique and, coupled with this, were announcements of an improvement of Soviet positions in both the western and central Caucasus through counter-attacks.

The army newspaper Red Star said detachments guarding the northern factory section of the city liquidated an enemy breakthrough and covered their flanks in slackened, though still severe combat. Russian estimates of German casualties dropped, indicating a marked reduction in the scare of the attacks.

Power Plant Supplies Electricity

A battered power plant still supplied electricity within Stalingrad. A newspaper continued to publish.

Pravda said the southern suburbs were quieter than the northern sector, although bombs and shells fell occasionally.

German divisions were declared to have suffered battle losses during the week-old drive upon Stalingrad of as many as 70 per cent of their men killed, wounded and missing.

Of the overnight fighting for the Volga River city, the noon communique said:—

"Men of one unit repulsed several attacks and hurled back the enemy to his initial positions. About a company of infantry was wiped out. Our guards' mortar gunners set two tanks afire, silenced three artillery batteries and wiped out about a company of enemy infantry."

6 Nazi Strong Points Blown Up

Soviet scouts were reported to have blown up six Nazi strong points northwest of Stalingrad, destroying a number of guns and killing about 100 men.

Defenders of the central Caucasus, reported last night to have recaptured a community in the Mozdok area during fighting which cost the Germans about 900 killed, repulsed an enemy attack and improved their position, the communique said.

Russian forces were declared to have dislodged Nazi troops from two heights southeast of Novorossisk and destroyed a mortar battery and several blockhouses by artillery and mortar fire.

Elsewhere on that battlefront before the Black Sea port of Tuapse, "our troops repulsed six enemy attacks and killed more than 100 Hitlerites," it was announced.

The communique said 300 more were killed far to the north, on the Leningrad front. A one-hour artillery barrage was declared to have destroyed a mortar battery, 11 dugouts, three observation posts and an ammunition dump.

The battle for Stalingrad is in its 58th day.

Bolstered by reserves from the east bank of the Volga, the garrison is but five days short of equalling the memorable Russian stand in the nine-week siege of Odessa last year.

But' the $40,019,800 worth of bonds sold yesterday was considerably above the figures of sales for the second day of the Second Victory Loan last spring. In that loan campaign second-day sales were only $34,102,000 and the two day cumulative total was $85,436,000.

ALLIED AIR-POWER IN THE PACIFIC ON INCREASE

Jap Invasion Bases From Aleutians To Solomons Bombed By Allied Airmen

BEVIN AIRDROME HIT

By JOHN H. WIGGINS
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Oct. 21 — (AP) — Allied domination of the skies in the vast Pacific battle front appeared growing mightier today as bombers raided Japanese invasion bases from the Aleutians to the Solomons.

Allied bombing of enemy troops and supply concentrations in the Solomons seemed thus far to have stalled, at least temporarily, the full force of a Japanese thrust to retake the American-held Guadalcanal airbase and win control of the Southwest Pacific.

While a large force of Japanese warships and auxiliary vessels in the Solomons and reinforced enemy troops on Northwestern Guadalcanal still held an expected attack in leash, United States bombers dropped explosives on the island's invaders Oct. 18 and 19, and started fires at the Japanese Rekata Bay base on Santa Isabel Island, 150 miles to the northwest.

500th Sub Victim Is Announced Today

Washington, Oct. 21—(AP)—The Battle of the Atlantic claimed its 500th announced submarine victim as the Navy announced today the loss of a medium-sized United States merchantman in the North Atlantic.

The sinking announced occurred in July. Survivors have been landed at an East Coast port.

Dog Serves With Polish Squadron Mentioned in Special Orders of Day

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the R.A.F., Somewhere in England, Oct. 21—(CP)—They say Ciapek's tail wagged as he watched bombs shower on Germany and that he growled defiance as Nazi fighter planes were beaten off and forced down. Now Ciapek has completed his operational flying hours with a Polisn squadron and the boys are mighty sad.

Only airedale in Britain — and perhaps the world—ever to have been on bombing raids, Ciapek (Polish for Spotty) is the most popular member of the squadron. Officially enlisted as an AC2 he has been mentioned in a special order of the day; promoted on the fi ld, has his own batman and is included in roll-call.

As a crew member, he witnessed flashes from his bomb aimers' post as the heavy explosives struck targets in Berlin, Hamburg, Cologne, Stettin and Bremen. When the bomber was attacked by enemy fighters he scampered to the rear turret and watched vicious streaks of hot lead drive them off.

In the special order of the day the Polish Commander-in-Chief praised the dog for his "coolness and example during flights." The batman is by order of the Squadron Leader so that when Ciapek wants something to eat he gets it —fast.

No one knows where Ciapek came from. He strolled into the Poles' training station two years ago, half-starved, was fed, and adopted when he refused to leave. He attended daily lectures and went with the squadron when it was transferred to active service.

Explosives Program Will Be Expanded By Ten New Plants

Ottawa, Oct. 21 — (CP) — Vast expansion of Canada's wartime explosives and chemical program with the addition of 10 new plants —six of them "major projects"— was announced today by Munitions Minister Howe.

Location of chemical and explosive plants is not made public for security reasons. Completion of the new program will bring to 38 the number of plants of this type in Canada.

Three of the larger projects now scheduled are for large-scale production of alkylate for high-octane aviation gasoline. It is expected the first of these will start operating by mid-November and that the others will be in use next year, Mr. Howe's statement said.

The three other major developments will manufacture special chemicals. Two are to start production within four months.

Of the four smaller, "but vitally important," chemical plants one is entering the production stage, another is expected to be completed at the end of this month and another will be in operation early next year.

There are already 28 explosives, chemical and ammunition-filling plants operating in Canada, 15 of them classed as major undertakings. Three are producing explosives, three are shell-filling plants, one is a big-scale fuse-filling plant which has just gone into production, and the others are chemical producers of various kinds. Of the 13 smaller projects, eight are making out or filling smoke bombs.

Today's announcement disclosed that individual plants manufacturing rifle cordite and ammonia have set new production records during the past month. The ammunition-filling program is approaching maximum capacity with government-owned plants turning out 27,000,000 rounds a year in addition to large scale production of bombs, mines, depth charges, pyrotechnics and other war material, Mr. Howe said.

TWO 35,000-TON BRITISH WARSHIPS AUGMENT FLEET

Anson and Howe, Each Mounting Ten 14-Inch Guns, in Service

ALREADY IN ACTION

London, Oct. 21 — (CP) — Two powerful 35,000-ton battleships, the Anson and the Howe, each carrying 10 14-inch guns, have moved into their stations in the fleet and their commanders were reported spoiling for a fight with the prize of the German fleet, the battleship Tirpitz.

The fleet now has reached its pre-war strength of 15 battleships and battle cruisers and at least four more battleships are under construction, including the Lion and the Temeraire, rated at 40,000 tons.

The Anson and the Howe are the last of the five great battleships of the King George V class to be commissioned. The Prince of Wales was sunk last December during a Japanese air attack off Malaya. The King George V and the Duke of York have been with the fleet for some time.

One of the Anson's first tasks is to help guard a Russia-bound convoy in the Arctic and her guns already have been in action against German aircraft, it was announced. There are Canadian and Newfoundlanders among the Anson's crew.

Capt. H. R. G. Kinahan is in command of the Anson and Capt. C. H. L. Woodhouse commands the Howe. Capt. Woodhouse commanded the cruiser Ajax in the battle of the river plate in which the German pocket battleship Graf Spee fled to Montevideo Harbor and was scuttled. They were cruiser captains in the West Indies before the war.

The new battleships "carry four aircraft each and their design incorporates enhanced defence against air attack," an admiralty announcement said today. Their 14-inch guns are said to have an effective range greater than the 15-inch guns of earlier ships.

Britain has lost five capital ships by enemy action so far in the war—the Royal Oak, Hood, Barham, Repulse and the Prince of Wales.

London, Oct. 21—(CP CABLE)— Three Canadians are serving in H M. S. Anson, one of Britain's two newest battleships, it was learned today.

They are sub-Lt. D. B. Armstrong of Toronto and two Royal Canadian Navy Cadets, A. R. Tilley and T. C. P. Treherne, whose home towns are not known in London.

FRENCH GIVEN UNTIL NOV. 1ST TO SEND WORKERS

Country Entering Most Critical Period Since 1940 Armistice

LAVAL ON SPOT

By THOMAS F. HAWKINS
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Berne, Switzerland, Oct. 21 (AP) —France entered today her most critical period since she signed the 1940 armistice, the 11 days remaining to Pierre Laval before he is expected to try compulsion to send protesting workers into German war factories.

The period to Nov. 1, private advices from unoccupied France said, represents the extension of time set by Berlin for fulfillment of its labor demands for 150,000 volunteer workers.

It also is the period, informed French observers said they believed, which will demonstrate whether Laval could hope to cling to his position as chief of government in the face of persistent, although thus far scattered, opposition.

These observers, who would not permit use of their names, said popular resentment over work conscription, increasing agitation in Axis quarters over the question of whether Dakar would be involved in an African offensive and revival of discussions of the dangers of new Allied landings along the channel all combined to make Laval's position difficult.

Renews His Appeal

In his radio speech last night, in which he renewed his appeal for Frenchmen to go to work for the Germans, he announced an agreement for a levy upon each factory

DID GREAT JOB AT DIEPPE, SAYS COL. J. L. RALSTON

Situation as To Reinforcements Is Satisfactory Defence Minister States

'OFFENSIVE' TRAINING

OTTAWA, Oct. 21 — (CP) — Every man who went to Dieppe "did a great job," and the "reinforcement situation is as satisfactory as it could be under the circumstances," Defence Minister Ralston said Tuesday night upon his return to Ottawa by airplane after spending a fortnight visiting Canadian troops in Britain.

Col. Ralston accompanied by Munitions Minister Howe, said the first thing he did upon arriving in Britain was to visit "the Dieppe boys," whom he described as "keen as whips."

All of them, including those in hospital, wanted to "get back to the continent and have another crack at the Nazis." Those who had been awarded decorations for their parts in the attack on Dieppe carried their distinctions "very 'modestly" and assured him, Col. Ralston added, that hundreds of other men from their units deserved the decoration as much as they themselves.

The minister said he and his military aides had conferred with officials of the war office and seen Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, Commander of the Canadian Army overseas, and Lt.-Gen. H. D. G. Crérar, Commander of a Canadian corps overseas.

Allied Squadrons Down 11 Planes On African Front

Cairo, Oct. 21 —(AP)— Allied squadrons shot down 11 Axis aircraft and destroyed others on the ground on the forward landing fields of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's desert army with flame-setting attacks yesterday, headquarters announced today.

The operations, among a series of thrusts at Axis bases and shipping across the Mediterranean basin area from which a dozen planes are missing, were described officially as on a large scale. Long-range fighters destroyed transport on the coastal road which links the Axis lines with their Libyan bases, it was announced.

78 Service Stations in S. W. Ontario Closed for Accepting Loose Coupons

Ottawa, Oct. 21 — (CP) — The Munitions and Supply Department today announced that police, acting under instructions of Oil Controller G. R. Cottrelle, have closed 78 service stations in the Windsor, London and Hamilton area in southwestern Ontario.

"Goody number availed themselves of this opportunity," said Mr. Cottrelle. "Careful attention was given to all representations regarding special circumstances. The result is that the number of closures was narrowed down."

In taking action against operators who accepted loose coupons or coupons from improper books, the action was similar to an enforcement sweep made Aug. 15 when more than 225 operators were closed for a week in Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver.

"The gasoline position in Canada is too acute to justify any leniency to the operator who refuses to abide by the regulations," said Mr. Cottrelle. "We are determined to stop infractions of all kinds.

"Those who were closed today will be allowed to reopen in due course, but if they commit a second offence they will be denied the right to sell petroleum for three months. A third offence will mean closing for the duration of the war."

The Controller said that if the present method of closing up stations for short periods on a first infraction does not produce desired results, more severe measures will be adopted throughout the country.

"The Stage Is Set" For Attack Phase Of War by Allies

Magnitude, Duration Of Russian Resistance Surprised Nazis And Everybody Else

BRITISH PRAISED

LONDON, Oct. 21 — (CP) — Field Marshal Jan Christian Smuts, Prime Minister of South Africa, told a joint meeting of the House of Commons and the House of Lords today that the German army is "bleeding to death" in Soviet Russia and "the stage is set for the last, the offensive phase" of the war for the United Nations.

The 72-year-old premier, last surviving member of the war cabinet of the First Great War still active in high office, said the "Appalling blood-letting which is necessary for Hitler's ultimate defeat is being administered by the Russians and they alone can do it."

"The magnitude and duration of the Russian resistance surprised not only Hitler but probably everybody else," he told the gathering presided over by David Lloyd George and including Dominion representatives.

"Probably no such losses on both sides have ever been suffered in the history of war," he said. "If Russian losses must be terrible it is equally true the German army is bleeding to death in Russia.

No Sign of Giving In

"In spite of their losses in men and material and territory, the Russians do not show the least sign of giving in and the bitter defence will go on to the bitter end. This is the impression confirmed by all the best inside information."

The Prime Minister listed three steps he said had lifted the Empire out of the "abyss into which the fall of France had all but plunged us" — defeat of the German air force over Britain, the German attack on Russia, and the Japanese assault on Pearl Harbor and its sudden and timely effect in carrying the United States 100 per cent into war.

"We've much to be thankful for, but not the least for the colossal mistakes of our enemies," he added. "Will a fourth blunder be committed? Will Japan, in spite of her peace treaty with Russia, launch a treacherous attack against her also in Siberia. Time alone will show."

British Called "Real Heroes"

Field Marshal Smuts described Mr. Lloyd George and Prime Minister Churchill as the "two great actors in the continuing drama of our age" and the people of Britain as "real heroes."

He said Britain's First Great War Prime Minister "stands out as the supreme architect of victory in the last war" and the people gratefully remember his "imperishable service and thank God for the gift and saving grace of his great historic leadership."

Mr. Churchill's foresight, courage and energy have been an "unfailing inspiration," he continued. "He remains the embodiment of the spirit of eternal youth and resilience, the spirit of a great undying

Tradition Broken, Microphones Used In Parliament

London, Oct. 21 —(CP)— In an unprecedented broadcast address, breaking parliament's traditional ban of the radio from its chambers, Field Marshal Jan Christiaan Smuts, Prime Minister of the Union of South Africa, told a joint meeting of the Houses of Commons and Lords today that the Allies have arrived at "the offensive phase of the war."

Never before in the 647-year history of "the Mother of Parliaments" had microphones been installed to give Britain and the world direct hearing of its proceedings.

This precedent-sharing event was a tribute to the 72-year-old Field Marshal, last surviving member of the Empire War Cabinet of the First Great War active in the high councils of the Second Great War.

NO SUGGESTION MADE BY SOVIET FOR HESS TRIAL

Anthony Eden Says Hess Has Been Treated as Ordinary Prisoner of War

RECENT AGITATION

LONDON, Oct. 21 — (CP) — Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons today that the Soviet Government has made on suggestion to the British Government that Rudolf Hess, German leader now held in Britain, should be brought to trial immediately.

"Hess has been treated as a prisoner of war," Mr. Eden said. "There never has been, nor can there be any question of treating him as an envoy or of giving him any form of diplomatic or privileged status."

Asked if Hess lived "in exactly the same conditions of comfort or discomfort as ordinary prisoners of war," Mr. Eden replied:—

"Yes, sir, that is his status."

The Foreign Secretary said that "In our judgment there is no cause to apply to Hess treatment other than that now being elaborated by the United Nations for dealing with war criminals, whoever they may be."

The question of immediate trial for Hess arose Oct. 15 when the Tass Agency in Moscow circulated the reply of Soviet Foreign Commissar Molotov to a 10-month-old communication from a number of European governments in London.

PARTRIDGE HITS WINDSHIELD OF CAR

There is all kinds of luck when it comes to hunting, but there is at least one local lover of partridge who cannot understand all the fuss about tramping weary miles through the bush searching for the elusive birds, with uncertain results.

Mr. Clare Morgan, local insurance adjuster thinks it all much simpler than that. All that is needed is an automobile and a likely locale. At least that is the way it happened with Mr. Morgan. On Monday he was driving home from Madoc when passing over a wooded part of the highway just north of Holloway he heard a sharp blow on the windshield. Stopping the car, Mr. Morgan saw a partridge lying dead on the road. He brought the bird home and on Tuesday noon the Morgan family dined on partridge.

P.U.C. Refuses Request of Mayor Thompson to Stop Trial Action On Interim Injunction Issued by City

The Belleville Public Utilities Commission at its regular meeting Tuesday afternoon, refused pointblank to accede to a request of Mayor Glen E. Thompson, that the Commission agree with the city to stop the trial action of an interlocutory injunction restraining the Commission from erecting a proposed 1,000,000 gallon water reservoir.

The application for an injunction to restrain was issued by the city in May of this year, and after hearing in Osgoode Hall on June 1 was granted in an interim capacity until the trial action which is scheduled to be heard in Supreme Court non-jury sitting next month.

The report of Mr. Justice Greene, presiding judge at the June hearing, was presented to the Commission by Mayor Thompson, but the commissioners stated they were aware of its contents and the report was not read.

P.U.C. Can Stop Action Says Mayor

"The Utilities can stop this action by not going ahead with the proposed construction," remarked Mayor Thompson in presenting his request. "There are two ways of doing it. The second is that the commission can authorize the money now resting with the City Treasurer, to be turned over to the city with no strings attached."

"The Commission did not start this thing," declared Chairman George A. Reid. "It has decided that the reservoir will be built, and as far as I am concerned, it will be done."

"The decision rests with the Commission", remarked the Mayor.

"It does not," returned Commissioner Morley Duff, "it remains with the law courts now."

"Well," rejoined Mayor Thompson, "the city has won the first round in the fight."

"Remember, you started this," replied Chairman Reid, "and this Commission will defend its action. It is now up to the court to settle it."

Asks Why Profits Withheld

Turning to another phase of business Mayor Thompson asked the Commission why the profits from the water works system for the past two quarters had not been turned over to the city according to procedure.

"Until these legal matters are straightened out, we feel that no funds, debentures, or anything of a financial nature should be touched," Chairman Reid said.

"Then you are breaking the law, and the city's orders," retorted the Mayor.

He was told that there had been no surplus funds during the period ending June. All profits for that quarter had been utilized for immediate necessities. The quarter ending September had not been settled yet as many bills were outstanding.

"Where are the figures and the costs. Why are they not available?" demanded Mayor Thompson. "I take from this attitude that I must take back to the City Council the statement that I can get no answer to this question from this Commission."

There was some discussion regarding the disposition of costs of city and commission excavation work done on Sinclair Street. The Commission stated that the city should pay an extra $366 besides its fifty per cent share of $1,100. Mayor Thompson argued that the entire cost should be borne equally by the city and the commission. Commissioner Duff moved that the Commission pay $650 of the entire cost and this was seconded by the chairman.

Following is the decision of Mr. Justice Greene, granting the interim injunction to the Corporation of the City of Belleville restraining the Utilities Commission from erecting the proposed water reservoir until the hearing of the trial action;-

The same point in a different form has been dealt with by Makins J. in Township of Stamford v. The Public Utilities Commission, (1942) O.R. 28, (1942) 3 D.L.R. 361. With respect, it seems to me that [illegible] point against the commission, and I have no desire to cover the same ground but only to add some observations thereto.

The point in issue broadly is as to whether the commission, having collected from rates more money than it actually needs for operation and maintenance, can make capital expenditures for additions to the system from such moneys.

Under s. 33 of The Public Utilities Act, R.S.O. 1937, c. 286, the council of a corporation "may, by by-law passed with the assent of the municipal electors, provide for entrusting the construction of the works and the control and management of the same to a commission."

The by-law appointing the defendant commission only provides for the "control and management" of an existing system, which raises a serious doubt as to whether such words would include the power to decide on the construction of a substantial addition to the system, and to make what would ordinarily be a capital expenditure from current revenue. However that may be, I do not desire to rest my decision on the wording of the by-law, but rather on the statutory division of powers between the council and the commission.

S. 36 —of the Act, "subject to subsection 4," provides that "all the powers, rights, authorities and privileges which are by this Act conferred on a corporation shall . . . be exercised by the commission and not by the council of the corporation."

It was argued on behalf of the commission that once it was established, all the powers of the municipal corporation passed to the commission under the above subsection, but that argument in my opinion overlooks the words "by this Act", which is The Public Utilities Act. That Act does not confer any power on the corporation to raise money by the issue of debentures for the construction of a work. The corporation must look to The Municipal Act, R.S.O. 1937, c. 266, for such power, and it must be exercised by the council of the corporation in accordance with the provisions of The Municipal Act. Consequently the commission has no power to raise money except by rates for "control and management." The reservoir in question is only one part of a scheme of additions to the waterworks system, the cost of the total additions being estimated in the engineer's report at $227,300. It is not my understanding of the policy of municipal legislation as a whole that expenditures on works of long life should be made out of the excess of rates collected over a few years, but rather that the work should be paid for by the issue of debentures for a term related to the life of the work.

Apart from that, the words of subs 4 of s. 36 appear to me to be conclusive, namely: "Nothing contained in this section shall divest the council of its authority with reference to providing the money required for such works."

I do not read those words as dealing with the narrow question of capacity only—the word "authority" seems to impute more than that—but rather as leaving with the council the right to decide whether such money shall be provided or not.

In Re City of Berlin and Breithaupt (1914), 6 O.W.N. 423, Middleton J. took a view contrary to that expressed in the Township of Stamford case, supra and this case was relied on by the defendant. When that case was decided the following words were not part of s. 36 (4), namely: "nor shall anything in this Act divest the council of the rights and powers conferred upon it by The Local Improvement Act."

It is the "right and power" of a municipal council under The Local Improvement Act to decide that the whole or part of the cost of new work shall be assessed by special rates against a certain part of the municipality, rather than against all the ratepayers. That seems to me to make it clear that the Legislature did not intend under subs. 1 of s. 36 to give the commission power to pay for a work in the manner proposed by this defendant, and thereby "divest" the council of the right to decide whether or not the whole or part of the cost should be paid for as a local improvement.

"As I read the provisions of sec. 35 of the Public Utilities Act, the Public Utilities Commission are given only the powers, rights, authorities, and privileges of the council as the same are given to the council by the Public Utilities Act itself, and they are only authorized to exercise these powers, authorities, and privileges if the municipal council provides money for that purpose. On my reading of the Act, it was intended by the Legislature that the two bodies should work together, and not at all that the Public Utilities Commission can force the council to furnish them with money for some scheme of waterworks that they propound, but which is not acceptable to the municipal council . . . My own view is that until the council has by by-law or other proper means committed itself to provide the money . . . there is neither duty nor obligation on the Public Utilities Commission to provide a waterworks system or power or authority in the Public Utilities Commission to exercise the privileges of the municipal council under sec. 36 of the Public Utilities Act."

In view of the above it does not seem to me that the Berlin and Breithaupt case, supra, expresses the law as it is now.

An order may issue restraining the defendant as asked until trial.

As both parties represent the municipality, there will be no order as to costs.

Order accordingly.

Civilian Power Saving Benefits War Factories

Saving of electric power through the restriction of street lighting and store windows is on a par with increased consumption of war and other industries here, it was revealed at the regular meeting of the Belleville Public Utilities Tuesday.

According to figures read to the Commission the consumption of power during September, 1942, the highest peak reached was 7,561.4 horsepower or 2,126,280 kilowatt hours. In June this year 7,361 horsepower was used.

Horsepower in September last year amounted to 6,894.5.

In other words the consumption of power here since September when the restrictions came into force, is on an approximate level with that of a year ago, with the increased consumption taking care of the power saved through restrictions.

Urges Whatever Possible Aid to Russia

Russia, Field Marshal Smuts said, is "bearing more than her share of the common burden" and he urged that "whatever help in whatever form we can give to Russia to sustain her in her colossal effort should be given in fullest measure and with utmost speed."

In reference to the second front, he said the defence phase of the war for the United Nations had ended.

"The final alignments both of the Allies and of our enemies have been made," he said. "Resources have been developed and mobilized on a very large scale. Ours are still on the increase, those of the enemy are on the decline. Our manpower is still growing, that of the enemy is getting depleted, while he makes even heavier drafts on his suffering vassal peoples.

Spirit of Unrest Heaving

"The spectre of want, hunger and starvation are beginning to stalk through the subject countries and the spirit of unrest is heaving and rising. The explosive limits of endurance are nearing. We are approaching the point when both on the war fronts and on the home fronts in the enemy countries, the situation is ripening for far-reaching developments."

"Once the war has come to take the offensive and to strike while the iron is hot," he said, "it would be folly to delay, to over-prepare and perhaps miss our opportunity. Nor are we likely to do so."

Says War May Continue Till 1944

The Prime Minister said the war "may continue till 1944."

His speech was devoted largely to the British Commonwealth, which he described as the "heart of the defence against the most terrible onslaught ever made on human rights and liberties." It also included a review of the war to date.

"For Japan just as surely as for Hitler's Germany the writing is on the wall," he said. "All that will remain of the spectacular Japanese success will be 'Japan for the Japanese.'"

He described Pearl Harbor as "at once a challenge to America, to Western civilization and to the principles of good faith on which it is basically founded."

Lt.-Col. Merritt Sends Message From Prison Camp

"I enjoyed the battle, even if it didn't last long."

This was one of the terse statements written by Lieut.-Colonel C. C. I. Merritt, V.C., in the first communication to his family here since he was taken prisoner of war on the bloody beaches of Dieppe.

The brief note, written in a German prisoner-of-war camp was received by Mrs. Merritt here today.

"See what has happened to me," Canada's first Victoria Cross winner wrote, referring to his capture. "I have recovered from my wounds. Our quarters are sufficient."

Col. Merritt stressed the need for parcels of food and clothing and advised Mrs. Merritt to get in touch with the Red Cross for particulars. The remainder of the message dealt with personal matters.

The communication was written on the conventional Nazi message forms and was received through the Red Cross Switzerland headquarters.

101-Year-Old Man Supervises Planting Of Ornamental Trees

The pleasing architectural lines of St. Michael's Convent at the corner of Victoria Avenue and Pinnacle Street, has been recently enhanced by the planting of ornamental trees, the effect indicating the work of professional nurserymen. Such is not the case, however, the shrubs were chosen from the private stock of a parishioner from the Read circuit and their planting was supervised by a 101-year-old nursery hobbiest.

Father R. Coyle, parish priest in the Read circuit, takes considerable pride from the fact that the 13 trees gracing the grounds in front of the Convent were chosen from the stock of his centenarian parishioner. He is Mr. Neil Mulvaney and church records at Read prove he is now 101 years old.

Just to make sure the trees were planted correctly, Mr. Mulvaney rode in the truck which transported the shrubs from his Read home to Belleville. The shrubs were trimmed by Mr. Mulvaney and were planted under his supervision.

New Store Hours Arranged By Merchants of Tweed

Tweed — A public meeting was held in the council chambers on Friday evening with Reeve C. H. Kerr as chairman to consider the question of the hours for business places to remain open to conform with the government's ruling of a 56-hour week.

After considerable discussion it was decided to adopt the following plan affecting all places of business excepting drug stores and the barber shops: That the hours during which places of business may remain open will be from 8.30 a.m. to 6.00 p.m. daily with the exception of Saturday when the hours will be 8.30 a.m. to 11.30 p.m

Miss Rayburn's cottage has been entered repeatedly over a period of years and a great many valuable articles have been stolen. $1,300 Raised

A large crowd gathered in Tweed on Saturday night when the special three weeks' campaign for the sale of War Savings Stamps was brought to a most successful conclusion. The quota for Tweed and district had been set at $1,000. To reach this quota the local committee was given credit for sales of certificates and monthly pledges made through the Bank of Montreal. This amount of about $500 together with the special campaign sales of $831 resulted in a total of more than $1300, which was well over their objective.

Two War Savings Certificates, one for $25.00, and the other for $10, the latter donated by Mr. W. S. Gordon, president of Tweed Red Cross Branch, were awarded as prizes to the holders of lucky tickets given with the purchase of each stamp. The draw was made by Chief J. C. This ticket was sold by Mr. C. C. Thompson, Northbrook. The winner of the second prize was Miss Doris Badgley, Tweed. This ticket was sold by Tweed Consolidated School.

Thompson, Northbrook, Mr. Bert Stewart, Actinolite, LeSage Motor Sales, Tweed and The Nichols Chemical Co., Sulphide, who disposed of about eighty per cent of all the stamps.

Victory Loan Campaign

The Third Victory Loan is on in earnest and is meeting with the hearty response which was expected.

The readiness to meet the canvassers who visit the homes, offices and plants is a proof that the dagger is emblematic of the spirit of the people of the Dominion, who will not allow the armed services and the war effort to be without the full might of the entire resources of the people.

In lending money to the Government to carry on the war at the peak of effort, the people are but lending to Canada what Canada has made it possible for them to earn and to acquire in a setting of a nation blessed in every way by Providence and by the soundness of the inheritance of national character from their ancestors.

Another Nazi Snatch

The familiar swastika that the Nazis display as an emblem of the German people does not belong to Hitler or even exclusively to the "Aryans." It is one of the oldest decorative motifs belonging to mankind and has been used in many lands through countless years. Until recently it was considered an emblem of good luck just as potent as the four-leafed clover but the Nazis have changed all that for the rest of us, says a bulletin from the Royal Ontario Museum.

A swastika hunt through the galleries of the Museum discloses this hooked cross on vases that were made about 800 years before the Christian era and also on a large brooch of the same period. The motif was carried on in the art of Mediterranean lands and can be seen on a beautiful embroidered curtain that was made on one of the Greek islands in the 18th century. Other examples are found on Oriental rugs, Indian pottery made in the southwestern United States, and worked into textile and porcelain designs of China.

The largest Buddha in the Museum has a raised swastika on its chest. This symbol was, also, used in the ancient art of Mesopotamia and in view of Hitler's persecution of the Jews, it is interesting to note that in early times it was used in Semitic art. Therefore, we may add to Hitler's list of crimes the theft of the motif that he uses on all his banners.

Interest Maintained

In all these wartime efforts there has been no sign of lagging interest. In all is seen the desire to participate and share the load. During the last few months many tag-day collections have been made and the universal result is the same, a steady flow of pieces of silver and dollar bills to enable these patriotic and philanthropic organizations to carry on their beneficent work.

This is the best possible sign. The fellowship in the cause of fighting a war for justice, order and right has made the hearts of men and women very solicitous of the welfare of others. Generosity is not lacking.

Crimes of the Enemy

To the mind of a Hitler such an incident as the machine-gunning by a Nazi airman of an English schoolhouse where all the children were of very tender years has no significance but the gloating of an aggressor. Nor would the torpedoing of the Caribou mean anything but grim satisfaction to such men as Hitler and his gang. In this latter tragedy a little blond baby boy of 15 months, whose identity is unknown and whose only mark of identification was a signet ring with the letter "P" and who died after rescuers picked up his exhausted wee body from among the wreckage, was one of the victims.

Hitler, in forcing his war of aggression upon the world, has a multitude of crimes upon his head and not least is the death of little children, like this one. At the bar of final judgment where all that is right will rule, that little baby, unknown to this world, will plead "like angels, trumpet-tongued, against the deep damnation of his taking-off" and that eternal court as this world's judgment will hold Adolf Hitler and his agents accountable for this monstrous crime of destroying innocence, beauty and love.

BY

AN OLD SWEAT'S PRAYER

Please give me a rifle and bayonet
A sword or a cutlass or knife,
For I'm fed up with being a Batman
And taking no part in the strife.

My duties have made me regusted
I crave for a chance with a gun
So I think I shall join the Commandos
And dust off a few hundred Huns.

My range finders ain't what they should be,
And my bellows, they sometimes blow hard,
But I still have that old trigger finger
I picked up in Heinies' back yard.
They say I'm too old for route marching,
shake their heads when I say forty-four,
"Beat Hitler with buttons not bullets,
And do your bit polishing floors."

But should it take twenty years longer
To vanquish the Hun and the Jap,
We shall trade that old broom for a musket,
A belt, bandolier, and a cap.

THAT MOSQUITO AGAIN

Dear Boss:—The weather has been so perfect that I thought I'd better crawl out of the bottom drawer of your desk and give you a few pre-winter warnings.

After that letter I wrote you after the Belleville Fair parade when you gave a fine performance imitating a semi-deflated blimp in a rainstorm, I felt you would be cured, but on Sunday last I noticed you wearily dragging your number nines up the Church Street hill when you should have been home with your knitting or developing your latest yen for a spot of tatting.

I noticed you kept your eyes cast downward for the greater part of the trek to the Cenotaph, but after a few minute's study I could see the reason. I thought at first, Boss, that you had a pain in the neck, but when I saw the trim gals of the R.C.A.F. Women's division marching directly in front of you, the reason was obvious. I'll bet you don't know whether the last file of the W.A.A.F.'s were brunettes, blondes, Abysinnians or redheads, but I'll wager you could give a pretty good guess as to the size shoes they wear.

I hear you are telling the troops that military training is reducing the bay window that will soon be in liaison with your third chin. You may kid the troops to some extent, but you forgot to tell them that when you loosened the blouse of your battle dress after the parade the young typhoon that emanated from your mouth blew off the forage caps of six files of your gunners. After all you deserve a little credit, a guy who can hold his breath for a route march of three miles, must have something on the ball or is a direct relation to a pair of bellows.

Another thing, Boss, for the luvamike, try and keep in step when you are route marching. While it may not have been your fault, you don't have to give an imitation of a cross between an Abysinnia war dance, Bojangles Robinson, Joan Davis, Fred Astaire, and a Hottentot who has just stepped on a cigarette butt. Always maintain your dignity and don't change until you see the blacks of their soles.

That's all for now, Boss. Keep your chins up and your stomachs in until the spring.

Yours truly,
Winnie, the Office Mosquito.

P. S.:—I nearly forgot, Boss. If they ask you in the army if you understand shorthand, say no. They may be shorthanded in the trench-digging squad.

FEED FOR HORSES is now deemed too bulky for sea shipment to motorless Bermuda. Ah, these are indeed changing times, and we seem to see poor old Dobbin down at the wharf, sniffing a a cargo of gasoline and murmuring disconsolately to himself, "Well, that ain't hay!"

Indian (to paleface): "I'll bet you $3 that you will forget something in ten years."

Paleface: "All right, I'll take you up on that!"

Indian: "Do you like eggs?"

Paleface: "Yes."

They met ten years later:

Indian: "How?"

Paleface: "Fried."

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

OCTOBER 21st., 1922

The building of the club house at the Bay of Quinte Country Club is nearing completion. It was a simple thing after all to obtain the much needed club house. On the farm, as it was purchased, was a large barn, built in the shape of the letter L. The barn was moved and has been transformed out of all likeness to a barn, but the frame work, siding and roof were used and dressed up. The outside is being stuccoed at the present time. Mr. George K. Graham has generously given much of his time in supervising the remodelling of the building. The greens are coming along well, but a lot of work on them remains to be done. The interior of the club house is most attractive; the designer certainly had a succession of brilliant ideas.

THE FIGHTING FORCE

Somewhere on the Pacific is a sailor with the fleet
Who used to play with marbles right along this very street.

Somewhere on the Pacific is a little chap I knew
Who is now the turret gunner of a flying fortress crew.

Somewhere on the Pacific — that is all they let him say—
Is a lad who caddied for me when at golf I went to play.

The word came in this morning that a youngster I have known
Now is stationed at New Zealand —as a soldier fully grown.

These are boys of our acquaintance, where the gunfire fiercest flames,
These are sons of friends and neighbors, theirs are all familiar names.

Oh, the war draws close and closer, and there's no spot now so far
But the boys who played about us, all, at battle stations are!

A War of Atrocities?

New York, Oct. 21 — Why have the Japanese threatened to suspend all international law in the treatment of American aviator prisoners as "reprisals" for what they choose to describe as the bombing and machine-gunning of civilians in the Doolittle-raid?

And why, previous to this, did the Nazis, again claiming it as reprisal, manacle British prisoners of war?

I have been trying to find, in my own mind, the answers to these questions, because obviously there are purposes involved in this policy.

Obviously, the purpose is not to protect Japanese or German prisoners of war. The Allies' prisoners of war are under the supervision of the International Red Cross and the War Prisoners' Aid. There have been no atrocities committed against them in any Allied prison camps, and the Germans and Japanese know this.

On the other hand, the Nazi and Japanese treatment of prisoners has been horrible, although the Nazis have differentiated between national classes of prisoners, treating Slavs abominably, French very badly, and the British better. The obvious reason for this has been that the British hold many prisoners and, therefore, are able to take reprisals against German prisoners of war.

Expect Counter-Measures.

So, if the Axis Governments threaten to break international conventions regarding prisoners of war, they do it in full anticipation that this will mean counter-measures against their own nationals.

Now, the first Japanese threat against American airmen who bombed Tokyo was apparently senseless, because the Japanese hold none of these airmen. But on Monday threats issued over the Berlin radio indicated that the Nazis and Japanese are working hand in hand.

It was hinted that Hitler might sweep aside the Geneva Convention in respect to British prisoners, with the inference that he might adopt the Japanese measures against British airmen who have bombed or may bomb Germany. And, of course, the Germans, unlike the Japanese, do hold such prisoners.

And the German-controlled press commenting on the Japanese measures, is undoubtedly starting a propaganda campaign for transferring the Japanese example to Germany.

Inviting Reprisals.

Neither the Germans nor the Japanese are trying to protect their own prisoners. On the contrary, they are trying to precipitate a war of atrocities. They are inviting reprisals.

And this has two motives. The President's recent statement that the United Nations would differentiate between ordinary Germans and those guilty of atrocities in the enemy countries obviously has been effective. The German propaganda for domestic consumption has had one consisent line — namely, that Germans must all stand or all perish together; that defeat would mean the extermination of the Germans as a nation and a race; that the war was against the German people, not the Nazis.

The President's statement came at a critical moment — when there was great unrest and even defections from German ranks in the occupied countries. There recently have been reports from France, Belgium and Norway to this effect. So it seems that among the German common soldiers there are many who are trying to find a personal way out.

Hitler, therefore, wants to create a situation where he can say to all Germans: "If you fall into the hands of the British, your life will be endangered, for there are no prisoners in this war." In other words, his threat against British prisoners is really a whip against his own people.

Terrorization Act.

He is saying to us: "If you insist on continuing to fight and won't negotiate a peace, you are in for a war of atrocities. Do you want that kind of war?"

It is the introduction of a new weapon into the war, namely, terrorism and personal brutility, with the double object of awakening the horror of mankind for peace at almost any price; emphasizing to his own people that they must fight and win, or perish; promising the German people some kind of revenge for the bombings which happen, and against which he cannot retaliate, and, finally, putting the gilt of the whole thing on the Allies.

If this is the true explanation, and it is the only logical one that I can think of, then the Allied Governments must be very careful not to fall into a trap.

Play Into Hitler's Hands.

There is a real dilemma here. For the Allies to refuse to retaliate will be interpreted in Germany as weakness, and will be bad for the morale of our own soldiers. But to retaliate will be good for the morale of the Germans and play into Hitler's hands.

There may be, however, a solution. Whatever reprisals we take must be reprisals that will divide the German nation and illustrate our policy of punishing the truly guilty. In the camps of German prisoners there are those that are Nazi and those that are not. In many, many cases these Nazis have made life unendurable for other German prisoners.

There may be some other answer, but before we act we should see the situation clearly—and we should certainly publicize our explanation of it in the widest possible way.

REPUBLICA DE CHILE

The Republic of Chile, in South America, whose President is visiting the United States, is the most elongated country in the world.

It is 2,627 miles in length and varies in width from 105 to 223 miles — one-eighth of that of the United States proper.

The country has a coast line of 2,900 miles.

Aconagua, a peak in the Andes on the Chilean-Argentine border, has an altitude of 23,000 feet and is the loftiest mountain in the New World.

Easter Island, with its hundreds of odd stone figures and the Juan Fernandes Islands, scene of Robinson Crusoe's adventures, are Chilean possessions.

Until the process of obtaining nitrate from the atmosphere was made commercially practical, Chile produced 95 percent of the world's nitrate supply.

About 70 percent of the world's supply of iodine is produced as a by-product of the Chilean nitrate industry.

Chile ranks second only to the United States in the production of copper.

Magallanes (Punta Arenas until 1930), which lies at the extreme southern end of Patagonia and on the Strait of Magellan, has a population of about 20,000 and is known as the most southern city in the world.

Nobody knows definitely how Chile received its name or what the name means.

A half-dozen or more derivations of "Chile" have been suggested, the most probable being that the term is from the Quicha Indian "Tchili," meaning snow and alluding to the perpetual snow on the high Andes.

The name of the country is frequently but erroneously spelled "Chili" instead of "Chile" in the United States.

"Chili" is the Italian spelling of the name, while "Chile" is the correct spelling in Chilean, Spanish, Portuguese, German and English.

The Anglicized pronunciation of the name is "CHILL-ly," like the word "chilly"; but the correct Chilean and Spanish pronunciation is "CHEE-lay."

"Chile" in "chile con carne" is the name of a red pepper and has no connection with the name of the country.

AGUA CALIENTE CLOSES

Agua Caliente, Mex., Oct. 21—(AP)—General Manager Walter C. Marty last night reported suspension of horse racing at the Agua Caliente track which for many months has operated on a Sunday-only schedule.

Urgent need of resurfacing the track was cited as a reason for closing.

For three years Agua Caliente has been holding 50-day seasons of Sunday racing. One season ended last Sunday and a new meeting had been scheduled to start next Sunday.

"which will be obliged to furnish a certain number of workmen."

This levy, he said, had been agreed upon by his government "out of apprehension lest measures of constraint be applied to France."

He referred to but did not specify the Lyons strikes with a declaration that his government would not tolerate individual resistance, group agitation or resistance of those "remaining deaf" to his order.

Hints on Africa

Laval gave what was interpreted as a hint at Africa and the possibility of German assistance if fighting should occur for French possessions when he said he was "thinking—thinking a lot—of the French Empire" and this thinking had prompted his actions.

But he did not develop the African theme or a warning that France would side with the Axis there, something Axis-inspired dispatches from Paris had predicted.

Laval's speech was shortened and it was reported these phases were deleted in discussions in Vichy, in which Marshal Petain, Chief of State, presumably had a hand, shortly before the broadcast time.

NO SUGGESTION

The Molotov note did not go to the British Government, but to those of Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Yugoslavia, Norway, Greece, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg, and the French National Committee.

Last Monday a Pravda editorial demanded an immediate trial for Hess and said "It must be finally established who Hess is now — a criminal subject to trial and punishment or a plenipotentiary representative in England of the Hitler Government who enjoys inviolability."

The Times of London today described the Russian call for an immediate trial as impossible of fulfillment and the Berlin radio threatened drastic reprisals if Britain accepted them.

Comment by The Times

The fundamental point in the Russian call for a war-guilt hearing for Hess, one-time No. 2 Deputy of Hitler who has been a prisoner in Britain 17 months, was declared by the Times to be "The broad issue of confidence between Allies."

The Times said confidence "will be fully established only when the conviction exists on both sides, without any reservation whatever that the war against Hitler is one war and not two and that it can be planned as one war only through the unified machinery of grand strategy."

The Berlin radio said the Nazi government would take extreme measures if Britain followed the Russian suggestion for immediate trial of any Germans in British hands.

Hess was not named in the broadcast, but the meaning was clear, for Hess ranks first in this category.

The Times said an immediate trial would be contrary to the proclaimed view of the British Government that any proceeding against war criminals should be based on an examination of the evidence, which could hardly become available while hostilities continued, and that it would be the "pretext for a campaign of frightfulness against British prisoners in Axis hands."

"All these reasons make it impossible for the British Government to accede to the proposal," the newspaper said. "Those who put it forward are cognizant of these facts and will certainly not have expected any other answer."

Sees Two Reasons for Proposal

The newspaper expressed belief two immediate reasons for the Moscow proposal were:—

1. As a protest against the announcement by the British and United States governments on their own responsibility of the decision to provide post-war trials for war criminals.

2. As a fresh symptom of Soviet disappointment and disapproval at the failure of Britain and America to create a military diversion which might relieve the pressure upon Russia.

The Times said it would seem the British and American governments had made a "serious and avoidable mistake, which has been very naturally resented, in acting independently of their Russian Allies, even though the Russians may have been likely to assent to the course proposed."

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Sgt. and Mrs. Alan V. Campbell, Ridley Ave., Belleville, announce the engagement of their daughter, Vera Josephine to William Frank Marr, R.C.A.F., son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Marr, Minitonas, Manitoba. Marriage to take place early in November.

A delightful dinner party and personal shower was held Monday evening at Dickens' Tea Room in honor of Miss Dorothy McLean, bride-to-be, by twelve of her close friends.

Miss Isobel Young will be among the guests at the Taylor-Collier wedding in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Picton, this evening.

Flying Officer Allan Hogg and Mrs. Hogg and daughter Linda, are en route to Victoria, B.C., where Flying Officer Hogg is stationed after spending a short leave with Mrs. Hogg's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Henley.

The dance held last evening at No. 5 I.T.S. added to the list of successful social functions sponsored by the school. The event was honored by the presence of Air Vice-Marshal Johnson, in charge of No. 1 Training Command. The guests were welcomed to the station by the Commanding Officer, Wing Commander Snetsinger, who expressed appreciation on behalf of the airmen for the attendance of the young ladies of the Hospitality Club, St. Michael's Club and their hostesses. Trenton Orchestra provided an excellent dance program, the special feature of which were the solo numbers by Flying Officer Estes, formerly with Benny Goodman's Orchestra. His clarinet and saxaphone interpretations met with thunderous applause. Many prize dances were included in the program and "waltz time" while the orchestra had intermission was thoroughly enjoyed. Buffet supper was in progress from tan to eleven-thirty, the guests going down in groups while dancing continued. The members of the entertainment committee made every arrangement for the success of the dance. Over one hundred airmen of the station gave blood donations at the Blood Donor Clinic last evening and many hurried back to attend the dance. The chairman, Flight Lieut. MacPherson acted as master-of-ceremonies, assisted by Mr. Reg. Hackett, "Y" War Services representative.

Quota Requirements in Knitting Received by Local Red Cross

With the completion of the sheets for Russian Red Cross relief, a total of 4,025 having been made by the Red Cross workers of the district and the preparation of emergency boys' clothing for Britain underway, the local branch has received its quota for the first fall project in knitting.

Khaki sox, toques, tuck-ins for the Air Force, steel helmet caps, turtle neck sweaters and service socks for the Navy, women's and boys' sweaters are included in the immediate requirements. Newcomers to the city and those who have not as yet undertaken knitting for the Red Cross will be cordially welcomed at the workrooms, Pinnacle Street, to undertake knitting of these articles.

Attention, Knitters

While much of the knitting is practically perfect, there is still enough of re-knitting various articles to keep the women of the inspection part busy. Some knitters are not yet able to graft toes as outlined in the directions and those in charge would be very grateful if more care were taken in this regard. Yesterday afternoon there were two baskets of socks needing toes re-done. It is also pointed out that knitters should remember to set-up and cast off loosely. This is most important.

Nursing Classes Open

The opening of the Red Cross Home Nursing and Emergency Course in the Blood Donor Clinic on Monday evening resulted in the registration of seventy-five, fifty-five being new members. Mrs. A. H. Ketcheson is leader and was most gratified with the response of the women who are keen to become proficient in this very splendid course.

Miss Ruth Thompson gave a most inspiring address to the class referring to the great assistance volunteer women can give when an urgent need such as epidemic or disaster arises. The response of the women to this opportunity of fitting themselves for such a call was most encouraging. Following registration and Miss Thompson's address, the class adjourned to begin the first lecture next week.

Of last year's members ten have given notice that they will write the examination of the divisional Red Cross. Miss Ruth Thompson will be examiner for the practical tests a week from Monday. Others will take a short refresher course and write examinations in December.

WEDDINGS

O'CONNOR—O'LEARY

Our Lady of Sorrows Church, Toronto, was the setting for a pretty ceremony when Miss Louise Estelle O'Leary, daughter of Mrs. Erland O'Leary, Toronto, formerly of Belleville, was married to Mr. Laurence Neil O'Connor, son of Dr. and Mrs. F. D. O'Connor, Kingston. Rev. Gregory Kelly officiated and Dr. Ronan's choir sang.

Mr. Joseph McNulty gave his niece in marriage. Her graceful gown of ivory satin had a centre panel from neck to hem, and shirred skirt. Her veil was fingertip length and she carried a cascade of gardenias and swansonia. Mrs. Melvin Ostman, matron of honor, and Miss Helen O'Connor, bridesmaid, wore frocks of cyclamen taffeta with pompadour berets of the same material, and carried cascades of tea roses, purple and pink flowers. Mr. Carroll McNulty was groomsman and the ushers were Mr. Anthony Quinn, Tweed and Mr. Allan Pope.

ELLIS—AULTHOUSE

Marmora (Special)—St. Andrew's parsonage was the setting last Wednesday afternoon for the wedding of Merrial Wilhelmine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Aulthouse of Belmont Township and John Henry Ellis of Cordova. Rev. Dr. W. P. Fletcher performed the ceremony.

The bride was attended by her cousin, Mrs. Eva Budd of Peterboro and the groom was supported by his brother, Jim Ellis.

The couple will reside in Belmont Township.

Wins University Women's Club Prize

It has been announced that Miss Aileen Hughes has won the prize of ten dollars offered by the University Women's Club of Belleville to the student of the Belleville schools making the highest aggregate on any seven papers of the Grade XIII, Department of Education examinations held in June.

Miss Hughes had first-class honours on her nine subjects of the recent examinations and won a scholarship in Languages to the value of $600. She is now a student at Trinity College and has been elected president of her year on the basis of personality and scholarship.

Mrs. Mott Hostess To Parlor Meeting Of W. C. T. U.

An enjoyable afternoon was spent on Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Mott on Dunbar St., when she cordially invited the W.C.T.U. for their parlour meeting.

After the hymn, "Jesus, Saviour, Pilot Me" and prayer by Mrs. Farnsworth, the President, Mrs. Baker, gave very interesting and helpful remarks on present-day conditions which face our young people. Mrs. Farley read "The Psalm for the Discouraged." Mrs. Hagerman and Mrs. Cordes' duet, "Is the World a Happier Place Because of You?" was a cheerful challenge to all.

Mrs. Denton's interesting gleanings from the Ottawa W.C.T.U. convention, given with her clear articulation, gave each an inspiration for another year's effort.

Mrs. Sweetman's reading, "The Ambulance" was a selection given at the convention.

Mrs. Hubbs' piano solo, "Romance" by Sibelius pleased the twenty-seven guests.

Mrs. Farley's group served lunch, Mrs. Sharpe poured. All enjoyed a half-hour with the gracious hostess.

KIWANIS MEMBERS WITNESS FILM

Belleville Kiwanis club members had the pleasure of witnessing the film, "The Oil Pipe Line" sponsored by the Imperial Oil Company of Canada at their weekly luncheon at the Quinte Hotel on Tuesday. This film was shown to the Kinsmen and Rotarians and it was most interesting and instructive. The film disclosed the hardships that were overcome in building the project and also explained and showed how time was saved by the project. A considerable number of miles has been cut off the hauling of crude oil from the fields, the line running from Portland, Maine, to Montreal. The machine used to exhibit the film was donated by the Stewart-Warner Alemite Company and the club expressed their thanks to Harry Evans, who so kindly operated the machine.

Jack Trudeau presided at the luncheon with Ollie Duff collecting the fines and Harold Carruthers acting as song leader. Harold gave a solo, "Any Bonds Today?" in keeping with the Victory Loan drive, which was very much appreciated.

Dancing Partner

Pretty in a deep rose red, this dancing frock backs up a faille bodice with scalloped edges by clouds of matching net for a skirt. Shower bouquet of velvet roses is attached to the waistline.

By PRUNELLA WOOD

You might call this a Junior Siren frock, and not miss it much. This is the kind of dancing dress which always captures the eye of the roving stag in the ballroom lineup. A sure cure for the wallflower, it isn't an extravagant model, and is indeed, rather, the kind a pretty girl owes her lighter nature.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Hallowe'en Birthday Party Combined

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. In the first week of November I will be eighteen years old. I thought it might be fun to combine my birthday party with a Hallowe'en party since Hallowe'en is so close and since Hallowe'en parties are so merry. Would you advise this?

Should I have regular party refreshments, or just cider and doughnuts Should they wear costumes?

2. Should I invite my girl friends and have them bring their boy friends, or shall I invite both girls and boys?

3. At a birthday party the guests usually bring gifts. Would it be all right for them to bring gifts to a combination party??

—KATE.

1. I think this might be all right if you are positive that your friends have not already been to a Hallowe'en party. If they have, the glow of Hallowe'en might be worn off.

I do believe you'd be wiser to plan to have just a birthday party, which can be as merry and much more personal than a Hallowe'en party. Have birthday party refreshments—a birthday cake is more fun than doughnuts.

2. Either is proper, but even if you ask the girls to invite their own partners, you should ask the girls whom they have invited. Then write notes of invitations to these boys, seconding the girls' invitations.

3. If, in your invitations, you mention the fact that the date of the party is to be your birthday (some people mention it; some prefer not to), your guests will probably bring birthday gifts.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Hat at Informal Wedding

I am going to attend an informal evening wedding, to be held at the bride's home. I am going to wear a brown velvet dress. Is it correct to wear a hat?

—T. R.

1. A small, dinner-type hat, harmonizing with your dress, would be appropriate.

THE EXPERTS SAY

MENDING—Little bits of resourcefulness will make things go a lot farther and last a lot longer, says Byrne Hope Sanders, Mrs. Consumer of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Here are some of her suggestions. If you've got a hole in the lapel of your suit or Betty's sweater .. embroider a flower to cover it. Are your boys just at the stage when they have grown out of everything — take your husband's old suit down from the closet and make it over for them.

MEXICAN RAREBIT — Looking for a meat substitute? Paste this in your cook book and use it for dinner tomorrow. It comes straight from the experimental kitchens of the Consumers section of the Department of Agriculture .. Take three tablespoons of butter, one small onion, three tablespoons flour, two cups grated cheese, two cups canned tomatoes, one teaspoon Worecter sauce, salt and paper .. Cook chopped onion slowly in butter for five minutes, stir in flour, gradually add tomatoes and cook until the mixture thickens. Add grated cheese and seasonings and cook gently until the cheese melts .. Serve at once on toast.

WHEAT—Marion Harlow, Assistant Director of Nutrition Services, suggests taking advantage of Canada's bumper wheat crops by using more whole wheat products. She says it will help to overcome vitamin B deficiency that affects eight out of 10 Canadians. For a delicious and nourishing breakfast cereal she suggests—a combination of half rolled oats and half rolled wheat.

LARD—The next time you go to use butter in your cooking or baking pause — then ask yourself if lard wouldn't do instead .. Mrs. Phyllis Turner, oils and fats administrator of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, asks you to use it wherever possible instead of butter. She says there is a surplus of lard now as a large part of it is produced from the fat of hogs, and the number of hogs being raised is increasing every day.

PORK—Don't-buy-this and don't-buy-that slogans are increasing every day but the don't-buy-pork theme is considered by food authorities as one of the most important .. However, Laura Pepper, chief of the consumer section, Department of Agriculture, while asking you to cut out bacon, ham and fresh pork, says tenderloins, feet, and knuckles are not exported and you can buy them with a clear conscience .. She adds that sausages and head cheese are still available.

COUGH DROPS — Sore throats are cropping up again and for those who resort to cough drops here is good advice. The customs and excise division of the Department of National Revenue says cough drops aren't candy and therefore don't come under the 30 per cent excise tax on candy.

BIGGER AND BETTER

More than 100,000 parts are required to build Canada's big Catalina amphibian bombing and scouting warplane. Its hull is as long as a pullman coach and it can cruise from Halifax to Vancouver and back to Winnipeg without refuelling.

Fashion Flashes

WAY ON TOP of all other types of coat is the easy-to-wear, deep-armholed coat of woolen made with tuxedo front of fur. Nice in deep oatmeal woolen with a pebbly surface, and wide fronts of sheared beaver.

A BIT OF CHEER is provided by those red coats and suits. Red woolen is used for a grand suit, the snug jacket trimmed with black velvet covered buttons. Black velvet edges the slanting slit pockets and makes the flat, pointed revers, also the cuffs.

BACK AGAIN as the popular evening coat is that big trench coat of gold kidskin or gold cloth for the less expensive version.

THERE'S BEAUTY, comfort and dash in a fur cape. Warm and beautiful is a long, full cape of skunk and another hemlength model in brown Persian lamb. The latter has a row of fur discs, suggesting flowers, worked across the neckline.

THE RAINBOW HAS BEEN ROBBED for color for the new clothes, with brightly hued furs playing a role. Something new is a bright pink wool frock with a moleskin jacket dyed exactly to match.

AIKENS W.M.S.

The October meeting of the Aikens Woman's Missionary Society was held last week at the home of Mrs. Harleigh Hamilton.

The president, Mrs. Fred Westover, was in charge and conducted the worship service which was based on theme, Building a Community of Christian Homes, the second chapter of the Study Book. The study of this searching question proved very helpful and an enlightening discussion followed the announcement of a survey of the community made by one of the members.

Mrs. L. W. Scott, of the Stone Church, was present and introduced the Study Book, "The Church in the City Streets," by Dr. Harvey Forster.

This is not a book study, stated Mrs. Scott, but a project for the members based on what is learned from reading such an interesting and stimulating account of the church at work in the great cities of Canada to which have gone many rural young people.

A new kind of study for these new and difficult days, she said, designed to show how the church in every community can take its part in creating the new world. Our job reaches beyond our own immediate door into the larger community of Canada as a nation and as a member of the United Nations looking to the establishment of peace and security and justice for all.

All departments of the church were asked to co-ordinate in making their own home community their field of labour and co-operate with the Christian Education Advance in their religious program.

During the business session plans were made for the Family Party to be held at the home of the president early in November, and committees were appointed.

A closing hymn, the National Anthem and prayer by Rev. L. W. Scott closed the meeting.

PRESENTATION

Saturday evening, Oct. 17, 1942, friends and neighbours numbering seventy-five, gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. Dafoe, Chatterton, to honor them and their family prior to their departure from our midst to make their home at Empey Hill. Rev. E. M. Cooke was chairman and after a few remarks called upon Mr. and Mrs. Dafoe to take seats of prominence while Mrs. P. Meale read an address signed by Ivy Meale, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Frederick, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Finkle, Mr. and Mrs. Dave Hollinger. Mrs. E. B. Finkle made the presentation of a mirror to Mrs. Dafoe, a razor and blades to Mr. Dafoe, a fountain pen to Jack and a flashlight each for Frank and Ellis.

They each made suitable replies and invited one and all to visit them in their new home.

At this point Rev. Cooke presented them with a letter of introduction to be handed to their pastor at Empey Hill.

All joined in singing "For They are Jolly Good Fellows." Speeches were made by B. Bleecker, W. Rodgers, D. Hollinger.

The ladies served a lunch which brought to a close an enjoyable evening.

All departed for their homes wishing the very best for Mr. and Mrs. Dafoe and family in their new surroundings.

The following letter, written to me by the father of an only son, leads me to believe this man has forgotten all about his own youth and the glory and glamor that comes only once in a lifetime with the first discovery of "the one and only girl." Only a middle-aged person, who has forgotten, would call it "puppy love."

The girl who puts rainbow magic all over this grim old world, who makes the promise of a more hopeful sunrise, who makes life seem worth living, and who puts a romantic reason into the baffling problem of why we're here and what it's all about—she's the sort that inspires first love.

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"My only son, 22 years old is in the army, and is suffering with that incurable malady known as 'Puppy Love.' For three months before he enlisted he didn't seem to know whether he was coming or going, and I don't think he's over it yet. When he comes home on furlough he mopes around and spends most of his time with her.

"There's nothing wrong with the girl; she comes of a good family, but at her 17 years of age any thought of marriage is absolutely out of the question, at least until after the war is over. But my boy wants to get married right now.

"In my day we weren't such fools. Yes, we did get mashed on girls, went skating with them in Winter, took them boating in summer, danced with them at all seasons, kissed them when we got a chance. But we didn't go around with a far-away look in our eyes, and acting generally as if we had the only case of 'puppy love' on record. What do you suggest?

"WIDOWER".

Symptoms of all kinds of love are apt to be similar, and "puppy love" will fire ambition, start dreams of world conquest, and bring out the best that's in a boy, as well as that exaltation of soul we call the "grand passion." Don't be too sure that your son is a victim of "puppy love", it may be the real thing.

Probably being in love will stimulate your son to be a good soldier, cause him to be industrious so that the commanding officer will notice his efficiency and help him get a promotion.

There is one sure test of love, whether it's the real thing or passing fascination, and that's the unfailing test of time.

If your son is devoted through the years—two or three, at least—and waits and does his best wherever he is and whatever he's doing, parents might as well be amiable about it and say, "Bless you my children."

Simple Cure Found for Muscle Injury

An interesting report on a number of permanent cures of muscle pain resulting from injury has come from an English hospital where soldiers were treated. The amazing fact about this treatment is that it is done by injecting a common local anaesthetic. Yet the cure appears permanent.

As a result of injury to muscles, a disorder known as traumatic myalgia may develop. In this there is severe pain in the muscle, which is made worse by contracting the muscle and relieved by relaxing it. Movements of the joint to which the affected muscle is attached are also interfered with. Sometimes the patient may complain of loss of power and weakness in the affected part. A feeling of numbness and a sensation of pins and needles is sometimes present.

All of these symptoms may develop within a few days after the injury occurs. But sometimes they do not develop for several weeks after. Not only are there painful spots in the affected muscles but pressure on the spots also brings on a severe, agonizing pain which may persist for a few minutes after the pressure has been stopped. The painful areas are about one-fifth, one-third of an inch in length, and about one-half this size in width. These areas may feel hard to the touch.

It would appear that the injury probably causes tearing of the muscle fibres and injury to the blood vessels. Traumatic myalgia most commonly affects the muscles of the legs, arms and shoulders.

Dr. Michael Good of England, believes that the most effective form of treatment consists of an injection of a local anaesthetic into each painful spot. Care must be taken to use enough of the anaesthetic to cover the entire affected area of muscle. Not only has this been found to bring immediate relief, but it also has produced a permanent cure. Many of the patients were given but one injection to bring about a cure. In some instances a second or third treatment was necessary to bring complete relief.

In making a diagnosis of traumatic myalgia, a careful examination by the physician is necessary. Not only must pain be present but tender spots must also be located. Once a definite diagnosis has been made, treatment with the local anaesthetic should be carried out. If this type of treatment does not give relief, it is probable that the pain and tenderness are due to some other cause.

A number of English soldiers with traumatic myalgia were treated by Dr. Good. In all instances excellent results were obtained. Of course, among soldiers injury to the muscles may be expected to occur with great frequency. Since this method of treatment brings such quick and permanent relief, its use will be found quite valuable.

May Robson Dies Famous Actress Of Stage, Screen

Beverly Hills, Calif., Oct. 21 — (AP)—May Robson, 78, veteran Australian-born stage and screen character actress, died at her home Tuesday.

Despite failing health and eyesight, she had been active in moving pictures until less than a year ago.

At her bedside when she died were her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gore and her secretary-companion, Lillian Harmer, who had been with her constantly since 1910.

Her last feature picture was "Joan of Paris," made last year. Last winter she was before the cameras for the last time in a Community Chest short subject with Lionel Barrymore and Lew Ayres.

Pleads Guilty To Breaking Window Glass

Freeman Parks, Belleville, was convicted of maliciously damaging a plate glass window in the Belle Theatre when arraigned before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in city police court here Tuesday. Parks was arrested Saturday night after striking and breaking a door glass window in front of the Belle Theatre with shattering results. Today, after Parks had pleaded guilty as charged, the matter of sentence was adjourned until the matter of restitution could be assured. The window was valued at $19.50 and Parks assured the court he would make restitution as soon as he received his pay.

"This young man was walking along the street with a lady friend when another man spoke to her. He flared into a rage and struck the plate glass with his fist," revealed Deputy Chief Harman.

"What happened to his fist?" inquired Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C. There was no reply.

Several inebriates enriched the city's coffers by paying conventional fines upon pleading guilty to drunk charges.

Hundreds of Essays Sent in by Children On Victory Loan Theme

Indications of the interest in the present Victory Loan campaign shown by the school children of Hastings County is seen in the fact that literally hundreds of replies have been received by Ross Stiver of the Schools Department of the Loan Public Relations Committee here, following a request for essays on "Why My Parents Should buy Victory Bonds" and "How Boys and Girls can help Canada's War Effort."

Pupils of 234 elementary and secondary schools in the county were invited to participate in the contests, and the result has nearly swamped Loan officials in charge of this phase of the campaign.

Mr Stiver said Tuesday that the replies will be judged according to grades. Alderman H. J. Clarke has accepted the position of judge and the results and prizes which will be ten-dollar War Savings Certificates for first and five dollar certificates for second place winners will be announced at a Grand Concert to be staged here Friday, Oct. 23.

The concert will see the efforts of outstanding artists both local and from a distance. A special patriotic play is now in the process of rehearsal and will afford one of the features of the show to be held in the Collegiate Institute auditorium.

Allow Nazi Prisoners In Canadian Camps To Broadcast Home

London, Oct. 21—(CP) — A new international radio program on which Germans in Canadian prisoners-of-war camps can broadcast to the folks at home will be started Thursday night, it was announced Tuesday.

A daily "America Calling Europe" shortwave broadcast from New York announced that the prisoners' messages will be broadcast from American stations and relayed by the BBC at 11 p.m. German summer time on four wavelengths, 373, 285, 41 and 49 metres.

It advised Germans to "listen carefully" and relay the prisoners' words to "anyone who might be interested." It was believed the proposed broadcasts were a possible move to halt the chaining controversy by refuting German charges of mistreatment of prisoners by their own testimony.

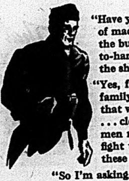
WHAT WERE YOU DOING WHILE I WAS AT Dieppe?



"Have you any idea what that night was like? A murderous storm of machine-gun bullets . . . the blasts of point-blank shell-fire . . . the bursts of bombs and hand-grenades . . . the desperate, hand-to-hand, life-or-death struggles in the darkness and smoke . . . the shock of seeing your pals hit. For what? . . . For YOU!

"Yes, for you, and your family and your home . . . and for my family and my home, too . . . to keep them safe from the beasts that would brutalize them. Aye, and for Canada . . . our country . . . clean and sweet and beautiful . . . and for all the lands where men must be free. And if you had seen your fellow Canadians fight that night, you would know how much we cared about all these things that you are enjoying now.

"So I'm asking you: Are you giving every last ounce of effort, making the personal sacrifices that will back us up over here? Are you going all out to get us the things we need . . . to pay for the weapons we want? If you are . . . we'll win! If you're not . . ."

"Soldier . . . count me in! I know what you're doing . . . and I'll do all I can. Sure, taxes are heavy, but besides what you're risking, this is a picnic. So I'm giving up things . . . personal things I can do without until the war is over, and you and all the others are back home, victorious.

"Yes . . . I know how lucky I am! I'm only asked to lend . . . but if I had to choose between the way we live in Canada, and the way they'd make us live if they won . . . why I'd give all that I've got to keep that from happening! As it is, when I buy the new Victory Bonds I will be laying up for myself the best of all investments. VICTORY BONDS are backed by all the resources of the Dominion of Canada; they yield a fair rate of interest; I can borrow against them; and they are readily saleable when I need the cash."

AMERICAN HOCKEY LOOP REDUCED TO EIGHT CLUBS

Schedule Shows Each Club Will Play 28 Home Games

OPENS OCTOBER 27

NEW YORK, Oct. 21 — (AP) — The American Hockey League today announced its schedule, for the 1942-43 season, calling for each team to play 28 home games and 28 on the road. With the circuit reduced to eight clubs by the withdrawal of Springfield and Philadelphia, an "even" schedule will be played. Each club will meet each of the others eight times.

Indianapolis will lift the lid Nov. 1 against Washington while Washington Lions won't play before the home folks until Nov. 4, when they meet Providence. The regular season will end March 14.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, Oct. 21 (CP)—The Canadian overseas forces will have a soccer team in this season's inter-allied services cup, as they did last season when they lost out in the early rounds. Unlike the other competitors, however, they'll not pick a representative side. They will enter one of their championship teams.

Canadian forces games leading towards the championship have started on a graduated basis and will provie sport for hundreds of players. Unit championships will be deloded by January when the finals are scheduled.

Then a champion unit team will perform in the inter-allied cup. This is to ensure 100 per cent team work as against the efforts of a collection of "all-stars."

A similar pian will be followed by Canadian cross-country championships, with the main championship race to be run Jan. 13. Among the runners is Sgt. G. Elliott of Hamilton, Ont., winner of last season's cross-country title. He took part in the Dieppe raid.

Four rinks in various parts of England are to be used for the ice hockey championships for which an entry of 160 teams is expected.

Cameron Campbell Buchanan, youngest professional football in the history of the game, made his moneyed debut a winning one in helping Wolverhampton Wanderers whip West Bromwich 2-0.

Fourteen-year-old Scottish schoolboy forward, signed as an amateur last July, Cameron did not score but had much to do with the Wanderers' success. He initiated many raids and assisted on both goals.

From youth to experience.... About 10 years ago John Thompson, having made a name as a goal-scorer for Bath in minor football, went to Blackburn Rovers and became one of their leading players. Now a Sergeant-Major in airborne troops, he returned to the west country in a recent game and scored the first of Bath's five goals against Seansea.

From Bombay comes the word that football there brought about a reunion between Tom Beswick, former Manchester United and Stoke City player, and his brother Harry, after a lapse of 10 years.

Harry joined the British army and went to India 10 years ago. Tom, Royal Artillery member, arrived in Bombay a few months back. He joined a team and his play caught the eye of sports writers. Harry, in Poona, noticed the name in the papers, took a chance it might be his brother and journeyed to Bombay. They say it was a great reunion.

CORNWALL SWAMPED BY BRUINS

Cornwall, Ont., Oct. 21—(CP)—Boston Bruins last night overwhelmed the Cornwall Basic Training Centre team 7-1 in an exhibition match that thrilled a crowd of 2,000 in the Cornwall Arena.

Three rookies and Goalie Frankie Brimsek starred for the National Hockey League Bruins, with the amateur line of Armand Guidolin, Don Gallenger and Bill Shill banging in five of the seven Boston goals.

ALSAB, SHUT OUT TO MATCH STRIDES

New York, Oct. 21 — (AP) — Alsab and Shut Out, three-year-old stars of the 1942 racing season, match strides for the fourth time today in the $15,000 Gallant Fox Handicap, closing day feature of the fall meeting at Jamaica.

Six others have been named for the mile and five-eighths fixture, but the interest will be centered on the first renewal of the feud between Mrs. Payne Whitney's Derby winner and Mrs. Albert Sabath's Chicago charger since the Belmont Stakes last June.

Shut Out defeated Alsab in the Kentucky Derby, but the latter reversed the order in the Preakness a week later. Then came the Belmont, which Shut Out won to move into the lead in the struggle for three-year-old honors.

Since then, however, Alsab has come on to conquer the great Whirlaway in two out of three meetings, while injuries and training difficulties kept Shut Out off the track from mid-August until his recent Belmont Park appearance.

Each colt will carry 124 pounds, sharing topweight. Leon "Buddy" Haas will ride Shut Out and Carroll Bierman will be up on Alsab.

The Gallant Fox, named in honor of William Woodward's great champion, will carry a gross value of $17,025 if all eight go to the post.

BEVINS HOLDS PASTOR TO DRAW

Cleveland Negro Surprises Pastor Who Has Won Last 14 Fights

Cleveland, Oct. 21 — (AP) —With decisions over highly regarded Bob Pastor and Tami Mauriello in his last two scraps, Jimmy Bivins deserves a spot well up in the heavyweight ranks today.

The punching Cleveland negro, who normally fights as a light heavy, tacked on a couple of extra pounds last night and grabbed a split decision from a surprised and indignant Pastor who landed far more blows, although they weren't quite so sharp.

Bicycling Bob was provoked at the ruling, declaring "I won my last 14 fights and I didn't lose this one." Although Pastor twice slipped to one knee for no count, there were no knockdowns as in their first encounter six months ago when Robert won after hitting the floor in the first two rounds.

As a result, a third match appears inevitable between the 21-year-old Bivins, who at 177 1-2 spotted the New Yorker seven pounds, and Pastor, now 28 and talking of enlisting in the Marines early next year.

Pastor undoubtedly landed more frequently last night and displayed more aggressiveness. James' counter-punches were vicious, however, and he won the fourth round because Referee Lou Parker ruled Bob had struck three low blows in a perpetual attack on Bivins' mid-section. The two judges divided on who won and Parker's deciding vote was seven to two, with one even.

New York, Oct. 21 (AP)— The way Ned Irish looks at it, the entries for this years fall basketball tournament at Madison Square Garden—three service teams and one aircraft corporation—may represent a "trend"....And it's a good bet that he's right. Most of the coaches partaking of Ned's free groceries yesterday were wondering if they'll have teams left by the time the season rolls around.

When the Manhattan Beach coast guard football team plays at Toledo Oct. 31, it ought to be designated as the coast guardsmen's "homecoming" game....Ensign Gar Griffith, head coach of the squad, is an old Ohio State player. So are his playing assistant, Esko Sarkkinen, and players Joe Aleskus and George Sting and Larry Gilgor, first assistant coach, comes from Mount Union College in Ohio....To complete the official family, Lieut. B. F. Mooney, who is helping Jack Dempsey with the station's physical fitness program, used to be the Ohio State wrestling coach.

Before Pepper Martin could go home after the Pacific coast league season he had to sell a hoss he bought last spring. CROWD EXPECTED TO REACH 20,000

Navy and Air Force Teams Will Fight it Out Under Lights

TORONTO, Oct. 21 — (CP) — A crowd expected to reach the 20,000 mark will stream into Maple Leaf Stadium here tonight to witness, in a war setting, the season's first and probably only floodlight football game between Royal Canadian Air Force Hurricanes and H. M. C. S. York of the Senior Ontario Rugby Football Union.

Proceeds of the game, which is dedicated to the Third Victory Loan, will go to the Royal Canadian Navy and R. C. A. benevolent and canteen funds. Mock bombings, parades and circus acts feature the tilt.

Hurricanes will be seeking their sixth straight victory in the clash; the Navy team, tied for second place with Hamilton Wildcats and Toronto Balmy Beach, each with three victories and two losses, hope for an upset triumph over the pace-setting Hurricanes.

The sailors lost 11-5 to the R. C. A. F. team in the season's opening game but coaches Ted Morris and Jim Palmer said last night they have cooked up a couple of new hipper dipper plays to throw at the Air Force and the airmen would know they were in a ball game.

"I don't see how we can lose," said Sub.-Lt. Hal Smith, team manager. "After all, Wednesday is Trafalgar Day."

R. C. A. F. coach FO. Lew Hayman said he was "taking nothing for granted. We've worked hard for this game."

TORONTO, Oct. 21 — (CP) — Parachute jumping without a parachute is not recommended but hockey without hockey players is impossible. Hockey moguls, both professional and amateur, accept this maxim (not a Confucianism) because butting one's head against a stone wall is more painful than effective. Long-established hockey leagues are folding, because their players are flocking to the colors —more power to them.

The professionals, especially in United States, felt the manpower drain of Canada's call to arms and first the Pacific Coast League, then the American Association folded. The amateurs were next and the Montreal and District Senior League gave up the ghost for lack of entries. Now comes word that the Saskatchewan Senior League, which sent Regina Rangers to the Allan Cup championship two seasons ago, has suspended operations for one year and perhaps for the duration. Saskatchewan has handed hockey over to the armed forces and good hockey will be played in the prairie province this year — but by service teams and not by the clubs made famous in peacetime.

Peace will come and amateur hockey boom again, however, and Saskatchewan is preparing wisely. The game will be nurtured among the juniors, juveniles, midgets and bantams, building for post-war teams.

Incidentally:

Miss Lillian Jenkins, who recently married Art Coulter, the former New York Rangers National Hockey League defenceman now in the United States Coast Guard, has been named assistant publicity director at New York's Madison Square Garden ... tonight's Toronto Navy-Toronto R. C. A. F. Victory Night football game in Maple Leafs baseball stadium will be the first major league football ever played under floodlights in Toronto ... Gus Scheiers, as sweet a backfielder as one could wish although his Kitchener-Waterloo Panthers are the O. R. F. U. doormats, played safety and called signals for Sarnia Imperials in their last year of senior football...Gus' 78-yard touchdown run Saturday as the powerful Toronto R. C. A. F. beat Kitchener 18-7 was beautiful to watch — nice change of pace, good straight-arm, deceptive shift and speed.

N. H. L. Training Notes

By The Canadian Press

In between practice sessions yesterday Canadiens took time out to hold a poll on various aspects of the coming season covering individual performances and here are some of the results: Goaler Paul Bibeault unanimous choice as outstanding player for year; Gordie Drillon to be top scorer; Joe Benoit best stickhandler and Jack Portland and Elmer Lach, fastest skaters.

The poll showed Drillon on top of the scoring heap with 23 points; followed by Benoit with 22; Toe Blake 21; Tony Demers 18; Buddy O'Connor and Lach 17.

It must have been good news for Jolly Jack Adams of Detroit Red Wings when Modere (Mud) Bruneteau signed for the coming season. Modere, who has been with the Wings since 1924, has always had a happy faculty of getting goals when they count and his experience should go a long way in helping Detroit in their battle for the Stanley Cup.

Bob Kirkpatrick, 24, Regina, shifty centreman with New York Rovers of the Eastern United States amateur league last season, has signed a pro contract with New York Rangers. Kirkpatrick made a record 57-point mark in the Alberta senior circuit in 1938-39 while with Lethbridge Maple Leafs. He also played with Saskatchewan, Manitoba and English National League clubs.

In addition to Kirkpatrick, manager Lester Patrick announced that the star line of Watson, Patrick and Hextall have signed new contracts. These three finished among the first five in N. H. L. scoring last season with Hextall leading, having a total of 56 points.

Lester Patrick said he really would like to bring a youngster up from the Simon Pure ranks to fill the vacancy left by Sugar Jim Henry in the Ranger goal. He may make his choice between Jack McGill, with Rovers last year, Steve Buzinski, from Swift Current, Sask., or Roy Roche, netminder from Baltimore Orioles of the E.U.S.H.L.

Allied Planes Sink Axis Ships, Damage Facilities

CAIRO, Oct. 21 — (AP) — R. A. F. planes of every combat type and heavy and medium United States bombers combined Monday on widespread missions over the Mediterranean and North Africa which cost the Axis at least four ships and heavy damage to planes, camps and transport facilities ashore.

Communiques from their respective headquarters enumerated these achievements:—

Long-range British fighters set a two-masted schooner ablaze and left it sinking southwest of Crete, and shot down a Nazi JU-52 transport out of "large-escorted formations."

At least two large merchant vessels were hit by American heavy bombers at Tobruk.

Three direct hits were scored by American medium bombers among enemy planes on the ground at an undisclosed enemy landing ground where "one very large and several smaller fires" also were observed.

ROBBED AND BEATEN

Windsor, Ont. Oct. 21—(CP)—Robbed of $280. and beaten when he tried to resist the robbery, Metro Lutnik, 48, Toronto, enlisted the aid of Provincial Police today to help find the three men and a woman who last night met him at a hotel in Windsor and drove him out Huron Line into Sandwich West township where the robbery took place.

MORE ADVANCES IN MADAGASCAR

London, Oct. 21 — (CP) — British forces moving southward to complete the occupation of the French island of Madagascar have overwhelmed the Vichy opposition and have captured more than 800 prisoners and considerable equipment well south of Ambositra, a British East African communique announced today.

The French were outflanked at the Ivato crossroads on the way to Fianarantsoa and defeated in a 2-hour engagement, the communique said.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

DID YOU KNOW—The George Van Horne Memorial Trophy is back where it started from before Belleville stepped into the picture years ago and elevated that puck series to one of prominence? . . . According to Kingston Scribe Bill Walshe, the Van Horne mentors hope to re-organize their Van Horne League to include only Kingston civilian or military teams . . . The idea is to play only one game an evening and extend the schedule through the entire winter. . . . As Kingston will only have a senior hockey club operating Saturday nights in the Ottawa senior loop, the idea of a one-night, one-game schedule for the Van Horne series sounds basically sound. . . . Out in Peterborough Scribe Fred Craig has a bad case of the jitters when referring to the forthcoming hockey campaign. . . . Off the beaten path of railway travel the Petes may be in the boat-missing class insofar as hockey is concerned, suggests Mr. Craig. . . . At the Hume Arena local puck fans are assured of a four-teamed R.C.A.F. service hockey league at least, while the matter of the O.H.A. competition may have to wait until a month from today when the provincial hockey moguls meet in Toronto.

LIKE THE NEW YORK Yankees of past baseball domination, the Belleville Collegiate gridders have fallen on evil grid iron days. For years the "Collegians" dominated the Bay of Quinte COSSA rugby circles until the 1941 campaign came along and the St. Michael's "Irish" put an end to the B.C.I. domination. Sensing the Collegians had enjoyed their day both the Irish and Albert College kicked Coach Harold Mott's Church St. gridders around in their initial two games this year. At this early date the championship of the Junior Bay of Quinte Interscholastic group seems to be between St. Mikes, 1941 titlists and Albert College, a new threat on the city secondary school grid horizon. However, when the league leaders clash at the Collegiate campus this afternoon the tale of the relative strength will be unfolded. It seems to be a clean-cut case of St. Mikes' speed versus Albert's heftier line power.

TAKE FOR INSTANCE Freddie Aboud, powerful halfback with Albert. On Monday Freddie ploughed around the Collegians' end for substantial gains, at times carrying half of Coach Mott's team personnel on his blocky shoulders. Bruce Orr was outpunting anything the Collegians had in this line, but Paul Goyette's team still depended on its power plays. When St. Mikes blanked B.C.I. a week ago, Skipper Doran's Irish resorted to the speed of Bob Wilson and Jerry Moher to roll up a 17 to 0 win. When the B.C.I. tacklers went after Aboud and company their tackling efforts saw the Collegians hitting the Albert's ball carriers about the waist and even higher with the results the Alberts were gaining extra yardage even after being tackled. However, the speedier Irish can be depended to hit the heavier Goyette-led crowd ankle-high in their tackling, whic may or may not prove the differ- ence in the battle for the leagu leadership today.

REMEMBER WHEN the executive of the Ontario Roughriders Big Four football team, sent formal protest to the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union tw years ago today over alleged rough play when Tony Golab was injured in a game at Toronto th previous Saturday? Golab was o the injured list for the remainder of the season.

YOU'LL HAVE TO MAKE WA for the fair sex at the Hume Arena tonight. True enough "Big Earl" McCready is exceedingly popular with the fair sex, but when "Whipper Billie" Watson is on a local rasslin' card the ladies are the No 1 patrons, as the "Whipper" i truly their favourite and woe and betide the villainous grappler who dares rough their ring adonis However, it will be interesting to see which main bouter is the more popular tonight, Watson or McCready. Otherwise, and for the male patrons who like their unadulterated wrestling, it's Jack Wentworth and Pedro Martinez in the opener to provide the muscle bending antics, with Walter Sirois and Jan Gotch returning for some additional bone crushing in the semi-final.

Rings always are the No. 1 choice of the first time a club wins a world's championship, and the 1942 Series was the first in which all of the present Redbird regulars had participated. Manager Billy Southworth said his own vote had been cast for rings.

The Commissioner's office set aside a fund of approximately $100 each for ohe purchase of mementos for members of the championship team. Final decision on the design of the souvenir probably will be made during spring training.

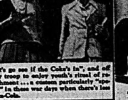
LABOR MINISTER IN BRITAIN

London, Oct. 21—(CP Cable)— Humphrey Mitchell, Canadian Minister of Labor, has arrived in Britain after a trans-Atlantic flight from Canada, it was announced today.

The minister plans to confer with government officials and to see as much of Britain's war effort, especially in factories and dockyards, as time permits.



That Extra Something! ...You can spot it every time

COCA-COLA has that extra something that rates with youth. That's why Coca-Cola—a long-established product—belongs to the younger set year after year. Choicest, special ingredients and special care in its making, give Coca-Cola a special refreshing taste and quality.

This unique taste comes from a finished art in its making . . . a blend of flavour-essences merging the ingredients of Coca-Cola into a taste all its own. It leaves an after-sense of refreshment that everybody recognizes.

It's natural for popular names to acquire friendly abbreviations. That's why you hear Coca-Cola called Coke. Coca-Cola and Coke mean the same thing...the real thing..."a single thing coming from a single source, and well known to the community".

"Let's go see if the Coke's in", and off they troop to enjoy youth's ritual of refreshment...a custom particularly "special" in these war days when there's less Coca-Cola.

Ship Engineer Expresses Gratitude for Work Red Cross is Doing

Trenton, (Special) — A meeting is called of all Trenton women to be on hand in the Red Cross work rooms over the Trent Theatre on Friday afternoon of this week at 2.30 to hear an address by Mrs. John Y. Harcourt, of Ottawa, in connection with the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. This was announced by the Vice-President of the Red Cross, Mrs. J. H. Redick, at the regular meeting on Tuesday.

Mrs. Redick related to workers present a very interesting story of the splendid work of Red Cross which involved one of Trenton's citizens. There had just been returned to her a ditty bag from a sailor whose ship had been torpedoed recently and sunk. That sailor was Mr. J. H. Robinson, Frances St., Trenton. Mr. Robinson has been sailing the St. Lawrence River and the Great Lakes for the pasty 34 years. Just a few weeks ago Mr. Robinson, Chief Engineer of a freighter, was torpedoed and but for the Red Cross might have suffered some severe hardships. However, after being picked up by a rescue ship, he told how the Red Cross has been quickly on the job at their landing point and had handed to each of the rescued men a ditty bag containing all the many articles necessary after such a harrowing experience. Mrs. Redick displayed the bag in the work room and showed the contents to be trousers, sweater, cap, socks, shoes, underwear, scarf, towels and other small articles. This was very gratifying and definite proof to the workers present of the wonderful work of the Red Cross. In addition to this the rescued men had been given hot food, shelter and in every way made comfortable.

Besides returning the ditty bag which had served him so well, Mr. Robinson made a donation to the Red Cross of $10 and asked Mrs. Redick to relate his story to the workers in Trenton and to tell them of the greatness of that organization and of the wonderful assistance which they are always ready and willing to give to all those in need.

During the afternoon a bouquet of beautiful fall flowers which had been donated, were raffled along with a jar of jam, and the proceeds amounted to $1.56. Mrs. O. G. Alyea was the lucky winner.

In addition several donations were received from the school children, Miss Walker's class, $1.00; Miss Broatch's, $1.00, Miss Staufeur's $2.00 and Miss Young's $1.00, also a pair of bootees from Miss Young's class.

Armored Convoy Arrives

The convoy of armored equipment in connection with Canada's Third Victory Loan rolled into Trenton on Tuesday morning and drew up in formation in front of the City Hall. The convoy consisted of jeeps, tanks, field guns, naval guns, and the new naval device for throwing depth charges. The public took a keen interest in the inspection of these implements of par and the army and navy officials in charge were most painstaking in describing the equipment to the public. There were also two bus loads of the R.C.A.F. who compose Canada's famous precision squad. The drill put on by these men in front of the city hall was something new to Trentonians as they had been acustomed to listening to commands given by officers and N.C.O.'s. However, this is not done with the precision squad, they go through their multicipicity of drills without even so much as one spoken word. The rhythm of their movements with their feet and sifles is astonishing to the average spectator.

Two thousand school children formed a square around the precision squad and thoroughly enjoyed the manoeuvres. When it came time for the convoy to move off they were given three rousing cheers by the thousands of spectators present.

Bigger Effort Needed

Trenton's second day of the Victory Lcan brought in $13,900 but this is still not enough. Last year's second day had a total of $17,850. Benedict-Proctor Manufacturing was the first firm reported to be over the top in their drive and this was accomplished the first day of the loan. The canvassers are working hard on this task and the loan office is open to the public down-town next the City Cafe, and it is hoped every last citizen will give to their utmost.

44 Cases in Court

Forty-four cases came before the Police Court on Tuesday afternoon with Magistrate J. L. Loyd presiding, and County Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., prosecuting. Special Prosecutor S. Gordon Robertson prosecuted a case under the War Measure's Act, the case being one against Herbert Oliver for a breach of the Munitions and Supplies Act, to wit, failing to report four new tires in his possession. Oliver, who was unable to be present owing to illness, was fined through his lawyer, Mr. A. Adamson, $25 and costs.

Murney Richardson was fined $10 and costs for consuming, and Henry Tuttle on a similar charge was fined $50 and costs, this being his second offence. In default of payment he was committed to jail for two months.

Jacob Yarrow, for having liquor in an illegal place, paid $10 and costs, as did Alex Evans. Evans also was fined $10 and costs for being drunk.

Walter Puffer and Myrtle Puffer for being drunk, $10 and costs each.

John Lambert, for theft of nine bicycles, remanded to jail for one week for observation.

Lawrance Crosby was fined $50 and costs for keeping a gambling house while fourteen others, for being found in, were assessed $10 and $6.75 each.

PRESIDENT RIOS READY TO SOLVE POLITICAL CRISIS

Cabinet Resignation Due to Chile's Relations With the Axis

PROTEST LODGED

Santiago, Chile, Oct. 21—(AP)—President Juan Antonio Rios has promised to solve "within the next 48 hours" a full-blown political crisis growing out of Chile's continued diplomatic relations with the Axis, which resulted in the resignation of the cabinet last night.

With the resignations of his ministers in his hands, President Dios was free to appoint a cabinet which would resolve the smouldering differences in Chile between forces favoring "non-belligerency" and those demanding a clean break with the Axis.

This struggle reached its climax when Foreign Minister Ernesto Barros Jarpa, an advocate of continuing relations with the Axis, charged that Sumner Welles, United States Acting Secretary of State, offended Chile's national dignity recently by charging she was permitting Axis agents to use her territory as a base for hostile acts against her American neighbors.

The Foreign Minister lodged a protest to Washington over Welles' speech and, as a result of the storm, President Rios postponed a scheduled trip to the United States to be President Roosevelt's guest. Although generally approving President Rios' decision to postpone the trip, his supporters demanded that Barros resign.

When the Foreign Minister said he would not consider resigning alone, a cabinet majority, which is known to oppose his conduct of foreign relations agreed to resign together.

Democratic political circles expressed belief the appointment of a strong cabinet favoring complete co-operation in defence of the continent would clear the way for Rios to make his visit to the United States and other American republics.

The central committee of the socialist party, with three members in the retiring cabinet, instructed these ministers yesterday to support a break with Germany, Italy and Japan.

ARRIVES AT LAST

Richard Fairey, son of Sir Richard Fairey, British airplane builder, has arrived in New York at last. He started for the United States last January. The ship on which he sailed was torpedoed off the coast of Newfoundland. For six and a half days he tossed in a lifeboat on the winter seas. He suffered severe frost-bite, as a result of which both legs had to be amputated. His father is head of the British air commission in the United States.

"Are Husbands Necessary?"

Well, yes—and no. Sometimes yes, says Betty Field. For instance, when it's raining cats and dogs and the pup has to be walked. A husband will growl, but he'll go! And when the ice-tray is stuck fast in the refrigerator and it would take Tarzan or a husband to pull it loose, any practical woman knows her best bet's a husband.

And what about that husband when his ex-flame drops into town on her way back from Reno, just to say hello, of course. Goodbye isn't in her vocabulary because she stays on indefinitely. And the man you married turns out to be a mouse who simply can't turn down any of her invitations. If you complain about her, you just don't understand. She's a sweet thing who wants to be friendly. You? You're a narrow-minded witch who's looking for trouble. Are husbands necessary? Wives, I ask you!

But then, again, if there's ever a time a husband is unnecessary, it's when he's caught a cold. One of those colds in the head that everybody gets from time to time, but that no one makes such a fuss over as a husband. You'd thing the world was coming to an end. Aspirin, hot water bags, mustard foot baths, hot lemonade—the works! The whole household is turned topsy-turvey. The cold runs its normal course, and so does hubby's temper. But, somehow, there's been a transfer of cold germs and Mama is laid low.

So I don't know. Are husbands necessary? Yes—and no. If I seem slightly confused it's because I recently finished making a picture for Paramount, called, by an odd coincidence, "Are Husbands Necessary?" It takes no sides, gives you the yea and the nay of it and it's up to you to make up your mind. It's now playing at the Belle Theatre and I really think you'll enjoy it. Ray Milland is my screen husband and as such he's awfully nice and he's awfully nasty. So when I'm asked, "Are Husbands Necessary?" — well, I just don't know.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Below The Border"

The tops in thrills for western fans is promised by the Capitol Theatre next when the latest in the Monogram Rough Riders series, "Below The Border," opens with Buck Jones, Tim McCoy and Raymond Hatton in their customary co-starring roles. "Submarine Zone"

Hailed as one of the greatest action dramas of all time, Columbia's "Escape To Glory" opens also next at the Capitol Theatre with Pat O'Brien and Constance Bennett co-starred. A thrill-laden story of adventure, of love and cowardice, glory and vengeance, disaster and escape, the new film's cast includes John Halliday, Melville Cooper and Alan Baxter, John Brahm directed, from a screen play by P. J. Wolfson.

The 11th chapter of Spy Smasher and a colored cartoon complete the bill.

Fitchurg, Mass., Oct. 21—(AP)—The city council has voted to build five "thumbing stations," Small Wooden structures on main highways near the borders of the city for the use of soldiers seeking to thumb their way, and to "prevent their straggling along highways."

AT THE BELLE

Trouble's a brewing in this scene from Paramount's riotously funny comedy of marriage, "Are Husbands Necessary?" now on the screen at the Belle Theatre. Betty Field, the wife, may look beatific at the moment, but she's ready to start pitching things if that siren, Patricia Morison, doesn't stop flirting with husband Ray Milland.

No Agreement Exists To Avoid Bombing Rome or Other Cities

London, Oct. 21 — (CP) — Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, answering questions on foreign affairs in the House of Commons today, said there was no agreement between Britain and Italy or any other country to avoid bombing Rome or other cities.

Answering another question, he said that control of the Suez Canal is "wholly in the hands of the London directors," though the head office is still in Paris.

The Foreign Secretary said negotiations for the relinquishment of extra-territory rights in China will be opened "in the near future."

CHAPTER 25

Happiness Again

Judith was scarcely aware that the cocktails were being placed before them or that she had taken a cigarette and Ames was holding a match to it. Separated since October!

"I didn't know, Ames. I haven't heard from her since last summer.

"I'm on the road for a bit. Dad thought it would be a good idea for me to get out of New York for a few months. I've been west and I'm working on toward New York again." He smiled; it was the same Ames. "Don't go feeling sorry for me, Judith, because I'm not the least bit sorry for myself. You see, I'm not in the least in love with her anymore."

"I don't know what to say. It's a shock."

"Is it? Didn't you see? Of course you did. You being you would see that from the start she didn't try even to be a wife."

"I saw things that I thought weren't quite right but I'd hoped."

"So did I. But I soon learned that it was never going to get better, but worse. I married Phyllis because I loved her and I thought we'd make a home together and have a family and live a normal life. There wasn't anything I wouldn't have done for her or given her. But the giving has to be mutual.

"Phyllis didn't marry me because I was the man she loved. She married me because she was sick of supporting herself and I was the most likely prospect she knew. Oh, I suppose she cared for me as much as she is capable of caring for any man. But the person you marry should be someone you love more than you love yourself. But Phyllis loves herself first. Marriage isn't easy. I know. My mother used to say that any girl who married to get out of work was going to wake up and realize she'd made a big mistake, that marriage was the biggest job of all."

Judith said thoughtfully, "Then marriage is a job from which you can be fired as you can be fired from any other job."

"I suppose that's what I did. I fired Phyllis. But not after a fair trial and several chances to start over again. I fired her because she was too lazy to keep my home clean and to cook my food and because she had no idea of the value of money and because she said she would never have any children. I stopped loving her. She became distasteful to me. Maybe some men put up with that sort of thing, but I—I couldn't! I took it as long as I could. I was married but I was ashamed to ask people to come to see me. I had a wife who was pretty—and useless."

"Maybe my training has been all wrong, Judith. My mother managed to be pretty and useful, too. When I checked Phyllis' department store bills, they were nearly a thousand dollars, one-fifth of my yearly income. I confronted her with these bills and, well, it was a pretty sad spectacle. Phyllis turned our marriage into a racket."

"But in fair trials, Ames—"

"She'd do better for a week, but the next week we'd be eating in restaurants again." He smiled bitterly. "I am an extremely well-dressed young man. You see, Phyllis always forgot to send the laundry out so when I needed clean clothes I had to go out and buy new things."

"But what did Phyllis say?"

"She lost her temper the last time. She isn't red-headed for nothing. Then she cried and begged me not to leave. She said she would do anything." He shook his head slowly. "It was so—so sordid, that last scene. I—I couldn't look at her with anything but contempt and distate. I couldn't stay. I could not stay married to that sort of girl.

"I went to my father. He asked me to try it again, but I knew it wasn't any use. I knew she could not change her nature. I haven't seen her since that night, but I've been sending her money every month and she still has the apartment. She stopped telephoning me and begging me to come back.

"My father went to see her—he was very fond of her at first even though she always treated him as if he weren't there—and he wrote me that she has a job in one of the department stores. With what she makes and with what I send her she can live extremely well. I'm going to get a legal separation as soon as I get to New York. Maybe you think I should try again. But I don't love her, Judith and I'd rather be dead than tied to a girl who won't co-operate with me in any way and who won't have any children. She was very emphatic about the latter. Do you blame me?"

"I can't say I do, though I hate to judge. But, Ames, suppose you wake up some morning and find, after this first disillusionment is over, that you still love her? Love can take a great deal of punishment. It sometimes comes back at the last count."

"It can wear out," he said soberly. "There isn't any other girl—if, by any chance, you are thinking that. I've been working hard and trying to feel that Phyllis and I were a mistake. A strong attraction isn't enough to make a successful marriage. I don't intend to be bitter or disillusioned. My pride has taken a beating because there's never been a divorce in my family.

"And what will happen to her?" If only she had tried a little."

"With what I give her and she's so money-conscious I know she'll demand money and with what she earns, she'll be far better off than if she hadn't married me. She's made new friends, people I didn't approve of but put up with for her sake and because they seemed to amuse her. They brought out a common streak in her I didn't know existed. Emily and Tim tried to be friendly and I like both of them, but Phyllis said they bored her. They live very simply in the country and theirs is the kind of marriage I thought mine would be. I wanted you to know, Judith. Perhaps this isn't the way a man should speak of his wife. I haven't been as brutally honest with anyone except my father. That's why I turned down the invitation to meet your parents and asked you to come into town. You know, Phyllis could never understand why you gave up your good job in New York and came home. I can. I think you were smart."

They talked until he said with regret that it was almost time for his train to leave. But he did not mention Phyllis again. Judith felt empty, remembering stained glass windows in a church on a certain day in October a few hours before she met Max and her thoughts then of the beauty of the mingling of two lives. They had been so certain then. But for Ames she had no fears now. The essence of his nature was fineness. But for Phyllis her fears mounted as sordid mental pictures formed in her mind.

In the station Ames said a cheerful good-bye and promised to call her again if he were ever in Clinton. He reminded her of a man who is happily relieved at the selling of a bad investment.

At Christmas there was a gift and a long letter from Emily. There was nothing from Phyllis. In March Emily's son was born.

In June Judith danced at the country club with Stephen who had just become a member and was as proud as a little boy who bought his first bicycle with the accumulation of penny savings.

Wearing a white dancing frock spattered with red flowers, she danced with him in the clubhouse ballroom, her mouth curving into that proud and tender smile. Color crept up his lean, tanned cheeks because bewhiskered old Mr. West, Clinton's most important banker, had nodded in recognition.

"That Mr. West, Judith."

"Yes, I know."

"Dignified, isn't he?"

"Very."

"He's 70 and still plays golf."

She looked up and smiled. "If you think about golf, you'll be wanting to take me home so that you can shine your golf sticks for tomorrow's big match."

He chuckled. "That's not fair. Besides, you said you were going to play golf with me."

"I'm not a tycoon like you. I have to work on Saturday and on Sunday my beginner's game would hold up the course—and you."

He smiled and said, "You're—you're the prettiest girl here tonight. Your dress."

"And your orchid in my hair."

"Yours now."

Seeing Katherine and Ralph dance by, his glance sobered. "They're still crazy about each other, aren't they? They dance as if they weren't married. I don't see Harriet and her husband Larry about. Where do we all go from here?"

"Harriet and Larry will go home because they still aren't comfortable about leaving the maid with the children. Her eyes had laughter in them now. "Of course, your being a tycoon and a socialite these days."

"You wouldn't try to kid me, would you, lady?"

So it was with them and so it had been for months. Tonight it amused her that he had noticed her dress because never before had he remarked about anything she wore. It was not that he did not notice. Coming toward him often she had seen complete approval in those candid blue eyes, but it was a silent approval. Less sensitive people would think that much went over young Stephen Larrabee's head, but Judith knew there was little his keen mind did not absorb.

A wave of happiness passed over her, seeming to take with it her longing for Max that still continued to be no less intense than it had been in the beginning. Dancing with Stephen on the first evening that he was a member of the Clinton Country Club and wearing a new dress and his orchid in her dark hair, and feeling, for an instant, free of longing she thought, "I don't want it to come back! It's so good not to want Max! And this is good, too, being here, seeing all these faces that I know. I'm having a good time tonight. I feel wonderful."

Catalina Flying Boat Sinks Nazi U-Boat

London, Oct. 21 — (CP) — The United States Navy's Air Force operating from Iceland had made its first definite claim of a U-boat kill, reporting the accurate bombing of a submarine by a Catalina flying boat, the Ministry said Tuesday.

A few hours after the bombing, the report said, the U-boat's crew of 52 abandoned their sinking submarine and went aboard an Icelandic fishing boat. It said an Allied destroyer later captured them.

TWO INDUSTRIAL FIRMS REACH 100 P. C. LEVEL

Corbin Lock Company of Belleville and Benedict-Proctor Co. of Trenton First to Achieve Position

Two county industrial firms, the Corbin Lock Company, Belleville and the Benedict-Proctor Company of Trenton, were the first organizations to reach the 100 per cent. level in the purchase by employees of Victory Loan Bonds in the current campaign, it was announced by General Committee Headquarters today. Other firms of the county are expected to fall in line.

The general response here to the appeal of the nation continues to be good and the Commando Dagger on the handsome Victory Loan sign dipped into the "heart of Berlin" to the $210,000 mark, or one-tenth of the quota allotted to Hastings County.

Favourable Comment on Sign

The Victory Loan sign that is prominently displayed on the north wall of Black's wholesale tobacco shop, facing Bridge Street West was originated, designed and executed by Eric (Jimmy) Corradi, well-known Capitol Theatre scenic artist. It depicts the good ship "Victory" sailing across the ocean, with the caption, "Bonds Build Boats" in bold relief. To the right of the sign is depicted the Commando Dagger in the strong grip of a Canadian, pointed to a picture of Berlin. Above is displayed "Pointed at the Heart of Berlin." As the Victory Loan level increases the dagger will go deeper into the heart of the centre of Nazi cruelty. Many laudatory comments have been heard regarding the sign, which as has been before stated, was designed and originated here.

Courteous Reception

Canvassers report a generally courteous reception with people who find it impossible to buy bonds at the present presenting definite reasons. The consensus of the reception here, thus far, is that residents of the city either through private or employer-employee capacities are responding in a fine way to the general appeal.

R.C.A.F. Officers Co-operate

Co-operation of officers of the Royal Canadian Air Force in connection with the local campaign has been marked. Air Commodore F. S. McGill, Officer Commanding the Trenton Air Station, has given of his time and oratorical talents in support of the loan. Squadron Leader A. MacLean Haig and Squadron Leader Weston spoke to the employees of the Belleville Sargent Company yesterday while the forementioned officer and Flight Lieut. B. R. Walker, a veteran of Dieppe, addressed the Corbin Lock Company staff on the same day.

Prominent local citizens have also lined up on the "speaking staff." Under the supervision of Mr. R. D. Arnott, M.L.A., several have signified their intention of assisting in the drive through brief addresses to war industry and commercial plants staffs.

Armored Convoy Attracts Many On City Tour

Dun-colored mechanized vehicles of the Canadian Army roared over city streets late yesterday afternoon as the Victory Armored Convoy reached here on another leg of its tour in support of the Victory Loan Campaign.

Bren gun carriers, armored cars, jeeps, trucks and a twenty-five pounder field piece with tractor and carriage made up the convoy which toured the city in a circuitous route following its arrival here shortly after five o'clock. The convoy and its military and Royal Canadian Air Force personnel was officially welcomed in a brief address by His Worship Mayor Glen E. Thompson, near the City Hall.

Finishing its tour which was witnessed by hundreds of people who lined the route of parade, the column formed up on the Market Square where other large crowds inspected it. A special precision flight of the Royal Canadian Air Force gave demonstrations of their formation drill in a manner which evinced the admiration of all who witnessed it. Members of the Belleville unit of the O.V.C. policed the convoy during its stay in the market square.

Earlier in the day the convoy was preceded by a flight of nine Harvard planes which flew low over various parts of the city on a pamphlet-dropping flight. Thousands of the paper squares drifted down from a low height to city streets. The pamphlets were colorfully printed and urged all to support the Victory Loan.

Officers of the convoy were quartered at the Hotel Quinte for the night while other ranks slept in the armouries. The men were fed at the Y.M.C.A. shortly after their arrival here.

Previous to its visit here the armoured vehicles toured Trenton, proceeding down through Prince Edward County to Picton before coming here. It left at approximately nine-thirty this morning on the next leg of its eastward tour.

THE WAR TODAY

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

London, Oct. 21 — (AP) — There are, it is believed here, fewer than 200 prime targets Allied bombers need to destroy in France and Germany in order to render Hitler so vulnerable the Allies could roll their army over him and end the war by next fall. These targets comprise Nazidom's chief war industries, rail communications and rolling stock.

In order to achieve this destruction quickly and thereby prevent great prolongation of the war, British and American bomber forces based in this country would have to be heavily increased.

Obviously, no attempt can be made to give detailed figures. But it can be said that if these two forces were trebled within the next couple of months, the Allies could achieve enough by spring so that an invasion army could go into operation.

Trebling Said Feasible

Of course, it leaves a lot to the imagination to talk about trebling the bomber forces when we don't know what the present fleets are. Still, authorities who do know the figures will recognize that this would be a feasible expansion.

This concentration of air force in Britain would be made:—

1. By current production in both countries;

2. By transferring aircraft from other activities which could spare them for this major operation in Western Europe.

In this second category might fall some of the submarine scouting now being carried on by aircraft, with the expenditure of a maximum amount of labor for a minimum of results. The ideal place to get a submarine with bombers is at the building base and not after the U-boat has started to roam the seas.

Speed in Bomber Reinforcements

Emphasis must be placed on speed in providing bomber reinforcements. Hitler should not be allowed to use the winter months to repair the grievous damage he has suffered in the Russian campaign.

Then there's another point which affects the American force directly. It has had great success with new, heavily-armored, heavily-armed Flying Fortresses with astonishingly small losses.

This is due in large degree to the fact the Flying Fortress is so protected that it is in a sense both bomber and fighter.

The Nazis are not able to cope with the Fortress now because it is a new weapon for which they were not prepared. It won't be new for long, however. Science marches fast and we may expect the Boche to develop a defence.

Toll of Vital Targets

Thus Hitler must not be given a chance to devise a means to beat the Fortresses before they have taken a full toll among vital targets.

The destruction already achieved by British and American bomber fleets along Hitler's Western front is staggering.

I have spent many hours recently with high-power magnifying glasses studying enlarged airphotos of the damage done in raids on such cities as Rostock, Luebeck, Cologne, Lille, Duesseldorf and Emden.

I defy anyone to analyze them and not be convinced that Hitler can be largely paralyzed in his industries and transport in a comparatively short time—if the bombers are available.

The bombing already done in occupied France and Germany is heavier than anything the Germans did in Britain in 1940-41 when London and other cities were inundated with giant explosives.

Yet experts say that had Hitler continued these fierce assaults he might have paralyzed Britain. If the weaker Nazi bombings were so effective, how much more so must be the recent Allied raids which have been pulverizing German cities.

Once the invasion is underway, the combined air forces will be tied to military operations on the ground and the bombing of our 200 targets would have to cease. That's why those targets must be reduced first.

WALL STREET

New York Oct. 21—(AP)—Stocks perched briefly today on the highest price rung since last November but that achievement prompted enough profit-selling to cancel a good part of the rise.

Industrial leaders generally pushed up fractions or better at the opening but near the fourth hour the list had about as many declines as advances.

Stocks swinging from gains to moderate losses included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet, General Motors and Chrysler. Crucible Steel held a fair part of an early rise of a point or so. Sears Roebuck, Boeing, Western Union and Standard Oil (N.J.) turned resistant after a retreat from their highs. Dow Chemical moved up about 2 points while Allied Chemical fell 1½. Rails mostly were lower.

The Canadian section was firm. Canadian Pacific, Dome Mines, and Hiram Walker gained fractions while Distillers Seagram eased ¼.

TORONTO STOCKS

Bell Telephone, C.P.R., Distillers Seagrams and Westons were stronger industrials. Loblaw B and Steel of Canada eased off slightly. Western Oils were dull and steady.

Cossack Swords Terrify Huns

London.—(By Mail)—The sparkling blades flashed like lightning across the field. The avalanche rolled on with cries, whistling and hooting. Suddenly the first German rose and began running towards the river. Then another one followed. Some 2,000 Germans were running in panic from the terrible swords of the horsemen.

Galloping in front of one regiment was Major Konovalov. He overtook a group of Germans and slashed eight of them to death. The ninth fired his pistol and wounded Konovalov, but he, too, was cut down. The wounded major served two more German heads. Then a bullet hit him in the chest. He dropped from the horse, but was picked up and carried to safety.

The Cossack Norprienko killed four Nazi soldiers and took an officer prisoner. Political instructor Belomesov slashed eight Germans. Kovtun gave full vent to his fury. Though he had spent a sleepless night, he had enough strength left to kill 12 Germans.

The Cossacks kept at it for an hour. When they had finished 1,500 dead Nazi and the equipment of two German infantry regiments lay scattered over the cornfield.

Here is an epilogue—an extract from the diary of Lieutenant Hetel, commander of the 2nd Company, 94th German Alpine Sapper Battalion, found on the battefront:

"Fighting against us are the Don and Kuban Cossacks. I remember how years ago my father told me stories about them. But what we have seen surpasses in terror any of his stories. Nothing deters them.

"To-day my company went to the aid of several rifle regiments which were in difficulties. Only four of us came back. It was hell let loose. It is a miracle that I am alive. Some 50 Cossacks charged us in mounted formation. Our men panicked and ran. I tried to stop them, but was knocked down.

"Three times the Cossacks swept by. I could perhaps have fired, but my hands were numb. I've heard a rumour that our brigade no longer exists. Judging by my company, it may very well be true." — (Hamilton Spectator).

IMPORTANT SWITCH IN MUNITIONS DEPARTMENT

With the production of synthetic rubber one of the most critical problems facing the Department of Munitions and Supply, Hon. C. D. Howe has appointed R. C. Berkinshaw, left, as president and treasurer of the Polymer Corporation Limited, a Crown company set up to manufacture the precious rubber substitute. An executive with a wide experience in the field of rubber production, the new president Polymer is the general manager and treasurer of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company of Canada. To succeed Mr. Berkinshaw as the Department's Co-ordinator of Controls, and as chairman of the Wartime Industries Control Board, the Minister has appointed Henry Borden, K.C., right, formerly General Counsel of Munitions and Supply. Because of his extensive knowledge of the department's raw material and critical utilities program, Mr. Borden is well suited to assume the task of further implementing the total mobilization of Canadian industry for war purposes.

Trenton and District

The first Victory Bond to be sold in Trenton on Monday morning at the opening of the campaign was to a seaman in the Royal Canadian Navy who had been on leave at his home over the weekend. Knowing the full seriousness of the war situation, as it is brought to sailors every hour of the day and every day of the week, this young lad on leaving to return to his ship instructed his mother to buy for him first thing on Monday morning a $200 bond. Surely this is a son any mother might be proud of and surely this is a fine example which has been set by this young lad of the armed forces and which should be followed by every citizen in Trenton.

At precisely 9 a.m. Monday the canvassers got under way with the new drive under the leadership of Mr. Doug. Mitchell who has again come to Trenton to take charge of the campaign. Mr. Mitchell was in Trenton last year for the Victory Loan and it was through his untiring efforts and that of his committee, that Trenton went over the top with a bang. The objective is $270,000 and the slogan is "Let's Buy a Bomber." This bomber costs $300,000. First day's receipts amounted to $16,700 and this is $10,000 short of last year's first day. Come on, Trenton!

IT CAN BE DONE

JIM finds times hard. His standard of living has dropped. There are all these new taxes.

Now there's another Victory Loan and Jim is expected to subscribe.

"Rock bottom!" was Jim's first thought. "We're on rock bottom. Just can't find the money!"

He's thought some more since. And he's decided it can be done. Jim says he doubts if Merritt lost much time wondering if it could be done when he crossed that bridge at Dieppe.

Remarks Designed To Still Public Clamor in Britain

By KIRKE SIMPSON

The British Admiralty revelation that 530 Axis submarines have been sunk or damaged by British and "some American" action since the outbreak of the war is a startling figure, although its significance is not measurable without a time breakdown to show the current rate of sinkings.

Just why it was decided to break British silence on U-boat sinkings at this time is not indicated. That information has been closely guarded on both sides of the Atlantic—and it was to the Atlantic-Mediterranean theatre the First Lord, A. V. Alexancer, referred.

He excluded result of Russian anti-submarine efforts and those of the French Navy before the fall of France. Presumably he also excluded figures for the Pacific. Japan's U-boats do not figure in the European second-front problem except as they help pin in the Pacific American forces that otherwise could share in the submarine hunt in the Atlantic.

Progressive Demoralization.

What Alexander stressed was that Ango-American second-front operations in Europe must depend upon "the degree of control we exercise at sea as well as in the air." His remarks were clearly designed in part to still public clamor in Britain for a premature second-front attack, or at least to impress his hearers with the scope of the problem.

That would not have required a break in official silence as to the aggregate "actual" toll taken of Axis submarines, however. Some additional reason must have dictated the announcement.

Such figures have been withheld up to now in London and Washington as a result of experience in the first Great War. The progressive demoralization among German U-Boat crews in that war was a major factor in the final German home front collapse. They saw comrades put out increasingly never to be heard of again. There was no mention of the actions in which they died or were captured in British announcement. The gnawing effort of that upon the morale of German undersea personnel led to mutiny.

Is there today any dim indication of declining public morale in Germany or Italy as another grim war winter closes down? It seems indisputable. It was almost conceded by Hitler and his Nazi spokemen in recent speeches.

Crisis for Vichy.

A rising tide of revolt against the Nazi conquerors in Norway, Denmark, the Low Countries, France and the Balkans is reflected in many ways. A crisis for the French collaborationist regime at Vichy is undeniable. Nazi garrison troops in many sections of occupied territory are reported living almost in a state of siege, surrounded by protective barbed-wire.

To cap that have come reports of mutinies by German and Italian units ordered to the Russian front. There is no way to test their truth, but the conditions under which Axis forces of occupation in the Balkans or elsewhere are serving are not conducive to high morale. The grim lesson of last winter in Russia must make assignment there a matter of dread for Axis troops.

DID GREAT JOB

Visits Second Division

He visited the two brigades of the Canadian Second Division which furnished units for the attack on Dieppe, and found both of them "right up to strength or practically so" after the heavy losses which they suffered on the Dieppe operations. The same was true of every unit which had participated in that attack.

In reply to a question from Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Col. Ralston said that Gen. J. C. Smuts, Prime Minister of South Africa, would not be coming to Canada "this time" after completing his visit to Great Britain.

In a brief interview at Montreal, Col. Ralston said "integration" of Canadian, British and United States officers' staffs in preparation for joint offensive action has taken place.

Col. Ralston did not elaborate upon his statement when reporters asked him whether he was referring to action upon a second front, merely remarking smilingly: "I think the subject of my reference is patently obvious."

He added he had found the Canadian Army actively training for "offensive" action, adding: "Sure, we're thinking of a second front. Who isn't?"

The Minister said Canadian, British and American officers were attached to the respective staffs of the three armies preparing for "joint offensive action," but again declined to add anything further to this comment.

Airdrome Completed

In Ottawa, Col. Ralston told newspapermen that army engineers have just completed an airdrome which will accommodate co-operation aircraft serving with the Canadian army.

He expressed the view "there is a very decided feeling" that things are improving in referring to the general war situation, but did not elaborate or give any personal opinions upon the outlook for the future.

Munitions Minister Howe said the main purpose of his visit was to hold discussions on production schedule for Canadian war plants in 1943. A number of important decisions were reached.

He said that upon the authority of Gen. McNaughton, the materials Canada's war workers were producing were "the best reaching the British isles."

Mr. Howe took sufficient time off from his London conferences to visit two or three British plants whose production he termed "magnificent."

Ralph P. Bell, Director-General of Aircraft Production; Lt.-Gen. Kenneth Stuart, Chief of the Canadian General Staff, Col. H. A. Dyde, Military Secretary to Col. Ralston, and Desmond Clarke, Director of Shipbuilding, returned to Canada with the two cabinet Ministers. Cmdr. C. P. Edwards, Deputy Minister of Transport, accompanied the party from Montreal to Ottawa.

ALLIED AIR-POWER

Inflict Extensive Damage

At that same time, Allied headquarters in Australia reported last night that Allied bombers were believed to have inflicted extensive damage on the Japanese airdrome and shipping at Buin, Bougainville Island, about 315 miles northwest of Guadalcanal.

All planes returned safely from the Buin night raid, the communique said. The Navy's report yesterday of the latest American assault in the Solomons and Aleutians made no mention of any enemy planes rising to counter-attack.

In the North Pacific, the Navy announced that Oct. 18 the army's heavy four-motored Liberator bombers smashed again at the Island of Kiska, the last of three Aleutian bases once held by the Japanese.

Twelve Tons Dropped

Twelve tons of bombs were dropped on enemy shore installations and on a beached ship in the harbor. Fires were set in the camp area. The communique made no mention of any further aerial resistance, last encountered early this month.

The expected Japanese assault to recapture Guadalcanal airfield from which the aerial attacks evidently are being launched, appeared still to be forming although the Navy said the enemy has not landed additional reinforcements on the island since Oct. 15.

Presence of United States warships in the Solomons was announced by the Navy two days ago and for the last several days, bomber and fighter planes have maintained steady attacks on Japanese shipping, supply dumps and troops.

Peat is Tested As Fuel to Meet Coal Shortage

Ottawa, Oct. 21 — (CP) — Pulverized peat is being tested in a local industrial plant as part of a study for the development of Canada's widespread peat bogs to meet the need for fuel a year hence, it was learned.

Coal production is lower than had been anticipated in both Canada and the United States, largely due to the manpower situation which is likely to grow worse instead of better, officials say. Therefore they are looking to peat to help out the coal shortage next fall.

One source said the suggestion has been made that since the government finds it advisable to subsidize the movement of Maritime and Alberta coal into central Canada it should be prepared to subsidize production of peat already in Central Canada.

While the tests are to be made from the bogs of Alfred, Ont., near Ottawa, there are peat bogs in most Canadian provinces and the tests here will give a lead for development of bogs in the Maritimes, Quebec, Manitoba and other parts of Canada. Peat is available in almost unlimited quantities, officials told The Canadian Press.

Wood Held at High Price

The high cost of wood for fuel is an even greater factor pressing authorities to turn to peat. Many householders formerly found it economical to burn wood in their furnaces in the fall before the weather got really cold and again in the spring. However since hardwood now has reached $14 a cord in Ottawa and even more in cities not so close to bushlands, many householders have given up the idea.

Authoritative sources here say the existing high price of hard wood is warranted. The Wartime Prices and Trade Board investigated the matter and found the scarcity of labor has made it unprofitable for cord wood to be sold at any less than is presently charged.

A government report stated theoretically it requires two pounds of peat to give the same heating value as one pound of anthracite. However in mild weather since peat is more easily controlled than coal actual experience has shown four pounds of peat are equal to three pounds of coal.

Germans are Forced To Strengthen Garrison

Ankara, Turkey, Oct. 20—(Delayed)—(AP)—Reports received in Ankara today said threats of revolution in Belgrade against the German occupying forces had forced the Nazis to strengthen the city's garrison by at least two regiments.

These advices said the Germans had shot 13 more alleged revolutionaries.

A week ago a communique from the German commandant in Belgrade said many arrests had been made to quell revolutionary activities; subsequently a report reached Ankara that more than 100 of those arrested had been shot.

Little Benny's Note Book

Puds Simkins was sitting on his front steps eating a big apple, and I sat down alongside of him and he didn't offer me a bite and I didn't ask hi mfor one, thinking, Darn if I'm going to give him the sattisfaction of asking for a bite, if he wants to be a gentleman and offer me one, okay.

Puds just keeping on eating the apple to himself without seeming to care if he was a gentleman or not, and I thought, He dont need to think I'm going to lower myself by asking, he knows darn well I gave him a bite the last apple I had, so if he's going to be a bum sport, that's his funerel.

And I said, That's a pretty big apple you're eating.

Just saying it for conversation, and Puds said, It was a lot bigger when I started it.

It'll be a lot smaller when you finish it, I said.

Being a good answer, and I thought, Oh well, maybe he's going to surprise me by saving me the core, and if it's a big core, okay, but if it's nothing but the seeds hanging together he can go to the dooce and I wont even take it.

And I said, Are you going to eat that whole apple up by yourself?

Why, do you want a bite? Puds said. Why didn't you say so if you wanted a bite? he said, and I said, Who said I said I wanted a bite?

Okay, if you dont want a bite I'm not going to try to force you, Puds said, and I said, Who said I said I didn't want a bite? If you're going to sit there an claim I dont want a bite, go ahead, I said.

Well good night go ahead and take a bite, Puds said.

Which I did, taking an extra big one and proving being diplomatic is one of the best ways of staying independent.

HEPBURN AND NIXON RESIGN FROM OFFICE

Both Men State They Are Retiring To Their Farms

Nixon's Resignation Comes 18 Hours After Hepburn's Surprise Move

CONANT NOW PREMIER

His resignation came just about 18 hours after Mitchell F. Hepburn resigned as Premier and Mr. Conant succeeded him.

"I am going home to the farm but I am not going to resign my seat," said Mr. Nixon, who represents Brant riding in the Ontario Legislature.

"This time it sticks", Mr. Nixon told reporters, apparently referring to his resignation from the Ontario cabinet March 11, 1940, which he withdrew two days later.

Premier Conant declined comment on the resignation.

In his letter of resignation to the new premier, Mr. Nixon explained that "in order to facilitate any cabinet reorganization you may be contemplating I hasten to submit this as my resignation from your cabinet. Please consider it final."

Shortly after Mr. Nixon's resignation went to the premier's office Hon. Farquhar Oliver, Minister of Public Works, went in for an interview with the new leader. As he left the office later he appeared visibly moved.

A newsman suggested to him that "public opinion is that you will follow Mr. Nixon and resign."

He replied: "Public opinion is sometimes correct."

Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, when told of Mr. Nixon's resignation simply said: "If I am invited to remain I will be glad to do so."

Text of Letter

Text of Mr. Nixon's letter of resignation follows:

First, let me congratulate you on the high office to which you have attained.

In order to facilitate any cabinet reorganization you may be contemplating, I hasten to submit this as my resignation from your government. Please consider it final.

As you know, I have not been happy in my position in the cabinet for many months and nothing but my highest personal regard for Mr. Hepburn and many years of friendly association with him in opposition and in government would ever have induced me to stay, differing as I did so completely from him and from you in my attitude towards the Federal government in the conduct of the war (an issue on which I, probably with cause, felt more deeply than any other). This was probably a mistake as the situation continually intruded itself into provincial administration and caused embarrassment to all concerned.

Another phase of government on which I held strong convictions comes to issue in that we have this month reached the end of the mandate given Mr. Hepburn in October 1937. I would not object to the Prime Minister, who received the great popular support he did, extending his term for a brief period under a critical war condition, but it seems to me it is stretching our democratic system of responsible government too far for another, who may not enjoy this measure of public confidence, to do so.

Refers to Consistency

In any case it has not worked out well in the past, and the Hearst, Meighen and Henry governments went out of office under similar conditions, all of which I criticized at the time and on two occasions took office on the treasury bench. I think my people are entitled to this much consistency from him.

I would like to make my position clear on just one other phase of the situation in closing. To me the premiership of Ontario and the leadership of the Liberal Party is too sacred a trust and too vitally important to be so casually given or received, notwithstanding the personal wishes of the two people immediately concerned. The voters themselves, the party, the elected representatives who are expected to support the government in office and cabinet colleagues are entitled to be consulted, and having on more than one occasion refused the offer under similar circumstances, I cannot be a party to it now.

HIS CAREER

Toronto, Oct. 22—(CP)—Mitchell Hepburn, climaxing a turbulent career with a dramatic resignation as Liberal premier of Ontario, moved to the political sidelines today, giving no exact reason for his sudden action and leaving his future obscure.

The 46-year-old Premier, outspoken critic of the Mackenzie King Government, handed his resignation to Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews last night, saying only that "it has not been my desire to seek a third term of office" and that he urged his cabinet a year ago to select his successor.

He recommended that Attorney-General Gordon D. Conant, 57, succeed him and a few minutes later Mr. Conant became Ontario's 12th premier since Confederation. Reorganization of the cabinet was indicated in the new premier's statement that "the entire personnel of the new government will be announced in a few days." He will continue for the present as attorney-general.

Mr. Hepburn will remain as provincial treasurer, a post he held along with the premiership, "for a short time." He said "after that I will retire from public life." adding he would live on his 600-acre farm near St. Thomas, Ont.

U.S. Lets Contract For Full-Sized 'Seamobile'

Washington, Oct. 22 — (AP) — Lend-lease administrator E. R. Stettinius, Jr., announced today a contract had been let for construction of the first full-size "seamobile," — the re-designed gasoline-driven ship formerly called the sea otter". The contract was awarded to the United States Shipbuilding Corporation at Yonkers, N. Y.

The sea otter has been a source of controversy in high government and shipbuilding circles for over a year, one side contending it was the answer to the submarine and the other that the vessel was wholly impracticable.

Stettinius revealed that one important change in the design of the ship had been to move the propellers from the middle of the keel to the stern. No other details were given.

Empire's Greatest Flying Ace of Que. Awarded 4 Decorations in 4 Months

London, Oct. 22—(CP CABLE)—Immediate award of the distinguished service order to Pilot Officer George Beurling who has risen to be one of the Empire's greatest flying aces and star defender of the George Cross Island of Malta in four months, was announced today by the middle east headquarters of the R. A. F.

The latest award made the 20-year-old flaxen-haired spitfire pilot from Verdun, Que., one of Canada's most decorated airmen of this war. Since July, when he arrived in Malta from Britain as a sergeant, he has been decorated four times and has been commissioned. He holds the Distinguished Flying Cross and Distinguished Flying Medal and Bar.

The new award brought the irrepressible "skewball" who is in hospital with a heel wound suffered Oct. 15 into the select company of the missing Wing Cmdr. John J. (Moose) Fulton, D. S. O., D. F. C., A. F. C., of Kamloops, B. C., and Wing-Cmdr. J. A. Kent, D. F. C., and Bar, A. F. C., of Winnipeg who also holds the Virtuti Militari, Poland's award for gallantry. These three are Canada's most decorated airmen of this war.

Beurling's trio of multiple victories at Malta, the latest of them Oct. 15 when he shot down a bomber and two fighters before being wounded and forced to bail out of his damaged spitfire, ranked him with the greatest fighter aces of the R. A. F.—Tuck, Malan, Finucane.

The story of the lanky young Canadian is one of the most amazing of the war. Before he went to Malta he was an "unknown" in an R. C. A. F flight commanded by Flt.-Lt. Brad Walker, D. F. C., of London, Ont., who knew him as "a real flying fool who would try anything."

Beurling had destroyed two aircraft over northern France, and Walker once told him his unusual flying tactics would bring him either the Victoria Cross or an abrupt end of his career. When Beurling destroyed four Axis fighters at Malta last July 27 Walker's terse comment was: "It looks like the V. C."

The blue skies of the Mediterranean suited Beurling's easygoing temperament. Almost at once he began to eat big holes in the Axis airforces and his decorations began to pile up as he gradually raised his score to 29, where it now stands. In addition he has a third share in another, two probables, six damaged.

His record of four decorations and a commission in four months is believed unequalled in the R. A. F., in which he enlisted after crossing in a cattleboat from Canada.

When Beurling was awarded the the D.F.C., he has shot down disclosed he had destroyed 19 aircraft in less than 100 hours of operational flying. Since he won the D. F. C. He was shot down six hostile aircraft, three on each of two flights on succeeding days in the intensified battle of Malta.

VICTORY LOAN THREE-DAY TOTAL HITS$139,084,250

INDUSTRIAL BUYING

Ottawa, Oct. 22 (CP).—Wednesday's subscriptions to Canada's third Victory Loan totalled $46,449,950, raising the total for the first three days of the three-week campaign to $139,084,250, national loan headquarters announced today.

The three-day total was $14,508,000 higher than the cumulative total for the same three days of last February's second Victory Loan drive, when $124,576,250 was subscribed.

Nominal objective of the spring campaign was $600,000,000 whereas this time it is $750,000,000.

Tuesday's sales fell slightly below the $41,700,000 daily average needed if the objective of the third Victory Loan is to be attained in the 18 business days before the campaign ends Nov. 7, but on Wednesday the sales were almost $5,000,000 above the required daily figure.

Daily average of subscriptions for the first three days of the current campaign was a trifle over $46,361,000.

Among yesterday's large subscriptions were $6,000,000 from Confederation Life Association of Toronto and $4,000,000 from Dominion Life Assurance Co. of Waterloo, Ont.

Bell Telephone Co. of Canada subscribed $2,000,000 at Montreal, and Winnipeg Electric Railway Co. subscribed $1,000,000; British American Oil Co. Ltd., Toronto, $1,500,000; North American Cyanamid Ltd., Niagara Falls, Ont., $1,500,000; and Canadian Kodak Ltd., Mount Dennis, Ont., $1,000,000.

Objective Exceeded.

The objective set for employees of Mercury Mills at Hamilton, was increased by 30 per cent above the quota in the last loan, but the employees exceeded this higher objective in less than three hours, and without calling on the night shift whose returns will be made later.

Employees of A. C. Wickham (Canada) of Etobicoke, a Toronto suburb, passed their objective of $5,000 so rapidly that they raised their sights to $8,000. They raised $6,400 among the night shift workers alone.

The town of Warwick, Que., reported oversubscription of its $45,000 quota.

"New Canadians have been responding with a will," said loan headquarters. Lawrence Sapiano, a

Some Hampdens Converted by Britain Into Torpedo Planes

London, Oct. 22 (CP)—The first disclosure that Britain has converted some of her twin-engined Hampden medium bombers into torpedo planes was given by the Air Ministry today in a communique which said that one, on patrol with the coastal command yesterday, scored a hit on an enemy supply ship off the Norwegian coast.

Hampdens had been used in minelaying operations and modifications were necessary to make them efficient long-distance torpedo bombers.

As a bomber, they had a speed of 265 miles an hour and a range of 1,725 miles, carried a crew of four and were armed with three gun positions.

CHILE APPOINTS CABINET CLOSER TO ALLIED POLICY

3 NAZIS ARRESTED

Santiago, Chile, Oct. 22—(AP)—Ajaoquin Fernandez, Chilean Ambassador to Uruguay, accepted today the post of foreign minister after German Riesco, who previously had accepted, declined the office a few hours before he had been expected to be sworn in.

Francisco Solar, radical, who was sworn in as Minister of Commerce last night, resigned after the central governing board of his party refused him permission to accept the post and Gen. Foilan Arraiagada was chosen to replace him.

Fernandez, the new Foreign Minister, succeeded Ernesto Barros Jarpa, chief advocate of continuing relations with Germany, Italy and Japan, as a result of a cabinet shake-up which had been widely demanded by pro-democratic groups.

There was no definite indication of an immediate change in international policy, but reappointment of Interior Minister Paul Morales, radical party member who initiated police measures against German espionage, is regarded by observers as significant.

GERMANS USING BOUNCING BOMB

Nazi Raiders Bomb and Machine-Gun Town in Southeast England

London, Oct. 22—(CP)—German air raiders bombed and machine-gunned a southeast coast town at dawn today, causing an undetermined number of casualties and extensive property damage.

Streets were littered with wreckage and rubble left by the bombs of the raiders who swooped in just above the water. Several direct hits were scored on homes and business properties and a number of persons were trapped.

The press association said persons who saw today's raid reported that the Germans used a bouncing bomb.

One bomb which landed on a beach was said to have bounced over waterfront dwellings and struck a house on a side street several hundred yards away. Other bombs, it was said, hit a street and bounced 200 yards over a row of cottages.

FRANCE'S SECRET PRESS CAMPAIGNS AGAINST DRAFT

Assume Leadership to Defy Conscription of Labor for Germany

SITUATION GRAVE

By THOMAS F. HAWKINS
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berne, Switzerland, Oct. 22—(AP)—Editors of newspapers printed and circulated secretly in unoccupied France were reported today to be assuming the leadership in a campaign to defy conscription of labor for Germany.

Their work, more than any other underground activity, appeared to have a chance of co-ordinating individual resentment against the conscription issue which, the Vichy correspondent of the Neue Zuercher Zeitung said, really involved "a decision for or against collaboration with Germany."

"This secret press has succeeded in realizing a unity of attitude among the people," declared the Berner Tagwacht in a dispatch from Lyons.

Sources here assert it appears clear that Germany is determined to take French workers by compulsion if Pierre Laval fails to supply them in adequate numbers by Nov. 1, and foreign observers believe from the tone of Laval's speech at Vichy two days ago that he himself is not optimistic of success. could be expected.

Probable Some U.S. Fliers In Tokyo Raid Taken

Washington, Oct. 22—(AP)—War Secretary Henry Stimson said today it was possible that some of the American fliers who took part in the April 18 raid on Tokyo had been forced down after leaving Japan and had been captured by the Japanese.

Discussing the planes which raided Japan, Stimson said: "One was interned in Russia. Several others were involved in forced landings in China. A very few of these planes are carried as missing."

Stimson said the names in Japanese propaganda broadcasts "fairly well correspond" with those of army air men long carried on army records as "missing." Stimson told his press conference that the War Department had no reports other than those by the Japanese radio that the men had been subjected to trial.

"Our flyers who attacked Tokyo were instructed to attack only military objectives, and our reports are that they did so with remarkable accuracy," Stimson said.

"We abide by the Geneva convention governing the conduct of war and we expect our enemies to do the same.

"We are very loath to believe Japan is going to violate those rules.

"We have allowed the Red Cross to inspect the condition of all Japanese prisoners held by us and are making every effort to see that the rules of the Geneva convention and the rules of humanity are carried out."

2 U.S. DESTROYERS LOST IN PACIFIC; ALLIES RETALIATE

Enemy Cruiser And Destroyer Damaged Also Twelve Planes Shot Down

JAPS LOSE IN NEW GUINEA

By JOHN W. WIGGINS
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Oct. 22 — (AP) — Allied and Japanese forces counted mounting losses in the battle of the Southwestern Pacific today as planes and ships of both sides jockeyed for positions to throw decisive blows.

In the Solomon Islands where a major naval war may be touched off at any hour, the United States lost two destroyers, the O'Brien and the Meredith. American planes retaliated by damaging an enemy cruiser and a destroyer and shooting down 12 Japanese planes.

Westward of the Solomons, Allied heavy bombers blasted at enemy ships in New Britain's harbor of Rabaul causing fires and explosions. More fires were started on the Rabaul airdrome, by bombs dropped by Allied fliers from the Australian command. Another raid inflicted serious damage on Japanese-occupied Maobisse in Timor, north of Port Darwin.

Attempt Backfires

Meantime, the Japanese backfiring attempt to grab Port Moresby in New Guinea suffered another setback as Australian troops swept on the foe's flank in the Owen Stanley Mountains and forced a retreat, Allied headquarters reported today (Australian time.)

A spokesman said greater numbers of troops are engaged on both sides and the Japanese might be making a last stand before backing nine miles north to Kokoda, midway of Moresby and the enemy's Buna invasion base.

Germany Tightens Grip on Norway

Berne, Oct. 22 — (AP) — Germany, tightening her grip on Norway, apparently is extending the Reich's "protection" to the Kingdom, the Swiss telegraph agency reported today from Copenhagen. It cited an order to Norwegian Nationals in Denmark, whose interests have been in the hands of Swedish Consuls, henceforth to report to German Consuls.

(This might mean Norway is to be reduced to the status of Bohemia-Moravia, made a protectorate after Hitler's absorption of most of Czecho-Slovakia.)

Dispatches from Stockholm said Nazi authorities in Norway had declared the greater part of the Tomsoe area on the far Northwestern coast and the Northern part of the Nordland province, which borders on Sweden, a forbidden zone. This was said to be part of an effort to stop escapes of prisoners of war and Norwegian civilians. Nazi troops along the Norwegian-Swedish frontier were reported under orders to shoot anyone trying to cross.

Axis Subs Meeting Stiff Resistance, 145 Attacks Made on Them in Sept.

By The Associated Press

The number of Allied and neutral ship victims of Axis submarines in the Western Atlantic passed the 500 mark — to 501 — Wednesday with Washington announcements of the sinkings of an American merchantman in the North Atlantic and a Panamanian vessel off the Northern coast of South America.

A tabulation of announced Allied and neutral Western Atlantic marine losses since the United States entered the war showed that approximately 3,400 crew members and passengers lost their lives in the torpedoings, at least 1,950 persons were missing, but that 15,462 others were rescued and safely landed at Allied ports.

Ship captains shared the fate of their crews. Sixty-one are known war casualties, including 12 taken prisoner aboard Axis raiders between June and August of this year.

Based on announced sinkings, June was the costliest month of the war for the United Nations, with 111 cargo carriers reported sunk. Losses since then have decreased sharply, with 48 during August, 14 in September and only five thus far this month.

Additional signs that Axis submarines are meeting stiff resistance were shown in British announcements that 530 enemy undersea craft have been sunk or damaged since the outbreak of war. More than 145 destroyer, corvette and plane attacks scored on German submarines last month alone.

Soviet Troops Retake Several Buildings in Industrial Area of Stalingrad

WEATHER TURNS COLD

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Moscow, Oct. 22 (AP)—Snow swirled across the steppes of the Don Volga corridor today as the Russians announced recapture of several buildings within the industrial area of northern Stalingrad and a major trench raid northwest of the city in which more than 200 Germans were killed.

Winter was starting to grip Russia's greatest battlefield of 1942. The steppes were converted into muddy bogs.

A Pravda dispatch reported an abrupt shift in the weather, with dry warmth suddenly succeeded by rain, a cold wave and the first snowfall of the season.

Whether the snow had reached Stalingrad was not apparent, but a Red Star dispatch said rains and high winds apparently forerunners of the steppes storm—hampered enemy movements there.

Russian seizure of the initiative in the northern suburbs was reported to have come at a time when the Nazi offensive was slackening to attacks in restricted sectors. All assaults at the two principal points of combat, near a north side factory and a workers' settlement, were reported repulsed.

Driven From Important Hill

Izvestia said a Russian counter-attack outside Stalingrad had driven the Germans from an important hill overlooking the city. Another height was declared captured through a Red army flanking manoeuvre, which over-ran two Nazi defence lines.

The noon communique announced that Soviet troops had broken into German entrenchments northwest of the city and had killed more than 200 Germans in hand-to-hand fighting.

The diminished attacks upon Stalingrad were said to have been initiated from the west, against Red army lines formed through the factory yards, and from the north.

Pravada said the Germans still held numerical superiority, sometimes putting twice as many men as the Russians into action. The Russians were said to have adopted the classical round defence at individual points where the enemy hit hardest.

Deep snow fell in the mountains of the Cascasus, where the Germans have bogged down in the two main sectors, the district of Mozdok and southeast of Novorossisk.

Vichy, Oct. 22 — (AP) — Admiral Jean Darlan, broadcasting at Dakar, told the inhabitants of France's West African naval base today that "New dangers are hanging over you."

FLYING FORTRESS CREWS REPORT HEAVY DAMAGE

Smashing Assault Carried Out On German Sub Base At St. Lorient

BARGES STRAFED

London, Oct. 22 (CP). — Nine enemy fighters were destroyed in yesterday's raid on the German submarine base at Lorient, France, by United States Flying Fortresses and their accompanying squadrons of R.C.A.F. and R.A.F. fighters, it was announced today.

All the fighter planes returned safely but three Fortresses are missing.

An announcement by the U.S. Army Air Forces said formations of German Focke-Wulf 190's met the attacking forces as they crossed the enemy coast on their way to the target and a running fight continued until the planes neared their objective.

Both transmitters of the German-controlled Hilversum radio in Holland went off the air between 1 and 3.30 p.m. today, the Netherlands News Agency said, indicating that allied planes might be in the region. Hilversum, in central Holland, is in an area recently hard-hit by the Allies in blows against Nazi rail and water transport in the Netherlands.

An earlier communique on the Fortress raid had said only that direct bomb hits were scored on the target, but reports broadcast by the Vichy radio indicated that the raid had had a devastating effect.

The airdrome at Maupertus, near Cherbourg, from which Nazi aircraft work in co-operation with the submarines, was a secondary target of the fortresses, three of which are missing.

R.A.F.-R.C.A.F. fighter planes provided the four-motored bombers with protection during the raid. Three R.C.A.F. squadrons were numbered among the escort. All fighter planes returned safely.

Factory Strafed

While they were busy over Northern France Mustang fighters of the R.A.F. made a hedge-hopping attack on objectives in western Germany. The speedy fighters, which flew approximately 600 miles in the sweep, strafed barges in the Dortmund-Ems Canal, surprised the defences at Lathen in Hanover province and strafed a factory and gas tank there.

THREE CHARGES OF THEFT LAID

Edgar McCabe Alleged to Have Entered Building by Coal Chute

Held on charges of breaking, entering and theft, Edgar McCabe, 147 Pinnacle St., was lodged in the county jail here yesterday after being apprehended early Wednesday morning. McCabe is facing three charges of entering the National Billiard rooms and stealing therefrom. He was a part-time employee of the billiard room, police were told.

Early Wednesday morning while patrolling his beat, P. C. Wright observed the form of a person inside the National Billiard Rooms. After assuring himself that the front doors were secured, P. C. Wright proceeded to the rear of the building to ascertain how entrance might have been gained. While the officer was examining the rear entrances the intruder escaped from the building by means of crawling out the coal chute to Front St. The officer observed him and gave chase, apprehending McCabe on Pinnacle St. At the police station McCabe was found to be in possession of a quantity of cigarettes, lighters, razor blades and $3.60 in cash.

After questioning Chief Probert preferred three charges against McCabe and held him in custody. Police allege McCabe has entered the building through the Front St. coal chute on previous occasions, leaving by the same means.

37 Belleville Boys Now Overseas Thank Kinsmen

The personal thanks of 37 Belleville boys serving overseas was received by the Kinsmen Fag Fund this week, all expressing thanks for shipments of smokes recently received through the medium of the fund. In every acknowledgment the recipient urged the Kinsmen and citizens of Belleville to continue the provision of cigarettes, which are vitally needed to keep the morale of the troops at the maximum.

"It is great to know one has such splendid friends at home, those, who never forget," wrote W. B. Royle. "It's grand to receive these precious parcels every once in a while," assured G. H. Ritson. "The best of luck to the Kinsmen of Belleville in their endeavours," wrote Mel Donaldson. "I was only here a few weeks when I received your cigarettes," stated A. Bridge. "There's nothing like Canadian cigarettes," assured Tom Hallam, while others to acknowledge shipments of 300 fags each included Doug Frink, Rod Mitchell, J. C. Lundberg, Jim Matthews, James Hall and others.

Belleville boys sent shipments of 300 cigarettes each this week included:

Pageant Producer Denies Allegation

Montreal, Oct. 22—(CP)—Rene Deguerre, head of the fighting French in Canada, said in a statement last night that France and his movement had been insulted at a victory loan pageant at the forum here Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

Mr. Deguerre claimed that the fighting French group had been ignored when spotlight was turned on each of their international parties represented at the pageant, and added that the Marseillaise had not been played the second night.

Sidney Tapley, producer of the pageant for the National War Finance Committee, said that the Marseillaise had been played both nights, and that the fighting French had been represented in the performance by a special tableau and by choral work.

CAMDEN N.J. PREPARES FOR RAIDS

Here is one city which believes in preparedness. It is Camden, N.J. and pictured ABOVE are some of its residents as they boarded one of the many ferries which carried them further inland to safer areas, in a mass evacuation test. Over four thousand residents were evacuated by river craft in the test, which was the first of its kind attempted in the United States.

Guns on Victoria Park and Armouries Lawn Furnish 9½ Tons of Salvage

Cheer up, little cannon don't you cry,
You'll be Bren guns, bye and bye.

The above, perhaps can be taken as a poetical farewell to the obsolete pair of cannon that formerly graced the point of Victoria Park and the etwo German captive guns that adorned the lawn in front of the west door of the Amouries here.

Figurately speaking, the four weapons, representing nine and one-half tons of metal have been "conscripted" and now lie in the local salvage dump awaiting their turn to be transformed into ships, guns, planes and tanks.

The job of removing the more or less ancient weapons, whose days of military usefulness and incidentally mechanical or other beauty have long passed, was completed yesterday under the supervision of Salvage Committee Chairman Clarence Clapp.

The amount of metal contained in the guns amazed salvage officials. The two cannon from the park weighed 5,670 pounds or nearly three tons, while the large German howitzer from the Armouries tipped the scales at 4,960 pounds and the smaller gun 2,700 pounds.

Orders were received recently from government authorities to salvage the weapons and the salvage people immediately went into action.

It might be noted that there is sufficient metal in the four weapons to provide enough steel for 950 Bren guns or 3,166 Reising light automatic carbine rifles.

Trenton Air Station Offers Fine Program for Open House, Saturday

In conjunction with other air stations of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, the Trenton Station has planned a fine program for the "open house" ceremonies which take place next Saturday in connection with the current Victory Loan campaign.

Sqdn. Ldr. A. N. Nunn, officer in charge of the Open House program announced today that the station will be thrown open to the public from 2 to 5 p.m. on Saturday. Visitors will be accorded a genuine welcome and will be invited to see Canada's future fliers in all phases of their intensive training, as far as the station is concerned.

The day's program will not interfere with the training syllabus of the station, except perhaps that the airmen will be performing their duties under the eyes of the general public. Tours of the station have been arranged with courteous airmen guides in attendance. The public will be shown every part of the station including airmen's mess and sleeping accommodations, disciplinary training, flying and other forms of training.

A fine sports program has been arranged including swimming exhibitions, basketball, soccer and rugby. There will also be a station band concert.

Air Commodore F. S. McGill, officer commanding and his staff extend a cordial welcome to the general public to visit the Trenton Air Station next Saturday.

Goebbels Admits Damage in West

Berlin, (From German Broadcasts), Oct. 22 —(AP)— Propaganda Minister Goebbels acknowledged damage from Allied attacks in the west in an address yesterday at Gdynia, but asserted "we are winning decisive victories in the east," a Transocean News Agency dispatch said today.

The despatch reported that Goebbels, making his first speech at the conquered Polish port, said "we shall continue the war in the east until the Bolshevist power will have been finally broken."

He charged that Britain had started barbaric warfare and air attacks in open towns in stating that "we have had wounds inflicted upon us in the west. He said Germany maintained the initiative and stood on "secure military ground."

Air Vice-Marshal Johnson Warmly Commends Clinic

Officials and staff personnel as well as volunteer workers at the Red Cross Blood Donor Clinic at Kiwanis Centre here, heard warm words of commendation and praise Tuesday night when Air Vice Marshal G. O. Johnston, M. C. Royal Canadian Air Force inspected the clinic and witnessed its procedures.

The high ranking air officer was present when one hundred and five members of the personnel of No. 5 I. T. S. gave their blood to the clinic. In a few brief remarks, Air Marshal Johnson paid a distinct compliment to the organization of the clinic and the splendid work it was doing in furtherance of the Empire's war effort.

The clinic of 105 donors was the largest held since the inception of this phase of war work here, and the staff and personnel worked long into the night at their various duties in connection with the work.

While much has been said about donors and the need of blood, the staff and volunteer assistants without whom the clinic could not function, have been going quietly about their duties unheralded and unsung. Quietly, efficiently they form very necessary cogs in the wheel of blood plasma production, and perform their sometimes arduous duties without whimper or complaint.

This is general of the entire personnel of the clinic, from its head to the charwomen who sometimes work into the small hours of the morning getting ready for the next day's procedure. Red Cross nurses, registered nurses, volunteer workers of the Red Cross, the cleaning staff and the many women's organizations of the city who are contributing in no small way to the success of the clinic are well worthy of commendation for the untiring efforts they contribute each week.

Trenton and District

Trenton, (Special)—Trentonians were delighted to see the picture of Leading Aircraftman Cooney of the R.C.A.F., in the Montreal Standard Oct. 17th issue. Cooney was shown with a group of comrades holding the reins of a camel somewhere in Egypt, serving with the R.A.F. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Cooney of Cedar St., Trenton and attended College St. School before enlisting as a mechanic in the R.C.A.F.

Loan Sales Increase

The third day of Trenton's Victory Loan saw a decided increase in sales. One of the foremost bonds of the day was sold to a sailor of many years' standing whose ship had recently been torpedoed in the St. Lawrence River. This gentleman, like all others in the service, knows full well the importance of giving to the forces the important tools with which to finish the job.

The local industries are all busy with their quotas and already one or two have gone over the top, while all the others are well on the way.

49 More Names Of Hong Kong Prisoners Announced

Ottawa, Oct. 22—(CP)—Names of 49 non-commissioned officers and men of the Winnipeg Grenadiers taken prisoners of war at Hong Kong were announced today by the National Defence Department.

The latest list of Hong Kong prisoners brought the total officially reported from Tokyo through the International Red Cross to 734. Canadians with the Grenadiers at Hong Kong in a battle which lasted from Dec. 7 to Dec. 25 last year were the Royal Rifles of Canada, a Quebec unit, and a brigade headquarters. It is expected that lists of members of these units who are prisoners will follow the Grenadier lists.

BRITAIN SHORT OF WOOLLEN GOODS

London, Oct. 22 (CP)—Hugh Dalton, Minister of Economic Warfare, said today many Britons will have to go without new winter clothing this year because large shipments of woollen garments—exceeding last year's 500,000 blankets and 400,000 woollen garments—are being shipped to Russia.

This photo taken in the Vancouver, Washington, shipyards of the Kaiser Shipbuilding Corp., shows just how the men under Henry Kaiser are able to launch Liberty ships in 10 days. One of the secrets now out of the bag is moving the whole superstructure in place at once. The superstructure is complete to the minute detail of electric light bulbs and is moved into place on huge sliding cranes. The superstructure weighs 165 tons.

Charlie Chaplin, famed screen comic, plans to scrap the celebrated "cookie duster" mustache, baggy trousers, wobbly walking stick and enormous shoes in making his next picture, "Lady Killer," a satire on the mythical Bluebeard. Chaplin says his new film mustache will be "pretty" and of the "French variety," though he isn't certain what it will look like. Noted Traveller Dies by Accident

Somewhere in New Guinea, Oct. 21—(Delayed)—(AP)—Lieut. Bruce Fahnestock, widely known for his travels in South Pacific waters before the war, was killed accidentally several days ago in New Guinea, it was announced today. Fahnestock, who had made many exploration trips with his brother, Sheridan, died as a result of the same accident which took the life of Byron Darnton, New York Times war correspondent. Details of the mishap have not yet been revealed.

Bruce Fahnestock, Jr., and his brother Sheridan, of Hartford, Conn., sons of an inventor of railway equipment, set out with four others from New York, Dec. 31, 1934, in the 65-foot schooner Discovery for a voyage of research and collection of scientific material in the South Seas.

They returned nearly three years later with what they believed was a clue to a lost world in the Pacific Ocean — the discovery of Swastika-like symbols carved four inches deep on the face of a 40-ton Monolith in the Fiji Islands.

There is nothing in the present culture of the Fiji Islanders to explain the symbols or the skill and tools with which the Monolith was carved.

RUDOLF HESS AGAIN THRUST INTO PUBLIC EYE

Question of Reason for Flight by Hitler's Former Deputy is Revived

MYSTERY REMAINS

(By WILLIAM KING)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 22 (AP) — The pointed Russian suggestion that Rudolf Hess be placed on trial immediately has thrust again into the public mind the man who once was Hitler's deputy and now is a prisoner somewhere in the British Empire.

The Russian foreign commissar, Vyacheslav Molotov, in a communication to a number of governments-in-London, approved the trial and punishment of Nazis who ordered mass murders and oppressed conquered peoples, and named Hess specifically as one to be brought to justice. The Russian statement further advocated immediate trials of accused persons who fall into Allied hands in the course of the war.

British spokesmen hesitated to approve immediate trials, fearing that the Axis might retaliate by harming prisoners in the hands of the Germans, Italians and Japanese.

Hess' Wife

William Thorne, Labor member of the House of Commons, also brought the name of Hess' wife into the picture when he intimated in a question in parliament that she had asked to be allowed to join her husband.

A Pravda (Moscow) editorial commented subsequently:

"Certainly it is not accidental that the wife of Hess has published a message to some English representative requesting them to bring her to her husband. Evidently Frau Hess by no means regards her husband as a 'war prisoner'."

To this, Richard Law, under-secretary of State in the British foreign office, replied that no such request had been received from Frau Hess, that if it were, her request would be turned down since Hess definitely is considered by Britain to be a prisoner of war and not entitled to "such facilities."

Molotov's communication has revived old questions of why Hess made his mysterious flight to Scotland in 1941.

Mystery of Reason for Flight

It is a mystery that shows little prospect of being cleared up until the war is won. The nearest thing to an authoritative statement came January 27 of this year when Prime Minister Churchill — piqued at reports that Commons was in revolt against his government — told the House:—

"When Hess flew over here some months ago he firmly believed he had only to gain access to certain circles in this country to have what he described the 'Churchill clique' thrown out of power, and for a government to be set up which Hitler could negotiate a magnanimous peace."

That was all he said; no revelation of the terms that Hess might have been prepared to offer, no report of the conditions of the magnanimous peace."

Germany's Failure to Evaluate

It generally is understood in Britain today, however, that Hess' plan hinged on the attack which Hitler planned against Soviet Russia. Once more failing correctly to evaluate her enemy. Germany, it is believed, thought that Britain would listen to terms of a pease which had as its aim a subsequent drive to destroy the "Bolshevik menace" of the Soviet.

Britain was war-weary enough to accept superficially attractive peace terms, thought Germany, while inside Britain was a sizeable and influential group which feared Russian Communism more than Axis Fascism. What Germany did not know was that the average Briton could conceive of no outcome to the war except victory and that the anti-Red group was astute enough to see what the greatest danger to their Britain was from their traditional foe — Germany.

There is no authority for this explanation. Hess parachuted down in Scotland, May 12, 1941. Nazi Panzers moved against Russia June 22. The mere proximity of the dates gives credence to the story.

Flynn Facing Second Charge

Los Angeles, Oct. 22 (AP) — Less than a week after his arrest on a charge of raping Betty Hansen, 17-year-old soda jerker, at a party, actor Errol Flynn was accused of raping the 15-year-old daughter of a hotel chef.

Accompanied by Juvenile Officer R. W. Bowling, Peggy LaRue Satterle appeared at the District Attorney's office yesterday and swore to a complaint charging that the British-born actor raped her twice aboard his yacht Sirocco while on a moonlight cruise to nearby Catalina Island, August 3, 1941.

Flynn, recently divorced from Actress Lili Damita, was arrested Friday on a charge he raped Betty Hansen, of Lincoln, Neb., last September 27, at a swimming and drinking party at the fashionable Bel Air home of Fred Mcvoy, a wealthy British sportsman and former Olympic bobsled champion. He was released in $1,000 bail on that case pending preliminary hearing October 23.

Both charges were denied by Flynn.

Desired to Avoid Publicity

The day following the yachting party, records show the girl and her mother, Mrs. William Satterle appeared at the District Attorney's office. They discussed possible action against Flynn, but finally decided not to bring charges, as they desired to avoid publicity.

Following Flynn's recent arrest on charges preferred by Miss Hansen, police recalled the Satterle case and found Miss Satterle working in a Hollywood night club. Filing of her complaint against the actor, charging statutory rape, followed.

Through his attorney, Jerry Giesler, Flynn issued this statement in denying the latest charges:

"It is very strange that I am now charged with an alleged offence that supposedly took place more than a year ago. I recently became an American citizen and have absolute and abiding faith in American principles of justice. I am confident my innocence will be demonstrated in court beyond any doubt."

BACK-SEAT DRIVER SAVES HUSBAND

Minneapolis, Oct. 22 (AP) — Here's a back-seat driver who talked her husband out of trouble. Robert Birch was accused of going through a stop sign and when the charge was read in court, Mrs. Birch spoke up: "Your honor, I'm queen of the back-seat drivers, and I wouldn't let my husband violate a traffic law." The case was dismissed.

AIR POCKET IN EGG

Galt, Ont., Oct. 22 (CP).—Conservation of materials in wartime is all right as far as it goes, but there's a hen in Galt that's overdoing it. A housewife on Grand avenue cracked open an egg to find an air pocket where the yoke should be.

Greetings Exchanged On Trafalgar Day

By FRANK LOWE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Halifax, Oct. 22 — (CP) — The Royal Canadian Navy came of age on Wednesday when for the first time its hard-hitting fleet officially combined with the powerful Royal Navy to commemorate Britain's greatest naval victory, Trafalgar.

From the oak decks of Britain's naval shrine — Horatio Nelson's flagship Victory — to the oily, steel plates of a Canadian destroyer in Halinam harbor came greetings as part of the Royal Navy's Trafalgar Day observance.

No fuss marked the occasion. Fighting men doing a tough job in all parts of the world paused for a moment to exchange best wishes by radio, that's all.

Brief signals went from the Victory to British battlewagons in Malta, around Gibraltar, in the Indian Ocean, near Australia, in West Indian waters and to a trim, unidentified R. C. N. destroyer here, tired from a long convoy haul.

Back to the Victory flashed acknowledgments. And for 90 seconds the voices of a nameless Lieutenant Commander and a Canadian coxswain assured companions on other British ships they too were in the fight.

Halifax was the last to be greeted, but, as the commander reminded the Victory, "not the least." He could have added, had he time, that this old port also has its memories of Trafalgar.

On that day, in 1805, when Nelson's ships of the line crushed the French fleet, a Halifax man, Cmdr. John Houlton Marshall was First Lieutenant of H. M. S. Britannia.

Allied Planes Active Over Axis Supply Lines

Cairo, Oct. 22 (AP).—The R.A.F. hammered at advanced axis airdromes, supply dumps and communication lines in the desert yesterday, keeping the enemy air force on the defensive and shooting down three fighter planes, a communique announced today.

While the major aerial activity was centred over forward areas, long-range fighters also swept along the coastal road between Gambut and Sidi Barrani, strafing trucks bearing vital supplies of ammunition and gasoline to the front, the bulletin said.

These daylight activities followed up a night assault by R.A.F. bombers on the axis supply port of Tobruk and other targets in the enemy rear.

Three planes were lost in the course of all these operations.

Enemy activity over Malta yesterday was reported confined to fighter and fighter-bomber operations, during which one Italian plane was shot down by allied fighters without loss.

The United States Army Air Forces, in the first all-American bombing over the African desert, also kept the enemy' stransport lines and desert air bases under steady pressure yesterday with continued large scale light bomber and fighter attacks.

Previously United States fliers had carried out offensive operations over the North African land front in co-operation with R.A.F. bombing formations.

PRISON TERMS FOR BUND LEADERS

New York, Oct. 22—(AP) — 24 former German American Bund leaders, including Gerhard Wilhelm Kunze, national leader, were sentenced to five years in prison each for conspiring to counsel Bund members to evade the United States draft law.

Judge Alfred D. Barksdale said that in his opinion all of the defendants were guilty of "far worse than any tactical violation of the selective service law" and said that he would not impose fines because that might have the effect of causing their families to lose their homes.

Undr the conviction, each defendant could have been subject to a $10,000 fine.

Resignation Does Not Involve Cabinet

Toronto Oct. 22—(CP)—An Ontario Premier may resign his post without involving the resignation of his entire cabinet. When Premier Mitchell Hepburn resigned last night and Attorney-General Gordon Conant was sworn in to succeed him, the remainder of the cabinet was not affected, as it would have been in the case of the resignation of a federal Prime Minister.

C. F. Bulmer, clerk of the crown in chancery, explained there was a precedent in Ontario in the resignation of Premier G. H. Ferguson in 1930, when the latter was succeeded by Hon. G. S. Henry as premier without any other cabinet resignations.

FRANCE'S SECRET

A question thus was posed individually for every Frenchman — the most direct personal problem to arise since Laval took power as the chief of government in Vichy six months ago. The Tagwacht predicted that "energetic reactions"

The situation conceivably could become so critical as to compel the Axis to undertake occupation of the whole country, although conservative observers thought matters had not yet gone that far.

Laval May Visit Berlin

(In London a fighting French source predicted Germany would take over a big slice on unoccupied France to bring workers who refused to go to the Reich under Nazi control. Probably included, said this source, would be the whole industrial area between Lyons and Limoges extending southward at least to St. Etienne. He added that authoritative advices indicated Laval planned to visit Berlin within 48 hours to confer with high German authorities.)

At present the situation is this:-

Factory managers have received detailed instructions and quotas of the number of workers they are expected to supply. They have been advised that a French labor inspector and a German representative will visit them soon to arrange where the workers are to go and what they will be paid.

Refusal to comply, said the Tagwacht, means that "compulsory measures" will be invoked at once.

Newspapers leading the campaign of resistance, it is said, probably are read by several million persons. They include "Combat" which prints and distributes more than 100,000 copies twice monthly, "The Liberator" and half a dozen others.

Issue Put to People

The Tribune De Geneve said Laval had put the main issue squarely up to the French people themselves, telling them in effect they could go to work in Germany "or explain themselves to Germany herself, to her armed forces and her police."

The Berlin radio in a Paris dispatch reported Laval had summoned departmental prefects of the unoccupied zone to a meeting with cabinet officials yesterday afternoon at which he "made a comprehensive statement on the general situation and explained recent decisions made by the French government in political, social, economic and administrative respects."

"He also instructed the prefects," the broadcast said, "as to effective support to be given to the governments' policy in their departments.

NEVER RECEIVED PARCEL

Toronto, Oct. 22 (CP).—A year ago almost to the day, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Winkler had returned, unopened, Christmas parcel they had sent to Capt. Jacob Markowitz at a British base hospital in Malaya. Dr. Markowitz, a prisoner-of-war, never got the parcel, which travelled through Britain, Spain, Turkey, Malaya and Singapore.

CHILE APPOINTS

Crisis Develops Swiftly

The crisis developed swiftly after Barros protested a statement by United States Undersecretary of State, Sumner Welles, in Boston Oct. 8 that two American republics were being used as bases by Axis agents. Neither was named but, of all the American republics, only Argentina and Chile have not broken relations with the Axis powers.

Even as the new cabinet was being shaped yesterday, a throng estimated by police at 700 persons demonstrated before the United States Embassy and left a letter asking that Ambassador Claude G. Bowers explain Welles' charge. Several youths were arrested.

President Rios swore in 11 of the 12 members of his new cabinet last night. He issued a statement saying his purpose is to keep Chile on the side of all nations on the continent and to defend to the utmost "the great principles of territorial integrity and American solidarity."

Three Accused of Espionage

Santiago, Chile, Oct. 22 (AP) — Interior Minister Raul Morales today ordered anew the detention of three Germans accused of espionage after Magistrate Jose Arancibia had freed them of charges of secretly sending by radio information concerning ship movements.

Morales decreed that the three men be held on the island of Quiriquina, facing the military port of Talcahuano, until the end of the war.

At the same time, the minister ordered the search of homes of foreigners suspected of activities in favor of the Axis.

The magistrate had said the charges against the Germans, Alfred Kleiber, Ludwig Russ and Wilhelm Dorbach, could not be prosecuted under the law for internal security which Morales had invoked Oct. 7 when he ordered them arrested originally.

2 U.S. DESTROYERS

Announcing losses within the last few days of the 1,570-ton O'Brien and the 1,630-ton Meredith, the Navy said last night the personnel of the former were believed saved and many from the Meredith. Each carried a normal complement of 175 officers and men.

Continue Aerial Assault

The destroyer O'Brien, launched Oct. 20, 1937. The Meredith was launched April 24, 1940.

American planes continued the aerial assault on Japanese war vessels, meanwhile, and bombed enemy positions and ammunition dumps on Guadalcanal, where the United States grip on the island airbase is the focal point of an expected Japanese invasion attempt.

On the night of Oct. 19-20, the Navy added, Naval aircraft bombed a Japanese cruiser west of Guadalcanal. The vessel was damaged and stopped by at least one hit.

Near the same place the preceeding day, dive-bombers attacked three enemy destroyers, damaged one and shot down an enemy seaplane.

Japanese planes again sought out American positions on Guadalcanal, Oct. 19, but fighters shot down two enemy zero planes. One United States plane was lost.

Many Ships Observed

The following day 16 enemy bombers and a heavy escort which tailed a flight of 30 zeros in a raid on Guadalcanal, tangled with United States fighters. Two Japanese bombers and seven zeros were destroyed and two American planes were shot down.

Navy planes observed large numbers of enemy ships still in the northern Solomons, presumably awaiting an opening for a fight to retake the flying field on Guadalcanal. Other enemy vessels in the southern part of the islands are being attacked by American Air Forces, the Navy said.

Ground fighting on Guadalcanal between American troops and the Japanese in the northwestern area of the island was confined chiefly to skirmishing attacks for positions.

HEPBURN RESIGNS

Gave No Reason for Resignation

Mr. Hepburn, who won an international reputation for outspoken statement during eight years as head of the Ontario Government, gave no reason for his resignation except that he did not wish to remain in office for a third term.

His statement said that when action was instituted in the courts to compel his government to hold by-elections in six vacant constituencies, he did not think it fair to hand a new premier a miniature general election.

The recent judgment of the courts that they had no jurisdiction to order by-elections left the way open for him, Mr. Hepburn said, and he asked Mr. Conant to succeed him.

Remains a Liberal

When he was questioned last night about a rumor that he would attend the Conservative National Convention in Winnipeg in December Mr. Hepburn said: "Emphatically not. I am a Liberal and intend to remain one. What does a person have to do to be believed? I have issued a statement and I stand by it."

Told that some quarters had expressed belief he intended to lead an anti-King group in Federal politics, the former Premier said: "If people want to believe that, it is their privilege. I am still a critic of the King Government and I intend to remain one."

He indicated to newspapermen that he would retain his legislature seat for Elgin riding until the next Ontario election but would not contest it then. At its last session the legislature prolonged its life as a war measure for one year, until 1943.

The Premier's action carried out a determination he had often voiced since his government first was elected in 1934. A year later he said he would retire because of ill-health but he didn't. Since then bronchial trouble has often kept him away from his duties.

Speculation Follows

Speculation on the reason for Mr. Hepburn's sudden resignation, rumored for only a couple of hours before it became an actuality, followed quickly on the announcement.

Politically, the situation was complicated by the fact he asked Mr. Conant to succeed him. Liberal legislature members who clashed last season with Mr. Hepburn over his criticism of the Mackenzie King government had then favored Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon, senior cabinet minister and acting premier in Mr. Hepburn's absence.

It was evident from the surprise with which some cabinet ministers received last night's news that all had not been consulted. Mr. Hepburn said he gathered together on Tuesday all ministers he could reach and told them his decision.

Mr. Nixon could not be reached after the announcement and Highways Minister T. B. McQuesten and Labor Minister Peter Heenan told reporters they had no previous information. Speculation arose as to whether other members who were not consulted would enter the new ministry.

Nixon Refuses Leadership

Mr. Hepburn said last night that he had offered Mr. Nixon the premiership a year ago and again three months ago and that it had been refused.

Mr. Hepburn's statement that he would retire from public life led to the assumption he would retire as Ontario Liberal leader. Political circles believed a convention would he called to consider Mr. Conant's position.

Some political observers considered Mr. Hepburn's recent support of agitation for repeal of the Dominion's ban against the Communist Party might have figured in his resignation but there was nothing to confirm this supposition.

Recently he spoke at a public meeting attended by Tim Buck, the Communist Party's Canadian secretary who recently gave himself up to police and was released by the Federal authorities.

Coupled with speculation as to Mr. Hepburn's future was the question of whether the change in premiership presaged happier relations between the Ontario and Dominion Liberal governments.

In Ottawa 1926-34

"Mitch" Hepburn, a member of the Ottawa Commons under Prime Minister Mackenzie King from 1926 to 1934, became a bitter critic of the Ottawa Government in 1937 when he felt the Dominion administration had not supported his opposition to the strike of automobile workers at Oshawa.

He had campaigned for Mackenzie King in 1935 but sponsored a resolution in the legislature in January, 1940, condemning the Dominion Government's war effort. Threatening to resign, he forced the resolution through by a vote of 44 to 10, nine of his followers opposing him. A week later, Mr. King suddenly dissolved Parliament and went to the country, making it plain it was his answer to criticism, particularly that from the Ontario Legislature. He was returned with a record majority.

No change in relations between the Toronto and Ottawa governments apppeared in prospect, because Mr. Conant frequently has given public service to Mr. Hepburn's attitude towards the King administration.

Conant Supports Hepburn

In addition Premier Conant in the past has charged the Dominion with failure to provide adequate civilian defence and guarding of power and war production plants. He has been persistent in his criticism of Ottawa's manpower policy and has supported compulsory conscription for overseas service. He also has supported Mr. Hepburn in his Communist Party stand.

If Mr. Hepburn's resignation means his removal from the political scene, Canada will have lost its most colorful political figure to onion growing, the most important business on his farm.

A member of parliament at 30, leader of the Ontario Liberal Party at 34 and premier at 38, he brought into politics a youthful enthusiasm and disregard for precedent. His political showmanship provided the Dominion with some of its more hectic political moments.

He supported Canada's Conservative leader, Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, in the York South Federal by-election last February; was read out of the Dominion Liberal Party by a caucus of Ottawa Liberals a little more than a year ago; opposed the C.I.O. at Oshawa, and supported legislation promised for next session to guarantee Ontario workers the right to organize.

He has figured in international affairs, saying last February that the United States fleet was "in hiding" after the attack on Pearl Harbor. He was charged with breaking up the Dominion-Provincial conference in January, 1941, when he joined with Alberta and British Columbia against the Sirois Commission recommendations.

Since the war started he has criticized Ottawa at every opportunity for its war effort and at one time was reported considered joining his friend J. P. Bickell, Toronto financier, in England as an assistant to the then supplies minister, Lord Beaverbrook.

Looking over his spectacular career and considering his comparative youth, some political observers were inclined to doubt that he would long remain out of politics, whatever his present intention.

Prime Minister Smuts

From the lips of a great patriot, soldier and statesman, Field Marshal Jan C. Smuts, Prime Minister of South Africa, came words of wisdom on Wednesday when he spoke to members of the British Houses of Commons and Lords and the High Commissioners of the Dominions.

His address was trebly important because of the counsel he expressed on the war, the tribute he paid to the British Commonwealth of Nations as an ideal and fact, "this greatest human experiment in political organization, this proudest political structure of the time, this precedent and anticipation of what one hopes may be in store for human society in years to come," which is being tested as never institution was tested and is standing the test, and because of its being the first opportunity of millions of people in the Dominions and the United States of hearing one of the supreme statesmen of this age addressing the assembled members of the British Parliament.

Field Marshal Smuts is one of the leaders of men of the Empire with a great vision and a keen perception of the principles of liberty which have made the British Commonwealth of Nations possible. Of the Empire he said that it "remains the heart of the defence against the most terrible onslaught ever made on human rights and liberties," that it "stands unshaken by storms and setbacks," and that the people of Britain are the "real heroes of this epic, this world-wide drama to which I make my small tribute to their unbending, unbreakable spirit."

He declared the idle words about "the approaching breakup of the great world group we form" as "folly and ignorance." This "free and voluntary association," "this world-wide human co-operation" is "today holding together more successfully than ever before under the most searching test." The cohesion of this vast structure under the hardest hammer blows of fate is one of the wonders of the world.

His words in respect to the stoutness and might of Russian resistance to the enemy carried the highest praise. In Russia Hitler's armies "are bleeding to death," he said. With the experienced eye of the statesman he saw colossal mistakes of the enemy. He praised Mr. David Lloyd George, Prime Minister during the First Great War, for his "great historic leadership" and Mr. Churchill he called "the embodiment of the nation in one of the greatest moments of history." Eloquently he spoke of the war leading to the climax, "the stage is set for the last, the offensive phase of the war for the United Nations."

Prime Minister Smuts, a statesman of the first rank, who in the last war served in the war cabinet and now serves South Africa and the Commonwealth is a great figure, the proof of what "the free and voluntary system" means.

Prime Minister Churchill has the highest regard for the statesmanship and military genius of Marshal Smuts. These two great figures met recently after the conference in Moscow.

Sickness Doesn't Pay

Dr. Gordon Bates, director of the Health League for Canada, is authority for the statement that sickness costs the Dominion $300,000,000 a year and if to this is added the cost of postponable death the sum rises to nearly $1,000,000,000. Labor also loses $50,000,000 in wages through illness and industry's profits are cut $75,000,000 by the same cause, he said.

Cost of the administration of Canada outside of the war effort is about half a billion, but these losses in health are double this amount.

Counting loss through postponable deaths estimated by Dr. Bates, the average loss per individual is over eighty dollars, or over four hundred dollars a year per family of five.

Labor could very well do with the $50,000,000 which is lost yearly to the wages bill due to sickness. With the co-operation of individual and state much of this loss can surely be cut down. Loss through illness is one of those undesirable results — it not only means loss of money but of efficiency and in the long run loss of many of the amenities and comforts of life. There seems a clear course ahead in this respect.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

WRIT SARCASTIC

Replying in sarcastic strain to Life's "Open Letter to England," Hart Lyman Stebbins writes in the New York Herald Tribune that he would like to add these reflections to "profound and mature" observations which the letter contained:

O People of England, O People, O,
How could you be so dense
As to fail to see how it saddens me
That you fight in self-defence?

Since that perilous day three years ago
When, without consulting me,
You shouldered a gun and faced the Hun,
I have waited patiently.

(You must not mind my manner
Nor fear my wrath
Nor let these words lead to strife,
For I am a Man of Principle,
An Editor of L———.)

I have waited in vain for you to send
Your promise brave and true
That you've turned from the past, and at long, long last,
Are fighting for me, not you.

But now my patience is at an end,
The ideals for which I cry
Nor we here nor you know, but one thing we do know
Is O! What a good boy am I.

(Then cry out Hosanna,
Cut a swath,
Let your song with my praises be rife;
For I am a Man of Principle,
An Editor of L———.)

O People of England, when will you see
That we are the finest of races?
We've given you coats and over-age boats,
And all that you've given is bases.

Tra la dee da dee, UMP tee dee,
Get on now and win the war,
Or you may discover that I, once your lover,
Won't like you any more.

(Then fling out the banner,
Strew the path,
Strike up with drum and fife;
For I am a Man of Principle,
An Editor of L———.)

THIS SWIFTLY MOVING AGE

At least some one called it that. And recent events brought to the knowledge of this department would seem to bear out the truth of the statement. For instance, a hotel-keeper the other night informed us that the new beverage room glasses as set down by governmental standards disappeared from his suds department so quickly over the weekend that his waiters couldn't keep sufficient on the tables. In short, he lost one hundred and ninety via the under the table to the pocket system.

Again, a restaurateur told us that during the past month he has lost thirty-two sets of salt and pepper shakers to peoble who think that is open season every season on the seasoning holders.

Yet another told us that he had purchased thirty-two sets of cutlery, and within a period of six weeks fifteen of the sets are missing.

Right now some of the hotel keepers and restaurant owners are considering seriously of obtaining glasses with rubber bands attached so they will fly back to the table when the drinker is finished; salt and pepper shakers that are attached to the table with small chains, and knives and forks that have burglar alarms installed in the handles.

Yet another is considering a machine which will turn customers on their heads and, with a gentle vibratory movement, shake well before leaving so that any purloined articles would fall to the floor. Money, change and silver naturally would be returned to the owner, less the price of the meal.

Restaurant owners may be forced to set their tables in the near future without knives and forks for if the same number of people enter the eating places with cutlery in their pockets as there are leaving them thus encumbered, the cutlery won't be necessary.

All of which reminds us of the story of the minister at the annual picnic who discovered two sets of knives and forks left behind by some of his parishioners. "If C.N.R. and C.P.R. will call at the parsonage, they may get their silverware back," he announced the following Sunday.

LASTING PEACE

This is the hope which spurs us on:
That after the quarrels cease
And the soldiers and sailors home have gone
We shall fashion a lasting peace.

And what will be lasting peace you ask,
More than the freedoms four,
The right to toil at a chosen task
And an open schoolhouse door;

The right to utter a chosen creed,
Unhampered to live and die;
To a patch of ground in the spring to seed,
And the pride of a coat to buy?

That peace will come with one triumph more
As man's ultimate success,
When the poor of earth will be not so poor
And the rich be glad with less.

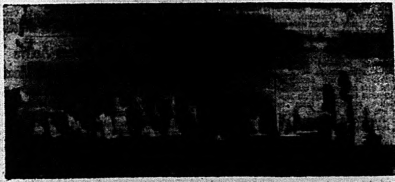
WHAT ALLIED SHIPS ARE UP AGAINST IN PACIFIC



These bomb splashes in the wake of an Australian cruiser, operating in the South Pacific, give some idea of what Allied ships are up against, when Jap planes get overhead. A formation of 18 Nip bombers attacked the Aussie warship during a naval engagement in the Solomons. Three of the Japs had been blasted down when this photo was made from the deck of the warship.

Whitehall Notebook

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 22 (CP)—The humor of Leonard Brockington, Ministry of Information adviser on loan from the Canadian government, was turned to good advantage when his chief, Brendan Bracken, inadvertently "put his foot in it" during an address in Glasgow.

The Scots are proud of their race and one of their constant complaints is against persons who refer to this island as "England" and to war accomplishments as "English."

With no intentional offence, this was what Bracken did during his speech until a cresendo of correction from his audience made the Minister employ a hesitating but politic use of Scotland where Scotland was meant.

Later in the meeting Brockington neatly turned the tables on the Scots by remarking upon Glasgow hospitality "which welcomed us with a 'British' mist and went on to regale us with (British) whisky."

Bracken, who put his foot into a trap that often snares visitors to Scotland, is neither an Englishman nor a Scotsman, but was born in Eire.

Woman Diplomat

The departure from tradition in naming Miss Mary Craig McGeachy, Canadian-born member of the economic warfare mission in Washington, as Britain's first woman diplomat was front-page news in nearly every London newspaper. Pictures of Miss McGeachy, who was born in Sarnia, Ont., and educated at University of Toronto, accompanied many of the reports of her elevation in status to the post of first secretary of the Embassy.

One London columnist, commenting on this extension of women's rights, reported humorously what he described as a "whisper" that "the name of 'Craig McGeachy' included in a proposed list for the Washington Embassy was accepted only because it was believed to be a man's."

There is no question, however, of any mistake, for Miss McGeachy's ability has long been recognized in government circles here.

"She is doing extraordinarily valuable work," said a foreign office spokesman, "and it is the custom to give diplomatic rank to those doing work of this kind."

Most pleased with Miss McGeachy's new status were the women members of parliament who have been pressing for a long time for such recognition for their sex.

"The whole field of diplomacy now is open to women," said Thelma Cazalet, one of the leaders of the movement. "The admission of Miss McGeachy to temporary diplomatic status is an immense step forward."

Miss Cazalet, who has met Britain's first woman diplomat many times, described her as "able and brilliant and a grand woman."

"No one could do the job more efficiently," she said. "Being a Canadian, she is particularly well able to understand the American point of view."

Back to Bracken — It's a rare occasion when someone silences this quick-witted minister, but it happened recently during a Commons debate. The M. O. I. chief, asked whether he was satisfied with co-ordination of Allied propaganda, raised a laugh when he said the word "satisfaction" had been expunged from the vocabulary of his ministry.

Sir Archibald Southby jumped up suddenly and asked: "Does the Right Honorable gentleman mean that the ministry of information neither gives nor receives satisfaction?"

Bracken swung around upon his heckler and members listened eagerly for a retort. His jaw worked noiselessly for a moment and he sat down, shaking his head . . .

On Sunday morning a London newspaper reported that Oliver Stanley, war secretary in the Chamberlain government, was returning to public life as successor to Lord Kindersley, president of the national savings committee. "Lord Kindersley's departure is notable," said the paper. Sunday afternoon Lord Kindersley announced: "I have not the faintest intention of resigning the presidency. It has never been discussed, nor even thought of." No political rumor bubble ever burst more quickly . . . .

Postscript

Lord Winster's comment on the attack Lord Lovat and other peers recently directed against Lord Strabolgi in the House of Lords for statements about British army leadership made in a magazine article: "I always thought that pheasant shooting began Oct. 1, but my colleagues apparently believe it was the start of the cub-hunting season."

Newest Notes of Science

To make it as vibrationless as possible a new Swedish motor driven deep sea surveying vessel has been fitted with a propeller having hydraulically operated, adjustable blades.

Three-way electric wiring plugs have been invented with built in fuses for protection of small motors and to prevent the cutting out of an entire circuit when a blowout occurs.

A Belgian air line has established passenger service between Leopoldville, Belgian Congo, and Capetown, South Africa, flights requiring three days, with two overnight stops.

Pivoted to a back that can be hung on a wall, a sand glass invented by an Illinois man can be set to turn over at the expiration of three, four or five minutes and ring a bell.

DELEGATION OF POWER

A good executive is one who knows how to choose assistants and how to delegate authority.

How the great Hebrew leader learned to delegate authority is related in Exodus 18. You may find it interesting to re-read that Bible chapter.

A few months after Moses had led the Israelites out of Egypt, his father-in-law, Jethro, the priest of Midian, paid him a visit at his camp in the wilderness.

The next day Jethro saw his son-in-law sitting alone from morning until evening judging all the people.

"What is this thing that thou doest to the people?" asked the father-in-law.

"Why sittest thou thyself alone, and all the people stand by thee from morning unto even?"

"Because the people come unto me to inquire of God," answered Moses. "When they have a matter, they come unto me; and I judge between one and another, and I do make them know the statutes of God, and His laws."

"The thing that thou doest is not good," replied Jethro. "Thou wilt surely wear away, both thou, and this people that is with thee; for this thing is too heavy for thee; thou are not able to perform it thyself alone."

Then the father-in-law counseled the son-in-law to choose from the people "able men, such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness; and place such over them, to be rulers of thousands, and rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of ten."

"And," continued Jethro, "let them judge the people at all seasons: and it shall be, that every great matter they shall bring unto thee, but every small matter they shall judge: so shall it be easier for thyself, and they shall bear the burden with thee."

Moses, a wise as well as a meek man, hearkened to the voice of his father-in-law and did all that he had said.

After that the Moses administration ran more smoothly.

"Moses," we are told, "chose able men out of all Israel, and made them heads over the people, rulers of thousands, rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens. And they judged the people at all seasons: the hard causes they brought to Moses, but every small matter they judged themselves."

W. H. Nettleton Retires After 44 Years As C. N. Express Agent

Picton, Oct. 21—After forty-four years of service, William H. Nettleton has retired as agent for the Canadian National Express here. He was appointed in 1898 and during that time has seen a rapid growth in the business.

In the 71 years that the service has been carried on here, there have have been only two agents, John A. Rawson, from 1871 until 1898. Before the railroad came to Prince Edward County in 1879, express parcels were brought to Picton from Belleville and Brighton by stage coach. In recent years, transports have been used.

A successor to Mr. Nettleton has not yet been named.

Boys Buy Bonds

Prince Edward County appears to be set to establish a new record for Victory Loans during the present war. Officials reported last night that returns to date were far ahead of those in the same period a year ago. More interest is being taken and canvassers find the public ready to buy when they call.

First investors in Athol township were two 14-year-old boys, Clifford Fennell and Donald Fennemore. Both had worked in the canning factory at Cherry Valley and assisted on farms during the holiday season. After taking care of expenses for school and outfitting themselves for the winter months, both were able to lend $100.

The Commando Dagger, which will be sent the local regiment overseas when the objective is reached, will be dedicated at a rally next Sunday night. The R.C.A.F. band from Trenton and members of the armed forces will take part while the speaker will be Squadron Leader W. H. Corkill of the R.A.F. here.

Lemon Tree Produces

Among the oddities reported is a lemon tree owned by Edward Carter which is bearing a heavy crop of fruit. During the summer months, Mr. Carter picked ninety lemons and there are still some dozen left on the tree. Kept in the house, the tree has reached a considerable size and is bearing for the first time this year.

I've Been Thinking...

● Yes, thinking a lot, lately—and now I'm going to do something.

But first, let me tell you about my thinking. I'm typical of thousands of Canadians. I'm approaching middle age . . . married . . . have children (they're almost old enough to join the armed forces) . . . and I have a steady job and a fair income.

For three years I've been, theoretically, "at war"—but until now I haven't been really in it. I've followed the war (that's right, "followed" is the word!)—followed it daily—in my newspapers.

I cursed the Germans over Rotterdam . . . despaired at the Fall of France . . . thrilled at the story of Dunkirk . . . shuddered at the Battle of Britain . . . then cheered the R.A.F. when the Luftwaffe turned tail in defeat. And I remember that historic Sunday, December 7th, when the Japs came in.

No need to go on, you see how keenly (!) interested in the war was I. During this time I was doing my bit, too. (Don't laugh!) I bought a few War Savings Certificates—and, by Jove! during the last Victory Loan this year I actually bought a Bond (like throwing a penny on the Drum!)

You see, in this way of following the war, my own way of life, and that of thousands like me, was pretty well untouched.

Then one day I saw myself in the true light . . . a spectator outside the arena, while the peril was being fought off for me by others. I began to see those perils . . . possible defeat . . . cruelty, slavery, desolation . . . my loved ones, my Canada, my home and my possessions, all that I cherish, destroyed at the hands of the Nazis and the Japs.

At last I did some serious thinking. Like a sudden shock came the resolve. Canada needs—the crisis demands—that I do something. I'm not in the fighting line, so I must get behind those who are. I must send them guns, and tanks, and planes, and ships.

So my wife and I spent hours at the week-end, figuring on a new budgeting of our income. We're going to change our way of life, to help prevent the Nazis changing it for us. We're going to cut out every unnecessary expenditure, and cut down many of the necessary ones, too, in order to lend all the money we can to Canada.

I'm going to buy VICTORY BONDS, not alone because it is a splendid investment, but because—as you see—"I've been thinking . . . now I'LL DO SOMETHING! I'll do my utmost in helping to put the new Victory Loan ($750,000,000) over the top."

Unattended, the only guests were the parents of the bride and groom. Following a boat trip they will reside in Kingston. The bride travelled in a wine dress with wine coat trimmed with Persian lamb, matching hat and accessories.

Picking Up Hair Pins Is A Patriotic Duty; Now Difficult To Buy

Picking up pins, needles, hairpins, bobby pins and paper clips becomes the patriotic thing to do these days. Treat them with care and save them. This is the advice from Consumer Information Service at Ottawa.

The metals which are used in making tiny articles such as these are the metals which are vitally needed for airplanes and tanks — steel, tin and aluminum.

In some cases these articles are still on the market but in ever decreasing quantities. Aside from this, their quality is changing because of the lack of supplies.

The best advice which can be given is to get into the habit of saving things — large and small. There has been a large amount of waste in these pins in the past. Examine the dust pan for stray pins; pick up paper clips when they are seen; don't bent or break bobby or hairpins; keep needles in one place where they can easily be found and where they will not rust; clean up those already rusted with kerosene or sandpaper.

Available supplies will last longer if Canadians will save these things now.

New Sweater Set

(By ALICE ALDEN)

The Sweater is going to be more important than ever this Winter, for its woolly warmth is something to purr about even when the radiator is doing its stuff without stint. If you are a sweater devotee then the chances are that you are on the look-out for some accessories with which to dress up a dark sweater. Here's something new for this season's sweater girl—collar and cuffs of Celanese rayon with delicate Beauvais embroidery in pastels and dark colors. The set would be nice for the office or the classroom.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

REFERENCE TO HUSBAND

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am always uncertain as to when to refer to my husband as "John" when as "my husband," and when as "Mr. Smith." Please explain this so that I won't stutter and stammer about it as I do now.

— MARY.

These differences of the way in which you refer to your husband are built on logic. It is natural and logical that you refer to your husband as "John" when you are speaking of him to relatives and friends.

To an acquaintance you would refer to your husband as "my husband."

But you would, naturally, refer to your husband as "Mr. Smith" to a servant or any other empoyee, or to "the butcher and baker and candlestick-maker."

This is a most important thing to remember: To a social acquaintance, don't refer to your husband as "Mr. Smith." To refer to your husband as "Mr. Smith" to a social acquaintance takes that acquaintance out of the category of a social equality.

PLATE PLACEMENT

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me where the bread-and-butter plate should be placed, both when a salad plate is used and when it is not.

— MARGARET.

Whether or not the salad plate is to be placed beside the luncheon or dinner plate, the bread-and-butter plate should be placed above the tips of the forks on the left of the plate. This leaves room for the salad plate on the left side of the luncheon or dinner plate, below the bread-and-butter plate. It's just as correct to put the salad plate on the right of the dinner or luncheon plate, if this is more convenient.

"Always belittlin'," is a quick route to unpopularity. Throw this tarnishing habit out of your life .. polish your eyes to look for the best in people, and polish your words to say pleasant and constructive things about people. You will be happier, and so will your family and your friends.

Vitamin Experiments Restore Gray Hair to Normal Color

Two widely publicized B-vitamins are those associated with gray hair. They are pantothenic acid and para-aminobenzoic acid.

It has been shown by experiments that if the animal experimented upon did not get sufficient pantothenic acid, the hair turned gray. When this animal was given pantothenic acid, the hair regained its normal color.

Dr. Benjamin F. Sieve of Tuft's Medical College has also done some experimental work, using the part of the vitamin B-complex known as para-aminobenzoic acid. He gave this preparation to 800 persons of various ages, and kept a careful record in regard to the color changes in the hair and skin. After a period of from three to eight weeks of treatment, he noted that the gray hair in some of these persons became a yellowish color. Then there was gradual darkening of the hair. This process took longer in some persons than in others. The skin in certain parts of the body also became somewhat darker in color, particularly in young girls.

Some of the patients whom Dr. Sieve treated also had a condition known as vitiligo, in which there is loss of pigment or coloring in the skin over certain parts of the body. Dr. Sieve treated these patients for a period of from five to twenty weeks. The para-aminobenzoic acid was given three times a day. It was noted that the normal color returned to the affected skin, and that white hair growing from these areas also regained the normal color. He observed, too, that freckles, in some cases lost their color, and sometimes disappeared almost completely.

It would appear that the para-aminobenzoic acid has an action in the body much like that of certain of the glandular secretions. The effect of this substance on fertility also was studied by giving it for a period of from three to seven months to twenty-two women who had not had any children, and more than half of them became pregnant. Of course, the use of this substance for this purpose is still in the experimental stage, and much further investigation is needed to determine its value. Furthermore, studies must be made to be sure that the preparation is not toxic or poisonous and will not produce ill effects.

However, such work as has been done with it would seem to indicate that it does have some definite effect in restoring the color to the skin and hair, and that it may also have some valuable action in certain disturbances of the glands of internal secretion.

The important thing to remember is that in a properly balanced diet there is no lack of these vitamins.

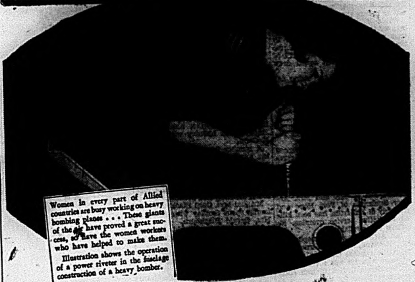
TIME has proved it



Women in every part of Allied countries are busy working on heavy bombing planes . . . These giants of the air have proved a great success, so have the women workers who have helped to make them.

Illustration shows the operation of a power riveter in the fuselage construction of a heavy bomber.

SINCE 1858, when Benson's Corn Starch was first introduced in Canadian homes, time has proved that women have a more prominent place in national and community affairs—that they can perform, equally well, duties that were previously considered the sphere of men alone.

In their recognition of Benson's Corn Starch as the purest and most desirable, for over 80 years Canadian women have proved that only the best is good enough for them.

The outstanding excellence of famous Benson's Corn Starch, its purity and high quality, make "Benson's" the very finest choice for any purpose for which corn starch is used in the home.

High Explosive Bombs Subject Of A.R.P. Lecture

Captain M. Hood, secretary of the Ontario Civilian Defence Committee, will address an organizational meeting of the Belleville civilian defence set-up at the Collegiate auditorium on Monday night, October 26th., it was revealed by Harold Seldon at the Y.M.C.A. on Wednesday night.

The announcement was made at the outset of the lecture on high explosive bombs, the third of a series of eight to be given in the basic training course which all applicants of the local civilian defence organization must take before taking specialized training. Next week's lecture will be on poisonous gases.

Doubt was expressed by Mr. Seldon that exceedingly large high explosive bombs would be used in any possible enemy raid over Ontario. Up to 500 pounds would undoubtedly be the limit, was his opinion.

Bomb Shelters Detailed

The various types of bomb shelters were explained by Mr. Seldon, he stating the first essentiality was protection from bomb splinters which are dangerous up to miles from the locale of the blast. If caught in the open during a bomb raid the safest procedure is to lie flat on the ground as a great percentage of the blasting power of explosive bombs is upward.

Stay Indoors Advice Given

Stay indoors and away from windows during bombing raids, is the advice given by experts, who claim that a great majority of the casualties in raids result from flying glass.

The manner in which to arrange blackout rooms in the home and the treatment of glass windows to prevent flying glass as the result of bomb explosions, was also covered by Mr. Seldon.

The principal benefit from test blackouts result from the fact that the people are more or less forced to stay at home. To stay at home in properly constructed bomb shelters or in the basement is the safest place during a bombing raid, it was claimed.

Attendance at the lecture was considerably down compared to former meetings, but this was held due to inclement weather.

Minor Attempts Made To Invade Malta Says Bishop of Gibraltar

Lisbon, Oct. 22 (CP-Reuters)—Rt. Rev. Harold Buxton, Bishop of Gibraltar, said here today there had been "minor attempts" to invade Malta. He did not amplify the statement.

He disclosed also that Prime Minister Churchill visited Gibraltar and travelled through the stronghold in a "Black Maria" in order to keep his visit a secret.

(Presumably the prime minister's visit to the Rock was made in the course of his journey across the Mediterranean when he went to Moscow to see Stalin.)

The bishop came to Lisbon after a tour of British military outposts in the Mediterranean, during which he spent three months at Malta.

VICTORY LOAN

Maltese, produced $1,500 in cash at an employee meeting of the Swift-Canadian Co., Toronto.

"I'm thinking of my relatives in the island of Malta," he said.

Contributes Month's Pay.

One Victory Loan canvasser who called at the home of H. B. Goodspeed of Truro, N.S., sold bonds to Mr. and Mrs. Goodspeed, their four children and a young British war guest in their home. The British lad contributed his total monthly allowance which he had been saving for the purpose.

Here are other incidents in the loan campaign, as told by loan headquarters:

"The new Alaska highway has brought an era of prosperity to Whitehorse, Y.T., and the 540 citizens that make up the normal population of the territory are out to set a record in their contributions to the loan. By Tuesday night they had reached the quarter-mark."

"Setting an example that won't be touched in the present campaign, a Winnipeg veteran of two wars has used his last army pay cheque to buy a $50 bond. He is blind and unable to walk."

Victory Ticket

"Out of 25 calls made in one day at Boissevain, Man., Harold Ready, a rural canvasser, reported 24 subscriptions totalling $3,050 on the new Victory Ticket plan. Reports tended to show that by the Victory Ticket method almost everything above and below ground has been accepted against bond purchases, including wheat, hogs, flax, seed, milk, fish, pulpwood, eggs, honey barley and cattle. In addition to this many farmers are making outright purchases of Victory Bonds."

"Loan organizer Billy Malcolm met Chief Billy Assu at the Cape Mudge Indian Reserve and told him: 'We want $200,000 from your Indians and that is your quota.' Not understanding the word 'quota' the chief became angry. 'Is that all the bonds the government will let us buy?' he asked. When he learned they could buy all they wanted he set the quota at $40,000."

"The Pacific Coast Shipbuilding Industry is contributing substantially to the loan campaign in Vancouver. Burrard Shipyards in North Vancouver have exceeded 85 per cent. of the employee's quota; and the North Vancouver Ship Repairs canvass netted 552 acceptances out of 571 contracts."

Yugoslav Forces Suffer Heavily In Recent Fighting

London, Oct. 22 — (CP) — Axis forces, attempting to recapture the towns of Jajce and Kurpres in southern Bosnia, have killed more than 500 Yugoslav soldiers in heavy fighting, the Yugoslav government in London reported today.

The towns, which have a population of 15,000 to 20,000 were captured by Yugoslav patriots three weeks ago, the government said. Since that time the patriots have been reported heavily reinforced.

There was no mention of the casualties inflicted on the Axis forces, but intensified fighting and an unusually early winter were said to have forced them to withdraw towards the coastal areas where communications are better.

A croat patriot army also routed German and Italian troops defending the town of Kljuc on the Sana River in Bosnia, but Axis reinforcements arrived and the battle resumed 20 miles east of the town, the report said.

• Because Raw materials used in many commodities are required for the manufacture of essential war materials directly necessary to our war effort.

• Because Basic Materials for other products must come from distant lands—these require shipping space needed for the transportation of troops and munitions so necessary to our war effort.

• Because Import restrictions are in effect on many commodities to conserve our Canadian dollars.

• Because Sugar is rationed, manufacturers of commodities containing sugar are restricted to 70% of the sugar they used last year: (affects Jelly Powders, Jams, Ginger Ale, Puddings, Candy, etc.).

• Because Canada ships 11½ million pounds of Bacon to Britain each week.

• Because Biscuit manufacturers must first produce and fill orders for our Armed Forces in Canada and Overseas, before manufacturing our civilian requirements.

• Because In order to conserve Gasoline and Rubber less transportation facilities are available, and we must give up some of the delivery service we previously enjoyed.

• Because Nearly 500,000 Canadian young men (800 from Loblaw's) are in the Armed Forces.

The foregoing gives a brief outline on what helps to cause your "FAVOURITE BRAND" to be "missing" at times. There is still a large assortment to choose from, plenty for all of us, and what little inconvenience or sacrifice is necessary—is small indeed.

Immediately after the transfer was made the Scylla left the slower moving convoy and rushed the survivors into port. In a vain attempt to halt this huge flow of supplies to embattled Russia, German torpedo planes and submarines hurled themselves at the convoy for four days.

ADMIRAL DARLAN ON WAY TO DAKAR

Vichy Perturbed Over the Landing of U. S. Troops in Liberia

Vichy, Oct. 22 (AP) — Admiral Jean Darlan, head of all Vichy's armed forces, arrived today at Algiers on his way to the key French south Atlantic base at Dakar.

The news of his trip received widespread attention because of reports of the landing of United States forces in Liberia and the Axis interpretation that this was a prelude to a United Nations attempt to occupy the French West African port.

Liberia has a land frontier almost 500 miles long adjoining French West African territory.

(Dispatches from Berne said the Vichy correspondent of the Basler Nachrichten reported that Darlan was expected to reach Dakar via French Morocco probably tomorrow.

(Reports reaching Switzerland said Vichy was making every effort to appear calm over the African situation, especially during the critical period when Pierre Laval is trying to compel French workers to go to Germany.

Will Inspect Dakar's Defences

(Neutral dispatches to Switzerland said, however, that "the eyes of the whole of France are directed upon West Africa." They said the purpose of Darlan's trip was to inspect French troops newly dispatched to Africa and to look over Dakar's defences in view of Axis press intimations that a big Allied offensive is in the making there.)

Darlan's trip to Dakar started after repeated assertions by the Vichy government that France is ready to defend the base against any attack. White women and children have been ordered evacuated from the port.

The navy ministry issued a formal denial yesterday of charges reported here from abroad that German submarines operating in the Atlantic had received assistance from West Africa.

THE WAR TODAY

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

London, Oct. 22 (AP).—I am prepared to reaffirm a forecast of months ago—that Hitler would be a beaten man if he did not break through this year to the fresh resources of the lower Caucasus and to strategic bases of the Middle East.

As a matter of fact, I have been reaffirming it as vigorously as possible for the past two days in these articles. They have tried to demonstrate that the allies might win the Hitlerian part of the world war by next fall if Britain and America rush to the kill right away with their bomber forces over western Europe and Germany.

Hitler is mortally hurt right now. Recently I have put it to four distinguished generals, three British and one American, that the fuehrer's back is broken. Every one agreed.

Don't get the idea that I say the war is over. Hitler is on his way out but he still has all the ferocity and fighting strength of a cornered rat.

Bloody Days Ahead Is Claim.

We have bloody days before us. The allies will suffer defeats and disappointments before we are through. The rat still has to be clubbed into submission. However, in the view of many experts, that dirty but satisfying job can be done by perhaps a year from now if we approach it rightly.

The prediction that Hitler would be rendered vulnerable to a death thrust if he arrived in his present state by the end of the year is based on two thoughts:

1. Lacking fresh resources and strategical bases which would go with them, he would be unable to repair the colossal damage suffered in Russia.

2. Meantime, Britain and the United States would have been piling up strength and would be able to jump on him in his weakness.

The first condition seems fulfilled. Upon fulfillment of the second condition depends whether we may be able to beat the Nazis by, say, next fall or whether the war will drag on interminably. Everything depends on the speed with which we act and the manner in which we attack.

We have a double mission to perform. We must hit Hitler immediately while he is still groggy from exertions in Russia. We must prepare the way for that second land front which will give the gallant Russians the relief they need.

Must Prepare Way for Invasion

Only by a devastating aerial preparation can the ground be cleared for invasion. To attempt to land an army without this would be mass murder. And this preparation will kill two birds with one stone for it would not only render invasion feasible but at the same time render Hitler terribly vulnerable by depriving him of his main war industries and means of transport.

There are less than 200 prime targets for the combined air forces to destroy in order to force Germany close to impotency. Actually, the destruction of 40 of the most vital would knock Hitler's hopes into a cocked hat.

The thing needed to make this aerial assault possible is quick reinforcement of both British and American bomber fleets in Britain. By trebling the present force at once the trick could be turned fairly quickly.

PROHIBITION?

Senator Josh Lee (D) of Okla., who announced in Washington, D.C., he would demand a record vote on an amendment to ban the sale of intoxicants and to enforce anti-vice regulations on and near military posts. The amendment which he would try to attach to the 18-19 year old draft bill, would in effect, bring prohibition to a great section of the country including New York.

Concrete Examples Given

R.A.F. and U.S. airmen have been giving concrete examples recently of how military targets can be wiped out in a single raid. Your Colognes and Rostocks and Luebecks and a host of other places clearly demonstrate the possibilities.

And believe me, if the Allies try to land 500,000 boys on the shores of France without ample air preparation you are going to see a slaughter that will rock the world.

The R.A.F. in a lightning sweep knocks out the great Renault works in Paris, destroying more tanks than have been accounted for in all the Libyan fighting and depriving Hitler of great manufacturing power.

We applaud heartily but briefly and then forget. But if a hundred thousand commandos battled their way ashore from the Channel, fought their way to Paris and did the same job with the loss of half their number the world would go wild with adulation.

SECOND SET OF TWINS BORN.

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 22—(CP)—Mrs. Edward Schwabel, 24, Orchard Park, looks at her twin boys and murmurs: "We never expected it to happen again." The boys were born Monday, less than a year after Mrs. Schwabel, wife of a trolley operator, gave birth to twin girls.

KILLS TWO GEESE WITH ONE SHOT

Hanover, Ont., Oct. 22 (CP). — Elmer Litt of Hanover didn't get two birds with one stone, but he shot two large white geese with one shot from his .22 calibre rifle when hunting two miles northeast of here. One goose weighed 15 pounds and the other 17 pounds.

BRITISH YOUTHS OF 18 LIABLE FOR ARMY SERVICE

London, Oct. 22 (CP)—Britain made youths of 18 liable for military service today.

Labor Minister Ernest Bevin announced in the House of Commons that the King had signed a proclamation making men who reached the age of 18 subject to the call for National service.

Canadian youths of 19 are liable for military service. In the United States the limit is 20 but a bill now is before Congress to lower the selective service age to 18.

Those who reached 18 between July 1 and Sept. 30 will be required to register Nov. 7 and will be examined later that month and called for service as needed, the first of them in December.

Mr. Bevin said the manpower requirements of all services made the reduction to 18 urgently necessary but that men would not be sent abroad for service until they reached 19.

Japanese Admit Transport Losses Back in February

New York, Oct. 22—(CP)—The Japanese acknowledged today, belatedly and backhandedly, that they lost several transports last February in the landing on the Netherlands East Indies island of Java.

A Tokyo report in the newspaper Asahi, broadcast by the Berlin radio, listed two Japanese transports and an enemy gunboat as raised by divers in Bantam Bay, Java, and said salvage crews were working on "several Japanese tranports which all had been sunk when the Japanese landed on Java."

FINED FOR HAVING TOO MANY CAR TIRES

Trenton, Oct. 22—Herbert Oliver, a local resident, was fined $25 after being convicted under a Wartime Prices Control Board charge in police court here. Oliver was charged with failing to report to the nearest Tire Ration Representative tires and tubes in excess of those required to equip his own motor car.

Mr. Oliver was unable to appear owing to illness, but was represented by A. G. Adamson, Trenton solicitor. Mr. S. G. Robertson, Assistant Crown Attorney, prosecuted the matter for the Wartime Prices Board.

LORIENT REPORTED BOMBED

London, Oct. 22 — (CP) — A Vichy broadcast heard by Reuters said R. A. F. planes bombed port installations at Lorient yesterday killing 100 persons and injuring 350. Lorient is on the south coast of France's Brittany peninsula.

THREE AUXILIARIES

Press Attacks Without Results

Soviet dispatches said the Germans continued to press numerous attacks in the foothills without effect.

In the mountains above them small groups of Nazi Alpine troops tried to penetrate Russian positions over the snowdrifts, but they were reported being wiped out or dispersed by Caucasian snipers.

Pravda, the Communist party newspaper, calculated that the Germans were employing three divisions of infantry in the narrow and mountainous sector near the Black Sea coast. Combat flared on heavily-wooded summits and in deep gorges.

Ten days of action were estimated to have cost the invaders 4,000 men without a territorial gain.

Without specifying the time of the action, Pravda said the Germans broke through temporarily in one sector southeast of Novorossisk, but the Russians drove them back and established themselves in the outskirts of a Nazi-occupied community.

The counter-attacks were declared coupled with an iron defence in this 59th day of the siege of Stalingrad.

Moreover, the Soviet information bureau announced that eight Axis vessels, including a Rumanian destroyer and 12,000-ton German transport, had been sunk in the continuing war at sea.

Both the destroyer and the transport and three auxiliaries were declared sunk in the Black Sea by Red fleet warships. Two others went down in the Gulf of Finland, a communique said.

Fighting on Small Scale

Night fighters within Stalingrad apparently was on a small scale. The army newspaper Red Star said "Results of the last seven days of battle in the district of Stalingrad show that the enemy is somewhat reducing the tempo of the general offensive and has resorted to the tactics of striking on a narrow sector."

"More and more German units operating in the city district are expiring," the newspaper commented.

The noon communique announced that a platoon of Nazi scouts had been blasted to death on a Stalingrad mine field. A mortar crew was credited with killing about 100 Germans and firing five tanks. Futile infantry and armored attacks were declared to have cost the Germans another company of riflemen.

"South of Stalingrad our scouts destroyed an enemy mortar battery and six machine-guns and wiped out 70 Germans," the communique said.

"Irish" Wallop Albert College To Take Undisputed Lead In Bay of Quinte COSSA Group

SCORE IS 31-6

Playing a razzle dazzle style of football that left no doubt as to the ultimate result, Jack Doran's St. Michael's Academy "Irish" raced to a 31 to 6 win over Albert College on the Collegiate Campus yesterday. The "Irish" remained undefeated in the Bay of Quinte COSSA group with two wins and no defeats.

Skipper Doran's youthful Irish ran around, over and through their heftier Albert rivals as they took to the air in an attack that smothered Skipper Paul Goyette's Alberts under an avalanche of prolific forward passing. The quarter scores stood 0-0, 8-0, 20-1 and finally 31-6.

The winners pitched forward passes, with Bob Bunton and Jack Wardaugh on the firing end, while Bob Temple and Bob Wilson were receiving without interruption. The season's first casualty occurred in the initial frame when Doug Green sustained two cracked ribs after tackling and downing big Freddie Aboud.

Irish Open Score

Following a scoreless initial frame Bob Bunton pitched a forward to Bob Temple, who sallied over the Albert line unmolested and St. Mikes converted without a struggle. Bob Wilson raced 44 yards to Albert's six when he fumbled. However, the loose pigskin dribbled over the Tri-colors' goal line and Temple downed Waite for a safety touch and the quarter ended 8-0 for the Irish.

St. Mikes garnered in twelve points in the third session as the result of Wardaugh forward to Bunton and Wilson's subsequent long end run for a converted touchdown. Albert rallied at this point when Bruce Orr ripped off a 40-yard gain, but the boys of Doran hurled Albert back and Orr was forced to punt for a single point. Bunton pitched to Barrett for a nice Irish gain and Wardaugh went on the slinging end to fire to Bunton, who took the oval standing up behind Albert's goal line and then the Irish converted, making the score 20 to 1 as the final frame opened.

March Up Field

After Bunton fumbled on his own ten the St. Mikes' sextette started a march that saw Barrett and Wilson make substantial yardage before Bunton pitched to Barrett for another Irish major score. Albert rallied as Bruce Benner broke away and raced around left end for a 35-yard dash and Albert's only touchdown. The final Irish score saw Wardaugh sling a long pass to Temple and the curtain was rung down on a rout for the Alberts.

Bunton out-punted Orr slightly, while Wardaugh and Bunton fired forward passes until the Alberts were running in circles. Wilson, Barrett and Temple were other standouts for the undefeated Irish, Bruce Orr and Jeff Waite carrying the bulk of the attack for the losers, as the St. Mikes kids literally halted Freddie Aboud, Skipper Goyette's power threat, in his tracks. St. Mikes and B.C.I. tangle Friday in the most important game of the schedule.

The line-ups:

St. Michael's Academy — Snap, Green; wings, Barrett and Temple; quarter, Wardaugh; halves, Wilson and Bunton; subs, Thomas, Donovan, Adams and Lucy.

Albert College—Snap, MacRae; wings, B. Benner and McCollough; quarter, Waite; halves, Aboud and Orr; subs, D. Benner, MacDonald, Bolton and McLeod.

Referee—"Red" Townsend; linesman, Harold Mott.

NO FALL SECURED IN MAIN BOUT AT HUME ARENA

McCready and Watson Put on Real Wrestling Exhibition

MARTINEZ WINS

When Promoter Frank Tunney, of the Queensbury A. C., advertised last night's main wrestling bout at the Hume Arena as a "wrestling classic" the Canadian rasslin' maestro knew exactly thereof what he predicted. For a full sixty minutes "Whipper Billie" Watson and "Big Earl" McCready staged as neat a muscle-bending tussle as has been witnessed in the grunt and groan business since Jack Corcoran first introduced that business of entertainment in Belleville a decade ago. McCready and Watson battled a full hour to a draw, neither gaining the resemblance of a decision in the best exhibition of the modern version of wrestling ever seen here or elsewhere.

It was doubtless a "wrestling classic" and sent upwards to 1,000 faithful and satisfied patrons out the portals of the local sports palace singing praises of the fine orthodox bout they had been treated to. There was none of that dock-wolloper, rough-house business, as McCready and Watson staged a clean fast bout, that was productive of the displaying of wrestling holds and counter-holds with the patrons stamping their voice of approval at every turn. Only twice did the principals move out of line and show signs of illegal tactics and on both occasions Referee Phil Watson merely pointed the finger of warning and the headliners reverted back to wrestling as John Q. Public appreciates it.

Watson Favourite?

In regards to favouritism the patrons were rather unbiased, although Watson was a slight favourite owing to his youth. The early stages saw Watson apply punishing hammerlocks, but the heftier McCready retaliated with his famed Cobra hold, but Arbiter Lawson claimed "Big Earl" was strangling York Township's pride and broke matters up. The only real comedy came late in the bout, when Watson pinned McCready atop of Lawson and somewhat of a merry mix-up resulted as Watson gained a full leglock on the official and adhered to the fact he had missed McCready. The only near injury came when Referee Lawson sustained an injured ankle, however. Late in the show McCready hurled Watson bodily from the ring injuring the "Whipper's" shoulder. For the remainder of the bout McCready centred his attacks on Watson's injured shoulder and was the aggressor at the 60-minute bell. Prior to the bout Pedro Martinez, the villainous Mexican champion, entered the ring and personally challenged the winner. Both accepted.

Poorly Matched Bout

A poorly matched semi-final saw Martinez beat one Jack Wentworth, of Stoney Creek, in exactly 1:41 minutes. The patrons verbally showed their displeasure of the bout as Wentworth actually had no right in the same ring with the powerful Mexican. In the opening bout Walter Sirois defeated Ivan Karminoff, the mad Russian, following a series of flying mares. However, in this scrap, three-way verbal arguments between the principals and Referee Cliff Fox actually dominated the picture, with the local referee coming out atop. Wrestling next week at the Hume Arena will be held on Thursday night, Belleville taking over the customary Toronto Maple Leaf Garden wrestling night.

Winnipeg Coach Says Toronto Team Lacks Real Power

By CHARLES EDWARDS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Oct. 22— (CP) —Bert Warwick, coach of Bombers in the Winnipeg Senior Football League, looked over the two top teams in the Ontario Rugby Football Union last night and vehemently expressed hope there will be an East-West final this year.

Warwick was in Toronto on business but he did not pass up the opportunity to see the city's two leading clubs, Lew Hayman's R. C. A. F. Hurricanes and Ted Morris' Navy, play a 7-7 tie in a victory night game, first Major League fixture over played under floodlights in Toronto.

Because of weather conditions Bert did not see the teams at their best but said the unbeaten Hurricanes do not seem as strong as the 1941 Ottawa Rough Riders from who Bombers won the Grey Cup and National Championship last season.

"Hurricanes are nifty with the ball like all Hayman's teams," said Warwick. "They have a great running attack but apparently they lack power."

He figured Hurricanes showed a more versatile attack than Navy and should win the O. R. F. U. title. "But then what?" he asked. "It would be regrettable if there is no East-West game this year. All our efforts in Winnipeg have been aimed toward a National final. The Grey Cup objective has kept the game alive and I think all Canada wants to keep the Dominion final as an annual classic."

Toronto, Oct. 22 — (CP) — The Canadian Rugby Union's Six-man Football Committee, headed by J. B. Fitton of Toronto, is distributing without charge an official rule book for the six-man game, adaptable for the small school or town which has insufficient playing material or equipment for a 12-man team. The game is popular with the armed forces.

In its introduction the rule book says: "six-man football is a game that provides on a smaller scale all the thrills and entertainment of the regular game, yet it trains the player in fundamentals and rudiments of rugby. Every boy becomes adept at ball handling, passing, receiving and tackling because he does more of each. He learns to play the different positions. In this way he becomes more alert and cagey. On the other hand, it has proved to be less hazardous because of the lack of personal contact and rough line play."

C. R. U. Rules Prevail

In general C. R. U. rules prevail. A major difference in the six-man game is that on a ball-carrying play, the player who receives the ball from the snap must pass onside to a team-mate before crossing the line of scrimmage except on forward pass plays. The aim is for open play. The trend is to prevent injury and it is suggested all players wear tennis or basketball shoes instead of cleats.

The six-man field is only 40 yards wide but many vary from 80 to 110 yards in length compared with the regular standard of 65 by 110 yards. Ten-minute quarter periods are recommended instead of the regulation 15-minute quarters. The offensive team must have at least three players on the line of scrimmage and a team may use four substitute players. The accepted playing positions are a snap, two wings, two halves and a quarterback.

Incidentally:

Vic (Timmins Press) Copps reports Timmns and Kirkland Lake hope to have Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League play exhibition games in the two Northern Ontario towns . . . At Leaf's camp in St. Catharines, Ont., Coach Happy Day worked out in his old defence post to fill a gap caused by training casualties and rhymed: "if the setbacks keep coming at the present rate, I may need this practice for a later date". . .Carom: when the R. C. A. F. beat Edmonton Athletic club for the Edmonton Junior Football Title, left-footed Johnny Dutchak, kicking a point after touchdown, sliced the ball so it hit one goalpost, caromed to the other goalpost, then bounced inside for a point.

N. H. L. Training Notes

By the Canadian Press

Lester Patrick hasn't given out figures on how many goals his New York Rangers have scored in training drills, but there's nothing wrong with the shoting eyes of Clint Smith, Bryan Hextall and Alf Pike. The trio went duck-hunting yesterday—and bagged 28 birds between them.

Incidentally, Rangers are expected to break camp at Winnipeg next Tuesday. They will play a final practice game in Toronto before their National League opener with Toronto Maple Leafs Oct. 31.

The 1942-43 training season will be memorable for many things—notably the changes wrought by the manpower shortage. Montreal Canadiens added one of the better stories last night. The shortage of help at Verdun auditorium was so acute the players had to do their own scraping and pour on gallons of water for the new ice surface.

When Coach Happy Day said Leafs would get "down to cases" this week, he wasn't fooling. Douglas (Red) Garrett, the spectacular 18-year-old rookie defenceman from Toronto Marlboro Juniors, came out swinging yesterday against Oscar Aubuchon of Bun Cook's Providence Reds, Leafs farm club. The boys were parted before any serious damage was inflicted.

Railroads at the Leafs St. Catharines, Ont., training camp say Day's third line may comprise Gaye Stewart and Norman (Bud) Polle of Fort William and Johnny Conick ace right wing with Hamilton Majors of the Senior A Ontario Association last season. Stewart has been going along exceptionally well in training spins.

Leafs have lost three players to the armed forces in two days—Jack Ladds of Timmins, Ont., Bud Evans of Milton, Ont., and Ken Dixon, star lacrosse player with Mimico-Brampton Combines—but they're not the only team to suffer. Jack MacDonald, 190-pound, six-foot right wing last season with the Memorial Cup champions, Portage La Prairie Terriers, was ordered yesterday to report for training with the Royal Canadian Air Force. MacDonald has been trying out with Rangers.

SMITH SIGNED 2-YEAR CONTRACT

Canadiens Sent Contract to Selective Board for Examination

Montreal, Oct. 22—(CP)—Officials of Canadian hockey club of the National Hockey League said last night that Stuart Smith had signed a two-year contract "early in 1941," and that the contract had been mailed to selective service officials in Ottawa for examination.

The selective service officials became interested in the signing date when Smith left a job in an Ottawa War Plant to report to his team. They wished to know whether he had signed his contract before regulations, mutually agreed upon by the Canadian and United States officials, came into effect a few weeks ago.

If Smith had signed his contract after the regulations became effective, he could be forbidden to play professional hockey, selective service officials said.

HURRICANES HELD TO 7-7 DRAW BY THE NAVY SQUAD

Forced to Come From Behind With Last-Period Touch to Draw

ONLY 6,000 ATTEND

Toronto, Oct. 22 (CP)—The undefeated record of the Royal Canadian Air Force Hurricanes in the Ontario Rugby Football Union senior series was still intact today, although somewhat blemished by the fighting tars from H.M.C.S. York, the Royal Canadian Navy's training centre here.

In the Union's first floodlight game of the current season, the Navy twelve had the Hurricanes on the verge of defeat at Maple Leaf stadium last night for the first time this season and only a stirring fourth-quarter touchdown drive enabled the Flyers to emerge with a 7-7 tie.

The contest, billed as a Victory game in aid of Canada's third Victory Loan and with proceeds going to the benevolent and canteen funds of the Air Force and the Navy was a colorful spctacle.

Parade Preceeds Match

Bands of both services took part, leading a march past of Air Force and Navy men, members of the women's dvision of the Air Force and Air Cadets in a pre-game ceremony.

Hopes for a crowd of 20,000 persons were dashed by the weather but about 6,000 were on hand.

A chaplain, Padre Ivan Edwards, made his first appearance with the Navy and tallied five of his team's seven points when he pulled down a pass from Coder Elwin Morris in the third quarter. It was a well-executed pass play, starting with an end run and Coder Morris tossed the ball 15 yards to Padre Edwards, an outside wing, who pulled it down behind the R.C.A.F. goal-line with four Hurricanes around him.

Thompson Kicks Convert

AC2. Jack Parry scored the touchdown for the Hurricanes. He pulled down a long pass from AC2. Bill Stukus and slid across the goal-line for a major score early in the 4th quarter. This made the score 7-6 for the Navy but Flt. Lt. Eddie Thompson—the outstanding player in the game—was the player who provided the tie, kicking a successful placement with the heavy ball for the convert.

The three single points were all tallied in the second quarter. The Hurricanes got the first when Coder Morris was rouged on Cpl. Fred Kijek's kick. The Navy tied it up on a single by Sub-Lt. Don Boxer and went one up when AC2. Stukus was rouged on OS. Bill Balmer's kick.

The tie left the Navy in second place with seven points, four behind the pace-setting Hurricanes. Hamilton and Toronto Balmy Beach are scheduled to play this Saturday and the winner would move into second position as both are now tied for third with six points.

FOUND SLEEPING IN BARN

Newmarket, Ont., Oct. 21—(CP)—Seventeen-year-old Harold Ball of Toronto who yesterday escaped prison guards at Guelph Reformatory when he made a bid for freedom, was taken into custody by York County police early today.

Constable Ronald Watt, who made the arrest, said that Ball and a transient acquaintance were sleeping in a barn on the farm of Herbert Dunham, two miles north of Eagle Street, on Younge Street Highway. The escaped prisoner was wearing prison garb when picked up.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

FAILING TO COPE WITH THE powerful aerial and speed attacks of the St. Mikes "Irish", Paul Goyette's Albert College junior Interscholastic gridders absorbed a 31 to 6 defeat and now we find Coach Jack Doran's Irish undefeated in city Interscholastic football circles. Bob Bunton and Jack Wardhaugh pitched forward passes for the Irish until they left the Albert kids befuddled and bewildered. When Goyette's kids watched Bunton, Wardhaugh was firing and vice versa, while on the ground Don Barrett, Bob Temple and Bob Wilson were literally runnning over and around the helpless Albert squad. It was an out and out triumph of speed over weight and power. The Albert kids tried to cope with the Irish avalanche via the aerial —attack, while their only solution might have been plunging. Even this phase failed as the speedier Irish were breaking through the Albert line almost at will to smother plays behind the Albert line.

THE GAME, DESPITE THE ALbert rout, saw wide open football and biased fans all along the line. Two fistic encounters were seen among the youthful school supporters to add spice and color to the picture. A goodly number of adults were on hand and no doubt a larger gallery will be at the Collegiate campus Friday afternoon, when the Collegians have their last scheduled shot at the undefeated Irish. In the meantime the B.C.I. seniors tangle with the Albert College seniors in a game this afternoon. The only players to show any degree of aggressive football for Albert were Jeff Waite, Menner and Bruce Orr, as the fighting Irish literally halted Freddie Aboud in his proverbial tracks. Skipper Goyette tried Aboud on plunges in the initial quarter, but the Irish battered their way through to pin the hefty Aboud before he could get under motion. The season's first grid casualty saw Doug Green, Irish snap, sustain two cracked ribs early in the game.

AFTER VIEWING THE STYLE of baseball played by the St. Louis Cardinals in the recent world series, Ed Bang, sports editor of the Cleveland News, came to the conclusion the game would be much better off if all the clubs in the two leagues adopted that used by the Cardinals. "The Cards don't bat any different, or field any different, or throw any different than other clubs in the two major loops, but it was evident to all and sundry they do think different and run different and consequently put on an article of slam-bang baseball that leaves customers gasping and cheering," he wrote.

"They don't know the gospel of running from first to second on a single to the outfield, and either pull up pronto or round the bag and then retrace their steps to the midway. It's a case of two or nothing practically every time out with the Cards. It is a pleasure to watch those jack rabbits scoot around the paths. They know they have the speed and realize this swiftness is in their favor, because it causes the rival outfielders to hurry their throws. They proved conclusively no team has to be afraid of the Yankees from this time forth."

"It comes down to the fact that the Cards were sharp and the Yanks weren't," summed up Tom Meany of New York PM, "and you can attribute the reason to whatever you wish. Maybe the Yanks really have the better club, as so many still insist, but you can't deny the fact the series, as played, showed the Cardinals to be vastly superior. One thing dead certain—the Yanks aren't going to frighten another National League club for a long time."

THAT WAS REALLY A HIGH-class wrestling bout Earl McCready and Billie Watson staged at the Hume arena last night. There was none of that dock walloper illegal slugging business as the principals stuck straight to the rule book and confined their muscle-bending antics to orthodox wrestling. After 60 full minutes the headliners were still without a decison and the patrons left the arena quite satisfied they had been treated to the best of the best in rasslin' circles. Such could not be said of the Martinez-Wentworth bout, which was poorly matched and saw the villainous Mexican champion flatten Wentworth in less than two minutes. Martinez entered the ring before the main bout and challenged the winner between Watson and McCready. The "mad Mex." —claims he has won eleven straight bouts in Belleville and demanded a main bout spot. Well, either Watson or McCready will accommodate him and winner take all, they agreed.

REMEMBER WHEN JACK DUNN owner and manager of the Baltimore Orioles in the International League, died of a heart attack at the Maryland city fourteen years ago today? Dunn's Orioles won the Int. loop pennant seven time in a row—from 1919 to 1925 inclusive—a record that still stands.

ARIZONANS WATCH GAME OF CRICKET FOR FIRST TIME

Service Teams From R.A.F. Shed Blue to Give Demonstration

NO ENTHUSIASM

By JACK LEFLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

MESA, Ariz., Oct. 22 — (AP) — Up until today cricket, to most Arizonans, was merely the name of a pesky insect that gnaws holes in a guy's best suit and attempts to cover up the crime with innocent chirps.

The more erudite Westerners were aware that Englishmen played a game of rather vague description called cricket. A cup of tea somehow seemed associated with home plate — beg pardon, wicket.

But that sort of misunderstanding is all past. Or is it?

Cricket, as a sport, came to Arizona last night. Not only was the match in the local baseball park and the first cricket most of the 300 spectators had seen, but it was believed to be the first ever played under lights anywhere.

Cadets of the Royal Air Force from nearby Falcon Field shed their sky blue flying uniforms and donned appropriate cricket raiment for an "international" match between English and Scots teams.

The English won, 103 to 71, in one inning of three hours.

Politely Restrained

American spectators were politely restrained throughout the proceedings. They followed the multiplying score in a puzzled manner until a booming drive over the fence brought them to their feet with shouts af "a homer!"

They retired to their seats when the announcer advised that the batsman had just knocked "a full boundary." Anyway, it was good for six runs.

Lights may be all right for American baseball, but cricket always will be played in the daytime, declared Flight Lieut. R. R. A. Paton, a former member of the Clydesdale Cricket Club of Glasgow, who did some mighty hot bowling for the winners. When cricket games last for two or three days, nights are needed for rest and relaxation, he pointed out.

The Falcon Field Wing Commander added much light to the attractions of cricket when he explained:

"In England the playing field is of beautiful green grass. Stately trees line the boundaries. There are beautiful women wearing those floppy hats. And we have tea."

That must be cricket.

PATRICK SHIFTS PIKE TO DEFENCE

Predicts He Will Have One of the Best Defence Lines in N. H. L.

Winnipeg, Oct. 22—(CP)—Lester Patrick, Manager of New York Rangers in the National League League, predicted today he would have one of the best defence lines in the N. H. L. this season after shifting Alf Pike, 25-year-old Winnipeg-born star, from a forward to a defenceman. Trying out for a defence spot also is Gordon Davidson, star with New York Rovers of the Eastern United States Amateur League last season.

Missing from last season's lineup are two defencemen, Bill Juzda, who has joined the Royal Canadian Air Force and Art Coulter, now in the United States Coast Guard.

The conversion of a forward to a defenceman is not new for Patrick. Some years ago he shifted Ott Heller, a forward for many years, back to defence. Patrick's fourth defenceman is Babe Pratt, who has been making a great showing so far at the training camp here.

Many of hockey's finest players failed to perform their best until converted from a forward to a defenceman. Among them are: Tommy Anderson, Eddie Goodfellow, Dit Clapper, King Clancy, Charlie Conacher, Happy Emms, and the late Babe Seibert.

Patrick and Coach Frank Boucher said they were much impressed with Pike's showing so far. He has been playing with both Heller and Pratt.

Although Pike appears awkward on the ice, he breaks fast and has a sizzling left-hand shot. He started his hockey career as a forward with Winnipeg Monarchs and was a member of that team when they won the Memorial Cup in 1937.

Unanswered question:

A lot of ball clubs may need rebuilding before next spring, but don't look for much trading at the December meetings. . . . Somebody asked Jim Gallagher, the Cubs' general manager, about trade prospects and he summed up the whole situation this way: "Who is going to sell a ball player not eligible for the draft? And who is going to buy one that is?"

Ford Motor Company Subscribes $5,000,000

Windsor, Ont., Oct. 22 (CP)—The Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, has subscribed $5,000,000 to the Third Victory Loan. Wallace R. Campbell, President, announced this morning.

Jim Henry to Play With Staff Clerks

Ottawa, Oct 22—(CP) — Sugar Jim Henry of Winnipeg, goal-tender for New York Rangers of the National Hockey League last season, will be net-minder for the Canadian Military Staff Clerks team in the National Defence Hockey League here this winter.

The young Rangers' star was awarded to the Staff Clerks at a league meeting last night at which available former pro players were allotted to the various teams in the circuit. Previously it had been decided that each team must be limited to the former pros.

As it stands now, here's the line-up of ex-professionals among the teams: R.C.O.C., Paul (Polly) Drouin and Kenny Kilrea, both of Ottawa; R.C.A.S.C., Kenny Reardon of Winnipeg and Neil Colville of Edmonton; R.C.E., Joe Cooper and Alex Shibicky, both Winnipeggers; C.M.S.C., Sugar Jim Henry; R.C.A.M.C., Mac Colville of Edmonton and Jack McGill.

The league starts Nov. 4.

Lightning Strikes Out of Blue Sky

Harriston, Ont., Oct. 22—(CP)—Cmoing out of a blue sky late Wednesday afternoon, a lightning bolt struck a barn on the 9th concession of Minto township, setting it on fire, knocked unconscious the owner, Albert McConachie, and knocked unconsious a team of horses.

McConachie was returning with a team of horses from the field where he had been plowing when he was struck. It was some time before he regained consciousness.

Mrs. McConachie rescued the cows in the barn but guinea fowl and two pigs in the lane leading to the barn were killed by the bolt.

The barn was a complete loss, the season's crops and implements being destroyed by the flames. The farm is one and a half miles west of Harriston.

The Harriston fire brigade managed to save the large hen house and other buildings.

AT THE BELLE

"Are Husbands Necessary?"

If audience reaction means anything, then the Belle theatre has a hit on its hands in "Are Husbands Necessary?" starring Ray Milland and Betty Field, this delightful bit of Paramount comedy of a happy-go-lucky married couple opened last night. It's one long chuckle from beginning to end.

Filmed from the best-seller Isabel Scott Rorick novel, "Mr. and Mrs. Cugat," the picture tells the hilarious story of George and Liz Cugat, a happy-tho-married pair who have at least one thing in common, the habit of "whiffling." To "whiffle," according to Webster, is to prevaricate, to tell little white lies. Both George and Liz indulge in the vice when it suits their purpose which is often.

The fun really begins when Patricia Morison a sultry siren from George's past shows up just after divorcing her seventh husband. She sets her cap for George who of course whiffles—to Liz, to his boss to everybody in sight. Patricia as George's old flame, makes the film fairly sizzle, particularly when she turns up at a costume ball in a revealing Queen of Sheba outfit and George appears as a knight in shining armor. The armor is more than a little tarnished by the time the uproarious evening is over.

Contributing mightily to the fun of "Are Husbands Necessary?" is Eugene Pallette, a chubby millionaire who finally takes the dangerous Miss Morison off George's hands byl marrying her. Other funsters in the cast are Charles Dingle, as George's crochety boss, Leif Erickson, Elizabeth Risdon, Richard Haydn, Kathleeen Lockhare, Phillip Terry and Cecil Kellaway. Norman Taurog directed.

Last night's audience liked "Are Husbands Necessary?" you will, too.

"Bullet Scars," Exciting

Excitement, thrills and melodrama that pulses with danger are the ingredients of the Belle's companion feature "Bullet Scars." From start to finish, this tightly-knit screen drama holds its audience taut with suspense.

Regis Toomey, Adele Longmire, Howard da Silva head the cast of this exciting tale of a small-town doctor who falls into the clutches of a deadly gangster mob. The gangsters, fleeing after they have performed a daring bank hold-up, take refuge at what they grimly call their "hunting lodge," a macabre, walled-in country estate.

They summon a doctor from the nearby town to take care of one of their mob who has been wounded. The sister of the wounded man, a pretty nurse, is also brought to the scene, and with her aid, the doctor performs the necessary operation. The patient is so far gone, however, that there seems little hope of saving him, and the gangster chief smoothly persuades the doctor to stay on at the lodge to take care of him. The doctor, who has been told that the patient was wounded in a hunting accident, believes the story at first, but soon realizes that it was really quite a different kind of accident. He realizes, too, that he and the nurse are virtual prisoners. He won't attempt to escape without her, though, and she refuses to leave her brother. How they extricate themselves from danger and bring the killers to justice makes a thoroughly thrilling finish.

With three bullet-streaked entertainment "hits" already notched on their six-guns, Buck Jones, Tim McCoy and Raymond Hatton are scoring in the fourth of their record-breaking Rough Riders series, "Below the Border," now at the Capitol theatre. Their new adventures take the trio to a hotbed of trouble near the Mexican border where they track down a gun-crazy mob of cattle thieves. Scott R. Dunlap produced for Monogram.

"Submarine Zone"

Drama . . . with the power of plunging pistons! Action . . . with the speed of flashing bullets! Romance . . . with the throb of an all-conquering love! Every second fraught with terror! Every scene charged with thrills! Every kiss stalked by danger!

Every action picture you ever dreamed of now rolled into the floating inferno of passion . . . "Submarine Zone" Columbia's nerve-lashing drama with Pat O'Brien and Constance Bennett at the Capitol theatre, is a thrill-laden story of adventure . . . of love and cowardice . . . glory and vengeance . . . disaster and escape!

"Escape To Glory," includes in its cast, in addition to the co-stars, such players as John Halliday, Melville Cooper, Alan Baxter and Marjorie Gateson. John Brahm directed, from a screenplay by P. J. Wolfson.

The thrilling serial "Spy Smasher" and a cartoon complete the bill.

Know Etiquette for All Occasions

Are You Awkward at Good-by?

Saying good-by at a party is a simple thing. But how many women do it badly, leave an impression of awkwardness, poor manners!

It's correct for a departing guest to rise when she says it's time for her to leave—and then she walks directly to the door with her hosts. To stay seated while murmuring, "Really I must go," to stand chatting endlessly in the hall is inconsiderate to hosts and other guests.

Should you say good-by to each of the guests? Not if the party is a large one. Nod to those nearby, say "I've had a lovely time" to your hosts—and you'll leave a delightful impression.

Knowing etiquette keeps you poised, gracious at all times. When introduced to a man you have met before, don't remind him of the previous introduction if he doesn't remember you. If in doubt about what to wear at a party, ask your hostess, "Is it formal?" Using your visiting card to write a message, cross out the "Miss" or "Mrs." before your name.

Our 32-page booklet tells the correct thing to do on all occasions as hostess or guest. Gives etiquette for public places, at teas, dances, when travelling—for the younger and older sets.

NAZI PROPAGANDA IN NEW PHASE

Campaign of Threats Combined With Allegations, Without Independent Evidence

New York, Oct. 22 — (AP) — The German High Command concluded its communique today with a charge that British planes had attacked a German dressing station on the Egyptian front and with this menacing remark:—

"From this the German High Command is compelled to draw the conclusion that the British government no longer attaches any value to maintenance of the convention of Geneva."

This apparently is a new phase of the German propaganda campaign of threats combined with allegations, unsupported by any independent evidence, of Allied actions contrary to international pacts and the accepted rules of war.

The Geneva convention pledges its signatures to respect for the Red Cross emblem of medical services in the field.

The German charge in this instance was:—

"The German Supreme Command announces:—

"During daytime of Oct. 20 British fighter-bombers operating on the North African front attacked a German main dressing station clearly marked with the red cross. The operating tent was destroyed. Wounded and the sanitary staff suffered casualties.

"This means that the British are continuing to adhere to an attitude which is contrary to international law and that they do not pay any consideration to the most primitive rules of humanity."

The German charge apparently is an attempt to weaken Britain's stand in the issue raised when Germany began shackling prisoners of war. British authorities announced the Germans were violating a Geneva agreement against such practices.

CHAPTER 26
A Call From Max

When the music ended, they went back to the table, their hands joined.

Katherine said, her dark eyes warm and lovely, "We're making plans to take our vacations together, Harriet and Larry and Ralph and I. Can we count you two in? We're open or suggestions but don't mention the expensive places."

Harriet said quickly, "There are short cruises to Quebec that aren't expensive. I've never been out of the United States. I've never been on a ship. That's my suggestion."

"Sounds okay to me, honey," Larry said. "Are you in, Steve, Judith?"

Stephen did not look at Judith. He was waiting for her to speak she thought. Quebec with her friends and her sister. Why not? It would be fun. Everything was fun tonight.

She said, "It sounds grand. I've always wanted to see Quebec, too."

Stephen's eyes quickened. "It's all right with me, too. Swell."

Ralph asked, "All settled then? Good! You win, Harriet. We ought to have a great time. We'll sail from New York."

He was interrupted by Mary Anderson, daughter of a prominent attorney. Stephen had been seen frequently with her at football games and dances.

"Hello, everybody. I hate to break up a good party, but I wonder if I could borrow Stephen for a minute. There's a boy over at my table who said he played football with you. Against you, Steve." She put her arm through Stephen's and smiled upon Judith. "I won't keep him long."

Judith could feel sparks flying from her eyes. She said sharply, "Keep him as long as you like." An instant later she regretted her quick anger as Mary and Stephen walked across the ballroom to Mary's large party. Absurd, to have made a sharp retort because Mary, who collected elegible men as she collected expensive hats, had been sweetly malicious. The girl annoyed her with her flaunting superiority and her attitude that any social function would be a failure if she were not there.

Ralph grinned, "If Katherine will let me, I'd like to dance with you, Judith."

Passing Mary's party, she saw Stephen so engrossed in being friendly that he did not see her. Mary was still hanging on to his arm.

Ralph said, "Stephen has made the grade." He looked at her. "Do not be a fool, my pet. Do you want all your good work to go for nothing? Can't you see she's after him?"

"It doesn't matter."

But deep inside she knew it mattered, that suddenly it mattered terribly.

Some hours later she was sitting beside Stephen in his car parked at the curb before her home. The moon was riding high in the sky.

He loked at her as though suddenly he disliked her intensely.

His voice was flat. "Yes, a good day for golf, a very fine day for golf." A few minutes later they were walking up the path to the porch. He forced a smile when he stepped inside. "All in? good night. Call you."

Judith was too tired to think or feel. Halfway up the stairs, she paused wondering whether she was not unwilling to think and feel.

That week Emily sent a snapshot of a fat, laughing baby and wrote, "I saw Phyllis in New York yesterday. We had tea. She's going to Reno in a few weeks and after her divorce she's going to marry a man years older than she—a man, Tim tells me, who has made a good bit of money and who is, Tim confessed, rather on the ordinary side. She met him on her honeymoon with Ames. Funny, I hope she'll be happy because I couldn't help feeling sorry for her. She's so empty inside and I'm afraid she'll never know what makes living really worth while as I know it with Tim and my baby and my house and Tim's parents who are the proudest grandparents in the world. Our baby is the only baby in the world. Isn't it queer, Judith, that now that I can have a mink coat I don't really want one? Aren't you ever coming up to see us?"

It was not until the latter part of that week that Stephen called again.

Plans for the cruise to Quebec progressed nicely. Judith was remembering the last time she had planned a cruise and the clothes she had bought to wear. She was thinking of Max who came and went in her mind these placid summer days. For there were times when Max was as remote as a dream and she felt as one released, at other times her love and longing were as acute as they had ever been. In those contradictory thoughts there was Stephen, a little aloof recently, whose voice over the telephone was neither precise nor demanding. It was as though the new feeling for him, a new importance to being with him was obstructed by Max. She found herself looking at Stephen in a new way, at both the fineness and strength of his brown hands, at the greater determination in his jaw and at the clear blue eyes behind which were thoughts she did not entirely share. If she were remote with him during the weeks that preceeded the cruise, it was because she found herself self-conscious with him and therefore immensely aware of him. Stephen mattered. He mattered terribly. But Max mattered, too. The two were in conflict and somehow she could not separate them.

It was Wednesday and they were sailing on Saturday. A certain Wednesday in July, 1940, another day always to be remembered. The evening was humid when Judith came home from the office and lingered on the front porch with her mother.

Isobel Barth, sitting in a white wicker chair, looked cool and pretty in an orchid linen dress.

"The children were never as excited about Christmas as Harriet is over this trip. I'll be glad when you get off, dear, and I know that nothing has happened to prevent your going."

Judith, sitting on the top step, her white hat in her hand, smiled at her mother.

"You sound wistful. Wouldn't you like to join us?"

"Not on a ship, dear, thank you. I was sea-sick once from a mere bay trip. Do you really think it's

"Of course. These aren't troubled safe now with the war on?" waters. It's absolutely safe."

"I'm glad to hear you say it. I think all of you need a holiday. Next year perhaps all our young men will be in training camps. Not Larry or Ralph possibly, but Stephen. He doesn't support his mother, does he?"

"No. His father left enough for that." Stephen in camp. She had not thought of that before. Stephen gone for a year?

Presently Nicholas, Judith's father, came. Big, jolly, handsome, he sat down beside Judith.

"All set for your trip?" he asked. "We get the kids, don't we, Isobel?"

"Nicholas! Kids! The children are staying with us, of course."

Judith smiled. Then she thought "I'm contented. . . . And once I thought I would never exchange my New York life for Clinton again. But here I sit on the porch in Clinton looking at mother's flowers in the little rock garden and at these old trees on the lawn and I'm contented. Am I not as alive as I was in New York? Clinton hasn't dulled my senses. I'm not enduring it here. I could leave, but I want to stay. I like it. I like to look at my mother and father. I like neighbors that speak to me and Mr. Overton who calls my father Nicholas and who goes to our church. I even care that Clinton is going to have the voting machines that Stephen told me all about and a new highway and a new art museum.

"I'd like to have something of mine in the new museum. I've thought of trying oils again. I care about all of it that I once left. Perhaps I was smug and arrogant and superior. Max said that people change. You change without knowing it for a long time, and when you look back at the person you were, you can't conceive of ever having been that person."

Bessie announced dinner and they went in. Some minutes later the telephone in the downstairs hall rang. Judith arose quickly and went to it. Stephen? But it was long distance. New York calling, and soon the connection was made.

"Hello."

"Max."

One syllable, but clear, precise and demanding. Max! Her eyes darkened with excitement and she had to place her left hand on the wall to steady herself. A thousand questions sprang to her mind but she couldn't say anything.

In her mind she saw him as clearly as though he had been standing beside her . . . the strong features, the alert blue eyes, the fair hair, the high forehead and the mouth that was both sensitive and sensuous.

She said, "No!" and somehow, strangely, there was humor in it.

"Yes."

To break the tormenting silence she asked, "How are you, Max?"

"I'm all right. I discovered you weren't living in New York so naturally I called you there." A silence again before he chuckled. "That 'No' is yours. You never fail to delight me."

"I'm surprised that I'm polite to you. Perhaps I'm polite because you took me so suddenly."

"Perhaps I intended that."

"It's been a long time, Max."

"Too long." He sounded tired then. "But no matter what you have thought of me I have not been indifferent to you. I couldn't write—wouldn't write. Letters cause only misunderstandings. I was afraid you'd be away."

"I'm going away Saturday."

It was the gentle Max who said, "I have never wanted to hurt you or to be harsh with you but—but you are not going away Saturday, darling, except to New York and to me. I am very humble where you are concerned, but you are not going away."

"I am." And yet she could see herself meeting Max in New York on Saturday.

He mentioned a certain hotel and the time, 4.30 in the afternoon. Then it was the gentle Max who spoke again, "Good-bye dear."

Little Benny's Note Book

I was sitting on our front steps and pop came home from his office saying, My, what an attractive aroma, and what's more and better, it seems to be coming from my own house to greet my own hungry nostrils.

Meaning a swell smell of cooking, and I said, This is Nora's day off so I bet ma cooked one of her specials.

Then we mustn't neglect to praise it in unstinted terms, pop sa d. Life holds no torment for a woman worse than watching her menfolk consuming one of her specials in unappreciative silence, he said.

And we started to eat supper and right butit was chicken pot pie I've tasted since the last one you made, and praise of pot pies can go no higher. Have you noticed it, Benny? he said.

Sure, it's great, I said, and pop said, What an inadequate word, such understatement. Why, it's a poem conceived by a goddess and illustrated by an angel, he said.

Now William, really, I mean really, there's such a thing as exaggeration, ma said, and pop said, Not where this pot pie is concerned, my dear. Shakesbeer himself couldn't exaggerate this nosegay to the nostrils, this paradise to the palate, he said.

Well then after this we might as well go out to a resterant on Nora's day off, because this pot pie came straight from the delicatessen and all I did was heat it, ma said, and pop said, Then that proves my point and makes the whole thing more remarkable, because if you can make a delicatessen pot pie taste like this just by one personal touch, by the superficial gesture of warming it up, I give up, I simply dont understand it.

Ceiling Wholesale Price for Poultry Is Possibility

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Oct. 22—(CP) — Establishment of ceiling wholesale prices for poultry, on a zoning basis similar to that for beef, was forecast in informed quarters today.

Supplies of poultry have been plentiful during recent months and retailers have been governed by the ceiling applied on the basis of prices charged during the basic period Sept. 15-Oct. 11 last year.

But to bring wholesale prices generally into line through the country, it was understood the Wartime Prices and Trade Board has considered the establishment of zones within which the wholesale prices of poultry products will be established.

In poultry, as in beef, the retail price would be in line with the permitted wholesale price.

It was not known whether the proposed order would allow for adjustments in wholesale poultry prices throughout the year to give the producer his highest return following periods of most expensive feeding. The beef price adjustment is designed to compensate the farmer who feeds beef cattle during the Winter for the higher costs he has to carry in comparison with grass feeding during the summer.

Under the beef order, the prices of cuts and portions of beef are established for 15 zones across the Dominion. The project was seen that less zones set up under the poultry order would be less numerous.

Production of poultry meat has been encouraged by enlargement of flocks to meet British requirements for 45,000,000 dozen Canadian eggs this year.

An indication of the enlarged fall demand was given by figures on cold storage holdings of turkeys. At September 1 this year the holdings were 3,500,000 pounds. At October 1 the total had been reduced to 2,000,000. At September 1 last year the cold storage holdings were 1,200,000 pounds and a month later 900,000 pounds, a reduction of only 300,000 pounds.

Montreal Youths Fired From Jobs In Harvest Fields

Calgary, Oct. 22 (CP)—Their hands covered with blisters, but determined not to go home "licked," more than a dozen Montreal youths got "fired" or "laid off" from harvesting jobs in Alberta wheat fields came back to Calgary last night.

Some said they had been fired because they could not keep up with experienced farm hands in pitching bundles. Others said their employers took them to the nearest bus stop and shipped them back to Calgary when rain started. Farmers could not afford to board them, the boys said.

Three Montreal youths said they received $4 each for pitching bundles a day and half near Carstairs only to have a thief rifle the pocket of the group's leader Tuesday night. The thief, they said, took $7 which had been budgetted for food and shelter until they got other jobs. Among them they had 22 cents last night but one had landed a job in a lumber mill and two others will go window washing tomorrow.

"We had been promised at least $4 a day in Montreal," said Munro, "and when we found we were only getting $4 for a day and a half, we kind of lost heart."

Eychene, huskiest of the group, interjected that they had no kick against the food.

"Those meals we got were the best I ever tasted," he said.

Axis Repudiation Of Accepted Laws May Be Probable

New York, Oct. 22 (AP)—German propaganda took another ominous step today along a course which, although still obscure, might lead toward Axis repudiation of the accepted laws of humanity in warfare under the pretext that the Allies first violated the codes.

The Berlin radio gave circulation to statements attributed to the semi-official German commentary, Deutsche Diplomatisch-Politische Korrespondenz, that Germany, Italy and Japan have proof "that on the enemy side formal orders were given for warfare contrary to humanity."

The statement added the threat: "The day will come eventually when those responsible will be called to account for their actions."

This newest outburst followed Japan's assertion that captured United States airmen would be punished for inhumanities during bomb raids on Japanese soil, and German charges that the British forces attackd a dressing station for wounded on the north African front.

Reuters quoted a Vichy broadcast of dispatches from Stockholm as reporting that Germany and her associates had conferred on plans to denounce the Geneva convention agreements on Red Cross and war prisoners on the grounds that the 1864 convention had been violated by the United Nations.

Referring to the Japanese action against American fliers, the German diplomatic commentary declared:

"Although attacks contrary to International Law against peaceful residential quarters, places of culture and hospitals . . . must be considered as serious, these attacks are not and were not acts committed arbitrarily by some individuals. Public statements made by Air Marshal Harris and U. S. Air General Eaker clearly reveal that those repsonsible for it in London and Washington not only approve of such acts, but that they have given special orders against German children and women."

The commentary spoke bitterly of the blockade of Germany which it purported to be "mass murdering." It said that in London and Washington "hypocrisy was even driven so far that measures of the hunger blockade were not regarded as being contrary to humanity because no blood was being shed by such methods."

The Berlin radio said the Japanese official gazette had published a law permitting factories to apply for prisoners of war as workers.

There have been reports that some Americans captured in early stages of the Pacific war had been put to work on docks and such projects, but this was the first intimation that Japan might put them to work in factories.

The Hague Convention of 1899 provides that prisoners of war may be used as workers provided their tasks have nothing to do with military operations, and they shall be paid at the same rate as troops of the country into whose hands they have fallen.

AGAIN PIPES 'BOYS UP HILLS'

Piper Red Campbell Had Bagpipe Damaged by Shrapnel at Dieppe

By WILLIAM STEWART
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in England, Oct. 22 — (CP) — Piper Gordon (Red) Campbell who wears the Balmoral of the Cameron Highlanders on a head of short-cropped hair responsible for his nickname is back at the old training job of "piping the boys up the hills."

There's a brand new sheepskin in the crook of his arm as the 28-year-old soldier from Transcona, Man., helps the route-marching Camerons along with a skirl of his pipes.

"The bag that was on my pipes when my company gave them to me was put out of order at Dieppe," said Red. "Shrapnel did it—left nine pinholes in the sheepskin. So I've a new one."

Campbell went through the big raid armed with a revolver as well as his pipes and used one and the other as the circumstances warranted. The Camerons fought their way more than three miles inland and Red was in the thick of it.

Gets Rid of Ammunition

"Things were so crowded, you couldn't tell whose shots were putting the Germans down," he grinned. "But I sure got rid of a lot of ammunition."

When Red got back to the beach for the re-embarkation he hadn't yet had time to blow one wailing note. And for quite some time after he was too busy tending wounded for anything else.

"We were aboard a destroyer stalling around picking up survivors," Red recalled. "I was down below helping with the wounded because the first-aid men seemed short-handed.

"When I came up after doing some bandaging somebody asked me to play a tune. I played requests one after another. There was dive-bombing going on."

The wounded and exhausted men sprawled about the destroyer in the midst of that air attack heard such tunes from Red's punctured pipes as the March to the Battlefield, The Road to the Isles, The Blue Bonnets, The Hundred Pipers and Bonnie Dundee.

"The longer I blew, the bigger got the holes in the sheepskin," said Red. "But it lasted until we were back in our camp."

The Camerons took five battle-dressed pipers to Dieppe and lost three. Red said Chance gave him a part in the raid and Luck pulled him through unscratched.

STEEL VESSEL IS LAUNCHED

First Craft of Kind Since 1919 Slides Into Pictou Harbor

(By GORDON McKEAN)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Pictou, N.S., Oct. 22 (CP) —The Victoria Park, first steel ship launched in Nova Scotia since 1919 slid into Pictou Harbor today, six months after her keel was laid last February.

As the trim hull plowed into the harbor from whence sailed the Royal William, pioneer steam propelled vessel on the Atlantic run, cranes swung the keel plate of another ship in the vacated berth. Rivetting guns resumed their momentarily interrupted hammering on the hulls of three sister ships in the yard, also destined to baptise their keels here shortly.

The shipyard here was started from scratch the end of last November and the first keel was laid February 26. Two others were laid shortly after and a fourth ship-building berth was later added to the yard.

Mrs. Robert Fraser crashed the traditional bottle of champagne across the bows of the Victoria Park as Nova Scotia's first victory ship started to move. Cheers of the crowd and whistles of harbor craft mingled as the 327-foot freighter slid smoothly into the harbor at nine this morning.

Resignations Still Matter of Conjecture

Toronto, Oct. 22 — (CP) — Reasons for the resignation of Mitchell Hepburn as Ontario Premier and the succession of Gordon Conant to his post were still a matter of conjecture today, with both men standing by their statements of last night which gave no exact reasons for the move.

While there were some suggestions that Mr. Hepburn's resignation grew out of his espousal of the cause of the Communist Party in the campaign to be declared a legal organization, this was somewhat discounted as Mr. Conant has been equally active on behalf of the Communists.

This line of speculation was suggested also in a newspage story in the Toronto Evening Telegram which said that there was talk that Mr. Hepburn's appearance on a public platform with Tim Buck caused a rupture in the cabinet. However, the Telegram said in an editorial that Mr. Conant associated himself with the former premier in urging the Minister of Justice to release Buck when the Communist leader surrendered to police recently.

The Toronto Star, in a newspage story under an Ottawa dateline, said that in the Dominion capital it is felt "that the Hepburn retirement cannot help but improve Dominion-Ontario war co-operation and Ontario's relations with the other provinces."

The Star added that in Ottawa it was felt that acute dissension in the Ontario cabinet led to Mr. Hepburn's resignation.

WALL STREET

New York, Oct. 22—(AP)—Stocks generally leaned backward in today's market although little if any weakness was in evidence.

While there were scattered spots of resistance near the fourth hour, fractional declines had the best of the argument.

Among share losers were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Goodyear, Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Anaconda, Du Pont, Westinghouse, Eastman Kodak and Montgomery Ward.

Among Canadian stocks McIntyre Mines and Hiram Walkers gained fractions while Dome eased 1-8 and Distillers Seagram 1-4.

Douglas Aircraft stumbled in the forenoon after moving up Wednesday on the $5 dividend declaration duplicating a 1941 payment. Sufficient bids eventually were forthcoming to stem the slide in this issue.

BRITISH WARSHIP BLASTS WAY TO RUSSIA

A British warship opens up "with everything" as German planes sweep down upon the largest Allied convoy bringing aid to Russia via an Arctic port. For four days enemy torpedo planes and submarines hurled themselves at the well-protected freighters in a frantic but vain effort to halt the flow of vital materials so necessary to the Soviet's valiant war effort.

LARGEST CONVOY FIGHTS WAY TO RUSSIA

The biggest Allied convoy of the war reached Russia recently with a great quantity of war material for the battling Red army, but it didn't get through without a bloody nose. Above you see one merchant ship burning after it was hit. Commodore of the convoy was Rear-Admiral E. K. Hoddam-Wetham.

Enemy Forced To Move With Extreme Caution

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Whatever the reason the slow-motion pace of Japan's attempt to regain lost ground in the Solomons, it is so striking a departure from previous practice as to invite conjecture.

The implication is that the enemy is forced to move with extreme caution. For the first time, except for abortive attacks in New Guinea, Japanese leadership has been dealt a hand with certain major trumps lacking. It can count neither on surprise nor aid superiority. If there is a grim joker in the deck, it is apt to be disclosed in the American hand, not the Japanese, this time.

If there is any parallel for the week lost since Japanese landings in force were effected on Guadalcanal without a major battle developing either ashore or afloat, offhand memories of Nipponese blitzkrieg methods in China, the Philippines, Malaya, the Dutch Indies and Burma do not call it to mind. Those campaigns were driven forward at amazing speed.

General Douglas MacArthur's stand on Bataan caused the only previous notable delay in the Japanese conquest schedule, unless his defence of New Guinea has also upset Tokyo's plans. There is not much doubt also that his long-range bombers now are contributing vitally to the defence of Guadalcanal in two ways.

The information they supply as to the whereabouts and movements of Japanese warcraft and supply and troop convoys in the Solomons area may be more vital in setting the stage for the ultimate clash than the damage their homes do, serious as that must be. As air scouts as well as bombers those planes have peen ranging the island-dotted seas for hundreds of miles northwest of Guadalcanal every day. It was from them, unquestionably, that word of many enemy warships and auxiliaries still deployed in the Solomons area came to supplement navy patrol plane reports.

The prime uncertainty with which the foe must reckon is the whereabouts and strength of American naval forces. A substantial part of the air forces available to the Nipponese commander in the Solomons zone, certainly a navy man, must be seeking that information. That not only limits the air power that can be thrown into action over Guadalcanal to aid a land attack or shelter additional landings. It sharply restricts Japanese ability to screen important movements of fleets or convoys from American eyes.

The Japanese commander also is feeling the lack of fifth-column agents with means of communication in the Solomons. They helped materially at every preceding stage of the long-plotted Japanese attempt to master the far Pacific. Now the delay in development of the expected full-scale Japanese attack to recapture a lost and vitally important air base warrants the conclusion that its commander must go at it blind.

Guadalcanal is now a matter of "face" with the Japanese as well as an important element in military strategy.

Don't Suffer Gas Pains, Upset Stomach, "Nerves"

Syntona Herbal Compound Will Aid Your Digestion—Relieve Gas, Bloat, Sour Acid Risings and Constipation. Tells How it Helped Her.

The great popularity of Syntona is not surprising, because this grand herbal compound has given such widespread good results that it is vouched for by hundreds of grateful men and women.

Syntona acts on stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels, relieving gas, indigestion, sour, upset stomach, and resulting pains in chest and side, nervousness, loss of sleep, backache and rheumatic aches and pains. Aids in the elimination of excess acids and poisonous waste and promotes better assimilation of food for increased strength and energy.

Miss Martha Husband, 30 George Street, Hamilton, Ontario, says: "About 13 months ago I fell victim to a serious illness that rendered me helpless for many months. As I began to recover I became a constant sufferer from gas pains, bloating and distress in my stomach after eating. Even the lightest food distressed me with sour acid-risings. The gas pressure and heavy, full feeling in my stomach kept me in a highly nervous condition. I would often be so uncomfortable that I was unable to get to sleep for hours after going to bed at night.

"A relative who had used Syntona with good results advised me to try it and I cannot begin to tell you what a help it has been in relieving the gas, sour acid risings and that distressed feeling after meals. It also gave me a good appetite and my nerves have calmed down so that I get more restful sleep at night. I am very thankful that I learned about Syntona at a time when I needed help so badly and am glad of this opportunity to recommend it to others who suffer from this trouble."

Get yourself a treatment of Syntona today, in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST. See how it will help you, too.

R.A.F. REACHES ACROSS ALPS TO BOMB GENOA

Fascist Arsenal City of Turin Also Attacked

Strong Force of Aircraft Used and Even Rome Concedes "Great Damage"

NO PLANES MISSING

By WES GALLAGHER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 23 (AP) — The mighty bomber arm of the R.A.F. reached across the Alps last night to strike the Italian homeland its heaviest air blow of the war, hitting Genoa with such a weight of explosives that even Rome conceded "great damage."

Turin, the Fascist arsenal city in the north also was hit but apparently the chief assault fell on the harbor and industries of Genoa, Italy's big northern Mediterranean port.

The Air Ministry mentioned "a strong force of aircraft," but did not disclose just how many planes were in it.

But the Italian communique spoke of the "notable dimensions" of the assault and Hitler's Axis partner now apparently has sampled the fiery devastation with which the huge four-motored bombers of the R.A.F. have been scourging the Reich week after week.

Two air alarms, lasting 85 and 86 minutes, in the Swiss City of Geneva, attested to the number of planes which the Air Ministry flung over Europe on a round-trip flight of 1,500 miles across three countries and the continent's tallest mountains.

The Air Ministry said that not one plane was missing from the first raid on Italy by home-based R.A.F. bombers in more than six months.

Free of Raids For Year

Genoa, a naval base as well as port of manufacturing centre, had been free of raids for more than a year when high explosives and fire bombs began pouring on its narrow, twisting streets from a sky flooded with moonlight.

LOAN CONTINUES TO GAIN GROUND

Thursday's Receipts Bring Total for County to $196,682,600

Ottawa, Oct. 23 (CP).—Canada's third Victory Loan subscriptions reached a total of $196,682,600 during the first four days or business, up to Thursday night, $32,020,450 more than in the same period of the second Victory Loan campaign last February, National Loan headquarters announced today.

Thursday subscriptions were bolstered by the largest individual subscription received so far in the campaign—$20,000,000 from Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.—and reached the highest total of any day since the drive opened. The Thursday total was $57,598,350 compared with the previous high of $52,614,000 on opening day, Monday.

To reach the minimum loan objective of $750,000,000, a daily average of about $41,700,000 in subscriptions is needed. So far the present campaign is well above that figure, the average of the first four days being $49,170,650.

Handing the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. application to loan officials, Edwin C. McDonald, vice-president in charge of Canada for the company, said that, in common with other life insurance companies, the total increase in his company's assets was being invested in Dominion government war loans.

MRS. ROOSEVELT FLIES TO BRITAIN FOR SHORT VISIT

To Gain First-Hand Knowledge of British Women's War Activities

GUEST OF THE KING

London, Oct. 23 — (CP) — Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has arrived in Britain as the guest of the King and Queen "in order to gain first-hand knowledge of British women's war activities and to visit United States forces in Great Britain," Buckingham Palace announced today.

The wife of the United States President, accompanied by her secretary, Malvina Thompson, flew to Britain by a route which was not disclosed.

She expects to stay two or three weeks and inspect every phase of the British war effort she can in that limited time.

The announcement from the palace said:—

"Mrs. Roosevelt has arrived in this country at the invitation of the King and Queen in order to gain first-hand knowledge of British women's war activities and to visit the United States forces in Great Britain.

"Mrs. Roosevelt, accompanied by Miss Malvina Thompson, will be the guest of the King and Queen during the first part of her visit."

No Butter Rationing Indicated in Canada

Ottawa, Oct. 23 (CP).—With butter rationing considered a possibility by dairymen in the United States, Canadian authorities said today the United States appears to be in the position Canada was in a few months ago, when butter consumption had increased about 10 per cent and production was down an equal amount.

Officials said there was no indication of butter rationing now being considered for Canada, since a prices board program designed to enlarge butter production had resulted in desired increases. During the first five months of 1942 production was down 10 per cent compared with the same period in 1941, but by the end of September this lag had been reduced to 2.9 per cent.

Cairo, Oct. 23 (AP).—British fighter planes shot down six axis aircraft over the Egyptian battlefront yesterday and many more were destroyed in bombing attacks on enemy airdromes behind the front lines, a British communique said today.

In addition, the bulletin said, four enemy raiders were shot out of the skies over Malta.

The communique also reported that a number of axis planes on the ground were set on fire by heavy bombers which attacked the airdrome at Maleme, Crete, the night of Oct. 21.

British losses in these and companion actions, which included attacks on axis transport columns on the coastal road between Matruh and Sidi Barrani, were six planes.

A United States desert air force of medium bombers and fighters hammered enemy landing fields yesterday, scoring at least two direct hits among grounded axis planes on the ground, United States headquarters announced.

One plane was shot down by United States fighters out of 30 Messerschmitt 109's which attacked an escorted American bomber formation. United States fighters and bombers also destroyed several enemy vehicles in attacks on transport along desert roads.

REDS ROUT NAZIS FROM FACTORY AREA OF CITY

Stalingrad Defenders Seize Initiative At Several Points Within Sector

SMASH NAZI WEDGE

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Oct. 23 (AP). — Soviet Russia announced today the capture of an important tactical position northwest of Stalingrad and the Germans, although using 22 divisions totalling about 250,000 men in the siege, were reported thrown on the defensive in a number of blocks within the city by Red army counter attacks.

Red Star said the defenders seized the initiative at several points where the enemy had feverishly started to fortify positions in the skeletons of ruined buildings as wintry storms swept the steppes.

Nazi preparations for winter were reported hastened since snow began flying. Pravda said civilians of the German-occupied town of Budennovsk had been ordered to hand over warm clothes for the invasion army. Disobedience was declared to have been punishable by death.

Smash Nazi Wedge.

The noon communique reported the conquest of a major position to the northwest. No details were given. However it is in that area the Russians have been conducting a series of large-scale trench raids.

Moreover it was announced that Red Army forces had smashed a Nazi wedge which briefly endangered their first line of defence in the Mozdok area and the German survivors left 200 dead behind.

The communique said Russian troops defending a factory of Stalingrad split attacking infantrymen from their supporting tanks and finally routed both forces, destroying with shellfire two tanks which managed to break through.

Ground gunners were credited with shooting down five planes.

With the siege of Stalingrad in its 60th day, Red Star estimated the Germans were using 15 infantry divisions, four tank divisions and three motorized divisions against the city.

Large Concentration

The army newspaper said the Germans had concentrated more than 500 tanks, about 1,200 field guns, 1,000 mortars and from 700 to 800 planes for the offensive.

The besieging divisions have lost 65 to 75 per cent of their personnel and 60 per cent of their machines, the newspaper declared. Presumably the ranks have been refilled from reserves.

The northern factory section remained the main battleground.

"The fate of the city is to be decided there," Red Star said.

The invaders aimed to occupy the factories and streets by sharp individual attacks, but failed to break the Red Army resistance, it said, and the Russians were reported to have passed to the counterattack and improved their positions in several streets after crushing the Nazi drive.

JUDGMENT RSERVED

Napanee, Ont., Oct. 23 (CP) — Judgment was reserved in the case of Peter Ganas, Napanee restaurant proprietor, who appeared in court here yesterday on charges of hoarding 2,900 pounds of sugar.

Invoices showed Ganas had purchased more than two tons of sugar between August 27th., 1941, and June 17, 1942.

Presence of Powerful British Battle Squadron In India Ocean Noted

London, Oct. 23 (CP).—The presence of a powerful British battle squadron in the Indian Ocean, including at least three battleships and the aircraft carrier Illustrious, was disclosed authoritatively today a sequel to Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell's declaration that Burma must be retaken from the Japanese.

The squadron was said to consist of the battleships Warspite, Royal Sovereign and Resolution. Presumably in addition to a large force of cruisers and destroyers, all under the command of Admiral Sir James Somerville, who formerly was commander in the western Mediterranean.

The Illustrious, one of the most famous ships in the Royal Navy, is a veteran of many Mediterranean battles and last was reported in a northern British port in April.

May Attack Burma.

Possibility of an allied drive to throw the Japanese out of Burma has been brought to the fore by current conferences in India among Gen. Wavell, commander-in-chief of British forces there; Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck, former commander in the Middle East who is mentioned for an important new post; and Lt.-Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, chief of staff of allied forces in China.,

These meetings followed upon a recent inspection tour of the Burma-India frontier by Gen. Wavell and increased aerial reconnaissance along the frontier following the end of the monsoon season.

Gen. Wavell has stressed time and again that since the allies were driven from Burma he has been concentrating on regaining that segment of the empire and reopening of the Burma Road supply line to China.

Gen. Stilwell, who bluntly acknowledged that "we took a hell of a beating in Burma" also has asserted that the lost territory could and would be retaken.

JAP INVASION ATTEMPT THROWN OFF SCHEDULE

Americans Given Valuable Time to Bolster Forces in the Solomons

JAP VESSELS BOMBED

By JOHN H. WIGGINS,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Washington, Oct. 23 — (AP) — Persistent Allied bombardment of a large Japanese war fleet in the Southwestern Pacific appeared today to have thrown a long-expected Nipponese invasion thrust off schedule while giving Americans valuable time to bolster their forces in the Solomons.

Enemy warships and transports in the Northern Solomon islands have been the target for the past 10 days for an almost constant rain of Allied aerial bombs as they waited the zero hour to surge toward the prized American-held airbase on Guadalcanal Island.

The latest attack on the enemy's ship concentration came last night (Australian time) when Allied bombers from Australian headquarters dumped 10 tons of explosives on Japanese vessels at Buin at the southern tip of Bougainville Island.

The raid drew strong anti-aircraft fire but all the planes found their targets, a communique said, and returned safely to their bases.

"Feeler" Repulsed.

Meantime, the navy department disclosed that Japanese troops in the heavy jungle on Northern Guadalcanal had attempted a minor thrust at the American positions Oct. 20. The "feeler" was repulsed and the navy said yesterday there was no "material change in the military situation" there.

The United States aircraft continued to seek out and bomb Japanese troops and supply concentrations on Guadalcanal.

Since the heavy Nipponese naval concentrations were first observed in the islands a major enemy effort to recapture the airfield, seized by U. S. Marines early in August, had been expected momentarily.

Navy Forces Reinforced

The navy department said that U. S. planes and warships have sunk or damaged four Japanese cruisers, nine destroyers and six transports since Oct. 13.

During the delay in the enemy naval assault the navy had disclosed that American ships are in Solomons waters and that ground troops holding the Guadalcanal airfield have been reinforced.

Allied headquarters in Australia also reported last night that three Japanese bombers made a night raid on Port Moresby, the strong Allied base on the Southern coast of New Guinea, but caused neither damage nor casualties.

Australian troops, meanwhile, continued to push the enemy's attempted invasion of Port Moresby back toward Kokoda between the Allies base and the enemy's base at Buna on the north coast.

NAZIS TO RESORT TO FORCE AGAINST FRENCH WORKERS

Action Follows Non-Appearance of Group Directed to Appear at Station

DARLAN AT DAKAR

Vichy, Oct. 23 — (AP) — The threat of force was invoked by German occupation authorities in Paris as they stepped up their efforts today to recruit skilled French workers for labor in Germany's war indutaries.

Issuance of the threats by the German commander for greater Paris followed the non-appearance of a group of workers directed to appear at a railway station yesterday for transportation to the Reich.

Another batch of workers immediately was ordered to report today, along with the warning that those who did not heed the instructions would "expose themselves to forceful measures."

The warning came as Pierre Laval — who told his countrymen earlier this week that they must go freely to Germany to fulfill her demands for 150,000 workers — returned to Vichy from talks with German officials in Paris.

Laval Visits Paris

Laval at once went into conference with Jacques Barnaud, who is in charge of French-German economic relations, Marshal Petain and Fernand De Brinon, Vichy Ambassador to Paris.

Admiral Jean Darlan, Chief of the Vichy government's armed forces, remained meanwhile in Dakar, completing an inspection of the strengthened defences of that West African port.

Yesterday Darlan broadcast a message from Petain to residents of the colony warning them they faced a "new menace" but assuring them it would be adequately met.

(Foreign sources in Berne suggested that Petain's message was mere window dressing intended to impress the Germans with the idea that no Nazi forces are needed in West Africa. The persistance with which the Axis press has insisted that Dakar is in danger of attack has been regarded in many United Nations quarters as propaganda to induce the French to let the Germans use Dakar as a base.)

British Far Surpass Axis Plane Output

London, Oct. 23 — (AP) — Capt. Oliver Lyttelton, Minister of Production, declared today that Britain, with a plane production four times the rate of the first quarter of 1940, now has "far passed the total Axis output of aircraft."

Britain, however, no longer can hope to increase production by any large intake of labor into war industries and can raise her production ceiling only by making greater use of both labor and machines now at the nation's disposal.

BOWMANVILLE PRISON CAMP SCENE OF RIOT

Disorder Broke Out On October 10 Over Shackling Order Of German Prisoners

GUARDS INJURED

Ottawa, Oct. 23 — (CP) — Serious disorder broke out in Bowmanville, Ont., prison camp on Oct. 10 over the shackling of German prisoners of war held there, and both prisoners and guards were injured, Defence Minister Ralston announced last night.

The prisoners barricaded themselves in their barracks and refused to obey orders. One prisoner was wounded in the leg by a rifle bullet and two suffered "light bayonet wounds." Furniture was smashed and windows broken.

The statement — issued through National Defence headquarters — said life at the camp returned to normal after detachments from a nearby military camp had been sent to reinforce the guard.

"Mild resistance" was shown at one other camp to the shackling order, but no further trouble had been encountered at any of the other 15 prisoner of war camps, Col. Ralston said.

The shackling order was issued by the Canadian government as a reprisal measure after the Germans announced they had placed in chains 107 British officers and 1,268 non-commissioned officers and men, captured at Dieppe. As Canadians made up five-sixths of the army force which attacked Dieppe last August, it has been assumed that most of those chained by the Germans were Canadians.

Story Withheld by Ottawa

The story of the resistance of Bowmanville prisoners of war to the shackling had been withheld from publication in Canadian newspapers since the day of the incident, with the aim of preventing any possibility that garbled reports might reach Germany which could be used as an excuse for reprisals against Canadian soldiers and airmen held in German custody.

Yesterday Time magazine, United States News Publication, carried an account of the incident, and Defence Minister Ralston's statement apparently was intended to present an official and counteracting report.

In Washington the Canadian legation yesterday made official representations to United States authorities over the publication by Time of the article. The official Canadian attitude was that the publication was a serious breach of censorship regulations and the representations being made seek a full investigation of the source of the information and how it was brought across the border, it was said.

Canadian legation officers in Washington said the Canadian government takes a serious view of the incident because it might lead to drastic repercussions on Canadian prisoners of war in Germany.

Col. Ralston's statement said four rifle shots were fired in warning. One richocheted off the ground and wounded a prisoner in the leg. "This took place," he added, "at a time when the prisoners seized and brutally assaulted an officer of the guard."

There were no fatalities and the majority of the injuries were of a minor character, the Defence Minister announced.

At one point a hole was chopped through the roof and a fire hose was used to help quell the trouble.

The statement said "no machine-gun fire was used or was there tear gas or any other form of gas resorted to throughout the trouble."

China's 'Confidence in Final Victory Firm as Ever' After 5 Years of War

Chungking, Oct. 23 (AP).—Gen. Ho Ying-Chin, Minister of War, told the People's Political Council today that the morale of Chinese troops and civilians remains high after more than five years of war and "their confidence in final victory is as firm as ever".

"The Chinese people should not become dependent on foreign aid nor discouraged in the event of any future Japanese successes," the minister said.

He reported to the council, China's closest approach to a parliament, that 11,129,372 men had been conscripted between the outbreak of Chinese-Japanese hostilities in 1937 and August, 1942.

Roosevelt Says Greater Strength To be Emphasized

Total Production Figures of New Models Will be Kept Military Secret

SHORT OF '42 TOTAL

Washington, Oct. 23—President Roosevelt disclosed today that the United States Government, in the light of battle experience, is cutting down on the volumne of tanks and planes so far as their number is concerned, to emphasize greater power and strength.

Production of tanks, he said, is falling short of the 45,000 goal set for 1942, yet the same amount of steel is going into these land fighters.

Similarly, the President told a Press conference, the goal of 60,000 planes this year would not be reached, but that there is greater emphasis on hitting power and range.

What the new total production figures will be were regarded by Mr. Roosevelt as a military secret.

Dictated by Circumstances

He said that constant changes in the war production program were being dictated by actual experiences in combat areas. Consequently, he said, be meets regularly with some of his advisers to modify the program wherever necessary, as well as to determine whether the country is doing its utmost in the production field.

At the same time, the President renewed his prophecy that it probably would be necessary to cut down on the production of luxury and semi-luxury goods in order to make steel and other vital materials available for essential munitions.

War Changes Plans

One thing to be remembered, Mr. Roosevelt said, is that war changes plans.

A year ago, he said, the government made recommendations for what it considered the necessary munitions, using as a guide the experience of other nations during two years of war. But in another year he said, those goals were changed because of further experience.

He mentioned tanks, for example. A year ago, he said, the government had scheduled a large production of Medium M-3 tanks. But experience in warfare, particularly in the Libyan area since last January, led to a changeover to the new M-4, a larger tank.

The president was unwilling to go into a detailed discussion of any changeovers in fighter planes. It always should be borne in mind, he added, that no one type of plane was best all over the world because of different conditions.

Japs Warned Threats Will Not Affect Allied War Strategy

New Delhi, India, Oct. 23—(CP) —The Japanese announcement of intentions to court-martial United States "bomb-Japan" pilots brought an immediate Japanese-language broadcast from British headquarters in India today saying "No threats of this sort will have the slightest effect on Allied war strategy nor will Allied pilots take any notice of terrorist methods."

The broadcast demanded that the Japanese supply the location of school and hospitals so they can be avoided by bomber crews.

PREMIER CONANT TO CALL CAUCUS OF LIBERAL MEMBERS

Provincial Convention is Likely to be Called to Confirm Conant in New Post

MAY HOLD ELECTION

Toronto, Oct. 23 — (CP) — Ontario's new Prime Minister, Gordon D. Conant, was reported today to have decided to call a caucus of the 61 Liberal members of the legislature for early next week to consider the swiftly-moving events in the province's politics.

If the members are called into caucus, the resignation of Mitchell F. Hepburn as Premier, his naming Mr. Conant as his successor and the resignation of Provincial Secretary Harry C. Nixon over what he termed the "casual" delegation of power from the retiring premier to Mr. Conant will be prime subjects of debate.

In the background are reports of a provincial Liberal convention to confirm Mr. Conant in his new post or select a new leader and speculation that a general election may be held after Mr. Conant has reconstituted his cabinet.

Resignation of Mr. Nixon, since 1934 Mr. Hepburn's right-hand man, followed quickly yesterday on the retirement of the 46-year-old Premier and Mr. Conant's accession to office.

The Provincial secretary, who, Mr. Hepburn said, had been offered the Premiership twice within 18 months — but not when Mr. Conant was named — said the Premiership was "too sacred a trust" to be so "casually given and received."

Don't Like Setup

London, Ont., Oct. 23 (CP) — Norman F. Newton, Crown Attorney for London and Middlesex County, and personal friend of Mitchell F. Hepburn, who resigned Wednesday as Premier of Ontario, last night announced his own resignation in what he described as a protest against the manner in which changes in the Provincial Government were brought about.

Mr. Newton said he believed neither the Ontario Legislature nor the people of the province have confidence in Honor Gordon D. Conant, who was sworn in as premier shortly after Mr. Hepburn resigned.

"I think the Liberal party was sold down the river," said Mr. Newton after reading of the resignation of Harry C. Nixon, provincial secretary, from the cabinet.

The crown attorney said his resignation was not a protest directed against Mr. Conant's appointment as premier or Mr. Hepburn's resignation, but against "the manner in which the whole thing was done."

Sergt Hazelton shouted to the other driver who paid no heed, but on the contrary speeded away. Sergt. Hazelton reported the licence plate number of the second car to local police, who are investigating. Considerable damage resulted to the fenders of the taxi.

SEVEN SHEEP STOLEN NEAR SHANNONVILLE

Sheep thieves were reported active in the Shannonville area on Thursday, Provincial Police authorities revealed here today. Missing from the flock of Harry C. Taylor were one ram and six lambs, as the sheep herder counted his flock Thursday. Several cases of the theft of heifers have been reported in the Quinte area during the past few weeks, but the theft of seven animals from Mr. Taylor's flock is the first wholesale stealing of livestock reported in this district in some time. Just when the sheep were actually stolen Mr. Taylor was unable to state.

Snetsinger, Officer Commanding the station, the entire personnel of No. 5 I.T.S. marched through the streets of the city shortly after the noon hour on Thursday. The parade left the station at approximately 1:30 and covered the usual route. Through their exhibition of precision marching, the parades of the Belleville training station are looked forward to by the residents of the city.

BOY GIVEN $2 REWARD FOR RETURNING $76

But for the honesty of Roy Palmateer, 14-year-old service station attendant at the Vigor Oil Company, Station Street, a farmer named Mitchell from "Farmview," R.R. 6 Belleville, would be exactly $76 poorer today.

Early this morning Mr. Mitchell stopped at the service station to purchase some gasoline and in some manner dropped his purse containing the above amount of money. Some time after the motorist had driven away the Palmateer boy picked up the purse and immediately notified the local police station. Soon, however, the farmer called back at the service station and after proving his property the purse was returned.

KITCHEN OF HOUSE DAMAGED BY FIRE

Damage amounting to $300 to $400 was caused to the kitchen of an Evans Street cottage during mid-afternoon on Thursday when fire of an undetermined origin gained considerable start before the local fire department was notified of the blaze.

The fire was confined to the lower portion of the one-storey building, although slight damage was caused to the roof of the structure before the blaze was extinguished. Two lines of hose were run by firemen to control the blaze in the frame structure.

The residence was owned by Mrs. Harry Boyle, it was reported by firemen.

Early Friday morning firemen were called to the vicinity of the Capitol Theatre where an auto reportedly owned by a local taxi firm was afire. The blaze which is thought to have started from a cigarette caused small damage to the back of the front seat before it was noticed by a passer-by and extinguished by firemen.

Hastings County Loan Reaches $420,000 Mark

Hastings County residents are rallying to the appeal for funds for the Victory Loan in a generous manner thus far, officials announced today.

This is evidenced in the fact that the amount subscribed in the first three and one-half days of the Loan reached the $420,000 mark. The Commando Dagger on the city sign has now dipped into "Berlin" to this mark.

Outstanding in the purchases of bonds this week, besides that of the Deloro Smelting and Refining company of $100,000 is the fine contribution made by the personnel of No. 5 I.T.S.. The airmen of the school have bought bonds to the amount of $10,000 which is more or less remarkable due to the fact that the school personnel is in the neighborhood of 800 strong.

The amount subscribed thus far, according to official figures, is twenty per cent of the total quota of $2,100,000 allotted Hastings County. This is well in advance of the amount subscribed over the same period in the last loan.

The man on the street, the employee in office, store, shop and factory are responding to the Loan in a highly satisfactory manner, canvassers report. Many are taking advantage of the employer-employee system while others are buying on a cash-down basis. Co-operation of all concerned, with the inevitable exceptions, of course, has been shown to an appreciable degree.

Reports from other county points indicate that the Loan machinery is rolling along quite smoothly. Although returns from the northern section of the county are somewhat slow in coming in, indications point to a good reception of canvassers in both urban and rural communities.

POLICE COURT

Charged on three counts of breaking and entering the National Billiard Parlors on Front Street, Vincent Edgar McCabe, former part-time employee of the proprietors, was remanded for one week, when he appeared in police court this morning. McCabe was apprehended early Wednesday morning following being seen in the building by the night patrolman.

Twelve cases were listed for the morning's court proceedings with the majority being illegal parking and intoxication charges, which were settled out of court. The proceedings were very brief with Magistrate J. L. Lloyd disposing of the cases in record time.

The case of James Parkhurst charged with operating a motor vehicle while his driver's permit was under suspension, was remanded over until next week at the request of the defendant's solicitor. With the intimation that Parkhurst was still continuing to drive while his licence was suspended, Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan intimated, that an additional charge would be laid.

Two Trenton Chinese Waiters Attacked by 3 Desperadoes

$50 TAKEN

Trenton, Oct. 23 — (Special) — Three desperados attacked and seriously injured two Chinamen in the City Restaurant here early today and stole $50 from the cash register. Later the trio of robbers stole a motor car and speeded out of the town and later were seen in Madoc, where they obtained a meal at another Chinese restaurant leaving without paying for the food.

Shortly before six o'clock this morning the three men entered the restaurant here and when Fore Koo, a waiter, approached them at the front of the store, one of the desperadoes struck the Chinaman a forceful blow with his fist in the face. The blow knocked Koo down and he sustained a broken nose and serious lacerations. The cafe cook heard the disturbance and came to Koo's rescue. The cook was struck over the head with a full bottle of catsup, which another of the robbers picked up from a table. The cook was later taken to the hospital by Trenton police suffering from a possible fractured skull and several head lacerations. The description of the desperate characters was broadcast by Chief Wm. Bain with the chief aggressor being a man standing six foot tall, wearing a black hat and suit and between 24 and 28 years of age. The second was shorter, standing about 5 foot 8 inches and having no hat. The third was still smaller in stature and wore a brown windbreaker or coat.

After robbing the cafe the desperadoes stole Rev. J. L. Hutchinson's 1938 model Willys sedan from in front of his residence at 90 King St. Rev. Hutchinson, vicar of St. George's Anglican Church here, informed Trenton police that his car was issued with Ontario licence plates number 646-M-4 and the serial number of 79184. The right front headlight glass of the vehicle was missing. Chief Bain warned district police to take caution as the men are doubtless desperate characters.

Murray Case Taken From Jury, Justice Reserves Judgment

Mr. Justice Chevrier relieved a jury of its further duties and then reserved judgment in the final case entered for trial at the Fall Assizes at the Court House here on Friday. The case before the court was a damage action entered by John Murray, Belleville, versus the Board of Education, and resulted from an accident on Queen Victoria School grounds June 4th, 1941, when 11-year-old John Murray, Jr. sustained a fractured arm while engaged in physical exercises. Mr. Charles A. Payne, K.C., local solicitor, appeared on behalf of the plaintiff, while Mr. Joseph Thompson, K.C., of Toronto, represented the Board.

All evidence had been presented by counsel when His Lordship held conference with interested solicitors and later relieved the petit jury of its further duties and dismissed them. "Gentlemen of the jury, I suppose you are not sorry to hear your worries in this case are at an end. I will deal with the issues in the matter and hereby dismiss you," stated His Lordship as he thanked the jury for their careful attention to evidence.

A Civil Action

The case was a civil action for damages of $1,000 with an additional sum of $100 for out-of-pocket expenses, preferred against the Belleville Board of Education by John Murray following the accident to his son's arm over a year ago. The principal issue argued was regarding the question as to whether the pyramid class, which was being practised when young Murray was injured, was part of the school curriculum and if the pyramid class had not been compulsory. School authorities claimed no pupil was compelled to practise pyramids, while Murray testified to the contrary.

"The pupils not in the school choir were ordered to attend the physical training classes, which included pyramids, testified young Murray, who added that Assistant Principal J. E. Bateman of Queen Victoria School had ordered him to take part in the exercises.

"We were rehearsing the pyramids for the school cadet inspection when the accident happened. As far as I know pyramids had not been practised before and were only to be used for exhibitions of physical training during the inspection. I was on the second tier when the whistle sounded to break formation. We discontinued the exercise and when we broke a lower tier boy rolled onto my arm on the ground, while a higher row boy fell on top of me causing the fracture, stated the youthful plaintiff. Murray also stated he was told that marks were to be deducted if he did not train for the physical exhibition, that was being practised in preparation for the cadet inspection.

Defence Evidence Entered

In defence Bernard Tugnette, a fellow student of Murray's and who was on the second tier of the pyramid, when the accident occurred on June 4th, 1941, stated Mr. Bateman had announced in assembly a choice between choir practice and physical training. "I volunteered to practise the exercises as I did not sing too well. I was never compelled to enter the exercises, and on the day of the accident we obeyed the whistle to break formation. The next thing I saw was Murray lying on the ground with his right arm beneath him, instead of stretched out in front of him as the instructions call for," concluded Tugnette.

Principal A. C. Wilkin, of Victoria School testified he had first seen the injured lad in the school nurse's office following the accident. Principal Wilkin denied any pupil had been compelled to train in the school pyramids.

Principal Testifies

"It was purely voluntary and I personally demonstrated every movement and cautioned the boys to break formation according to regulations and keep their legs and arms outstretched," stated Mr. J. E. Bateman assistant principal and supervisor of physical training at the school. "Physical training is part of the school curriculum and pyramid building accepted by the Department of Education in this training. I was certain each boy in the pyramids was proficient," added Mr. Bateman as he denied there ever had been threats to "take off marks" from boys not attending such exercises.

Charles A. Payne K.C., —counsel for the plaintiff, argued the question before the court was purely an issue of fact, while Mr. Thompson held no negligence had been established against the Board. His Lordship then reserved judgment.

Though labor was scarce, the ladies gathered whenever fruit was available, at the canning factory placed at their disposal by L. R. Brickman. Residents of the community donated fruit while various branches of the Women's Institute contributed money with which to purchase sugar.

The jam is shipped overseas through the Red Cross and many letters have been received testifying to its popularity.

Mt. View Air Station Personnel Subscribes $20,000 to Victory Loan

Picton, Oct. 23—Members of the R.C.A.F. station at Mountain View are setting the pace for Prince Edward County Victory Loan campaign. Though the canvass is not as yet nearly completed the station has subscribed $20,000 which is $5,000 above their original objective.

The station has been divided into sections with an officer in charge of each. Not only is there keen competition among the various sections but this station hopes to secure a greater sum than the neighboring station at Trenton.

Administrative Office Squadron Leader Dunn is the main force behind the drive and is being backed by all officers who are personally helping in the drive. As well as staging their own canvass, the station, along with the R.A.F. station at Picton, is supplying speakers for meetings which are being held throughout the county.

Tomato Canning Stops

Canning of tomatoes was completed in Prince Edward County yesterday. This is the latest date on record for some years. Though most of the factories closed last week, that at Cherry Valley owned by W. H. Benson operated until yesterday and as a result of the long season has a very large pack. A severe frost the end of September ruined thousands of bushels of tomatoes but more came on later.

Thousands of tons of canned goods are being brought here for shipment from all parts of the Bay of Quinte district and large freighters call several times a week. Farmers are coming into town to assist with the loading, due to the shortage of help.

In Judging Competition

Representing Picton Calf Club, Paul Foster, Bloomfield, and Clifford Walker of Milford, left today for Guelph where they will take part in judging competition to select teams to take part in the National Club contests to be held in November.

These club members won this trip as a result of ranking first in a calf club judging competition held at Kemptville Agricultural School. Winners in various other clubs will also take part at Guelph.

Early Closing Regulations and Oil Sales Discussed by Garage Operators

No decision was reached in the matter of early closing regulations regarding service garages at the regular meeting of the Garage Operators' Association held at Stirling on Wednesday evening. The problem again came up for discussion by the Hastings and Prince Edward members but the matter was turned over to a committee which will endeavor to work out a system whereby essential operators will be permitted to remain open to cater to essential vehicular traffic.

Also coming up for discussion at the meeting was a resolution asking that the head office take action with the proper authorities to have the sale of gasoline and oil confined to licenced service stations and garages and that no department store within a distance of three miles from a service station or garage be allowed to sell either gasoline or oil.

This matter was also turned over to the provincial gasoline handling committee who will discuss the matter with the Oil Controller. Provincial President Jack Truteau acted as chairman for the evening in the absence of Acting President Kenneth Vivian, and gave his report of the last provincial directors' meeting. It was decided at the meeting to hold the Provincial Council meeting of the Operators' in Belleville in November.

A large number of Operators attended the meeting, according to officials, the dinner being served by members of the Stirling Women's Institute.

Premier Hepburn Resigns

With the resignation of Mitchell Hepburn, Ontario Liberalism has lost the most colorful leading figure that the party has had for many years or is likely to have for a long time in the future.

The former premier never believed in doing things by half measures and it was characteristic of him to surprise his followers and the public generally by his sudden resignation on Wednesday. While he has occasionally in the past stated that he would like to retire from the leadership because of health reasons we do not think many people took him too seriously. It was felt that the fortunes of the party were too closely associated with his dynamic personality to permit of his taking leave for any but the most urgent reasons.

However, for reasons best known to himself he has resigned and the mantle of the premiership has been handed over to Mr. Conant. There are many who regret to see him take this step, for when all things are considered Mr. Hepburn has provided government whose legislation has striven for the benefit of the country as a whole and without fear of consequences.

As with any government leader there has been considerable criticism of his ways of getting things done or the course he pursued but it can never be said of him that he lacked for courage for he always rose to any challenge with characteristic vigor and ready wit. His controversy with Prime Minister King and his recent association with the communist party has caused considerable dissatisfaction and has puzzled and annoyed a lot of people, particularly the latter, more because they feel the intrusion of a foreign element into the political picture at the present time is unwarranted and undesirable.

At all times Mr. Hepburn has been an outspoken advocate of all-out effort in the war by Canadians and has consistently rapped complacency in respect to the great issues involved in the struggle of the democracies against the aggression of the Axis Powers.

Of course Mr. Hepburn's source of future action is wholly unpredictable but if his resignation was chiefly due to poor health he will go into retirement with the best wishes of all classes of people regardless of their political beliefs. We do not think Ontario will forget "Mitch" very soon.

Great Actress Gone

The stage and screen world has lost a great character actress, May Robson, who has passed at the age of 78 years. She made her stage debut fifty-nine years ago and her first picture in 1927, and her acting before the camera up to her recent last picture revealed all the character which made her so fine an exemplar of the profession of acting.

May Robson, it is said, played mostly older parts, not only when she was old but also when she was much younger. She had a peculiar aptitude for these roles in which she put so much of kindly humanity. This kindly woman's character stood revealed in her every performance and gave the world a fine conception of the real values of life as shown in character. She possessed amazing vitality and a wide interest in life.

She was blessed in living to a robust age and in being able to give her talents towards the improvement of life and in creating indelible pictures of human life in its eternal phases.

Laval and Hitler

The degradation to which Laval in following Hitler has been compelled to stoop is indicated in his "naturalization" of 500 Gestapo agents to speed the round up of labor conscripts in France for work in the Huns' interest in Germany, the enemy of France.

But it is not easy work even for Laval. Hitler wants 150,000 laborers to slave for Germany and only 17,000 have been assembled.

But this very co-operation of Laval with Hitler is having inevitable results. It is building up French resistance for the French spirit of liberty will not endure being made the slave of the Hun.

Youth is the season of hope, enterprise and energy, to a nation as well as to an individual.—W. R. Williams.

THE PRICE OF FREEDOM

What is the Price of Freedom,
Go question your soul today!
Seek till you've found the answer,
And when you've found it,—PAY!

Ask of that gallant young airman, bearing war's strain in his eyes;
Deep though his knowledge and awful, he speaks not of sacrifice!
Ask him for news of his comrades, the lads with whom he once played,
He'll tell you the Price of Freedom, the Price that their young lives paid!

Ask of that brave Merchant seaman! On a shark-infested sea
Adrift with his doomed companions, he saw what the Price can be!
Question those blood-stained heroes, proud remnant returned from the raid;
Dieppe taught the Price of Freedom, and God knows that Price was paid!

Then look on that mourning mother; consider that weeping wife!
They too pay the Price of Freedom, whose loved ones have paid with life!—
Then know, as you see your last dollar on Freedom's altar laid,
How little is all you have offered! The Price is still unpaid!

"COULD BE"

The grapevine has it that there is a dash of rivalry between the Trenton lassies and some of Belleville's lovelies, regarding the affections of some of the dashing lads in the Air Force blue. It seems that the gals are curious as to what each other is doing these cool evenings, when the air laddies are not with them, but in the meantime the boys are keeping both factions in the dark.

ON SNEEZING

The shades of night are falling fast,
The hours of work are nearly past,
When from his nose there comes a blast,
A blast that echoes loud and long
And quivers like a dinner gong,
And released some 20,000 strong BACTERIA.

They float through the air with the greatest of ease,
These frisky young germs in the wake of a sneeze,
And once in your nostrils you sniffle and wheeze
Till the doc comes and drives them away.

When there's germs to the right of you
Germs to the left of you
Germs in front of you
Someone has blundered.
But be not a bit dismayed,
And for the sneeze he made
O may that debt be paid
With a doc's bill, one hundred.

BAD BLOOD IN A CIRCUS

Bad blood among some Barnum and Bailey sideshow performers produced a dressing-tent brawl in Kansas City involving the fat lady, Baby Betty, Sword-swallower Patricia Smith, the Great Shackles, and a hula dancer. (The midgets ran out.) For hitting Baby over the head with a pop bottle, Swallower Patricia was fined $20 by a city judge. She said it was worth it. Shortly 500-odd-pound Baby sued the swallower for $3,000. The bottle had hit her so hard, she claimed, that "all bones, muscles, tissues, nerves and my entire body were bruised, contused, lacerated and sprained." — Time.

DREAMS

Sometimes in dreams I get in trouble, too,
I lose the way or fail my best to do;
Speak thoughtlessly and suffer deep dismay,
Hear calls for help, but, frightened, run away,
And, in those times, remorse and shame I know,
Haply to wake and find it isn't so.

Sometimes in dreams I feel my conscience stir
And sense that shame which truly could occur,
I walk bewildered where the way seems plain;
Arrive too late to catch the ship or train,
Through every mental agony I go,
Haply to wake and find it isn't so.

Are dreams intended to instruct us all
Of pits and snares in which mankind may fall;
To let us learn the punishment of shame;
The sting of failure; loss of decent fame;
Horror, which fells the spirit at a blow?
Then that sweet joy—to find it isn't so.

The Speech of Field Marshal Smuts

New York, Oct. 22—The Trafalgar Day speech of the South African Prime Minister and Field Marshal Jan Christiaan Smuts must be regarded as one of the great political documents of this war.

The solemnity of its delivery, the scope of the ground covered, and the significance of the audience—a joint meeting of the Commons and the Lords, the presence of David Lloyd George, who led the fortunes of Britain through the last war, and the acclamation of the speech led by Winston Churchill, all contributed to give Marshal Smuts' words the character of a basic utterance of policy, past, present and future.

The first question that comes in mind is, of course, why such a speech, staged with all the pomp and circumstance that surrounded it, should be delivered, not by the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom, but by the leader of a Dominion.

The reason, of course, was, by stressing the unity of the Commonwealth, to affirm in no uncertain tones that Britain is a world power, and not an island off the coast of Europe. Coming from the leader of that Dominion which, before the war, was most isolationist, and spoken by a man who has proved himself throughout his whole career one of the most progressive international thinkers, the words had added power.

Eloquence With Realism

And the manner and scope of the speech was indirect testimony that it is well for the world that Britain is a world power. For it was a knowledgeable speech, permeated by a sense of history, moderated by a sense of proportion of the relative significance of every fact, and at every point dominated by the spirit of reason. It was profoundly civilised, its eloquence tempered by realism; humane and confident but not uptopian, having consideration for basic values and for the limitations of man's power to make at once and forever a perfect world.

The occasion was Trafalgar Day, and Field Marshal Smuts drew the parallel, for it commemorates an occasion when the decisive blow was struck by the British in the coalition against Napoleon, seeking to subject Western civilisation. In unequivocal words, the South African leader announced the offensive. And it is extremely important to note that he did not envisage the coming offensive as an intermediary stage, a relief expedition, for instance, for Russia, but as a final state—the preparation for the knockout blow.

He did not see it as a blitz, but as a campaign—a campaign that must last until 1944.

But in his mind the development of the war is logical. We needed time for preparation; Hitler's ill-judged attack on Russia—like Hitler's failure to carry the war to Britain immediately after the collapse of France—has given us time; time to assemble and consolidate the forces on which we rely for an Allied victory.

Importance of Timing.

He expressed consciousness of the importance of timing. "Time," he said, "has so far been in our favor." But he added that there was a point when "the iron is hot," and added: "Then it would be folly to delay, to overprepare, and perhaps miss our opportunity."

And the words were the more significant coming from the only political leader on our side who is at the same time a great military expert and the actual leader of the armed forces of his country—and coming also from a man whose own country, South Africa, is more directly threatened by Japan than by Germany.

There are two possible interpretations that can be put upon his words: either he was announcing a decision already taken,— which seems to be the case, for he said that he "feels satisfied" that we will not "miss our opportunity"; or he was doing some public prodding of military leadership.

Smuts was so confident about our victory that he did not even discuss it. On the contrary, in his opinon the war has reached a stage where we must begin to think of the coming world to be created on our victory. As a military leader and a personality, Field Marshal Smuts is not the man to outline a utopian paradise.

When for instance, he replaces in his mind the League of Nations by the United Nations, he replaces a powerless agglomeration of governments by an alliance of people who already represent a colossal power structure—East and West—on all the continents and seas of the world; and on the power structure he proposes to begin building a new world.

And as for the enemy countries—he sees their eventual integration through the provisions of the Atlantic Charter that need to be elaborated.

But he sees that international alliances—for peace or for war—are not enough; we must rebuild the social and economic structure of the world. And, again, he approaches this question through realism and reason, and not through simple and universal solutions. He is convinced that in this twentieth century all people can be better fed, clothed and housed, and that international institutions are needed to further this purpose—but institutions that grow out of the accumulations of our civilization and not by a rebellious destruction of them.

Although, this great statement deepens every alliance; recalls all to fidelity; and leaves open no hope of appeasement with the war lords of Japan or with Nazi Germany. It was the right word at the right moment.

PULLMAN CARS

Owing to increased travelling and more liberal tips, many Pullman porters are now making as high as $500 a month.

A standard Pullman car weighs 166,000 pounds—83 tons.

The longest regular run of a Pullman car is between San Francisco and New Orleans, a distance of 2,492 miles.

The laundry operated by the Pullman Company washes about 158 million pieces of linen a year—an average of half a million pieces for each work day.

In 1939 the Pullman Company bought nearly 30,000 yards of carpet for its cars.

The average distance travelled by a Pullman car in a year is more than 160,000 miles.

Last February a Pullman car was named "Wake Island" as a tribute to the gallant defence of that island by the U. S. Marines.

A Pullman car generates for its own use enough electricity to supply four average homes. Each Pullman is equipped with 100 electric light bulbs in addition to fans and air-conditioning apparatus. If all the electric light bulbs used yearly on Pullman cars were placed ten feet apart, they would light a path 746 miles long.

In 1819 a man named Benjamin Dearborn "made a fool of himself" by suggesting that railroad "carriages" be "furnished with accommodations for passengers to take their meals and their rest during passage, as in packets; that they be . . . so capacious as to accommodate their baggage . . . that . . . the carriages will move with a rapidity at least equal to a mile in three minutes."

His first sleeping cars were merely two day coaches on the Chicago and Alton Railroad equipped with sleeping facilities. Abraham Lincoln rode on one of these "Pullmans" during the first experiment.

The first all-Pullman built sleeping car was "The Pioneer," operated from 1865 to late in the '90s. This car was used to take the Lincoln family from Chicago to Springfield in 1865, while the body of the assassinated President was transported in a baggage car.

Lincoln's oldest son, Robert, later became President of the Pullman Company.

Women's Institute Meets Here In Annual Convention

Progress Made in Institute Activities Presented in Interesting Manner By Speakers at Annual Convention

Addresses by Mrs. Jas. Black, Warkworth, Mrs. E. A. Duke, Port Carling, Ontario President, and by Miss Mary A. Clarke, Ontario Superintendent, featured the afternoon session, Thursday, of the Women's Institute Convention. Mrs. R. Bush, Consecon, presided.

Mrs. M. Wooten delighted the meeting with vocal solos.

Theme of Meeting

Discussing the convention theme Mrs. Jas. Black, Warkworth, said conditions call for a continuous sustained war effort, which now demands, from all, certain privations and the willingness to renounce comforts and pleasures. To meet these demands, people of physical, mental and spiritual stamina are needed whose health and morale will enable them to stand both the physical and emotional strain of modern warfare. Personal and community health should be given every attention.

Institutes should be a strong force in the community in the development of right attitudes and helping all to see where duty lies and maintaining morale. Mrs. Black outlined ways in which to co-operate with the war efforts.

Civic Greetings

The welcome of the city was extended to the convention by Alderman Follwell in the absence of Mayor Glencoe Thompson. Alderman Follwell expressed the regrets of the Mayor at the fact that he was unavoidably absent. He commended the very timely selection of the convention theme and the excellent work of the Women's Institutes. In presenting greetings from the Mayor, Council and citizens, he paid tribute to the great part Women's Institute members and women of the nation play in efforts for victory. There could be no defeat, he said, with the women of the land working shoulder to shoulder with the men for victory.

In an excellent address which referred to the early history of the Institutes and their progress since their establishment 45 years ago, Mrs. W. Rogers, Chatterton, thanked Alderman Follwell for his presence and his words of welcome. The objective of the Institute has never changed, the development and encouragement of every uplifting and improving project.

She counselled the members to adjust themselves to the difficulties of the times, not to falter in their efforts until peace has come.

Inspiring Address

Inspiration and encouragement were found in the words of the address of the Ontario President, Mrs. E. A. Duke. The Institutes had a great field of service in training leaders and in keeping up the morale of the nation. Wholehearted co-operation in the Dominion's war effort was not alone in gifts, money and handiwork; nor in observing honestly the rules of the Wartime Price Board, nor in buying Victory Bonds. It was not enough to work harder, to undertake new, or long forgotten, arduous tasks. All in their way, these help to bring victory, but each person had a further individual responsibility. This was to overcome racial, social and religious prejudice. There can be no true democracy with distrust.

Women's Institute members should be loyal to ideals that are traditional in this organization, set a high standard, be prepared to accept opportunity for responsibility. The door of opportunity can be easily recognized. It has two markers. One says "Push," and the other "Pull."

Central Patriotic Fund

Later in the afternoon Mrs. Duke discussed the disbursements of the Central Patriotic Fund which included articles for servicemen, jam and honey, to be sent overseas, seeds for Great Britain.

Mrs. Duke, who completes her term of office this year, left as a parting message the hope that members carry on to victory and through happy years ahead.

Mrs. Bush expressed the feelings of the members in wishing Mrs. Duke every success, and hoping that the same warm feeling evident in her association with Belleville Convention would follow all her undertakings.

Social Welfare Report

Mrs. E. Gorsline, Demorestville, gave a detailed report of the Social Welfare phase of Institute activities. This department included education, public health, child welfare, promotion of preventive measures in the health of women and children. Papers and demonstrations were given on all these topics at Institute branches. This organization in its educational endeavor has sponsored more libraries than any other group. The part music plays in keeping up morale and its importance not only as entertainment but as a stimulus was shown by the fact that music in war factories in Britain has boosted production two to eleven per cent and 3,000 war industries in the United States are also providing music during working hours.

Teaching of good health habits and education in health through talks, papers and roll calls were reported by various branches.

Community activities showed the same happy, wholesome pleasures shared, with most entertainments arranged for the raising funds for war purposes.

A vital literature of Ontario's past is being furthered by the Women's Institute's interest in historical research, Mrs. G. Page, Cobourg, reported. It is by delving into the past, one traces the progress of this country from a young nation to a future of liberty and tolerance. The compiling of papers on the history of villages continues and there is the same interest being shown in the preparation of Tweedsmuir Village Histories. Much valuable and absorbing facts are thus being preserved and treasured for posterity by the diligence of the members. Roll calls on this subject were outlined. Mrs. Page urged the continuance of work on the Tweedsmuir Village Histories, and preserving of all matter of historical value. It is from Canada's great past that one gets inspiration for the future.

What the Women's Institute Branch of the Department of Agriculture does provincially for this district and the 97 other districts in Ontario, was interestingly explained by Miss Mary A. Clarke in her address of the afternoon. In the last annual report to the Department of Education it was shown that there were 1,333 branches in Ontario. The loan library accommodated 626 branches' requests for material in preparing papers and addresses. In asking for such information Miss Clarke asked that requests be specific. Don't write, she said, as one member did, asking for "information about anything, I have to give a paper." It was better to write well in advance.

Speaker service, conferences and short courses on nutrition reached about seven thousand members. There were training schools in textiles attended by 1,600 women. Knitting, health education, were also subjects for speaker service and lecture demonstrations. The junior program was equally wide embracing Homemaking Clubs, Garden Brigades, Making of British War Garments, and Farm Service Force.

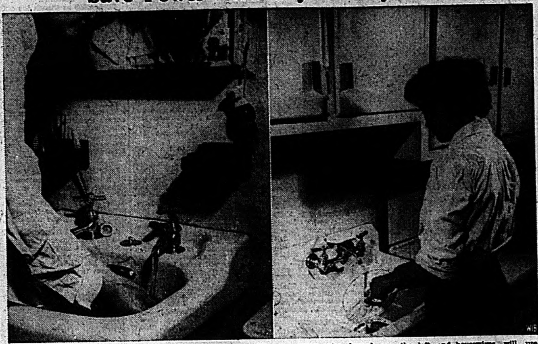
Save Power And Buy Victory Bonds



There may seem to be little connection between the kitchen tap and the power shortage, and even less between the kitchen tap and buying Victory Bonds but there is a very close association. The water supply in most communities is pumped by electric power and every time water is left running needlessly, as above, extra power is used and less is available for war production. In some communities, too, water rates depend on the amount used and wasting water means a higher rate. Power and water savers will use the stopper and partly fill the basin instead of letting the tap run continuously while they wash their hands, as at left, and housewives will use a dishpan instead of a steadily runnng tap when washing dishes. And, in homes where this means a saving on the water bill that saving should be invested in Victory Bonds.

Miss Mary E. Clarke Addresses Members Of Women's Institutes

Interesting Play Presented by Bay of Quinte Institute

Working for victory and planning for peace the theme of the Women's Institute Convention in session here at the Y. M. C. A. provides the objective for Institute endeavours now and in the years immediately ahead. Miss Mary A. Clarke, Ontario superintendent in her address as last evening's meeting said that a lasting peace must be built on the principles of Christianity on justice, loyalty, truth, respect for the rights of others while keeping in mind the good of the whole. These are the principles for which we are fighting and working. If everyone of the nearly 70,000 Institute members in Canada believed, worked for and supported this ideal of place, it would come about.

Institutes had long followed democratic principles and the spirit of co-operation was ever fostered in branch enterprises Members have found that they can solve problems by discussion and co-ordinated effort.

In community advancement the Institutes have done much; schools, libraries, improved sanitation and other successful projects show this. But there is still much that can be done. Institutes are a very strong force provincially but every member was not aware of the Institutes as a force in National life. The "Federal News" was a link binding the provinces together. In this way, too, the publications of the Scottish and the English were helping to bring about better understanding of Institutes across the sea.

Regarding war efforts, each person should make the best use of her own ability and talent

"To Tommy With Love" a one act play cleverly presented by the Bay of Quinte Women's Institute was a most delightful part of the evenings program The packing of a box for Tommy at Camp Borden assumed hilarious proportions when good hearted neighbors ran to hot water bottles in their choice of gifts, added a spice of gossip to the atmosphere and concluded with an amusing application of the principles of democracy. The ladies taking part entered enthusiastically into the spirit of their roles, and merited high praise from the very applicative audience. Mrs. T A. Tucker who directed and took part in the performance was greatly complimented for the success of her efforts

Those taking part were:

Marion—Mrs. Jack Hall
Lucy—Mrs. J. W. Hodgson
Mrs. Hobbs—Mrs. C. Holmes
Aunt Bett—Mrs. Casey Ketcheson
Mrs. Grey—Mrs. John Chamber
Mrs. Pearly—Mrs. Fred Wilson
Mrs. Tool—Mrs. Bruce Tucker
Lois—Mrs. Tom Anger
Mrs. Taylor—Mrs. T. A. Tucker

On behalf of the cast, Mrs. Tucker was presented with a lovely gift in appreciation of her work. Mrs. C. Holmes also presented each player with a gift for their wholehearted co-operation in this new departure in convention entertainment.

Vocal solos by Mrs. Davis, Cannifton, and accordian selection by Mr. A. Snare were highlights of the evening's program.

Great Advances Made in Preventing Of Many Diseases

Dr. C. S. Dafoe Addresses the Institute Convention Session

Dr. C. S. Dafoe gave an enlightening address on the advances made during the past twenty-five or thirty years in the maintaining of health through preventive measures or the arresting of diseases in the early stages. Now, more than ever, it was important to keep people healthy to do the work that the country needs to have done for victory. Dr. Dafoe spoke at the evening meeting of the W. I. Convention.

Research work has concentrated a great deal on children. Their care begins with attention to the expectant mother, through infanthood by supervision at Well Baby Clinics and the immunization against diseases which thirty or forty years ago carried off young lives in hundreds and thousands. Pasteurization of milk and purification of water have cut down in the cases of typhoid while vaccines and toxoids have almost obliterated such diseases as diphtheria, small pox etc. Strict observance of health laws respecting isolation and quarantine reduces the spread of minor contagious diseases.

Sanitation, a most important item in the health of a community, was given more attention nowadays. Refuse heaps breeding, the most prolific spreader of disease, the housefly, should be eliminated.

Education in the matter of venereal diseases and the compulsory treatment of those who are infected has done much to check this scourge. Tuberculosis has been cut down through the establishment of chest clinics sanitaria, school inspections. Present overcrowding and overworking has raised the percentage of the disease but with the correction of these conditions, the disease will again drop.

Attention to the education of the handicapped child has resulted in their being able to assume a normal and happy place in the life of the community.

Latest development of medicine used in war injuries was of special interest to the audience as many had loved ones in the services. Dr. Dafoe told of the introduction of sulpha drugs which cut down infection in wounds and pneumonia. Burns are now treated more comfortably for the patient and muscle wounds were now covered with plaster casts doing away with the agony of treatment dressings. The importance of stored blood in saving the lives of the wounded was stressed and Dr. Dafoe asked all those who could to give a donation of blood to the local blood clinic and to discuss it with their men folks who might also be able to give a donation.

"Your blood may not go to your own boy," she said, "but someone else's blood may save his life and you can give your blood for someone else's boy."

Discussion of diseases of the middle age group concluded the very interesting address.

"Twenty-five years from now there will be so many further advances in preventive medicine that people who might read back on addresses on today's progress would think we were very antiquated indeed," said Dr. Dafoe.

Wartime Rulings Discussed

Mrs. John Y. Harcourt, Brockville, chairman of the Eastern Ontario Women's Advisory Committee, Consumer's Branch of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board was a special speaker, calling attention to the many ways in which the members of the Institute can assist this important department. Price control is really working and with the cooperation of homemakers will continue to work. The Institutes were asked, as were all organizations to appoint a liaison officer to work directly with this Branch for the receiving of literature and to help the Board.

Carrying parcels without paper, living within the rations, avoiding hoarding were sought of all members.

"Remember as Women's Institute members you are looked up to in your community. You must set a good example."

Rulings of the Board said that no one should have more than two weeks supply of any product. Tea or coffee for parties must be taken out of rations.

"We want to cut out afternoon teas and we ask your help in this."

Many ask why tea and coffee are not rationed in the United States. They are, the speaker pointed out, but the system cuts down the supply of the merchant. This means that the first customers get a good supply and the last arrivals go without. In Canada everyone is given an equal chance.

Blue Books in which to list prices, and "Consumers' News", an official publication of this department were distributed at the close of the meeting.

Mrs. Jas. Black who presided during the evening session thanked all those who had taken part in the very interesting program.

Women's Institutes Working for Victory And Planning for Peace is Theme Of Annual Meeting Now in Session

"Women's Institutes working for Victory and Women's Institutes planning for peace" is the timely theme on which this year's convention of the Women's Institutes, now meeting in the Y.M.C.A. is based. Reports, addresses and future projects discussed kept this topic in mind.

Registration of delegates from the districts of Hastings, Prince Edward and Northumberland Counties, was in charge of Mrs. C. Ketcheson, Trenton, and Mrs. S. Geddes, Belleville.

Mrs. Black Presides

Sessions were being held in the lecture room at the Y.M.C.A. today and will continue until Friday afternoon. Mrs. James Black, of Warkworth, area chairman, presiding for the opening session welcomed the delegates and visitors.

With Mrs. H. Harrison, Latta, as song leader, and Mrs. C. Snider, Smithfield, as pianist, community singing added to the enjoyment of the sessions.

"Opportunities for Women in War Services," a series of three minute talks making up a roll call of the districts described to delegates the seemingless boundless field of endeavour before them in this regard. The addresses were given by Mrs. Ross Bush, Consecon, for Prince Edward; Mrs. Charlton Grigg, Roseneath, for Northumberland West; Mrs. Reg. McCulloch, Campbellford, for Northumberland East; Mrs. J. P. Baker, Bonarlaw, Hastings North; Mrs. Clarence Chard, Stirling, for Hastings West, and Mrs. Harry Ketcheson, Holloway, for Hastings East.

Women's War Services

Some of the opportunities for women in war services advanced by the speakers were the understanding and practising of nutrition; conducting of salvage drives; ARP work and home nursing; supporting war loan; helping increase production of food; giving blood donations; enlisting in the active services and taking positions in war industries. Emphasis was placed on the importance of maintaining the home front by renewing the spirit of neighborliness; keeping a happy family life as one step in building up of national morale, keeping health, writing letters to the forces, and adhering to a thoughtful program of spending.

The financial statement and auditors' report were read.

Miss Mary A. Clarke, Toronto, superintendent of Women's Institutes for Ontario, and Mrs. E. A. Duke, Port Carling, president of the Federated Women's Institutes for Ontario, were present at the sessions. ready with helpful advice and comment, to facilitate discussion.

District Meeting Highlights

Highlights of the District Annual Meetings which she attended in her office as Provincial Board Director were recalled by Mrs. C. Holmes, Belleville. Chatterton branch has the oldest minute book in the province. It was found in branches that a warm welcome gives a good start to the meeting and starting the meetings on time was very important. Mrs. Holmes gave much helpful advice on carrying on the business of the meetings in an efficient manner and told of programs of special appeal last year.

Retiring this year from office, Mrs. Holmes thanked all members, branches and districts for their cooperation.

Report Presented

The report on Agriculture and Home Industries prepared by Mrs. John Gauley, Eldorado, was read by Mrs. Ken. Bateman. All farmers are working overtime to produce more food materials for the nation. Topics for study and action during the coming year were suggested in the report, particularly timely being increased production, the need of a garden for every home, some means of allaying the summer labor problem so acute in the season just passed; weed control, etc.

Miss Mary Clarke, Toronto, discussed the various addresses and reports, expressing admiration for the very fine way in which they were presented by the speakers.

Following their regular practice period last evening, the choir of Holloway Street United Church was entertained at the home of Mrs. Hubbs, Howard Street. An interesting evening of musical numbers was enjoyed during which Mr. S. Anglin, who has been the efficient choir leader for the past five years, was the recipient of a gift, on the occasion of his leaving the choir. Mr. James Cordes read an address which expressed the choir's appreciation of the devotion of their leader and regret that health does not permit him to continue. Mrs. J. Livsey then made the presentation of a pen and pencil set to Mr. Anglin. Refreshments brought the evening to a close.

Saturday evening a number of friends and neighbours gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. Garrison, Donald St., in honour of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Wool Goes Places

By ALICE ALDEN.

THE WOOL dress is going places this season and is as charming in its more dressy versions as it is when styled for utility wear. For afternoon, Marjorie Woodworth wears this softened version of the classic skirtmaker in Kelly green rabbit's hair wool. Cleverly manipulated panels are topped with pockets. Marjorie's felt sombero is in matching green and has a "chula" of crocheted angora in soft lilac edged with green.

HEALTH CHATS

President, Chicago Board of Health.

Six Months is Best Age For Whooping Cough Injection

Wherever possible, children should be protected against whooping cough by being vaccinated with a vaccine prepared for this purpose. The protecton by vaccinated has been tried and has appeared to be so sufficiently effective that it is being increasingly accepted by health authorites.

Whooping cough is a dangerous disease in infants, particularly in those under a year of age. Nine-tenths of those who succumb to whooping cough are under five years of age. The great danger is the development of bronchopneumonia as a complication.

Whooping cough begins much like a cold. There is some discharge from the nose, and a slight hacking cough. In the beginning, there is also slight fever in some instances. In a week or two the sypmtoms become much worse. There are attacks of coughing which become more severe. At the end of each attack, the infant may draw in the breath sharply causing a whooping sound. However in many instances there is no whooping, particularly if the attack is mild. As a rule, the number of white cells in the blood are increased, which is helpful to the doctor in making a diagnosis. Generally the disorder lasts about six weeks. In many instances, however, the course may be shorter or longer than this period. Whooping cough is catching, and is quickly passed from one child to another by direct contact.

The vaccine which has been prepared against whooping cough appears to have much value in preventing this disease. All children unoer five years of age who have not had whooping cough should receive injections of this vaccine. Apparently the best time is as soon as possible after the baby is six months old. Three injections are given a week apart. Sometimes, following the injections, a mild reaction may occur at the point where the vaccine was given. This consists of some redness and swelling. Sometime the child may have fever and become irritable. The temperature may range from 100-101 degrees for a few days. Severe reactions rarely occur, but in a few instances, the temperature may rise to 103 degrees.

Just how long the protection against whooping cough lasts from one series of injections is not known, although an attack which may occur after these injections is usually mild. In view of this fact, it may be a good plan to give the child the first three injections when he is about six months of age, and then to give him another single injection just before he enters kindergarten, at five years of age.

Insofar as treating whooping cough when it occurs, vaccines in present usage do not appear to be of great value. A serum has been prepared by injecting an adult with the vaccine, and then at a later period withdrawing some of his blood and collectng the serum from it. This serum, it is thought, may help to relieve the attacks in some cases. Work is also going on at present with a new rabbit serum, and the results up to the present time would indicate that it does have material benefit in the treatment of whooping cough.

Fashion Flashes

A BIT OF GLITTER marks some of the nicest after dark street-length frocks. Black crepe is used for a pretty frock made with a sweater top that is embroidered with turquoise ornaments and tiny pendants on its yoke and high round neck.

IT LOOKS as though the dinner dress of wool will be a winner this winter. A light-weight woolen is a beautiful shade of tangerine yellow is used for a pretty gown made with deep draped square neckline, long sleeves and skirt drapery from the waistline where it is held with beautiful roses in apricot velvet. Drapery continues down to the slit skirt hem.

COUNTRY GIRLS and their city cousins are cheering for Mainocher's topcoats of tweed lined with suede. Made with matching suede gloves. Nice in a purple and grayish-blue heather mixture lined with purple suede.

LOOKING AHEAD we feel that there is likely to be no more interesting fur coat seen in years than that new model in Persian lamb on boxy flared lines with mink lacings on the full tuxedo front and edging the wide cuffs.

A WARM RECEPTION for the idea of felt flower earrings to match hat trimmings. Tiny fuchsia felt flower earrings tie up with a navy hat similarly trimmed, but of course the flowers are larger.

DECIDEDLY DIFFERENT because it gives a luxury air without the penalty of a steep price is the ensemble of high Cossack hat and big muff, both fashioned of pastel marabou or a new swansdown fabric. Nice as a dress-up note with simple black dresses.

BAY OF QUINTE W. I.

The October meeting of the Bay of Quinte W. I. was held at Mrs. John Reed's. Mrs. Fred Carr gave a reading entitled, "A Beautiful Prayer for World Peace". Roll call was answered by 8 members with generous donations for boys' overseas boxes. Mrs. Boulton offered her home for a Hallowe'en social evening.

The November meeting is to take the form of a Farmers Booth, everyone to donate some article for sale. Being an evening meeting, a program will also be given including the play "To Tommy with Love."

Red Cross sewing and knitting was given out. A card of thanks was received from Mr. W. A. Reid and family for flowers sent at their recent bereavement.

Cards were also sent to the sick in the community. The hostess served a dainty lunch. Meeting closed with the National Anthem.

If you cannot get Crown Brand Syrup from your favourite grocer now and then, here is the reason: Because "Crown Brand" in addition to its other uses is being very generally used to help supplement the supply of sugar in Canadian Homes, the demand has increased tremendously.

Though there has been a much greater amount of Crown Brand syrup produced this year, even this increased supply cannot cope with the shortage of millions of pounds of sugar.

"Don't shove, Elmer, there's no shortage of Victory Bonds," smiled Elsie

"WELL, this is no time for holding back!" rumbled Elmer, the Bull, trying to push his way into line. "We've all got to get in there and buy Victory Bonds and War Savings Certificates! Even if we have to go short of something . . ."

"That's right, Elmer!" smiled Elsie. "And speaking of shortages, isn't it wonderful how patient and understanding our customers have been when we couldn't supply all the Borden's Ice Cream they wanted! And our dealers, too! They have suffered so much inconvenience and loss of business and have taken it all in good part, knowing that this ice cream shortage could not be avoided."

"Very true," admitted Elmer, puffing noisily. "'Scuse me, madam, I'm just trying to keep cool in this crowd . . ."

"Too bad I can't pass around some of Canada's favourite dessert . . . I mean Borden's smooth scrumptious ice cream," beamed Elsie brightly. "It's the grandest ice cream you ever dipped a spoon into . . . whether you buy it in a brick, in bulk, or in MelOrol."

"What's MelOrol, mummy?" interrupted little Beulah.

"Why, that's Borden's wonderful modern style of ice cream. It's made up into individual portions, each one roll-packed right at the freezer in a special wrapper to protect its purity, dairy-freshness, and fine flavour. You know, military canteens and war plant cafeterias are finding that Borden's MelOrol Ice Cream is the very thing for them. MelOrol is so quick and easy to serve that no matter how many people have to be looked after in a short time, they can all have their favourite nourishing dessert."

"And these days when we must keep fit by eating the right foods, Borden's Ice Cream is a welcome addition to the diet. It is rich in essential proteins and minerals, and has all the wonderful food value of Borden's milk, besides being a real energy food."

DO YOU KNOW that the wholehearted co-operation of our customers and our dealers has made it possible for Borden's to put into effect a carefully-planned restriction in the truck delivery of Ice Cream all over Ontario and Quebec that has resulted in an important saving of rubber and gasoline for our armed forces?

RATIONING LIKELY TO BE EXTENDED GORDON WARNS

Must Curtail Production to Release Manpower for War Production

OUTLINES POLICY

Moncton, N. B., Oct. 23 — (CP) — Canadians had notice today from Donald Gordon, Chairman of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, that they may expect rationing of more commodities than at present.

Mr. Gordon, addressing the Maritime Board of Trade last night, declared that extension of consumer rationing will likely follow inevitably upon the board's planned program of curtailment of production of civilian supplies to release manpower for fighting and war production.

He did not indicate when further consumer rationing might be expected but the day before, at Halifax, George S. Mooney of the W. P. T. B.'s rationing division had stated that it was not expected to touch the consumer, at least, until the spring of next year.

Mr. Gordon outlined a 10-point preliminary policy being undertaken by his board with a view to releasing manpower by cutting out non-essential production for civilian use. Only the minimum required for the health, efficiency and morale of the nation would be produced, he said.

Proceed in Orderly Way

Curtailment of production would proceed in an orderly way, he promised, but the needs of the armed forces and essential industries were urgent, and there might have to be some shortcuts.

He disclosed the board has been considering the idea of the pooling of profits in cases where different businesses within an industry had been curtailed in different businesses within an industry had been curtailed in different degrees in the production of the same article. The board might find it necessary to set up such a scheme, but he felt such arrangements might in most cases be worked out by the industries themselves.

"Non-Essential" Ones First

First lines to be eliminated, Mr. Gordon said, will be the "obviously non-essential" ones. Continuing lines will be standardized and simplified.

The board, he said, will attempt to avoid discrimination, but it will not be able to institute parallel moves in all industries at the same time.

Outlining the basis for concentration of production in individual industries, he said manpower requirements in various areas will play an important part. The need for power and other services also will be taken into account. Because of these factors, he said it might be that in shutting down certain units of one industry, it might not be the least efficient that were closed.

4 D.C.F's, 3 D.M.F's Awarded To Canadian Airmen

Flt.-Sergt. H. F. Tice of Hamilton, Reported Missing September 30

ALL HIGHLY PRAISED

(By DOUGLAS AMARON)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 23 (C.P. Cable) — Announcement of the award of four Distinguished Flying Crosses and three Distinguished Flying Medals to Canadian airmen was made by R.C.A.F. headquarters here.

The D.F.C. went to PO. J. P. McElroy, Port Arthur, Ont.; PO. K. C. Murphy, Ottawa; WO. K. C. A. Smith, Saskatoon, and WO. J. E. Cox, Kingston, Ont.

The D.F.M. was won by Flt. Sgt. G. T. MacKenzie, Toronto; Flt.-Sgt. H. F. Tice, Hamilton, Ont., and Flt. Sgt. (now PO.) J. E. R. Pichette, Restigouche, Que.; Flt.-Sgt. Tice was reported missing on September 30.

McElroy's D.F.C. was an immediate award for outstanding achievements in recent air fighting over Malta. The others were for consistently good work during bombing operations over Europe.

McElroy, who has compiled a score of 5½ enemy aircraft destroyed since he arrived at Malta last June, engaged a Junkers-88 bomber and six fighters single-handed October 12, shooting down one fighter. Three days later his section attacked a formation of Junkers. He probably destroyed one and damaged another.

Murphy is a navigator and bomb aimer who participated in sorties against many of the enemy's best-defended targets. He has recently acted as captain of his aircraft. His work, the citation said, "has been of the highest order and he has set a high standard by his courage and devotion to duty."

Smith, too, has attacked heavily-defended targets of enemy and enemy-occupied territory and "by his painstaking and exemplary navigation at all times has been a fine example and inspiration to the crews with whom he has flown."

Brings Machine Home

Cox, whose skill, enthusiasm and courage were praised, has several times flown damaged aircraft safely to base.

"On one occasion one engine failed when flying very low over the sea, but on the remaining engine he returned safely to an English airdrome," the citation said. "This officer has also been directly responsible for saving another crew forced to take to their dinghy."

Political Eclipse Of Pierre Laval Seen in Move

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

The timing of Admiral Jean Darlan's inspection trip to the French outpost in West Africa, Dakar, is related in Vichy advices to Axis insistance that an Allied attack on the strategic key to the South Atlantic is brewing. In view of the crisis in France over Nazi efforts to dragoon skilled labor recruits for German war factories, however, it could have quite another meaning.

Observers in Switzerland in close touch with French public resistance to the Vichy-Berlin collaboration move, see in it a possibility of another political eclipse for Pierre Laval, arch French collaborationist. They detected something like swan-song undertones in Laval's radio appeal to French workers to accept his program or take the consequences at German hands.

Some of those at the Swiss listening posts suggest that one purpose for Darlan's trip is to look over defence possibilities in the event some sort of French Government decides to move from Vichy to Dakar.

In the event of Laval's retirement as Vichy chief of state, or his removal by Berlin fiat, Darlan would seem to be in line to take over. The French sailor-politician actually is No. 1 man designate in the regime at Vichy imposed on old Marshal Petain by the Nazis in which he was compelled to recall Laval.

Darlan was placed in command of all French armed forces. He was also specifically designated by Petain as his successor, presumably in deference to widespread French public dislike of Laval and his pro-Nazi policies.

British fear that Laval's return to power meant transfer of the still powerful French fleet to Germany was running high at that time, partly because Darlan had been in conference with Hitler. But Darlan asserted that Hitler had not asked him "to hand over" the fleet, and added:

"Germany began the war alone and judges herself able to end it alone against no matter what coalition."

Presumably Darlan, like Laval, then shared Hitler's confidence of German victory. Presumably, also, Darlan was wholly unaware of Hitler's plans to attack Russia a month later or of Axis designs for a Japa- both military and political, than his nese attack on the United States which brought the United States into the war.

Whether he still shares Laval's confidence in ultimate Axis triumph in the war is questionable. He is, after all, a military man as well as a politician — as Laval is not. He probably is more inclined to realism black-browed opposite number at Vichy.

And on both counts Darlan well might deem this an expedient moment to absent himself from Continental France. There is some warrantable suspicion that he is anxious to disassociate himself with Laval's effort to force reluctant French labor into the business of making munitions for the Nazis.

Prompt official Vichy Admiralty denial that any aid and comfort for Axis U-boats was being provided at Dakar is significant. Darlan is the French Admiralty.

The fleet is Darlan's political ace-in-the-hole whether dealing with Berlin, the Allies, or the French public.

Bear Trees Wooler Resident In Weslemkoon Lake Area

Wooler, Oct. 23 (Special) — Mr. Charles Jarvis had a thrilling experience with a bear about four days prior to his home coming from Weslemkoon Lake where he had spent the summer and fall months.

He was stocking fish from one lake to another and leaving his gun in the boat, he proceeded through the woods carrying two large buckets of fish. Stopping to rest, the rustling of leaves attracted his attention also of his two dogs and they began to bark, in the next moment, Mr. Jarvis sighted a bear to which his dogs gave chase.

Bears Chase Dog

Immediately two other bears and a cub made an appearance. Two of the bears took after the dogs and the mother bear made for him, and having no weapon to battle with the enraged animal, he made for a nearby tree, the bear missing him just by inches. She made three attempts to climb the tree and failing, sat down at its foot, to wait. Mr. Jarvis was up the tree for one hour and a half. What to do, was a conundrum. Finally, remembering smoke was a provocation to wild animals he took his two pocket handkerchiefs, tying the four corners together into knots, he proceeded to fill the improvised sack with twigs from the tree, after which he carefully set it afire by means of a match, then dropped it to the ground among the leaves in front of the bear.

Keeps Eye on Bear

Soon a good smudge prevailed and the bear sneaked to where her cub was waiting. Mr. Jarvis cautiously crept down the tree and with an eye on Mrs. Bruin, began piling leaves on the fire, aiming it in her direction. It had the desired effect, their departure and out of sight. Mr. Jarvis says he has no desire to be caught in a like circumstance again.

When he arrived at camp, his dogs were already there. Mr. Jarvis searched the woods in that vicinity for three succeeding days with no sign of the bears.

Albert Shows Superiority In Every Department of Game To Defeat B.C.I. by 26 to 0

NO ONE INJURED

Showing too much defensive and offensive football in every department, Coach Paul Goyette's Albert College seniors ran rough-shod over the Belleville Collegiate sextette in the opening game of the Senior Interscholastic Bay of Quinte COSSA football group here yesterday. So badly were the "Collegians" out-classed that their ancient grid iron enemies applied the much feared whitewash brush, as Albert won 26 to 0.

The game wasn't without its moments despite the B.C.I. rout, as feelings ran powder high and exploded with fistic encounters as the final whistle saw bedlam and mayhem reign over the Collegiate campus and players and biased fans battled things out slugging toe-to-toe. High tackling and illegal grid tactics dominated the game as the old Albert-Collegiate rivalry leaped to the front with the opening whistle. No serious injuries resulted, however. The score by periods was 1-0, 11-0, 20-0 and 26-0.

Race to Recover Own Punts

When Skipper Goyette's Albert kids weren't dinging the Collegians' line and breaking through to smother Coach Mott's plays before they could get organized, then the Alberts would be firing forward passes or racing down the field to recover their own punts, as the winners showed more speed and general football along the line. Headed by Bob Taylor and Zeke Ballantyne, the winners played inspired football, as Taylor out-punted Bateman while Jack Wright was too strong at spearing B.C.I. attempted forwards. Bill Lougheed and Don Ridout added further prowess to the winners' cause. For the hopelessly defeated Collegians, Johnnie Locke, Lyle Ostrom and Doug Burns got in a few gains, while Norm Mills fumbled a pass on the Albert goal line for one of the few opportunities the B.C.I. had to cross their opponents' white stripe.

Bob Taylor booted a single point for the only score in the initial period. Don Ridout intercepted a B.C.I. pass to carry to the Collegians 16 just before the quarter ended. On the first play in the next stanza Taylor crashed over, not converted. As a matter of fact Albert failed to convert any of their four touchdowns. On a sneak forward, Bateman to Ostrom, the B.C.I. went to Albert's eleven, but Mills muffed the next pitch right on Albert's goal line. Albert blocked a Collegiate kick and Ballantyne pitched to Ardiel, who ran 35 yards for a major score, making the count 11 to 0. Bateman fired to Mason, who was tackled high and a fight ensued at the halfway horn.

Nice Running by Albert

In the third stanza Taylor showed some nice broken field running to place the ball on the Collegians' ten and then Bob fired to Rankin, who went over standing up—16 to 0. Two subsequent safety touches, the result of poor snaps behind the B.C.I. goal line, gave Albert four more points before the final period opened. Jack Wright hove into the picture and intercepted two successive B.C.I. passes before Ballantyne booted for a single point as B.C.I. held. Ballantyne pitched to Lougheed and Albert crossed the B.C.I. line again. In the dying moments the Collegians tried in vain to evade the whitewash and as Burns booted over Rankin saved the day for Albert with a neat run out to his seven. Immediately after the final whistle a free-for-all fistic encounter entertained the patrons before cooler heads brushed the combatants off.

The line-ups:

Belleville Collegiate: Snap, Mason; wings, Mills and Westfall; quarter, Locke; halves, Burns and Ostrom; subs, Bradshaw, Hyde and Bateman.

Albert College: Snap, Rankin; wings, Lougheed and Ardiel; quarter, Ridout; halves, Taylor and Ballantyne; subs, Bailey, Bacon, Lancaster and Wright.

Referee, "Red" Townsend.

CANADIENS SCORE DECISIVE 6-2 WIN OVER BRUINS

Gordie Drillon Drives Two Past the Brilliant Brimsek

COWLEY SMART

Cornwall, Ont., Oct. 23 (CP) — Montreal Canadiens scored a decisive 6-2 victory over their National Hockey League rivals, Boston Bruins in a wide-open exhibition game here last night. More than 2,000 fans turned out to see a hard-fought pre-season tilt.

Gordie Drillon moved into his old Toronto Maple Leaf form to drive two goals past Frankie Brimsek and lead the marksmen of the night. Other Canuck scorers were rookie Maurice Richard, Elmer Lach, Tony Demers and Murph Chamberlain. Harvey Jackson and Buzz Boll shot the Boston scores, with Bill Cowley setting up both plays.

Canadiens were at their best in the third period when they drove in four goals, and appeared to have an edge in condition on the Bruins.

Drillon gave Canadiens the lead with the only counter of the first period, and Jackson tied it up at the half-way mark. Lach made it 2-1 for Canadiens near the end of the second period and set the stage for Canadiens' 4-1 edge in goals in the third.

Lineups:

N. H. L. Training Notes

By the Canadian Press

The first serious casualty at the Toronto Maple Leaf training camp in St. Catharines, Ont., is Mike Karakas, netminder for Providence Reds of the American League, Leafs farm club. A puck driven by Billy (The Kid) Taylor and deflected by Bucko McDonald clipped a chunk away from the corner of Karakas' right eye that took six stitches to repair.

Remember Marty Barry? The former Detroit Red Wing and Boston Bruin star will be back on Montreal forum ice in a different capacity this season—as coach of the army team in the Quebec Senior League.

Phil Watson is the clown of the New York Ranger camp at Winnipeg. Ott Heller caught him with a terrific bodycheck at yesterday's workout. Watson climbed to his feet, said cheerfully: "Okay, Ott, but cover up the next time I come through."

Speaking of Watson, somebody enquired if he would captain Rangers this season. He laughed: "Last season Lester (Patrick) named me captain for one game—but after I got a misconduct, a major and a minor penalty I guess he figured he picked the wrong man. At least I haven't been captain since then."

Goalkeepers have it tough enough, but Patrick believes in refining the torture. Yesterday he left only one defenceman on, allowing the big blue line of Bryan Hextall, Lynn Patrick and Watson to sift in on every type of attacking formation.

A famous Ranger line of former years—the Neil Colville-Alex Shibicky-Mac Colville unit—probably will operate for the last time together when the Montreal army all-stars meet Canadiens in an exhibition game at Montreal Saturday. The trio has been allocated to three different teams in the National Defence League at Ottawa.

Billy Taylor, pivot for Sweeney Schriner and Lorne Carr on the Leafs hottest line, has entered the racing game. He purchased a yearling by Shoeless Joe out of Doggerel from Frank Selke, acting manager of the Toronto club.

Toronto, Oct. 23—(CP) — Eddie Durocher, brother of Brooklyn Dodgers' Leo, is in the Royal Canadian Air Force stationed at Jericho Beach, Vancouver. . . . Winnipeg's Joe Ryan came east year after year, urging the Canadian Rugby Union to adopt Western rule innovations. When Joe left Winnipeg for Ottawa to take a position in the Federal Income Tax Department, the Toronto Globe and Mail headed the news item: "East Dough, Not Patience, Ryan Will Help Tax Now." . . . Moose Jaw's natatorium ordinarily closes for the winter but this year it is planned to place a temporary floor over the huge swimming pool and provide seating accommodation for 1,000. It will be used as a basketball, boxing, wrestling and badminton emporium. . . Montreal skiers are worried by the probability weekend ski trains will not be operated this year because of transportation difficulties.

The expert says:

Fred (Peterborough Examiner) Craig: "Toronto papers are expressing sympathy for the plight of the New York (National Hockey League) Rangers, supposedly short of players. We have an idea that Mr. (Manager Lester) Patrick will bob up with a few newcomers that will show plenty of what it takes. And don't forget that Rangers still have their ace scoring line of Bryan Hextall, Phil Watson and Lynn Patrick intact. They topped the scoring show last year and if other lines fail to measure up to their standard, it is probable that the rough neck line will get more time out on the ice than usual and that will not hurt the Rangers any. We have always been of the opinion that ace lines in the N.H.L. were not used long enough."

Puck patter:

Bill (Niagara Falls Review) Gaynon fears Cataracts of that city have insufficient playing material for senior hockey and suggests Eddie Shore's Buffalo amateur farm might be moved to Niagara Falls. "Probably this is a wild proposition but Niagara Falls is in need of hockey players and Buffalo amateurs require league competition." . . . Oshawa Generals have a group of stars held over from the club which lost to Portage La Prairie in the last national junior final, headed by Red Tilson and Ronnie Nelson. . . . Kingston hockey moguls hope to have the playing services of Goalie Alex Woods, whose contract is held by Chicago Black Hawks but who is likely to be on war work in Kingston, and Lex Chisholm, the former Toronto Maple Leafs star who is taking an officer's course at nearby Barriefield.

VISIT OF LINE COACH MAY HELP HAMILTON TEAM

Johnny Metras Pays Flying Visit to Practice of Wildcats

TEAM NOT OUT YET

There's a veiled note of warning in the reports that Johnny Metras has paid another flying visit to the training camp of the receding Hamilton Wildcats.

The reports say, innocuously enough, that the celebrated London, Ont., line coach merely paid a social call to the Wildcat camp. That may be true. But Eastern fans still remember what happened the last time Metras visited Hamilton.

Wildcats were drilling for the Eastern final with Ottawa Rough Riders. They figured to be vastly outplayed along the wingline. Metras took over the line coaching job and Wildcats proceeded to shove the weighty Riders around, finally dropped a 7-4 decision on a tainted touchdown.

Whether the Metras magic will work Saturday when Wildcats oppose the fast-climbing Toronto Balmy Beaches in the first game of an Ontario Rugby Football Union doubleheader at Varsity Stadium is another story. The Toronto club has won three straight after dropping their first two and may yet live up to its pre-season rating. Wildcats, on the other hand, have been shut out in two of their last three.

The winner between Wildcats and Beaches will move into undisputed possession of second place behind Royal Canadian Air Force Hurricanes and a slim margin ahead of Toronto's H. M. C. S. York Navy entry. The two service teams, having battled to a 7-7 deadlock in a mid-week clash under floodlights, will be idle Saturday.

Only casualty in Beach ranks is veteran outside Leo Deadey, who suffered a side injury in practice and will be out for several weeks. He will be replaced by Butch Allison, back in action after a short layoff.

The second game Saturday is strictly of the bottom-drawer variety. It pairs Toronto Oakwood Indians, who have looked surprisingly good in dropping four out of five contests (always good, but not good enough) and Kitchener-Waterloo Panthers. Panthers haven't crashed into the victory column yet but they showed signs of life last week in holding the undefeated Hurricanes to an 18-7 score.

DID YOU KNOW—United States professional football has sent 206 men, including players and executives, into the armed services south of the border ... Pro. baseball may have contributed a lot more of the mazuma, but let the diamond game tie football's player contribution.. Tuffy Leemans, who starred for so many years with the New York Giant football team, failed to get into the navy when his eyes couldn't meet the test • • • If you are unable to see any Senior O. R. F. U. football games at least you can listen to them • • • The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation is airing one each Saturday • • Hans Lobert, hard-driving boss of the futile Philadelphia Phils, scoffed at the fielding record attributed to his outfielder, Danny Litwhiler • • • The left-fielder of the Phils appeared in 151 games this past season without being charged with an error • • • Recently asked about the record, Lobert said: "Sounds good, eh? Well, in my book it isn't. I don't care what anyone says, Litwhiler had a disappointing year. He didn't measure up as a hitter, and I can remember many an afternoon when I would have given him a dozen errors for some of the plays he made, or didn't make, in left field." • • • All of which just goes to prove once again that the records aren't taken too seriously by most managers in adjudging the worth of a ball player.

HOW THE MIGHTY HAVE fallen.

Surely evil days have fallen upon rugby football at the Belleville Collegiate Institute in this year of 1942.

When Jack Doran's St. Mikes "Irish" aren't pushing the Collegiate juniors around, then Paul Goyette's Albert College seniors are doing likewise to Skipper Mott's B. C. I. senior gridders.

Yesterday the Albert senior ran over, around and through the Church St. aggregation until they mounted a 26 to 0 score over their ancient B. C. I. grid rivals. "Woe is me," cried Kennie Campbell, former B. C. I. star winger of another year, as he watched the Alberts roll up the score.

There was little doubt as to which was the better squad yesterday as the Alberts ran around, over and through the Church St. sextette with abandon and continued to break up plays in a razzle dazzle style.

THE MARKED ADVANTAGE Coach Goyette had over Skipper Mott's crew was in reserve strength. When Bob Taylor and Zeke Ballantyne weren't making merry at the expense of the BCI then Jack Wright would appear from the sidelines to intercept forward passes until it really hurt. Then along would come Don Ridout, Bill Lougheed or Bill Ardiel to break through and smother the Collegians for repeated losses. So all-in-all the Alberts just were too good in every department. The pastime was far from a pink tea party, two honest-to-goodness fistic encounters added for spice. However, once the final whistle sounded the losers would have been much better advised to refrain from fighting, despite the fact high tackles and illegal tactics featured the game and kept Referee Townsend the busiest man on the field meting out stiff yardage penalties for such infractions.

PEDRO MARTINEZ, THE villanous Mexican wrestling champion, really meant business when he entered the ring at the Hume Arena and hurled personal challenges into the teeth of Billie Watson and Earl McCready. Actually the powerful Mex. was directing most of his taunts towards Watson, the reason being a Mexican never forgets. Last month Watson managed to push Pedro out of the ring in the Maple Leaf Gardens and the Mexican strained his back and was counted out. Martinez has nursed a grudge against Watson ever since and doubtless a goodly gallery would be on hand to encourage "The Whipper" in the event Promoter Tunney can get them together here next Thursday. Martinez has grounds for a complaint, after all he has never been beaten in eleven bouts at the Hume Arena and he sees no reason why he hasn't been given a top rating. Maybe he'll be accommodated.

REMEMBER WHEN FRANK Boucher signed with the Vancouver Maroons of the Pacific Coast Hockey League 20 years ago today? Boucher later went to the New York Rangers, National Hockey League entry, in 1926 and teamed up with the famed Cook brothers, Bill and Bun. One of the cleanest centre ice stars in hockey, Boucher was awarded permanet possession of the Lady Byng Trophy after winning it seven times.

THIS AND THAT—Considered one of the greatest sports spectacles in the United States, the annual Army-Navy football game, will not be played to any degree of public this year. . . . President Roosevelt ordered the annual classic to be played at Annapolis, Md., a town of 16,000 and the home of the United States Naval Academy. Only town residents will be permitted to attend. . . . This is how Uncle Sam conserves rubber and gasoline, in other words, continues sport for sports sake and let the public read about 'em in the Press. . . . But then again, how are the newsboys to travel? . . . Usually the classic is played before 100,000 patrons at the Philadelphia Stadium. . There's no smelling of Mike Jacobs on this one, however. . . Some of the youthful aspirants in Toronto Maple Leafs camp were scoffed at as even good junior pucksters by the Hogtown scriveners last winter. . . . But wait, it's a different story this fall. They're all combinations of Clancy, Cook and Conacher all rolled into one. It just depends upon whose ox is being gored, no doubt. . . . Bucky Harris, who resigned as manager of the Washington Senators recently, has applied for a post with the United States Army. . . . Man Mountain Dean was released from the United States Army the other day and may return to wrestling circles, maybe Dean could accommodate Pedro Martinez, self-styled wrestling champion of the Hume Arena. . . . Altogether, push.

COUNT ON HIM

Toe Blake is one of the players who will provide the punch for the Montreal Canadiens when the National Hockey League season opens at the end of the month. Coach Dick Irvin is said to be counting o nhim and on Gordie Drillon to keep the puck rolling.

Army-Navy Game To Be Played At Annapolis, Md.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 23 (AP)—The Army-Navy football game a victim of its own popularity, has been shunted from Philadelphia's mammoth stadium to the naval academy's 22,000-seat arena as a war economy measure by President Roosevelt.

In a season during which other gridiron contests have shown a drastic falling off in attendance, the battle of the two service elevens was expected to draw its customary 100,000 spectators and the President last night ordered the transfer to save tires and gasoline and to keep the railroads open for more important travel.

The White House statement which accompanied the announcement warned that tickets for the classic be sold "only to residents of Annapolis—not to outsiders" and hinted that the game might be the last meeting of the two for the duration of the war by saying that "the game was scheduled before war was declared and its cancellation at this late date undoubtedly would cause great disappointment."

Annapolis, capital of Maryland, had a population of slightly more than 13,000 in 1940 and is believed near 16,000 now. Last year at Philadelphia 98,924 persons watched Navy defeat the Army, 14 to 6.

The series was started in 1891 and since then has become the nation's most glamorous gridiron spectacle with 110,000 seeing the 21-21 tie in Chicago in 1926 and 102,000 watching the 1936 battle in Philadelphia.

Three-Year-Old Racing Scramble Not To Be Settled

New York, Oct. 23 (AP)—The three-year-old racing scramble, a much muddled mixup between Shut Out and Alsab, is going to remain a turf omelet for the remainder of the year.

The plans for Equipoise's best son and the Al Sabbath colt to settle the championship between them were flattened today when it was learned that Shut Out came sore in his latest race and would be retired until 1943.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's chocolate charger, winner of the Kentucky Derby and Belmont Stakes, certainly looked like the head man in the spring but Alsab came along to win the Preakness and finished seven and a half lengths in front of Shut Out in the Gallant Fox handicap Wednesday. The four-year-old filly, Dark Discovery, "stole" that race from both of them.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Oct. 23 — (CP) — In England the boys who follow the ponies point to the King's filly Sun Chariot as the wonder horse of the year but neutral Eire has a great racer, too.

It's too bad they never will meet because Eire's Windsor Slipper has followed Sun Chariot's example in winning three classics this season. Now, at the age of three, both have been retired to stud.

Unbeaten in a two-year career, Joseph McGrath's Windsor Slipper wasn't extended in the Irish 2,000 Guineas, had virtually a walkover in taking the Irish Derby in record time, and ended a brilliant showing by scampering home a 10-length winner in the recent Irish St. Leger. The last classic, worth 1,000 Sovereigns, was over a mile and six-furlong course at The Curragh. Eight started the St. Leger with the winner running at 100 to 8 on. Miss Dorothy Paget's Fort Osway was second.

Decision to retire Sun Chariot as a brood mare came as a surprise to most. Sources close to the King's stable said previously she most likely would remain in training for another season.

Capt. Charles Moore, the King's racing manager, also announced that Big Game, who carried His Majesty's colors to victory in the 2,000 Guineas but failed badly in the Derby, also will go to stud. Both will stay in England for the present, later returning to the National Stud in County Kildare, Eire, from which they were leased by the King for their racing careers.

The two made Royal racing history by winning four of the five classic races this season. Each was defeated but once in two-year careers and their victories this season placed the King at the head of the winning owners with triumphs in nine races having a total stake value of approximately $46,000. In normal years the amount would have been about three times that figure.

A proportion of the King's winnings pour into the government treasury since the National Stud, presented to the people of Britain during the First Great War, receives a share.

"Submarine Zone"

Drama, with the power of flashing pistons, may be found in Columbia's "Submarine Zone" which opened yesterday at the Capitol as the second feature. Action, with the speed of flashing bullets is a vital part of the new film which was directed by John Brahm from a screenplay by P. J. Wolfson. Romance with the throb of an all-conquering love is the third essential of this unforgettable new film, which stars Pat O'Brien and Constance Bennett, with a supporting cast headed by John Halliday, Melville Cooper and Alan Baxter.

"Submarine Zone" tells a stirring, thrilling story of men and women facing disaster and death, and behaving each according to his nature.

"Submarine Zone" is one of the most important action dramas of the year; by all means, see it! A662,lue'

A funny cartoon and the 11th chapter of the thrilling serial "Spy Smasher" complete a very entertaining bill for all.

AT THE BELLE

"Are Husbands Necessary?"

"Are Husbands Necessary?" the hilarious Paramount comedy of happy-go-lucky married life, now on the Belle Theatre screen, was filmed from the best-selling Isabel Rorick novel, Mr. and Mrs. Cugat. The picture features Ray Milland, Betty Field and Patricia Morison.

"Bullet Scars," thrilling

"Bullet Scars", the gripping story of a small-town doctor who is trapped by a gang of ruthless killers is the worthy added thrilling feature attraction. Regis Toomey as the doctor, and Adele Longmire, a recent Hollywood recruit from the Broadway stage is co-starred.

"Jasper and the Watermelons," a color fun cartoon completes the program.

"Wake Island", thundering drama

Paramount's long-waited "Wake Island," film dramatization of the 446 beleaguered Marines on the tiny Pacific isle who held out against 20 to 1 odds of Jap bombing and invasion forces, will arrive this week end at the Belle Theatre

Advance reports from preview observers have already pronounced this picturization of the gallant Marine stand an epic as motion picture entertainment. That would be only natural, for a great story was put into the hands of the movie-makers and produced with the active cooperation of the United States Marine Corps.

Featured in the cast of the thrilling account of Marine heroism are Brian Donlevy, Robert Preston, MacDonald Carey, Albert Dekkar, Walter Abel, Barbara Britton and William Bendix. John Farrow, one of Hollywood's most brilliant directors, with a long string of successes to his credit, did the megaphone job.

"Wake Island" concerns itself with the men who did the fighting in the foxholes and in the air in defending that patch of desert soil jutting up out of the Pacific It is a drama of supreme heroism, of men who wouldn't quit although they knew reinforcements were out of the question. It is the story of men who were devoted to American ideals and knew they were worth fighting for.

Their great feat of pinning down a huge enemy force for fourteen days will never be forgotten by this nation and its allies—and we have a hunch that "Wake Island" the film dramatization of their valorous stand, will similarly never be forgotten.

There is no doubt that "Wake Island" will measure up to anyone's idea of strong, thrilling movie entertainment.

A color fun cartoon, "At the Dog Show," the Belle News of the world, Mcfarlane Twins and orchestra in a smart revue, and an entertaining sportlight film precede the feature attraction. On Saturday matinee the fourth chapter of "Perils of the Royal Mounted," the year's best chapter-play, will be exhibited.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Blondie For Victory"

Two features which will please everyone from five to seventy-five, are now on the McCarthy Theatre screen. "Blondie For Victory" featuring Blondie, Dagwood, Baby Dumpling, Cookie and Daisy the pooch is the one feature and the East Side Kids in "Bowery Blitzkrieg" is the second feature.

He finds himself along with the other husbands of the community, so busy attending to household affairs that he has no time to do his own job properly. Unlike most of its predecessors, "Blondie For Victory" places that lovely young woman in the difficult position pratcticaly reserved hitherto for the inimitable Wagwood.

FASCIST ARSENAL

In the growing scale of Britain's air assaults on Germany, the Air Ministry's reference to "a strong force" frequently has meant 100, often 200 or 300 or more planes in the bombing armada, but because of the greater distance involved in striking Italy the comparison may not hold.

Besides the perils of distance and high mountains with heavy bomb loads, the planes also faced the dangers of crossing Switzerland and France. They touched off alerts and intense anti-aircraft fire in the French cities of Vichy and Lyon as well as the air alerts in Geneva.

Communique Given

A brief Air Ministry communique said:-

"Last night a strong force of aircraft of the bomber command attacked the port and naval base of Genoa.

"Weather over the target was good and in bright moonlight many heavy bombs were dropped on the objectives.

"Very large fires were seen and none of our aircraft is missing."

The information that Turin also was attacked came from Rome. It said small fires broke out and were quickly controlled. The Italian communique, however, gave this description of the assault on Genoa:-

"At Genoa the enemy raid, which was made in several waves with incendiary and explosive bombs, reached notable dimensions and damaged civilian buildings. Casualties are still being counted. The population's attitude was exemplary. Two planes were brought down by the anti-aircraft defences."

Genoa is an important manufacturing city as well as a strategic port.

In making the raid, the bombers flew 1,500 miles roundtrip, mostly over enemy territory.

The city which, apart from extensive dock facilities known to have been used for supplying Axis forces in Africa, is the home of the Ansaldo works which produce airplane parts and munitions.

Genoa's most recent previous raid was Sept. 28, 1941.

It was considered probable, however, that the newest four-motored Lancasters and Stirlings, capable of carrying one, two or even four tons of bombs on a round trip flight of at least 1,200 miles, were sent.

Reply to Question

It was only last Wednesday that Sir Archibald Sinclair, Air Minister, told the House of Commons in reply to a question that:

"We have been hitting Italy from the air and we shall go on doing so."

Bombers operating from Britain last smashed at northern Italy April 12-13 when the royal arsenal at Turin was attacked, involving a round-trip journey of 1,500 miles.

Since then, however, the R.A.F. has struck repeatedly from the Mediterranean area at Sicily and points in southern Italy.

The latest operations set off a chain of air-raid alarms—and in some places anti-aircraft gun activity—across France and Switzerland.

An alert was sounded in Vichy, followed by intense anti-aircraft fire. Anti-aircraft guns also went into action in Lyons. Geneva, Switzerland, had two air alerts.

CHAPTER 27

Facing an Ordeal

Judith could not trust herself to return to the dining-room at once. She was shaking so and she felt as though she were going to laugh and cry simultaneously. Passing her hand over her moist forehead, she thought, "That was Max, really Max . . . after all this time. Am I happy? I don't know . . . I don't know. And all the things I thought I'd say to him I didn't say at all. I'm doing what he wants me to do again. I'm going to meet at 4:30 and the ship sails at five. . . I won't be on the ship. How can I disappoint the others? But I shall. I'll disappoint them and meet Max. I'll risk everything to meet him. "Did mother and father hear our odd conversation? If they did, it's the first time they have ever heard Max's name."

She returned to the dining-room grateful that the descending twilight made the room dim. She took her place again, knowing she could eat nothing. She knew, too, because their faces always betrayed them, that they had heard and were puzzled and distressed.

It had to be said, but she did not know how to begin.

"That was an old friend, someone I used to know in New York." Feeling guilty and ashamed, she went on, "He's just come back from South America and probably won't be here long. He wants to see me Saturday in New York. I'll take a train to Quebec and meet the others there."

"But Judith," her mother protested. "They will be so . . ."

Her father interrupted. "Couldn't you see your friend earlier in the day and not miss the ship?"

"I'm afraid it's one of those things that will go far into the night. I'm sorry. Everything always happens at once." They were telling themselves, she knew, that they were parents who did not interfere with their daughter's life. They were withholding their protests, their advice, their fears and perhaps their thoughts that she was being unfair to her friends and to her sister.

So they said nothing more and she was relieved when dinner was over and she could leave and go to her room. Nor could she find escape there from guilt and shame. Yet the instant Max came to her mind, the living, breathing Max looking at her once more across a table and speaking to her, she knew that there was nothing she would not do for him.

Presently her mother called from downstairs, "Judith! Your father and I are going over to the Hallams', dear. When Bessie leaves lock the front door, please."

Call Harriet and Katherine, she thought. You must tell Stephen, too . . . Friday night. Two nights in which to prepare herself for telling him. She could forget him tonight. But could she? What would he say? How would he look? Yes, forget him tonight . . . forget him.

She walked about the room several minutes before calling Harriet.

"Packing tonight?" Harriet asked excitedly. "This is the first real vacation Larry and I have had since we've been married. You don't know what it means to me."

Judith took a deep breath. "Harriet, my plans will have to be changed somewhat. An old friend, someone I knew in New York, is back again and wants to see me on Saturday. I'll take a train from there and meet you and the others in Quebec."

"Oh, but Judith, you can't! You simply can't."

"I'm terribly sorry, but I must. Please try to understand."

"Oh!" The line was silent for a few moments. Then Harriet said quietly. "I see. You want to be in New York after Saturday, too. . . This breaks up everything for us, you know."

"It shouldn't. I'm not that important. And I'll be in Quebec."

"Will you?" But there's nothing I can do about it, Judith. It really won't break up everything for me. I was wrong when I said that. It won't break up everything for Katherine and Ralph either except we'll miss you. But Steve—"

"I know," she answered quickly. She didn't want to talk about him. "I wouldn't blame all of you if you got angry with me and stayed angry."

"You wouldn't blame Steve if he didn't go at all?"

"No, I wouldn't blame him."

"And you wouldn't blame him if he stayed angry with you for the rest of his life. It seems too bad when we had everything planned and everything so far has worked out so well. But we'll have a good time. Don't worry about that. But Steve — that's your affair. And that's all I have to say."

"Thank you for taking it so well."

"It's all right, dear."

She fought tears before she called Katherine. Harriet had been wonderful. No tears, no reproaches and no bitterness. But the fact that Harriet had taken it so well increased her guilt and shame.

Soon she heard Katherine's rich warm voice. "Hello, darling. Telepathy. I had a feeling you were going to call up. The weather is ghastly, isn't it? It cools me to thing of northern lights and a sea breeze against my face."

Judith had to say it again. "Katherine, I have bad news, I'm afraid. An old friend, someone I knew in New York, is back from South America. He wants to see me in New York on Saturday and I'm—I'm going to miss the ship. The only thing I can do is to take a train to Quebec and meet you there."

"Is he that important?"

"Yes. Yes, he is."

"Then what can I say? I'm terribly disappointed but — Stephen, can you manage that?"

"I haven't tried and I probably won't manage it very well when I do. I can't expect to. I told Harriet and she was as decent as you are about it."

"Judith, only something that was just about the most important thing in the world to you would make you do this. But Ralph will be with me and when he's with me, everything is good. You're not married. You don't know that." She paused. Then, "Judith, all your friends think they know what is best for you, but when the time comes, you will know. No one will have to tell you. I've been counting on you for that. backing you up. Then you won't be going to New York with us?"

"Probably not. That would make it more awkward. I'll meet the ship in Quebec."

It was done. Harriet and Katherine had been told. But Stephen. She must not wait until Friday evening to tell him. She must tell him at once. Walking around the room again, she thought, "Max speaks and I go. Plans are torn to bits, but still I go. Max has only to be there at 4:30 but I must hurt and disappoint the people who love me most. I resent it, but I go. I despise myself, but still I go. Will he be different? His voice was the same, crisp one moment, tender the next. But I can't think about Max when Stephen thinks I'm sailing on Saturday. I've got to say all of that again, but not by telephone. The least I can do is to face him with it.

Judith said, "Will you ask him to call me? It's Miss Barth."

After she hung up the receiver Judith thought. "He's with Mary Anderson tonight." But the visualization of Stephen and Mary together did not linger. Nothing lingered tonight except the thought that she would see Max, see him, knowing that he was still Max and that she loved him. No matter the memory of Fay's voice speaking of the "cheap girls and the nice girls." No matter what went before or what came after Saturday or if Saturday were the world's last day. She did not sleep and it did not occur to her until the following day that Stephen had not called.

She saw Ralph the next day and he looked at her inquisitively when he paused beside her drawing board and said, "Katherine told me the sad news. Well, you can't plan for everything, can you?" But he really wasn't thinking that, she knew. He was thinking, "Don't be an utter fool. Don't do this to Stephen. It doesn't much matter that you've let us down, but don't let him down. It's a rotten trick to pull at the last minute."

She said, "No, you can't plan for everything."

He had not been gone more than a few minutes when Stephen called.

"You called me last night, Judith? It was too late when I got in to call you. How is everything?"

She didn't know, she thought. She didn't quite know. "Stephen, could you come tonight rather than tomorrow night? I'd ask you to dinner, but it's Bessie's day off."

"Oh, sure. At 8?"

"Yes, at 8."

All through the day she continued to think, "I won't think about telling him. I have a little more time before I have to think about it."

Her parents were dining out. Her mother had left her dinner in the warming oven. Judith only pretended to eat before taking a shower and putting on a cool, green, summer frock. There was still time.

But there was so little time when she was sitting in the white wicker chair on the porch and she saw Stephen's new car, a beige coue, turn the corner.

She felt weak, seeing him get out of the car and walk up the path, a tall, well-built young man in immaculate white linen. She thought then, "I've known him a long time and I've seen him come up the path in every season of the year and in every kind of weather. I know him so well—his frown when he's displeased, the way he clears his throat when he isn't quite sure of himself. . . . But he isn't the shy inferior boy any more. He's making good. He's going up to achieve his 'best.'"

Little Benny's Note Book

I had an accident today and ma said she was going to tell pop on me when he came home. Which she did, saying, William, Benny needs a little strict attention from you, he did something today that was inexcusable and uncalled for.

I'll never do that again, pop, I said, and pop said You see he's full of compunctions and overwhelmed by remorse.

You'd better wait till you hear what he did for land sakes before you listen to his lame excuses, ma said. It seems he had an uncontrollable urge to swing on a trapeze, and it seemed nothing would do for a trapeze but the rod in my clothes closet, and when I ran to see what had fallen, there he was on the floor of my clyoset, rod and all, buried under a perfect avalanche of my freshly cleaned dresses, she said, and pop said, Well now that's serious.

It's worse than serious, it was uncalled for and inexcusable to the last degree, ma said, and pop said, Sometimes I wonder iw children are never going to learn. It's really depressing how history repeats itself in spite of the fact that mankind as a whole is suppose to be on the upgrade. What I mean is, once when I was his age I tried to swing on a clothesline full of clean sheets, and you can imagine the disastrous results. And my mother told my father when he came home, even as you and I, and of punishment should have struck while the crime was hot, and that he saw no reason why the father sould be the exclusive engine of punishment in the mind of the child, and that's one of the reasons I still hold his memory in great affection, pop said.

Oh, you Benny are just 2 birds of a single feather and I'm only sorry I didn't give him a few good round slaps while my hand was still itching, ma said.

Making me feel the luckiest I felt since the accident.

RECTAL SORENESS AND PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY RELIEVED.

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store, and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

Weekly Livestock Report

Toronto, Oct. 23—(CP) — Veal calves dropped 50 cents cwt., sheep were down 50 cents, lambs dropped 25 to 50 cents, cattle prices were steady to 25 cents lower in trade on the livestock market here this week. Hogs were firm.

A heavy run of beef cattle met with an active trade at the opening but the close was slow with a few hundred head unsold. Weighty steers made a top of $10.90 for one load with the closing top $10.75 and the bulk of sales between $9.50 and $10.60. Butcher steers and heifers were $8,50 to $10.25. Fed yearlings sold mostly at $10.50 to $11.75. Butcher cows were $6.75 to $8 with occasional tops at $8.50. Canners and cutters closed at $5 to $6.50. Bulls sold from $7.50 for light bolognas up to $9 for good butcher bulls. Prices were firm on good stockers at $10 to $10.75 with stock calves up to $11.50. Ordinary stockers were draggy at $7.50 to $9.75. Good milkers and springers were at $125 to $150 each.

Veal calves eased off from a $15.50 top to close at $15 with common downward to $9.50. Grass calves were $8.50 to $9.

Lambs continued at last week's decline, going down to $11.75 for good ewes and wethers delivered by rail and to $11.50 by trucks. A few choice lambs made $11.75 on the closing market. Large Chicken Supply Causes Price Easing

Toronto, Oct. 23 — (CP) — With heavier arrivals of dressed chicken and fowl than last week, there is a tendency to lower quotations for chicken, the Dominion Department of Agriculture stated today in the report on the dressed poultry market.

The local demand has eased off considerably leaving a surplus which is being packed for storage. There are no fresh turkeys arriving and locally there is no enquiry for this kind of poultry. Geese and ducks may be placed under the same heading..

Large dealers reported out-of-town movement as very good, approximately 50,000 lbs. going forward to the U. S. A., Newfoundland and Labrador. The bulk of these shipments was viscerated turkey. One turkey producer when answering an inquiry about prices remarked that he expected to have birds ready for shipment about Nov. 1.

One car of chicken and fowl was offered from the prairie provinces at, chicken, grade A 29 1-2 cents lb., grade B 27 1-2 cents lb., fowl grade A 24 cents lb., grade B 22 1-2 cents lb. Buyers were not interested.

Trenton Officer In Bombing Raid On Freight Yards

By WILLIAM STEWART

London, Oct. 23—(CP Cable)—Mustangs and Spitfires of the army co-operation command, including planes from the R.C.A.F. squadrons, Thursday carried out ground strafing operations over Occupied France, and all Canadian aircraft returned safely. Wing.-Cmdr. R. F. Begg, of Vancouver, commander of one R.C.A.F. army Co-op. squadron and PO. C. Stover of Sarnia, Ont., attacked a freight train which Begg said took "evasive action" by stopping between a double row of trees.

"We came down to treetop level, flew between autumn leaves and had the satisfaction of seeing our bullets explode on the engine," he said. "The first bursts were followed by clouds of steam, indicating one more engine will be out of action for some time."

Other Canadians attacked freight yards at Amiens which they reported were "crammed with freight cars."

"We let fly at them," said Sqdn.-Ldr. W. B. Woods of Toronto who was accompanied by FO. D. M. Grant of Trenton, Ont. and FO. M. B. Pepper of Vernon, B.C. "We also did a concentrated attack on some control towers, one of which crumpled.

"First the sides caved in, when debris blew about. We also gave a flak tower a good squirt. Unfortunately, it was not manned. We got the impression that everybody, soldiers included, had taken cover."

Egypt Conforms to Boyhood Dream Says Canadian Airman

(Owen Sound Sun Times)

From Sgt. Pilot Garnet Hamilton only son of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Hamilton of this city, who is now with his squadron in Egypt have come many interesting letters describing the Old Land, his operational flights over Germany and the great adventure, the 3300 mile hop from England to Cairo.

Describing a holiday, when he was a guest at the palatial home of the Laidlaw's Kippilaw, St. Boswells, Roxburghshire, Sgt. Pilot Hamilton writes of the library, where he spent long hours, of driving to Melrose and Galashields, the beautiful ruined Abbey and recalls the history of his school days and the tales of the knights of King Arthur, as he views the Eldion Hills.

"A funny thing happened last night" says the young airman "We were flying along at 5000 ft. and suddenly ran into solid cloud. We tried to get out of it, climbed to 10,000 ft. and down to 3500 ft. but couldn't shake it, so flew along not able to see the end of our wings. This carried on for about an hour and a half. Suddenly a terrific explosion took place. The rear gunner exclaimed "flak" with quivering voice. He thought we had run into anti-aircraft fire and that it was uncommonly accurate. I figured it was also. Just then the wireless operator reported that his equipment had all gone unserviceable. We finally found out, to make a long story short, that we had run into an electrical air body and that the explosion had been the contacting of the current with our trailing aerial. We were lucky, but we had a good laugh out of it later." In a later letter he writes: "The past few weeks have been very busy ones. I have a new aircraft and along with my crew have spent all my time testing, flying, testing and making adjustments. I might tell you that it is big enough to take the family for a 1000 mile ride and back again."

In June Sgt. Pilot Hamilton wrote: "To-day has been the nicest day we have had since I arrived in England and how I have enjoyed it, a very warm day and not a cloud to be seen. We have been flying night and day lately and I am due for a leave. I saw the biggest bonfire the world has ever known on Saturday night, we paid a visit to Cologne, 1000 aircraft, and the city is absolutely wiped out. Five or six square miles was one huge burning inferno and I felt sorry for the people down there. I could see it from the Dutch coast 140 miles away, so you can realize what a big show it was. Last night 1000 again went to Bremen, but I do not think it was as big a show for the clouds were thick and it was hard to see the target." The next letter tells of the prospect of going to "warmer climates," of meeting Flying Officer Ian McKay on the street during a short leave in London and of boxes from home all coming through safely: "Everything has been fairly quiet here lately and I am afraid I shall have left England before the storm really breaks" the letter concludes. Looking forward to the flight to the Middle East the Owen Sound airman says: "We have been busy organizing the flight and it certainly will be much more advanced than anything I have done yet. Just think, before the war the flight we are making 3300 miles with two stops, (Gibraltar and Malta) would have achieved headlines in the papers. We are equipped with instruments that detect subs and torpedoes."

Pleased to have captained his ship safely on the trip and to have delivered it and his crew to the authorities all safe and sound, Sgt. Pilot Hamilton reports his arrival and the attaining of a life-long ambition to see Egypt. His first impressions confirmed all the imagined ideas of the country and he tells of spending ten days in "Ian McKay's old stand, (Malta) which he found an interesting spot. East and West combine in Egypt, the letter continues and since the country is not officially at war, there is an abundance of everything to be had in the cities. "We are of course not in the city, but are not badly off. We have a lake nearby and although it is one of the saltiest bodies of water in the world we enjoy swimming. We also have plenty of fresh water for showers and drinking purposes. That is where the good story ends. The food is not so good, much of it tinned, sweet melons, water melons and tomatoes are plentiful. Mosquito netting must be used at night for the flies are very bad. The climate is absolutely wonderful, being near water relieves us of that desert heat you associate with this country and we still have the sunshine. Everyone in this country is an early riser because the sun comes up every morning at six o'clock and is as hot then as we ever experienced it at home. Each day is the same, brilliant sunshine and clear blue skies. I have acquired a tan in two weeks that would be the envy of any bathing beauty. All purchasing is done here by the haggling method, an article is worth one tenth of the price asked and you are expected to beat the shop-keeper down. I have seen Cairo and it is a beautiful city, very American in appearance, beautiful gardens which are hard on the eyes after looking at the desert. The Nile really is a long strip of fertile land which follows the river from it's source to it's mouth gradually widening towards the Mediterranean Sea. You really get a wonderful picture of it from the air. The country people live in horrible mud houses and still use wooden plows. In Cairo you see all American cars."

Speaking of Suez, he writes: "Had a day off yesterday and visited Suez. With out a doubt it is the dirtiest city I have ever seen. We drove in by truck and spent the afternoon wandering around. I bought myself a fine leather bag. Egypt is noted for it's fine leather. We have everything here and I'm enjoying it. You know how I have always loved the sunshine. Only the mail service is slow."

The Smokehouse Has Reappeared

(Christian Science Monitor)

Sharply increased interest in home-raised meats, say reports from country farm agents, is responsible for the construction of smokehouses where hickory chips and corncobs cure hams, shoulders and bacon. These smaller structures are made of materials at hand; so no war-needed items are required. Since 1930, the consumption of home-raised meats on farms has followed a steady, upward trend. According to census figures, 14,751,473 head of livestock were used at home in 1940 compared with 11,800,000 in 1930.

Sound reasons are prompting farmers to build smokehouses this Fall: First it is logical to raise all food possible for one's family. Second, gas and rubber shortages mean frequent trips to town are impossible. Third, it might be mentioned that a thick slice of home-cured ham with a fried egg or two, plus home-raised vegetables, along with some home-made preserves and pickles, a piece of apple pie and a glass or two of rich milk makes a very satisfactory meal. Yes, indeed. . . . very!

Cancel Fowl Supper, Held Annually For 38 Years

Wooler — In the interest of food conservation the ladies of Wooler United Church cancelled their traditional fowl supper.

The supper has been held regularly for the past 38 years, but curtailed by ration regulations, the ladies felt they were unable to bake the numerous pies, cakes, etc., that goes with such a supper. Besides, they decided there was a certain amount of waste which necessarily accompanies such suppers and that is not in keeping with a country at war. Cash donations by the people and church members, substituted for the money usually raised, amounted to three hundred dollars.

On Sunday, October 11th., the anniversary service both for the morning and evening, were well attended. Special music was furnished by the choir and the guest speaker was Rev. Dr. Shaw of Queen's University, Kingston. For the morning session, little Misses Aldythe Arthur and Glenalda Bowler sang sweetly in duet, "Whispering Hope." Mr. Clifford Rogers for the evening service gave a vocal solo.

The church decorations were lovely, consisting of flowers many beautiful hues of autumn leaves, choice fruits and vegetables. The thank offering at the services was three hundred dollars, making a total of six hundred dollars.

Mr. Clifford Blake of Marmora was a weekend guest of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Blake and their daughter, Shirley.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sharpe, Ray and Kathleen Sharpe, were guests at the home of another daughter, Mrs. Elgin Mitchell and family.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Bell received the following callers on Sunday: Mrs. Lorne Whitney and son, Wayne, and Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnley Masters recently attended a shower in Morganston for Mr. Claude Puffer (a nephew of Mr. Masters), and his bride-to-be.

Elwood Fox, R.C.A.F., of Belleville, spent the weekend with his wife and daughter Eleanor. On Sunday Miss Teresa McAuley was an afternoon caller.

Mrs. Nesbitt Haggarty was taken to Belleville General Hospital, where an operation for goitre was performed. She is as well as can be expected.

Mrs. Marion Mitchell was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Bell on Sunday.

Sgt. Wilmot Ellis, R.C.A.F., of Jericho Beach, Vancouver, arrived here on Friday to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ellis, for a few days.

Mr. J. (Curly) Bryne spent Sunday with friends, returning to his home in Trenton after the tea hour.

Mrs. Ada Boneham is the guest of relatives and friends in Belleville.

Mrs. Lloyd Bell and Mrs. W. H. Bell are spending this week in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Bell are entertaining Mrs. Jennie Warren of Trenton for a few days.

Friends of Mrs. Harold Steenburg extend their sympathy, owing to the passing of her mother, Mrs. Gunyon of Mount Zion, on Friday evening, October 16th.

Mrs. Hugh Gainsforth spent Wednesday with Mr. and Mrs. Arnley Masters.

Rawdon

Rawdon — The October meeting of Mount Pleasant Woman's Missionary Society was held a day later on Thursday, October 15th at the home of Mrs. Clifford Sine and daughters Muriel and Doris with seven members and four visitors in attendance.

The service opened with quiet music played by Mrs. John Holmes. The President, Mrs. Percy MacMullen gave the call to worship on "Thanksgiving" with a hymn and prayer on the same theme, followed by a responsive psalm and a fine devotional talk by the pastor Rev. T. P. Townsend. He pointed out various everyday things to be thangful for.

The treasurer reported 146 dollars to date.

The President thanked the hostesses for their home and regretted the illness of Mrs. Arthur Phillips.

Plans were made for a supply quilting to procure money to buy children's hose for a Montreal Mission.

The day's offering of five dollars was dedicated to the cause of missions. Mrs. Frank Smith presented a report of the sectional rally held the day previous at Plainfield. Mrs. T. F. Townsend sang "Give Thanks."

Mrs. Percy MacMullen presented a short talk on the "Highlights of the recent School for Leaders at Whitby."

China Accepts Canada's Offer

Ottawa, Oct. 22—(CP)—The Chinese Government has advised Prime Minister Mackenzie King of its acceptance of the Canadian Government's offer to negotiate a treaty by which the Dominion would abandon any extra territorial or jurisdictional rights it may have in the Chinese Republic.

The Chinese Foreign Minister wrote that his government accepted the offer "with sincere thanks" and stated that "the Chinese Government gladly accepts and will enter into negotiations as soon as Canada is ready."

Negotiations will open at once, an External Affairs spokesman said today.

This offer of a separate treaty by Canada was made some weeks ago, at the time the United States and British Governments announced that they would abandon all territorial rights in China.

Canada has no direct concessions from China but is included in existing treaties between China and the United Kingdom.

The relinquishment will not affect existing land ownership by Canadians in China or facilities for travel, residence and trade. One of the most important changes would be to make Canadians in China subject to Chinese justice rather than to Canadian law through consular agencies as at present.

BRITISH OPEN OFFENSIVE ON EGYPTIAN FRONT

Allies Get Jump On Rommel's Army In Surprise Move

Days of Steady Air Attacks by British And U.S. Fliers Precede Ground Push

FIERCE FIGHTING

By DON WHITEHEAD
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Cairo, Oct. 24 (AP).—Beating the Axis African Corps to the punch, the rebuilt British 8th Army slammed into the enemy on the El Alamein line today, supported by a strong air force.

It appeared to be the start of an offensive which may decide the fate of the Mediterranean this winter.

The main battle was concentrated in a comparatively small area, stretching 40 miles inland from the coast to the Qattara depression, but probably it will spread rapidly as the British command has been sending desert patrols hundreds of miles across the desert to strike at the rear of Axis Field Marshal Rommel.

Lt.-Gen. B. L. Montgomery, commander of the 8th army—a collection of troops from various parts of the Empire, Poles, Free French and other Allies, but the bulk of them from the United Kingdom—announced recently that his men were "fighting fit and ready for anything".

The British command had been faced with the task of replacing the "upwards of 50,000 men" who, Prime Minister Churchill announced, were lost along with valuable equipment in the retreat from Libya to the El Alamein line in June. The El Alamein line was stabilized July 1.

Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, the 50-year-old here of Dunkerque who succeeded Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck as Middle East commander Aug. 18 during a summer lull in the desert fighting, sent his forces surging across the Egyptian no-man's-land last night.

Days of steady air attacks by British and United States fliers upon German-Italian air fields and communications opened the way for the ground push.

"Fierce fighting developed and is continuing," said a terse communique issued jointly by British headquarters and the R.A.F.

Thus the Allies got the jump on Rommel, who boasted in Berlin recently that he would crush their forces in the Middle East. The marshal's counter-offensive against the British push into Libya last spring carried to a point only 70 miles west of Alexandria, British supply and naval base, and there it was checked and stalled.

British counter-attacks forced the German and Italian troops back 10 miles, where lines were set up along the 40-mile El Alamein sector between the Mediterranean and the great salt sinks of the Qattara depression.

Attempt Short-Lived.

Rested and reinforced, Rommel sent his troops forward again Sept. 3-5 in a short-lived attempt to turn the British line. Strong counter-attacks drove them back and British positions were reported improved.

The extensive aerial bombing of British naval and air bases on Malta during the past two weeks indicated the Germans were rushing supplies across the Mediterranean to the African Corps in the hope of a knockout blow.

Efforts to destroy the striking power of the British island generally were interpreted—as in the past—as an effort to cover the movement of large axis reinforcements to the Egyptian front.

But the Allies also have been preparing.

SUGAR SCARCITY CAUSED DIMOUT

Genoa, Nev., Oct. 24 —(AP)— Genoa's street lighting system may suffer because of sugar rationing. The town's street lights are maintained by profits from an annual dance, which heretofore always has featured candy. But because of sugar rationing there'll be no candy this year. No candy, fewer patrons; fewer patrons, darker streets.

ARMY AND NAVY PLANES SEARCH FOR RICKENBACKER

U. S. Flying Ace of First Great War Missing for Three Days

ON SECRET MISSION

Honolulu, Oct. 24 (AP). — Army and navy planes were over distant Pacific waters today searching for Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, United States flying ace of the First Great War.

The War Department said Rickenbacker, on an inspection trip for Lt.-Gen. H. H. Arnold, Army Air Force commander, had not been heard from since Wednesday evening when he reported only one hour's supply of gasoline remained in his plane's tanks.

At that time, Rickenbacker and the crew of a large military plane were flying between Oahu, Hawaii, and another island in the Pacific.

United States Army Hawaiian Department Headquarters announced that every available army and navy plane and surface craft from the southwest Hawaiian Islands was searching for the missing fliers.

Ten In Flight Group.

The army did not announce names of others aboard the plane, but it was believed here there were at least ten persons, including the crew, in the flight group.

Mindful of the courage, skill and luck of the 52-year-old veteran who shot down 21 German planes and four enemy balloons in the First Great War, Dewey Rickenbacker, brother of the flier, said at Beverly Hills, Calif., "this just isn't Eddie's time. After all, this isn't the first time he's been in a tight spot."

But Mrs. Elizabeth Rickenbacker, 79, the mother, had her misgivings when the captain visited her at Beverly Hills recently, en route to the Pacific assignment.

"My mother felt that something was going to happen to Eddie and asked him not to go," Dewey Rickenbacker said. "But he just laughed and reassured her that everything would be all right."

Wife Is Hopeful.

In New York, Rickenbacker's wife waited by the telephone, hoping that the next call would bring good news.

"Eddie will turn up," she assured friends. "He's too old a hand to get lost in any airplane now."

Rickenbacker's trip over the Pacific was for a purpose similar to his recent inspection flight to Britain. The War Department said he was acting as confidential adviser to War Secretary Stimson on aircraft.

Rickenbacker, on his return from Britain, praised the performances of U.S. army planes, particularly emphasizing the work done by the Flying Fortresses.

Canadian Airmen on Italian Raid Drop Bombs "Right on Button"

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the R.C.A.F. Somewhere in England, Oct. 24)CP).—Flt.-Lt. H. G. Shockley of Vancouver today stood in the interrogation room against a great wall map showing the route to Italy and said with a sweep of the hand that bombs from his aircraft fell "right on the button" at Genoa.

Shockley, aged 22, was captain of the first R.C.A.F. bomber to return from last night's raid on the Italian industrial city that is the centre for shipping supplies to the axis armies in Africa.

Surrounded by squadron members not chosen for the trip, he answered eager questions of those who had waited up until the early hours to absorb details of the operation.

Other members of the squadron led by Wing Cmdr. Len Fraser, D.F.C., of Vancouver straggled in later and said they were highly pleased with the results of the 1,500-mile flight and that the clouds formed "splendid cover".

(R.C.A.F. headquarters in London announced in a communique that no Canadian aircraft was lost.)

Set Perfect Course.

Fingering a little blue wool doll pinned to his battle-dress, and sipping a mug of tea, Shockley, a former draftsman, said his bomber, "Bee for Beer" set a perfect course and "our bombs went right down into a factory".

"When we reached the Alps it was clear and those mountains were beautiful," he said. "It looked just like the Rockies and I could almost imagine I was flying home."

Another member of his crew, Sgt. C. O. Henderson, a flight engineer from MacRorie, Sask., said crossing the Alps was "the best part". There was nothing to the trip, he said. "It was just a long stooge."

PO. F. E. Luxford of East Angus, Que., said anti-aircraft fire over Genoa was light.

"There was not much to it and they just seemed to be hosing it up," he said. "I guess we really pinned down the target."

Others reported Genoa was heavily hit with a considerable number of fire burning.

PO. R. L. Turnbull, wireless operator from Digby, N.S., making his first flight since he was commissioned, chuckled and said, "If Genoa was only half the distance it would be a lovely trip every night."

As other members of the squadron returned they were plied with questions from the ground crews, who wanted to know particularly how the "kites stood up to the long trip". The fliers answered with a word: "Swell."

TEN JAP SHIPS SUNK OR DAMAGED IN RABAUL HARBOR

Cruiser, Destroyer Included in the Devastating Attack at Low Altitude

NO PLANES LOST

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Oct. 24 — (CP) — Allied bombers roared over Rabaul Harbor, New Britain, yesterday and in a devastating low-altitude attack, sank or damaged 10 Japanese ships, including a cruiser and a destroyer, Allied headquarters announced today.

In a new blow aimed at easing the pressure on United States forces in the Solomon islands by smashing vital Japanese shipping concentrations in New Britain, the crews reported this toll: one cruiser, one destroyer and two large cargo vessels believed sunk; one large cargo vessel damaged badly and five other merchant vessels hit.

The raid was carried out by a "strong force" and "with deadly effect," the communique said. It was executed just before break of day at low altitude. Japanese planes did not challenge the planes, but anti-aircraft fire was heavy. All the planes returned to their bases.

The anti-aircraft fire came from both shore positions and ships in the harbor, but did not deter the raiders from releasing their bombs, including some 500-pounders.

Pilots estimated the total Japanese tonnage damaged in the raid at approximately 50,000 tons. Although the size of the concentration of shipping in the harbor was not disclosed, it was believed certain the loss was a heavy blow to the Japanese. Rabaul and other bases in this area are used to support the Japanese attempt to reconquer Guadalcanal in the Solomons.

On the New Guinea land front, headquarters said Allied forces were attacking the Japanese in the area south of Alola, less than nine miles south of the advanced enemy base at Kokoda.

Fighter planes harassed enemy positions outside Kokoda.

The Japanese air force, which has been comparatively inactive in the New Guinea area since operations in the Solomons started, made a light bombing attack on the Allied air field at Milne Bay on the southeast tip of New Guinea, but caused neither damage nor casualties, the communique said.

BUMPER CROP OF APPLES

Hamilton, Ont., Oct. 24 — (CP)— Reginald Chields, Clinton township fruit grower, has such a bumper apple crop he has had to place hundreds of props under limbs of trees in his orchard to prevent them breaking off with the weight of the fruit.

Friday's Subscriptions Raise Loan to $258,768,000

Ottawa, Oct. 24 (CP).—Canada's third Victory Loan had its biggest day yesterday when applications recorded at the close of business totalled $62,085,450, bringing the cumulative total to $258,768,050, National headquarters announced today.

A total of 75,673 applications were received yesterday bringing the total to 259,975. Among them were the subscriptions of seven insurance companies. They were: Monarch Life Assurance Co., Winnipeg, $1,000,000; Northern Life Assurance Co., London, $750,00; Montreal Life Insurance Co., Montreal, $600,000; National Life Assurance Co., Toronto, $500,000; Sovereign Life Assurance Co., Regina, $425,000; La Sauvegarde Cie D'Assurance Vie, Montreal, $300,000; and the Fidelity Life Assurance Co., Regina, $125,000. To these was added the subscription of the Canadian Order of Foresters, Brantford, Ont., $750,000.

Two mining companies contributed to the record day's total, Noranda Mines Ltd. and Associated Companies of Toronto placing an order for $6,000,000 and McIntyre Porcupine Mines Ltd., Toronto, $1,000,000. Among the large individual subscribers were J. S. Norris of Montreal, $250,000, and Huntley R. Drummond of Montreal, $250,000.

Other subscriptions reported by national headquarters were Massey-Harris Company Limited, Toronto, $2,000,000; Page Hersey Tubes Limited, Toronto, $1,500,000; Henry Birks and Sons Limited and associates, $500,000; Powell River Company Limited, Powell River, B.C., $1,000,000.

Almost One-Third of Victory Loan Objective Reached by Hastings

The Hastings County Victory Loan wagon is rolling steadily along the highway of endeavor and is setting a satisfactory pace, general committee officials state.

Figures tabulated late Friday night brought the grand total for the county after six days of canvass to $549,650, not quite one-third of the total quota of $2,100,000.

An outstanding feature of the campaign here thus far is the co-operation being shown by the purchase of bonds by plant workers of the county. The majority of the employees have proved to be solid buyers and eleven firms have exceeded the quota allotted them.

These firms include the Reliance Aircraft and Tool Company; Belleville Sargent Company; The Consolidated Optical Company; The Corbin Lock Co.; The Bristol Aircraft Company; the Stephens-Adamson Company all of Belleville; the Benedict Proctor Company, the Consolidated Doughnut Company and the Downs Coulter Company, all of Trenton, and the Canada Cement Company of Point Anne.

All these plants will receive honor flags and certificates of merit in the immediate future if they have not done so already.

JAP INVASION FORCES CLOSE IN ON U. S. BASE

Preparing for Assault on American - Held Base on Guadacanal

"FEELER" REPULSED

Washington, Oct. 24—(AP)—Japanese invasion forces, dealt a severe naval loss by Allied bombers in the Southwestern Pacific, apparently were closing in on embattled Guadalcanal Island today for, an assault on the American-held airbase.

Disclosing that the Japanese had landed on Russell Island, about 30 miles northwest of Guadalcanal, a naval spokesman said the invaders might have established similar positions on other neighboring small islands.

While the navy reported yesterday additional destruction of 12 Nipponese planes and repulse of a second enemy "feeler" attack on the Guadalcanal airfield, heavy Allied bombers from Australia sank or damaged 10 Japanese vessels including a cruiser at Rabaul, New Britain, just west of Bougainville, island in the Solomons.

Regarded as Test

The Japanese flank attack on troops holding the Guadalcanal airfield occurred Oct. 21 and was the second in two days to be driven back. The manoeuvre was regarded as a test of the American force's strength but if successful might have been followed by heavy waves of enemy soldiers concentrated in the northwest portion of the island.

12 KILLED IN ARMY BOMBER-AIRLINES PLANE CRASH

Airplane Watcher Says He Saw the Two Planes Come Together

ARMY SILENT

Palm Springs, Calif., Oct. 24—(AP) — An American Air Lines plane crashed and burned last night on Mt. San Jacinto, near here, with a loss of 12 lives, and an Air Line official said it was in collision shortly before with a United States Army bomber.

An airplane watcher, R. W. Martin, said he saw the two planes come together, after which "bits of spraying metal began to fly out from the planes."

The American Air Lines office at its Burbank terminal made public a statement from Charles A. Rheinstrom, Vice-President in charge of traffic at New York, saying the air liner "was in collision with an army bomber" immediately before the crash.

Army officers at Southern California fields maintained a tight-lipped silence concerning the crash. They said a check showed no service plane was missing.

Canadians Urged To Stop Buying Pork and Bacon

Ottawa, Oct. 24 (CP)—To enable the United Kingdom to maintain its bacon ration, Canadians generally should postpone buying fresh pork, bacon or ham, informed sources here reiterated yesterday.

They said Canada will not be able to complete its current 600,000,000-pound bacon contract with Great Britain until late in November. At that time the Dominion will start upon a new 675,000,000-pound order.

The British bacon ration depends upon Canadian shipments, and is in danger unless shipments can be maintained. These sources said that until about August last, shipments under the contract held up well, but since then domestic demand has become stronger, probably because of beef shortages in various districts, together with increased purchasing power, requirements of the armed forces, and the victualling of ocean-going vessels.

NAZI LEFT FLANK PIERCED BY REDS AT STALINGRAD

Garrison Also Repulses Attacks on Factory Despite Tanks And Bombs

61ST DAY OF SIEGE

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Oct. 24 — (AP) — Red Army troops breached the front line of the Germans' fortified left flank northwest of Stalingrad and the city's garrison repulsed all attacks to hold a northside factory against a tank-supported infantry brigade despite a shower of 1,500 bombs, the Russians said today.

Clouds which recently brought rain and snow to the steppes evidently had lifted, for the army newspaper Red Star indicated that German aerial activity was increased from flights of five or six planes.

The noon communique said a German automatic rifle detachment which pierced the factory lines momentarily was wiped out to a man by the defenders.

The communique told, without detail, of a Russian thrust which forced a gap in the Nazi-fortified area to the northwest.

Red Star said the Russian relief army operating there had intensified its operations, advanced somewhat and improved its positions. Finding a weakly-defended junction between two German units, a dispatch said, the Russians opened an offensive and broke into the enemy front line.

Kill 700 of Enemy

The Germans counter-attacked but, after day-long hand-to-hand fighting inside the Nazi positions, they were ejected with a loss of 700 dead and were forced to retreat, Red Star said.

While the Russians were occupying this line, a neighboring Red Army force was reported to have pressed a supporting attack in which it killed 300 Germans, captured prisoners and material and improved Russian positions.

This was the 61st. day of the siege of Stalingrad.

Field reports indicated more than 2,200 Germans were killed within and outside the city yesterday while Soviet ground gunners and fighters accounted for 27 of the scores of Nazi planes sent against them.

Water Barrier Lost

Loss of a water barrier by the defenders of the western Caucasus was announced in the noon communique. The invaders, striking southeastward from Novorossisk, were reported to have crossed the stream in the drive upon the port of Tuapse.

Russian counter attacks blocked expansion of the bridgehead, however, and 180 Germans were killed in one sector, the communique said. The stream was not identified but it apparently was one of the mountain-fed southern tributaries of the Kuban.

The Soviet radio said Soviet warships had attacked an enemy-occupied port on the Black Sea, scored hits on military objectives and caused several big fires.

A 10,000 ton German transport was declared sunk in the Baltic.

Production Schedule of War Weapons And Munitions Will be Maintained

Toronto, Oct. 24 —(CP)— The Toronto Globe and Mail said in a dispatch from Ottawa today that United States allocation authorities have revised downward the heavy cut made in steel exports to Canada Oct. 1 and "with this help and severe domestic control, Canadian war plants will be able to scrape by the critical steel shortage.

As a result all production schedules of war weapons and munitions will be maintained, the Globe said, adding that "this is the best guarantee we can give our Allies now" and "it is good for the next three months and no longer."

"Only by strict adherence to priorities," closer rationing, a scaling down of some lines of war production and by increasing domestic steel output will this guarantee be met."

The dispatch recalled that the threat to war production in Canada came at the first of this month when the United States ordered a "substantial reduction" in the quarterly quota of steel shipments to Canada.

As a result of that reduction a special appeal was made by Canadian officials to steel workers and steel plant managements to increase production as rapidly as possible. At the same time an appeal was made to Washington to increase the U.S. steel export quota.

'Notable' Damage At Savona Says Italian Statement

Number of R.C.A.F. Planes Shared In Raid, 'Strong Force' Used

3 BOMBERS MISSING

London, Oct. 24 (CP) — The biggest bombers in the R.A.F., back in force over Italy for the second successive night, showered explosives again on Turin and Genoa last night and also on Savona in a sweep over three of Italy's northernmost provinces.

A squadron of Halifax bombers of the Royal Canadian Air Force under command of Wing-Cmdr. Len Fraser, D.F.C., of Vancouver, took part in the raid. One Canadian Flt.-Lt. H. G. Shockley of Vancouver, said his aircraft dropped bombs "right down into a factory."

A number of R.C.A.F. planes shared in the raid.

Especially at Savona, a port on the Ligurian coast about 25 miles west of Genoa and one of the chief Italian foundry centres, the Fascist communique mentioned "notable" damage.

Without specifying the numbers, the British Air Ministry again said the raiders made up a "strong force" and that all but three returned safely.

As on the preceding night, the ministry said, the attackers included great four-motored Stirlings, Halifaxes and Lancasters as well as the smaller Manchesters.

All had to fly roughly 1,500 miles roundtrip, virtually the entire distance over hostile territory, and twice across the snowy peaks of the Alps. One Lancaster "flew most of the way out and all the way home on three engines."

The three bombed cities all are important as industrial and military centres and the Italians acknowledged that all were pounded with explosive and incendiary bombs.

Daylight Sweeps

The French-speaking "L'Escadrille Des Alouettes" of the R.C.A.F. flew its Wellingtons over occupied France and the Ruhr yesterday in daylight, as part of the R.A.F. attack.

At about the same time cannon-carrying Spitfires and Mustangs of the R.C.A.F. struck at railway locomotives and other targets thru'-out occupied France. The Spitfires were flown by pilots of the fighter command, and the Mustangs by the army co-operation command.

The attacks on locomotives, part of a concerted effort to impede Hitler's railway system, were carried out by two squadrons which have specialized in that type of operation.

Peter A. Mabee, Picton, Celebrates 100th Birthday

Picton, Oct. 24 — Still enjoying good health and taking an interest in events of the day, Peter Addison Mabee Friday celebrated his 100th birthday.

Mr. Mabee has achieved two records equalled by a very few. He has reached the century mark and as well enjoyed the distinction for some years of being, with the late Mrs. Mabee, Canada's longest married couple. Just before they marked the 77th anniversary of their wedding in 1940, Mrs. Mabee passed away.

Mr. Mabee is up early each day and moves around the home but does not engage in wood cutting and other chores he did when ninety-five. Friday's observance was a quiet one, with relatives and a few friends gathering to do the esteemed centenarian honor. Flowers, gifts and congratulatory messages were received.

Mr. Mabee has one son, Stanley, of Williamsport, Pa., who is 78 years of age. He was unable to come owing to the fact that he is engaged in war work. He also has a grandson, Raymond Mabee, Williamsport, who is 52.

Born in Athol Township, Prince Edward County, Mr. Mabee was one of a family of ten and with a sister, Mrs. Emma Cummins, Toronto, are the last surviving members. He is of United Lolayist Loyalist descent.

While working in New York as a lad of 20, Mr. Mabee decided to take a wife and returned to Cherry Valley to marry Mary Huycke. They were wed in their log cabin home. They went to New York city to reside and were there during part of the Civil War. During the disorders, Mrs. Mabee narrowly escaped being hit by a stray bullet.

Returning to Canada, they settled at Odessa where they lived for 53 years. Mr. Mabee conducted a store there and was prominent in community life. He recalls the first train which puffed its way through the Bay countryside. It was a wood-burner and operated between Kingston and Toronto.

Mr. Mabee is of the opinion that together the United Nations will achieve victory in good time. He is pleased with the friendly relations which exist between Canada and the U.S.A.

Mr. Mabee has no special recipe for long life. He believes in moderation in all things, has never drank or smoked. He does believe that his outdoor life and hard work gave him his good constitution.

How Boys and Girls Can Help Canada's War Effort.

(By DONNA FERGUSON)
(Queen Mary School, Grade 8)

We the boys and girls of Canada can play a great part in aiding Canada's war effort.

We must sacrifice treats and luxuries to lend every cent possible to help win the war. When you buy war bonds you are not only doing your duty to your king and country but building security for your future.

Girls can help by sewing, knitting, selling tags and holding bazaars, while the boys can earn money for buying war stamps. Buying stamps and bonds is not the only way children can help as the government urges us to collect all rubber, metal, paper, glass and rags we can and turn it over to our nearest salvage depot.

By taking messages and running errands for adults engaged in war work we can be of service. When mothers or sister is packing a box for some soldier overseas try and add some little gift to help strengthen his morale. Cheery letters are always welcomed by our friends in uniform. Our sailors find added enjoyment in books and magazines which we boys and girls can easily collect.

Remember steel, tools, guns, ships, tanks, workers, money and patriots are a "MUST" in this war.

WHY MY PARENTS SHOULD BUY VICTORY BONDS

By GRACE WILKINSON
St. Michael's High School, Grade 12

My parents should buy Victory Bonds because they are Canadians—loyal Canadians, who realize the immensity of the struggle in which we are so deeply involved. They realize that there must be no shirkers, that everyone must do his part. The most important contribution of my parents—of all Canadian parents — is to buy Victory Bonds. If this part of the war effort is neglected, of what avail will the heroism of our fighting men be? Will our brave Canadian boys be in unmarked graves, having made the supreme sacrifice for a cause that was not supported at home? Remember — the fate of Canada is in your hands, my parents. We are all in the front line.

Canada — a country which was given birth by dauntless pioneers, who asked only for freedom — a country which has grown in beauty, wealth and power under the guidance of their sons, whose watchword has ever been "Freedom!" Today this young nation, glowing with hope and promise, has been plunged into a dark, slimy pool of hate and sin and crime. Will she emerge, fettered with the heavy chains of slavery, her head bent in shame, her heart a turmoil of helpless hatred and misery, her history forever tainted and sullied? Or will our Canada emerge in triumph — her head held high, her eyes bright with victory, her heart as light as only the hearts of the free can be, her historians recording in glowing words how this youngest and purest of nations has crushed the head of the serpent?

The answer depends upon you, my parents, for you are Canada. To you, young Canada is looking, with eyes of trust and confidence, to keep our future safe. So buy Victory Bonds now! Don't wait until it is too late — when the freedom which that Bond buys now will have vanished, perhaps forever. Keep them flying!

EELS IN HALIFAX WATER MAINS

Halifax, Oct. 24 — (CP) — Haligonians now know what helped make their water supply unfit to drink several weeks ago. Works Commissioner R. M. MacKinnon said yesterday several hundred eels made their way into the city mains from the supply lake after the heavy rainstorms Sept. 21. Some are still lurking in the pipes, he said.

Victory Loan Concert Featured By Acts of Outstanding Talent

A hit-studded program staged in a setting of Air Force blue against the symbolic background of the Commando dagger, and illumined with civilian star acts, thrilled a capacity-packed auditorium at the Belleville Collegiate Institute Friday night when the first of a series of concerts was staged by the Public Relations Committee of the Victory Loan General Committee of Hastings County.

Upwards of twelve hundred people filled every available space in the school and saw a variable concert that ranks with one of the best of its kind ever staged in this city.

To the members of the R.C.A.F., Trenton, the Glee Club of the Collegiate Institute here, the School Band, Mrs. Phyllis Mayo Barkley, a new singing star on the city's musical horizon; Leo Riggs, Harold Carruthers, students of the collegiate, and the members of the Public Relations Committee must go the credit of producing a show that was outstanding in its every phase.

Prizes Presented

One of the outstanding features of the show, more from a Victory Loan educational point than from entertainment, was the presentation of the prizes to the authors of the prize winning essays written by pupils and students of the county. Four thousand replies were received from Hastings in response to the invitation of the Victory Loan School Committee, Ross Stiver, to partake in the essay-writing contest.

The first prize winner for secondary schools was Miss Grace Wilkinson, St. Michael's Academy, Belleville, with the public schools' first prize being awarded to Donna Ferguson, Queen Mary School. Second in the secondary schools was Eileen Cameron, B.C.I., with the public school second prize going to Ruth Hicks, King George School. The presentations were made by Mr. Harold Seldon.

It was announced today that six honorable mention prizes will be awarded at the second concert of the series to be held next week.

W. S. Turner, Chairman.

Acting Principal W. S. Turner of B.C.I. acted as chairman for the show and handled a difficult job in an efficient manner. During the course of the entertainment Mr. R. D. Arnott, M.L.A., briefly addressed the large crowd with regard to their duty as Canadians and the present Victory Loan. Mr. Arnott asked them to place their contributions to the war on one side of the ledger and those of the armed services on the other, and see if they balance. He did not like the words "defence bonds", he said, victory was more appropriate.

"We are not in this war to defend ourselves, we are in it to lick the other fellow."

There was little to choose from among the star acts that formed the program proper. Heading a variety bill was the school glee club under George Maybee who also conducted the school band in several sparkling selections, which offered three selections. Next came Pilot Officer Ashdown, who offered a fine stage personality as well as an outstanding tenor voice and who received rounds of applause with his offerings of "The Trumpeter", "Old Man River" and "The Road to Mandalay".

Singer Given Ovation.

Belleville's new singing star, Mrs. Phyllis Mayo Barkley, wife of Sgt. A. V. Barkley, R.C.A.F., and who hails from Boston, Mass., delighted her hearers with "My Hero" and "The White Cliffs of Dover". Possessed of a fine stage personality, Mrs. Barkley, herself charming and attractive, has a fine soprano voice. She received a fine ovation at the conclusion of her numbers. At the piano was Mr. Leo Riggs.

An allegorical playlet staged by soldiers, sailors, airmen and collegiate students under the direction of Miss N. P. Merry, was well staged and carried a vital message. It brought out Canada's determination to serve on all fronts, with farmers, civilians and war workers pledging that Canada will not let her fighting sons down. The play was well done and deserved the rounds of applause it received.

Guitarist a Hit

The comedy highlights of the show were provided by AC2 Scott Burrell, a guitarist whose comedy songs were culminated by a fine imitation of Al. Jolson singing "Sonny Boy," and Sergeant Dowie, a cartoonist of extraordinary ability. Sergeant Dowie's running line of patter was hilariously funny and his clever conceptions of subjects such as Roosevelt, Churchill, a WAAF, Hitler and other subjects were much appreciated by the audience.

Two exceptionally fine airmen singers, Corporal Saunders and Sergeant T. Lennon and WO2 Cameron, a pianist of outstanding ability rounded out a highly entertaining program. Another fine contribution to the show was the piano accompaniment to many of the numbers by Air Woman 2, E. M. White.

Harold Carruthers, local baritone, sang the Band song and led the gathering in "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall."

Addresses were given by Chairman Ross Stiver of the Loan School Committee and General Chairman James Barclay who expressed the appreciation of the artists and others who made the first concert an outstanding success.

Diplomas Presented

Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V. G., presented diplomas to the following students:

Upper School

Edward Buckley, Margaret Ethier, Mary McMahon, Helen O'Neill, Elizabeth Stapleton, Cyril Power, John Johnston.

Middle School

Valedictorian

Miss Mary McMahon was class valedictorian and expressed the regret the graduates felt at leaving their Alma Mater and the very happy associations which they had enjoyed there. She paid tribute to the unselfish devotion of their teachers and thanked Monsignor Nicholson and the priests of the parish for their counsel and encouragement, Father Coyle and the various parish organizations for the prizes they had so generously offered and the Catholic Women's League for planning the graduation dance. To her fellow classmates she extended good wishes for their success.

Address to Graduates

The address to the graduation class was eloquently delivered by Monsignor Nicholson who stated the hour was a signal one, with an abundance of joy and gladness and brimming over with plentiful happiness. The goodly company present was an eloquent tribute and demonstration of the widespread and friendly interest in which the graduates are held. It was a source of pleasure to the devoted instructors who having recognized their qualities of mind and heart now beheld public affirmation of what they had long since apprehended.

He took this opportunity of expressing sincere thanks to Principal Turner of the Belleville Collegiate Institute for affording the facilities to the pupils of St. Michael's to take Defence classes. They were also deeply indebted to the Belleville Board of Education for their share in making this arrangement possible.

Continuing his words to the graduates the speaker said that Canada was a land of free men cherishing the freedom of democratic government. Canada was a Christian nation. Its people realize that the measure of human liberty is determined by the degree of the sacredness attached to human existence. When religion is held in honor and the laws of God are permitted to prevail, there the rights of man are respected and the functions of the state are restricted to their proper bounds. The recognition of God is the safest and surest safeguard of popular rights. Wherever society fails to recognize its duties to God, it soon fails to recognize the rights of man. It begins by denying the supernatural; it ends by rejecting the natural. This is the lesson to be drawn from the history of humanity.

In parting words to the graduates he stated that their past was a happy augury of the future, inherited from their Alma Mater where the traditions of love of God and love of country were upheld. Cherish them and absorb them. No man but would respect the courage of their honest convictions.

Men and women of education have special responsibilities in citizenship. They ought never to lead or follow a mob. Think wisely and act in reason. Men and women of principle, honor, faith are needed by our country. These young graduates who now listen, soon must speak; who now learn, soon must teach and who now study, soon must act. To speak, to teach to do for God and country was the purpose of their years of training. Faithful to this, their Alma Mater will not have born them in vain.

The singing of the National Anthem brought the program to a close. A social hour followed during which refreshments were served and visitors had an opportunity to congratulate personally the young graduates. A graduation dance was held in the evening.

Closer Observation of Tea, Coffee Rationing Asked by WPTB Officials

While the intentions of the greater part of the residents of this city are good, it has become evident that a great many are forgetting their duty insofar as rationing and other wartime exigencies are concerned, Wartime Prices and Trade Board officials stated here today.

Church associations, social clubs and other civilian organizations in the city have been holding teas and other social events where rationed tea, coffee and sugar have been served, officials said.

This points to the fact that, as was discovered in one case, the rationed commodities used at the tea were those in stock or on hand before the rationing orders were handed down. These stocks or surplus supplies should have been reported to the W. P. T. B. and turned in. This apparently has not been done. Officials warned today that a systematic check-up will take place shortly.

While it is not against the law to hold social or organization events, officials and members should not forget that no special rations of tea, coffee and sugar are allowable for such gatherings.

It has also been brought to the notice of the local office that many customers are demanding that purchasable goods which can be carried as they are, be wrapped. This is not in conformance with W. P. T. B. orders.

Must Turn in Tubes

There has been a decided laxity on the part of drugstores and other shops which sell toothpaste, shaving cream or goods in collapsible tubes, in adhering to the order that an empty tube must be returned before the purchase of a full one is made. Stores have co-operated to the extent that a receptacle has been placed in the premises for the purpose of taking used tubes, but some merchants are not insisting on the order of returning empty ones, being carried out. The board is of the opinion that much better co-operation between merchant and consumer is possible.

If social clubs, church and other organizations insist on using surplus ration stocks for various events instead of turning them in, there is a possibility that further rationing of these commodities may be forthcoming, officials warned.

Soviet Film Producer Predicts Victory for Allies in '43, '44

-By WILLIAM A. RUTLEDGE III
Central Press Canadian Writer

Hollywood, Cal., Oct. 23—Stalingrad will succumb to the Nazis. The loss will be the greatest shock to the Allies since the capitulation of France. In terms of American life, the loss of Stalingrad to the Russians compares most closely with the loss of Detroit to an invader.

The Germans will drive on to capture Astrakhan, the commanding port on the Caspian sea, and thus be in a position to cut off any Allied help to the Red army from Middle East sources.

GEORGE J. RONY

The bitter winters, so characteristic of Russia, will set in before the first of November. Simultaneously the Reds will call up reserves to launch a counteroffensive in the Volga basin and the Allies will strike from their Middle East positions.

Victory in '43 or '44.

By the spring of 1943, the Allied war machine will be so high-geared that Germany's defeat could take place any time during the year and most certainly by 1944.

"The Germans will have captured the prized Caucasus oil basin but they will never take a drop of oil from it. The Soviet destruction technique insures that not a drop of oil can be taken from these wells before six months. By that time another winter will have exacted its toll and the Allies will be blitzkrieging their way to victory," Rony prophesied.

"Russia has endured far more than American and Canadian people realize. The Soviet's greatest loss has been in the ranks of civilians. While the people in America and Canada protest rationing of tires, and gasoline, thousands in Russia are dying of starvation. What an average American or Canadian eats in one meal must do in Russia for an entire week.

"I say this on the basis of authentic information from my government. This information also included the report that my father and mother have died during the siege of Leningrad from the direct consequences of insufficient food.

"Thirty million Russians made their home in the territory which has now been occupied by the invading Nazis. It is to be expected that 75 per cent. of these people were evacuated or have moved from this territory. Only those Russians who accept work in the German organization are generally considered to have a chance to escape the firing squad.

"I estimate the casualties among the civilian population in this territory to be in excess of 7,000,000. It must be understood that casualties is used in the accepted application of the term — including not only the dead, but those wounded, driven from their homes, and those missing and unaccounted for."

During his stay in the film capital, where he is to make movies for the Russians and edit American productions for showing to the Soviet masses, Rony observes that the American people are too complacent and indifferent to the war and its implications. "America could have become another France — too indifferent to the bloodshed and sacrifices of total war to muster her manpower and resources. France was living exactly as America is today, aware only of comfort and willing to exert only the minimum effort."

What Rony described as "third front" will arise in the wake of an Allied second front in Europe and he forecast that the Nazi downfall would result as much from enemies within as the Allies without.

"In the conquest of Hitler's hordes, not a single Nazi will leave a conquered or occupied territory alive," he emphatically predicted.

"The German people are our enemies, not Hitler. They follow Hitler as they followed the kaiser in World War 1. The German people must be punished, thoroughly punished, not just the leaders."

As a result of the war, "we are approaching a new era, an era in which new standards of economic and spiritual equality will be established," Rony commented.

Cellision With Hitler

In 1932, while visiting in Germany, Rony drove his car into a limousine in which Hitler was riding. "The only thing which saved me was my nimble English. I was taken for an American and allowed to proceed unmolested. On this trip I heard Hitler speak on several occasions. Although his words are silly dribble, he has the power of fascinating his audiences. The massed crowds cheered every statement."

Rony first attracted attention in 1920 for his work in helping to produce "Hunger on the Volga," a Soviet dramatization of the terrible famine in that area. He edited "Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance" for release in Russian theatres.

At the outbreak of World War II he was appointed by the French government to produce wartime propaganda films. Among his foreign productions have been "Forty Years of History," "Our Fight," "Always the Same," "Why Are We Fighting," "Words of Honor" and others.

Brockville Merchant Fined $100 for Breaking Price Regulations

Brockville, Oct. 24—Pleading guilty in Brockville police court to a charge of having unlawfully sold or offered for sale a fishing reel at a rice higher than reasonable and just, thus contravening the maximum price regulations of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, J. Murray Dobbie, hardware merchant, was fined $100 and court costs of $2 by Police Magistrate G. A. Wright, who said he could not make either the court or the Board appear ridiculous by imposing a small penalty. R. Danis, of Cornwall, represented the Department of Justice at the hearing.

It was charged by the Board that the reel, the personal property of Dobbie, was offered for sale as a used article at $7.50 and at that time was claimed to be worth about $22. The purchaser paid 50c down, obtained a receipt and agreed to pay the balance in instalments. It was ascertained from an importer of fishing equipment that the reel was made in the United States, sold to importers at 47c and sold by them in turn to the retail trade at 70c. The importer, who identified the reel, said that it would sell to the public at not more than $2 when new.

In defence, R. J. Driver, K.C., entered in evidence a memorandum from a Canadian manufacturer of reels who reported that, since it was no longer possible to import such articles from the United States, they were being made in this country but were noisier than those formerly imported. Counsel contended that the rel sold by Dobbie was of the level-winding variety and since reels of a supposedly inferior type sold from $6.75, he felt that $7.50 was a fair price to ask for it. He asked for a nominal penalty, while Mr. Lanis urged the court to impose a fine of not less than $100.

OBSCURE LANDS IN WEST AFRICA GAIN PROMINENCE

Allies and Axis Likely to Meet in Decisive Battle in Dakar Area

A DISMAL SPOT

By MARK BARRON
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

New York, Oct. 24—(AP)—The obscure lands of the Ivory Coast and the Gold Coast of West Africa are rapidly gaining prominence as an amphitheatre where the armed forces of the United Nations seemed destined to clash soon with the axis powers in a decisive battle.

Nazi troops and most of the French fleet still remaining under control of the pro-Nazi Vichy command are reported to be in Dakar, Senegal, the most westward point of the African continent. In addition to the battle possibilities there, military experts have pointed out that Dakar is the logical place from which the axis might launch an attack against the United Nations of the Western Hemisphere.

Important Strategic Centre.

Just south of Dakar is the colony of Sierra Leone, under British control, and just south of that is Liberia where British sources report the landing of a division of American troops.

South of Liberia lies the Ivory Coast of French West Africa where fighting French troops loyal to Gen. Charles De Gaulle are gathering, and the Gold Coast where portions of the British fleet are stationed.

Villages of Mud Huts.

Near Dakar they would see the small island of Goree where the last slave ship, The Return, started for America; it wts lost at sea. They would see the governor-general's palace of white stones, and the Hotel Metropole near the waterfront where, just as in Djibouti, Freetown and other African ports, the white man lunches on terraces with his shirt open half way down his chest and wearing neither necktie nor coat.

There are villages of mud huts, straw hats, rock huts and huts made of most anything that will hang together. Native transportation is mostly in bullock carts, although there is one railroad. It runs about 1,000 miles from Dakar up the Senegal and Joliba rivers into the Niger military territory of French West Africa.

In Liberia, United Nations troops would see a country much more educated to the ways of western civilization than are the other lands along this Ivory and Gold Coasts.

Not only does Liberia have many negroes who are descendants of people who returned from the United States, but there also have been numerous American financed enterprises in that free country.

The "zero hour" on these coasts must be getting near the deadline for the Nazi government is pressing the Laval government to ask for German "protection" of French African colonies.

Major Ketcheson Appointed D.O.O. M. D. 3 Toronto

Major Don. G. Ketcheson, son of Mrs. T. Ed. Ketcheson of this city, has been named to succeed Lieutenant Colonel J. E. Willis, as District Ordnance Officer of Military District No. 3, with headquarters at Toronto. Col. Willis has been appointed to the Pacific Command as Deputy Director of Ordnance Services.

Major Ketcheson, a brother of Major A. H. Ketcheson of the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) joined the army in June, 1940, and was posted to Kingston with the rank of lieutenant. Shortly afterward he went to Regina, remaining in the western city until the late months of 1941 when he was transferred to Toronto with the rank of captain. Here he has remained since. He received his rank of major a few months ago.

Japanese Fear Long-Ranging Bombing Raids

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

The latest Allied long-distance air attacks on axis war-making centres from Northern China to Northern Italy lend peculiar significance to President Roosevelt's disclosure that American plane production has been realigned to sacrifice numbers for greater range and hitting power.

That announcement, which also applies to the American tank output, can ony intensify Japanese and Italian uneasiness over the trends of war-in-the-air. It is not only German war industries and war planes in occupied territory, pressed into Nazi service, that are Allied bomb targets. Vital links in both Italian and Japanese war economy more than 700 miles distant from bases from which British and American bombers took off had been freshly blasted as the President spoke.

Genoa Devastated.

For the first time in six months big R.A.F. bombers rained destruction on Genoa and Turin. That meant a round-trip of 1,500 miles or more and London reported all planes safely returned. Rome admitted heavy damage and casualties, particularly at Genoa. Both cities are important cogs in the Italian war production machine and Genoa is a naval base of consequence.

Simultaneously, on the other side of the world, American bombers in China were lashing out to blast at critically important Japanese cooking-coal sources in Hopeh Province. The Linsi mine installations in the far northeastern corner of China, target of the American attack, is Japan's prime source of steel-making coal, both for Japanese furnaces and those of the great continental war arsenal in Mukden. They lie close to the Manchurian border. Mukden itself is but another air step away, perhaps 300 miles.

Announcement of the raid did not indicate from what bases the American bombers took off. There is every reason to believe, however, that they travelled perhaps 100 miles farther to reach their target than did the British planes which bombed Genoa and Turin. It is at least 800 miles, air line, from possible American airfields in China to the Hopeh coal fields.

Mr. Roosevelt made it clear at a press conference that the changes in both the plane and tank production programs were founded on battle experience. His discussion followed official publication by the office of war information of a critical survey of American combat planes in action which set out the demonstrated superiority of long-distance, high-altitude American bomber types over anything the axis has yet put in the air to match them or effectually to intercept them.

Fear Future Raids.

Japanese fear for not only present but future American long-range bombing attacks has been amply demonstrated. The fear is revealed in the Tokyo threat of reprisals against American war prisoners for such attacks as the Doolittle raid on Japan. Even more revealing was a recent broadcast by a Japanese naval spokesman warning his listeners that American bombers of perhaps 10,000 mile range were to be expected eventually.

The White House announcement naturally gave no intimation of the bomber characteristics toward which the policy of reducing the numerical output in order to increase range and hitting power of each unit is aimed. It is safe to say that they cover a striking advance in both respects, however, and hitting power covers both the weight of bombs that can be carried and the defensive armament of the ship.

Implicit in the Roosevelt announcement is the grim determination to carry the fight to the enemy, not to await him in either ocean or on any front. Heavier armed and armored tanks of longer range—like farther reaching, harder hitting bombers—mean attack, not defence. And there is small doubt that the White House announcement of policy was after, not before the fact. It represents weapons of both types now in production, not yet to be designed or put onto the production line.

What Britain Has Done

Every piece of news indicates how worthy of the great praise she has received is Britain for the magnificence of her war effort.

There was a day when Hitler had air superiority but now Britain "has far passed the total Axis output of aircraft." So says Capt. Oliver Lyttelton.

This will explain some things, the great raids over Germany and Nazi-occupied Europe and the small German raids. It may tell something of Britain's support of Russian air force on the eastern front. It tells something of the Royal Air Force in the Mediterranean theatre and in mid-Asia.

Well might Hitler look with dread to the future and with regret to the past as he feels the might of British air power and British air strength can still be somewhat increased by making greater use of both labor and machines in Britain. That is the only way as there is no new great intake of labor possible. That increase will be achieved, the world may rest assured. With her is associated the strength of the other United Nations.

The marvel is what Britain has done in her own quiet and effective way. This is but one side of her war determination. She is mighty on the sea and on land as well.

The enemy could not have expected such strength of resources and willpower and such magnificent courage as Britain has demonstrated.

And in all, she has kept her honor unsullied.

She and her people are the admiration of the world.

Those Axis Blunders

The Axis nations who set their hearts on war have made great blunders, Field Marshal Jan Christiaan Smuts said the other day, naming the colossal blunders as the defeat of the German air force over Britain, the German attack in Russia and the Japanese assault on Pearl Harbor. He wondered if Japan will commit the fourth, and asked if, in spite of her peace treaty with Russia, Japan will launch a treacherous attack against her in Siberia.

Hitler's first great blunder was shortly after the fall of France, but long enough to enable Britain to steel herself and properly appraise the situation. Hitler was puffed up with the success of his treachery against the European nations and acting against the conscience of humanity he failed to appraise Britain's power of development and the unyielding courage of her people. He thought to blitz the British people but they knew not defeat. Her air power was then small but effective and of the airmen Mr. Churchill spoke the memorable words: "never in the field of human conflict was so much owed by so many to so few."

It is then not to be wondered at that Hitler, who despised everything but brute strength and treachery could not properly appreciate this people in the British Isles who had the confidence and will to win. This was his first defeat on a grand scale and it can be termed a blunder of great proportions.

Then Hitler, the greedy and grasping, thought he saw an opportunity in Russia, and in 1941 plunged forward against the Soviets. After tremendous losses of manpower and resources and prestige he has found that he is baffled at the end of the second year, his army is "bleeding to death" and he has failed in his objectives. He misunderstood Russia's great development.

At Pearl Harbor Japan started a wave of Pacific expansion but she is already seeing that the result of her treachery and crime against the United States is costing her heavily. She has lost the offensive in the Pacific. Her action has brought into the war the full might of the United States, the greatest industrial national unit in the world, against the Axis. The way ahead leads to Japan's defeat.

Besides the cost of these three great blunders the three-headed enemy is handicapped by the course of evil the Axis nations have adopted. In addition the Axis has to fight against the finest manhood and spirit of the world in the United Nations, the immense power of their resources and the power for good which fights alongside the Allies.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

Geo. H. Byrnes

OUR WAR

What is meant by total war is being made clearer and clearer to the Canadian people. They have asked for, have insistently demanded total war. If any group of them thought this meant war at someone else's expense and self-denial, the awakening is now come. If some have harbored the belief that supplying men with ships and guns and tanks and planes and so forth would be the sum total of their effort—an effort which they could exert without discomfort to themselves—they can no longer lay that flattering unction to their souls. There have been such people. There may still be; but realization has come to them—in terms of money and living standards. As increased taxation reduces or eliminates the ability of one class to furnish the money which the Government must borrow, the burden will have to be assumed by the next group in line and so on. In brief, total war cannot be anything but war by the total population.

Our Canadian democracy has a story to tell and it deserves to be told . . . Our war machinery has grown to the extent that today we may boast of 500,000 men and women in the fighting forces. We know that 800,000 or more Canadians are producing war weapons. Within the next five months, many thousands of additional Canadians will be placed in military units or shifted from civilian undertakings to defence production, all of whom will be trained to accomplish a vital share of the common task.

In three years, a practically non-existent aircraft industry has expanded to a network of factories which now produce nine different types of planes at the rate of several hundreds a month.

The shipbuilding industry now has 60,000 workers.

Chemicals and explosives 45,000.

Tanks and mechanical transport 67,000.

The largest gun factory on this continent is located near Montreal. There are only four larger such factories in the world, located respectively in Russia, Germany, France and Czecho-Slovakia.

Now, it takes hard-earned Canadian dollars to foot this huge bill that all this war material entails. To be exact—about three billion, three hundred million in the present year.

Canadians have proven time and time again that "they can take it"—NOW, and right NOW, all they are being asked to do is to lend their money (not give, mind you)—as their share in the Price of Victory and Peace.

And what of the Canadian soldier, the sailor and the airman? Well, he goes to war, not with any fanatical theories of race superiority, of any special "place in the sun," nor any desire to rule the world by sword and fire. He fights for something greater. For decency—for his loved ones, for his country—not as some warlike symbol, but as the one great refuge in this world where the humble, the meek and the righteous may live and work in peace.

It is this same sense of decency and honor that has bound us all together. We know we cannot fight. But there is something we can do—and are doing—to help. We can provide the guns, the planes, the tanks, and the ships to put might behind the right.

Our forefathers won for us the glorious inheritance of freedom—at a great price. Shall we hesitate to pay as great a price, even a greater one, to preserve that freedom for our children and for our children's children?

There is but one answer that free Canadians can make to that question.

And that is the way to prove to our enemies that we are a United People, and prove to ourselves that we are worthy of being Canadians.

INDIAN SUMMER

When late October shows to me
Its gold and scarlet tapestry
I wonder did the Master see
Such loveliness at Galilee?

Were all the autumns gone before
Like this which shimmers at my door,
Were early England's vines and trees
As rich with colors as are these?

If so, then all men's lust for power
Leaves still untouched the humblest flower,
Nor all the force of greed and hate
October's charm can violate.

'Tis good to think, in spite of men,
Such glories will return again,
That all Octobers yet to be
Will make earth beautiful to see.

Much Speculation in Toronto And Ottawa Over Hepburn's Plans

Ottawa, Oct. 24 — (CP) — The Ottawa Journal, in a newspage story dealing with the resignation of Premier Hepburn, foresaw the likelihood of an early Ontario Provincial election and an attempt by Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon, who also resigned, to form a coalition government with the Conservatives under Lt.-Col. George A. Drew.

News of Mr. Hepburn's resignation and the choice of Attorney General Conant as premier, coupled with Mr. Nixon's refusal to serve in a cabinet headed by Mr. Conant, "had Ottawa politicians and statesmen jittery today," the Journal said.

"The outcome will be a new alignment of the Liberal Party in Ontario which now is considered split wide open by the failure of Mr. Conant to carry with him the senior member of the Hepburn cabinet," the Journal story said.

"That Mr. Nixon may lead a Mackenzie King wing of the Liberal Party in the provincial field is freely hoped for by government leaders here."

The paper referred to the long-standing differences between Mr. Hepburn and Prime Minister Mackenzie King and said:

"Members who differed with Mr. Hepburn in his attitude toward Mr. King have always regarded Mr. Nixon as their nominal leader."

Doubt Explanation

"Liberal party solons here smile grimly as they describe as 'a mere political naivette' Premier Hepburn's explanation for resigning.

"They confess to having had certain misgivings ever since Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen called a leadership convention and opened it 'to men not formerly identified with the Conservative Party.'

"Mr. Hepburn's bewildering resignation did nothing to allay those misgivings, particularly as the Ontario Premier's name had already been mentioned as potential Conservative leader under that party's new set-up . . .

"It was pointed out that Mr. Hepburn could hardly refuse to be drafted if the Winnipeg (Conservative) convention should issue the call in patriotic words and that a dramatic flight there could be accomplished in about 12 hours along the lines of President Roosevelt's air journey to Chicago following his third-term nomination."

Toronto, Oct. 24 (CP)—Speculation that neither Mitchell Hepburn nor Harry Nixon would remain long out of the political spotlight was heard in political circles.

There were suggestions that Mr. Hepburn, who resigned as Ontario Premier Wednesday night and named Gordon Conant as his succesor, would soon take an active role in Federal politics. It was in the Federal arena that Mr. Hepburn started in public life, serving as Liberal member of the House of Commons for Elgin from 1926 to 1934.

In this connection the Toronto Globe and Mail, in a dispatch from St. Thomas quoted "old friends" as saying that a man as vigorous as Mr. Hepburn "will find it difficult to quit the political field and retire to his farms."

The same paper said some political circles doubted that Mr. Nixon, who resigned his portfolio as Provincial Secretary Thursday, would devote all his time to agriculture. These circles were quoted as saying there was a possibility that a caucus of Liberal members might ask him to come out of retirement and assume the Ontario party leadership.

The Globe added that Mr. Nixon was questioned as to this possibility and that his reply was: "I would rather not comment."

Another suggestion in the Globe was that W. L. Houck, Minister without portfolio and a member of the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission, might be asked to assume the portfolio of Provincial Secretary, vacated by Mr. Nixon.

NUGGETS OF KNOWLEDGE

Napoleon was a habitual user of snuff, which he sniffed from a gold snuff-box he carried in his vest pocket.

Hitler imitated the Little Corporal in his practice of trying to demoralize and confuse civilian populations by circulating phoney paper money in countries marked for invasion.

During the invasion of Russia by Napoleon in 1812, a German named Leppich proposed to Czar Alexander that the French army be destroyed by dropping explosive shells from balloons. This early attempt to use balloons in warfare, however, was a failure, because Leppich's first balloon was not ready for use until after the defeated French army was in full retreat. Even then the first balloon never got off the ground because of a gas leakage.

Dr. Joseph Goebbels, Hitler's propagahda minister, says the United States is practicing Coueism.

Do you remember Dr. Coue? He was the Frenchman who taught his patients or disciples to repeat the healing formula:

"Every day, and in every way, I am getting better and better."

"Coueism" has found its way into Webster's International Dictionary. That work defines the term as follows:

"Coueism" ("KOO-aye-izm). A system of psychotherapy, introduced by Emile Coue (1857-1926), based upon autosuggestion of health and general well-being and improvement."

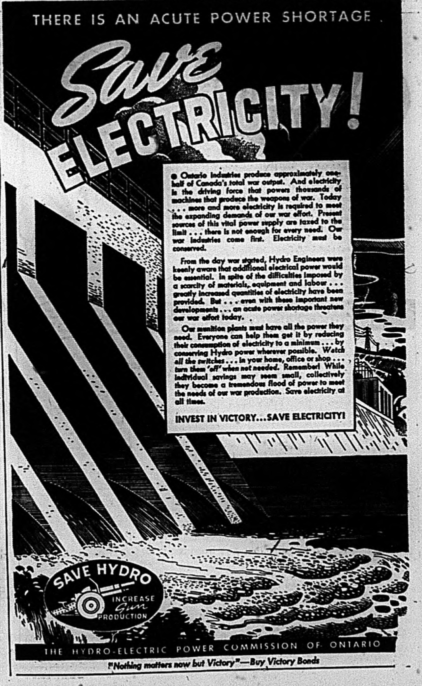
Dr. Coue announced his formula in France about 1910, but it did not became well known in America until its author visited the United States after the First World War.

Some of these days Goebbels and Company may wake up and learn to their sorrow that the United States is getting stronger and stronger every day in every way.

Broad white cuffs formerly worn by widows as a badge of mourning were called "weepers."

The biographical sketch of Jesse Jones in "Who's Who in America" is twice as long as that of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, and that of Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., is considerably longer than that of the President.

Boatswain (pronounced "BO-s'n" by seamen) literally means "boat boy." A boatswain on a war vessel is a warrant officer who is in charge of rigging, anchors and cordage and who calls the crew for evolutions, superintends letting go and weighing anchor and supervises all work in the forward part of the ship. On some merchant ships a superior seaman who has similar duties is also called the boatswain.



THERE IS AN ACUTE POWER SHORTAGE.

Save ELECTRICITY!

● Ontario industries produce approximately one-half of Canada's total war output. And electricity is the driving force that powers thousands of machines that produce the weapons of war. Today . . . more and more electricity is required to meet the expanding demands of our war effort. Present sources of this vital power supply are taxed to the limit . . . there is not enough for every need. Our war industries come first. Electricity must be conserved.

From the day war started, Hydro Engineers were keenly aware that additional electrical power would be essential. In spite of the difficulties imposed by a scarcity of materials, equipment and labour . . . greatly increased quantities of electricity have been provided. But . . . even with these important new developments . . . an acute power shortage threatens our war effort today.

Our munition plants must have all the power they need. Everyone can help them get it by reducing their consumption of electricity to a minimum . . . by conserving Hydro power wherever possible. Watch all the switches . . . in your home, office or shop . . . turn them 'off' when not needed. Remember! While individual savings may seem small, collectively they become a tremendous flood of power to meet the needs of our war production. Save electricity at all times.

Washington Spotlight

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Washington, Oct. 24 (CP)—Before returning to China a few days ago, T. V. Soong the Chinese Roreign Minister, made a suggestion that received little publicity at the time but is sure to be heard more and more as the war progresses.

He urged immediate establishment of an executive committee for the United Nations, to be concerned not with military matters but with economic and financial problems, with the promotion of unity and co-operation and with the formulation of post-war relief and rehabilitation plans.

There are many people, and apparently Soong is one, who believe there must be more substance and form to the United Nations. At the present time, the United Nations are a loose collection of large and small powers bound together only by the ties of military necessity. There are several co-ordinating agencies, chiefly in the military and production fields, but no over-all council or executive committee surveying wider fields and, in particular, planning for events before they take place.

Just Common Enemies

For instance, what is going to happen when enemy-held territory is recaptured? or, more important, what is going to happen at the end of the war? Will the United Nations act with one voice or will they continue to bicker, vacillate and go independent roads?

The fact is that the United Nations are anything but united except in having common enemies and in a determination to stick together until victory is won. There is little cohesion, no evidence of long-range planning or economic and post-war problems and no attempt has been made to formulate common policies so that the people of Europe and the Far East can be addressed in anything but the widest, and often the vaguest of terms.

Strong, Silent Director

James S. Byrnes, former South Carolina Senator who was drafted from the Supreme Court as President Roosevelt's economic stabilization director, is living up to his reputation as a man who moves cautiously and slowly until fully acquainted with the problem facing him.

No man has taken a job in the top levels of the American war machine with less fanfare. He simply moved into the office and started to work, which is news any day in Washington.

Byrnes has a great reputation in Washington for political acumen. During the years he was in the Senate, his most effective work was done behind the scenes. He is known as a clever manipulator of men and for never making an enemy. He may not be an outstanding brilliant man or particularly imaginative but if ordinary common sense and a willingness to accept advice from qualified experts will solve economic problems, Byrnes will succeed in his job.

Some Praise For Canada

The United States navy has been taking a ribbing in the American press for holding up for 65 days the announcement that three heavy cruisers were lost in the Solomon Islands. It also has been said that it probably was no coincidence that the news was released a day ahead of the announcement that five Japanese naval ships had been destroyed, the bad news to be superseded quickly in the public mind by good news.

Ever since the attack on Pearl Harbor the United States navy has been extremely tardy in announcing losses. For instance three months elapsed between the sinking of the aircraft carrier Yorktown and the announcement. A full statement on Pearl Harbor losses has never been made.

Commenting on these facts, the Washington News this week said the navy policy was in sharp contrast to the alacrity with which casualties and full operational details of the Dieppe raid were made known in Canada, "and we believe the Canadians show an awareness of the realities of war not yet general in the United States....The reaction of the Canadian people was magnificent to see."

Notes That Make News

Outside of the nations comprising the British Commonwealth, the only country at war with the seven Axis powers is Czecho-Slovakia, an occupied country....There may be more to William Green's Toronto statement that the "chances are brighter" for a reunion of the A.F.L. and the C.I.O. than appears on the surface. The central fact is John L. Lewis' withdrawal from the C.I.O. and the fear of both organizations that he may attempt to build up a third labor group.

CURE CONVOY NERVES

London —(CP)— Country rest homes where British merchant seamen suffering from "convoy nerves" can recuperate are to be opened all over Britain and men and boys whose health has gone to pieces on hazardous supply routes will be guests.

BEER PRODUCTION TO BE RESTRICTED

Brewers Will be Held to Same Amount of Malt Used Last Year

Ottawa, Oct. 23 —(CP)— Operations of the brewing industry will be restricted under an order announced last night by the Prices Board, and the announcement added that it would probably "result in some shortage of domestic supply."

The order, issued by David Sim, administrator of alcoholic beverages, stipulates that on and after Nov. 1, no brewer will be allowed to use more malt for producing beer in any quarter, than the amount used in the corresponding quarter of the preceding year.

The first three-months period covered by the order ends Jan. 31 next.

Big Increase Over '40

A Dominion Bureau of Statistics report issued last month said Canadian breweries produced 90,247,237 gallons of beer, ale, stout and porter during 1941, an increase of 17,859,574 gallons against 1940.

Selling value of the products at the factory rose from $74,115,731 in 1940 to $96,420,962 last year.

Officials explained that Canadians did not consume all the breweries' output. A considerable amount was exported. Export figures no longer are made public but exports are many times what they were in 1939, the last year for which figures were published. In that year they totalled 175,780 gallons.

Last night's announcement said Prices Board officials expected a substantial saving in manpower would be effected by the restriction.

Coffee Supply Scarce in U. S.

Processors Hunting for Substitutes of This Commodity

By GARETH MUCHMORE
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

New York, Oct. 24 (AP) — The widespread coffee scarcity in the United States had processors hunting Friday for substitutes with almost the frenzy of a housewife haunting the stores for a pound of coffee.

As talk of rationing increased — one dealer suggested every other sugar coupon be good also for coffee until formal rationing books could be issued. The shortage was called partly "temporary" and roasters talked of a probable increase in supplies.

(Coffee and tea rationing in Canada has been in effect since last summer."

Tea drinkers of the United States will have to get along with about 35 per cent less tea next year than was used during 1941, Benjamin Wood, Managing Director of the tea bureau, said yesterday.

He said 65,000,000 pounds would be allocated to the United States for the year under a pact with Britain.

Under the agreement, the British Food Ministry will buy all of India's and Ceylon's tea crops and allocate it to United Nations.

Joe is still smiling...

THIS is Victory Loan time and the nation is making a special War Bonds drive in salute to the Joneses, the Macdonalds, the Kellys, and all other brave young members of Canada's fighting forces : : . And we are, too—but we can't help thinking of Joe.

You remember Joe : : : He used to clean your windshield when you drove into a "SUPERTEST" Service Station . . . Quiet kind of a kid—took it all out in a friendly grin and maybe a chance remark or two: "How are you today, Mrs. Allen?", or "Is the little boy's cold better?" : : : And you liked Joe : : : So did we!

Joe worked vacations for us at first. And then he started full time . : . You can't stop willingness like Joe had . . . And that grin! . . . And he was proud of his advancement; proud one day, too, when he was promoted to Service Station Manager.

And then His Country needed him : : : Joe didn't ask any favors. He didn't make any speeches about liberty. He just grinned . . . and said: "OK.!" He just offered his life.

We've got a lot of Joes : : : and Charlies : : : and Harrys gone from "SUPERTEST"—about half of our entire staff : : : And there's a lot of them missing where you work—and from the street where you live.

But it's good to know they're smiling wherever they may be : : : smiling because there are so many of us here at home determined to work harder, save harder . . . to keep them supplied with the guns and tanks and ships that will let them come home to us.

So, we want to salute our heroes . : : and we want to salute Joe and all the unsung boys like him . . . AND we'd like to remind you to buy even more Victory Bonds to keep the fightin'est army in the world fighting . : . and smiling.

Parents Are Urged To Have Children Protected From Disease

Visits numbering 520 were made by the Victorian Order Nurses in Belleville during the past month, Miss Bessie Soutar, nurse in charge reported at the regular meeting of the branch. Stress was laid in this report to the grave necessity of toxoid treatments for children. Also in her report Miss Soutar paid heartfelt tribute to the memory of the late Dr. R. A. Flynn. Those working almost daily with him knew his high ideals and the contribution he made to the community and humanity in service to patients in all walks of life. He was a staunch supporter of V.O.N. as also is Mrs. Flynn, to whom the sympathy of the nurses and committee goes out.

Regarding toxoids the report said —"With reference to toxoid clinics, we started the whooping-cough clinic Sept. 24th. On this date and Oct. 15th, 92 infants and pre-school children received their initial dose of preventive vaccine. Medical statistics show that whooping-cough heads the list for deaths among infants and young children and measles is second. Both these diseases seem harmless in themselves but though the patient may survive the aggravating symptoms of these diseases complications too often follow which may end disastrously for parents and children. Then the parents regretfully say 'If I had only known about toxoid' or knowing say, 'If I had only taken the advice of the doctor or nurse.'

"No intelligent parent need have such regrets in Belleville. If they have not already visited their family doctor at his office for this treatment, another opportunity is offered at the Well-Baby Clinic every Spring and Fall, for which there is no charge. The public protection of diphtheria vaccine and the necessity of inoculation against this disease but many parents, particularly fathers, object to whooping-cough vaccine being given Whooping cough has eighty-five per cent. protective immunity; this means that if a child is inoculated against whooping-cough, it will have 85 chances out of 100 of not contracting the disease after being exposed to it. But should he be among the fifteen per cent. who might get the disease after inoculation, the duration of the disease is shorter and less severe, so it is worth while from all points of view. As the dreaded disease, diphtheria is gradually being wiped out of this country, so can whooping-cough, if parents will only co-operate by taking advantage of the opportunity which medical science has prepared for their benefit and which the government supplies free.

"Canada as a young country, with an abundance of space, fresh air, sunshine and good food for all, has a disgraceful blot on her map where illness and subsequent deaths among infants and young children are concerned. Not until some of our health rules become law will this blot be removed to a greater extent. Canada needs, now, more than ever before, young Canadians with strong physical bodies and intelligent minds. Monies spent to prevent illness will go much farther than curing illness; this theory applies to national as well as personal family life."

THE DR. CHASE CAMPAIGN FOR NATIONAL HEALTH

What is the Secret of Family Health

One family is always healthy. In the next family there seem to always be someone sick.

Why?

It used to be customary to blame this condition on heredity.

But recent investigations show that far more depends on living and eating habits.

The underlying cause of low vitality is often traceable to a lack of vitamin B_1 and essential minerals derived from the food consumed.

As a result whole families may be found to be subject to a low condition of health which leaves them prey to serious and annoying ailments.

More and more intelligent thinking people are learning to depend on Dr. Chase's Nerve Food as a "pick-me-up" to help them out of a low condition of vitality.

It is usually the mother in the home who is largely responsible for the family health and most mothers know about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and what it can do to help restore richness to the blood and vigor to the nervous system.

In most families, these days, there are excesses of work, worry and anxiety which overtax the nerves and cause headaches, irritability, loss of sleep and indigestion.

But these troubles do not need to get you down if you let Dr. Chase's Nerve Food help you.

Ask for the new economy size bottle of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and set it on the dining table along with the salt and pepper shakers so everyone who needs it may get his after meal supply of vitamin B_1 and food minerals.

Mrs. Ross Bush, Consecon, Heads Women's Institutes

Recommendations, one regarding the curtailment of liquor traffic, and the other asking the government investigate the alleged wastage at military camps, were passed at the final session yesterday of the Women's Institutes' convention. Mrs. H. Harrison, Latta, presided as Chairman. The recommendations read as follows:

"In view of the fact that our government is requesting us to conserve sugar and gas and many other necessaries needed daily and are glad to economize on such, we the members of the Women's Institutes of this area convention do feel that one necessary measure would be the curtailment of the liquor traffic which is taking a greater toll of lives than the present war, also the enormous sums of money consumed that may be used to so much better advantage in such critical times as well as destroying the morals of manhood and womanhood of this country.

"Whereas the government is anxious that each individual should save to the uttermost, we feel that it would not be out of place for our Women's Institute to ask that the government form a committee to investigate the wastage at the military camps."

Mrs. T. Heasman, Stirling, gave a splendid report on Home Economics stressing the care that should be taken in feeding the family in wartime. The report of Mrs. B. Tanner, Madoc, on War Work was read by Mrs. W. Spry. This showed that 7057 knitted articles, 2000 sewn articles, 43 layettes had been completed in the past year. Two British war guests were supported by one branch. The sum of $441.82 was expended on supplies and $25 given to the Salvation Army War Work.

Musical Program.

Community singing led by Mrs. H. Harrison, vocal solos by Miss Marion Prindle and Mrs. Moore with Mrs. Harrison acting as pianist were enjoyable numbers on the afternoon program.

Dr. J. Semple.

Dr. James Semple, representing the War Finance Committee, addressed the meeting on the subject of the Victory Loan which was of paramount importance not only to Canada but to the whole world. The encouragement and enthusiasm of women would be a great factor in the success of the campaign. Women are vitally interested in war.

"To me the most remarkable feature of every war is the Calvary of womanhood," said the speaker. "Behind the sacrifice of men wearing uniforms is the devotion of all the mothers of the empire.

"Insofar as you can, individually or as a corporate body, influence people to subscribe to the loan you are doing a lasting service to the cause that is so vital. Everything worthwhile in life is being threatened. 'Only victory matters now' is an apt thought and the most we can do ourselves, small or large, in the cause for freedom.

"This organiation, with its magnificent achievement of service will not be found wanting."

A film was shown by Mr. Wooley of the War Finance Committee which proved very interesting and educative.

Citizenship Report.

The enormous responsibility of women to the country and to their children was emphasized by Mrs. J. F. George, Smithfield, reporting on citizenship. This responsibility could be discharged by a true understanding and earnest adherence of the principles and ideals of good citizenship. This should be followed by intelligent and interested citizenship, using the privilege of franchise and taking an active interest in municipal, provincial and national affairs. A good beginning is to take their place at the annual school trustee meetings and becoming familiar with legislation regarding education.

Planning For Peace.

Mrs. Ross Bush, Consecon, newly-elected chairman, gave the final address on the theme "Planning for Peace". Young people who will take their places in directing the new order should be trained in tolerance and the spirit of co-operation. It is well to remember Josh Billings' comment to 'train children in the way they should go and walk there sometimes yourself' can be taken seriously. Planning now for the peace of tomorrow must be undertaken zealously or else all this bloodshed will have been in vain. Tomorrow's good must be paid for in today's struggle.

The new world order cannot happen by chance and all should stop to consider this. Now is the time to prepare for a world of opportunity for young people and a nation which will welcome the influx of people after the war.

Miss Clarke conducted a question box.

Appreciation to all those who assisted in the success of the convention was expressed in the courtesy resolution presented by Mrs. A. Nill, Roseneath, at the close of the convention. Mr. J. Shortt, the Y.M.C.A., the caretaker, Ald. Follwell, the Veterans who loaned the flag, the Templer Flower Shop, Miss Clarke, Mrs. Duke, Miss Scott, the Press, Mrs. T. A. Tucker, Mrs. Snider, Mrs. Harrison, the guest speakers, the area conveners, the artists, the secretary, the chairmen of the various sessions were all sincerely thanked on behalf of the convention.

Splendidly arranged scrap books on the history of communities were on display. Of these the West Northumberland District Lady Tweedsmuir Village History and that of Wellington branch were chosen to go to Toronto.

THE BATTLE begins here

In a quiet, hospital-like department in Ford's Windsor plant there's a battle going on every second. Strange-looking machines twist steel as you would twist a telephone cord, stretch solid metal as easily as youngsters pull taffy. A giant X-ray machine shoots pictures through solid steel seeking out hidden defects. Continuous salt spray beats on parts of army vehicles, giving them a "lifetime" test in a few hours' time.

Here you find a machine designed like a guillotine (see foreground illustration) which crashes a weight down on a Ford-built gear. This shattering "kick in the teeth" is but one of the tests through which Ford's fighting machines must pass before they are given an A-1 rating for war.

Down the winding roadway the motorized column sweeps into battle position. Huge 3-ton lorries bring up thousands of men, tons of supplies and ammunition in an endless stream. Mile after mile over rugged terrain these modern military pachyderms roll on—carrying the battle into enemy territory. That Ford gear—and every one of the thousands of parts and pieces of a military vehicle—must stay on the job. Precious time and brave men's lives may depend on it.

It's all one battle—the roaring advance of an Empire column and the quiet thoroughness of the Canadian test lab. At Ford of Canada, 15,000 employees all have jobs to do. They know what they're doing and they know how to do it. The productive efficiency of "the Ford way" of doing things has made Ford of Canada's Windsor plant a vital source of mechanical vehicles for the United Nations.

"Speed is necessary to win this war. But we must never for a single moment forget that speed, in our language, means the maximum rate at which we can produce the finest equipment. Quality must always keep a jump ahead of quantity on the industrial front. Let's have plenty of both."

WHIRLY MEETS STRONG FIELD IN HANDICAP

Trainer Hirsch Likely to Send One in That Will Beat "Big Tail"

MADE FAVORITE

Laurel, Md., Oct. 24 —(AP)— Whirlaway meets a nemesis of long standing today in his effort to collect the major portion of the purse in the $15,000 Washington handicap, co-feature of the Army Emergency Relief program at Laurel Park.

That would be Trainer Maxie Hirsch, who as recently as Wednesday proved he retained his ability to come up with a sharp horse when he sent the long shot, Dark Discovery, out to whip Alsab at Jamaica.

It was Hirsch who saddled Attention when that one upset Whirly in the Arlington classic last year, and who pulled the trick again this season when Tola Rose whipped the Calumet Comet in the Butler handicap.

Despite the presence in the Washington lineup of Tola Rose and the sensational Riverland, however, Whirlaway was a short-priced favorite in the early wagering to pull down the purse which will total $14,3550 if all 10 of the likely starters face the barrier.

Warren Wright's four year old son of Blenheim II will be conceding weight in all directions, carrying an impost of 130 pounds, including Jockey Georgie Woolf.

Next highest weight will be that on Riverland, a speedster from the Louisiana farm stables of Harold A. Clark who has romped to the wire first the last eight times he has gone to the post, although he was disqualified twice. Riverland will carry 118 pounds, the major portion of it Jockey Al Robertson.

Other well liked horses in the mile and a quarter event included Louis B. Mayer's Thumbs Up, winner of the Maryland handicap here last Saturday, and the Belair Stud's Vagrancy, three year old filly queen.

Sports Roundup

Associated Press Sport Writer

New York, Oct. 24 — (AP) — Confidentially, we don't know any more about the shifting of the army-navy game to Annapolis than has been announced, but if transportation is the only reason, we can't see why it wouldn't be just as good to keep it in Philly and sell tickets only to Philadelphians ... it's about time they got a break on those army-navy pasteboards and it certainly would be more profitable that way, if that means anything....

And if the situation is so serious as to require this action on the country's No. 1 grid game (especially to service men), why shouldn't the same restrictions be put on all other football games? ... to pick one example, the Yale-Princeton game, recently shifted to New York so more folks could see it, should be returned to Palmer Stadium and ticket sales limited to residents of Princeton.

Triple threat

Besides playing a pretty good game at guard for Harvard, being an honor student in anthropology and serving on a half-dozen student organizations, Wally Kemp picks up a little change selling corsages to the boys who have dates for football games ... when the Navy moved into the Harvard yard, Wally found his business falling off because the sailors didn't know many girls ... so Kemp added a sideline. Instead of merely ringing up "no sales," he gets on the telephone and shortly the navy man has both a date and a corsage.

Harking back to the late unlamented (except by the Yanks) world series, Deak Morse of the St. Johnsbury (Vt.) Caledonian-Record suggests that the American Leaguers were so confused as to the Cards' whereabouts at times that they thought of appealing to the draft boards to learn whether the St. Louis players hadn't changed their addresses without giving notice.

Today's Guest Star:

Lou Bachman, Bristol (Conn.) Press: "George Halas is not satisfied with the play of his Chicago Bears so far this year. Well, neither are any of the other teams in the National pro league."

Toronto, Oct. 24 — (CP) — For years keen rivalry, particularly in sports, divided the twin lakehead cities of Port Arthur and Fort William but the war is closing the ranks. Fort William was left without a rink when the defence department took over Prince of Wales Arena. Port Arthur rose to the occasion and Mayor C. W. Cox, president of the Port Arthur Arena, offered free skating to Fort William children today from 10 A. M. to noon and provided street cars to take them over and back without charge.

Hunters Note:

The Canadian Red Cross Society salvage division has appealed for wildfowl feathers which go into downfilled sleeping bags for members of the armed forces and provide insulation for quilted jackets. All feathers except the stiff quills from wings and tail should be packed in paper bags and turned over to the nearest Red Cross salvage depot. In British Columbia the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire is accepting moose and deer hides and, with assistance of tanners and furriers, making them up into warm, weather-proof jackets for men on special service.

The Expert Says:

Gnr. Ted (Toronto Telegram) Reeve: "The National Hockey League will look odd without the New York and Brooklyn Amerks. Red (Dutton) shouldn't have disbanded them, really. He could have stuck them in some defence or mercantile league as the Dutton Enterprises or some such. For strangely assorted but strong enough squads are appearing in all sorts of places .... Dutton might have got a franchise for his survivors with the secret service."

Puck Patter:

Hershey Bears of the American Hockey League have made an offer to Jeff Kalbfleisch, big defenceman who retired from minor professional hockey two years ago but Jeff is undecided whether to leave his position in Niagara Falls ... seventeen-year-old Albert Superstein of Edmonton will play with New York Rovers in the Eastern United States amateur league ... The Canadian Women's Army Corps is forming a hockey team in Toronto ... Herman Gruhn, who helped St. Boniface Seals win the Memorial Cup in 1938 and Regina Rangers take the Allan Cup in 1941, is stationed at Lachine Manning Pool and will play with PO. Don Penniston's R. C. A. F. team in the Quebec Senior League .... Joe McArthur, former Port Arthur Bearcats star, is playing coach of the navy hockey team at Esquimalt, B. C.

N. H. L. Training Notes

(By the Canadian Press)

A line that may revive memories of Toronto's famous "kid line" of Busher Jackson, Charley Conacher and Joe Primeau, is believed in the making with the Canadien Club. The trio is Tony Demers, Elmer Lach and Maurice Richard, an amateur last year with Canadiens in the Quebec Senior League. The trio have been flashing high-class hockey in preliminary drills and Richard, who has yet to sign a pro contract, is compared with the late Howie Morenz, for his flashing speed.

Canadiens will undergo another stiff weekend when they take on the all-star army outfit for a third time at the Montreal Forum Saturday night and then travel to Shawinigan Falls, Que., to play the Shawinigan Club Sunday.

Maybe Lester Patrick is going to play with New York Rangers this year—too. He was back on the ice again at the training camp today working out on defence. Even at 58, the Silver Fox can still take the puck away from youngsters young enough to be his grandsons.

Gordie Davidson, with Regina Rangers two years ago and New York Rovers of the Eastern United States Amateur Hockey League last season, may achieve N.H.L. stardom this season. He continues to shine on defence lines with Babe Pratt and Ott Heller.

Lester Patrick said yesterday after a training session of his New York Rangers in Winnipeg that he'll probably announce the personnel of the 1942-43 team Tuesday.

Hank Goldup and Bobby Copp will likely carry the heavy defence load of the Toronto Maple Leafs this season. "Goldup has all the physical requisites for an outstanding defenceman," said Coach Hap Day, after the workout yesterday. "He has size and speed and puck-carrying ability to become another Stanowski."

Day has gone on record as saying he would like five defencemen. In Bucko McDonald and Reg. Hamilton he has seasoned campaigners, but he can't be too sure about Hamilton, who finished up last winter on crutches and cane. a trick knee has still not proven it can stand a vigorous national league campaign.

Ace Bailey, former Maple Leaf star, says Copp is the best looking defence rookie to turn out with Leafs in years.

SPORTLUMINARIES OF ANOTHER DAY MEET IN LONDON

Sinclair and MacArthur Talk Over Football Games of Long Ago

REAL ATHLETES

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the R.C.A.F. Somewhere in England, Oct. 24—(CP) — Spine-tingling rugby games staged many years ago by the Varsity Orfuns were repeated when a squadron leader and a flight lieutenant bumped into each other at a personnel reception centre and tore through a "remember-when" bee.

There were plenty of things in common for Sqdn.-Ldr. John Sinclair of Toronto and Flt.-Lt. Cammie MacArthur of Winnipeg, comparatively recent arrivals and both on the medical staff of the R.C.A.F. They were football luminaries during college days.

MacArthur, a star kicking halfback, captained a McGill University team of high merit. Now he's medical officer of the original Canadian fighter squadron overseas.

MacArthur can find McGill football company in his midst and also at a nearby Canadian squadron. Flt. Lt. Jimmy Hall of Noranda, Que., is with a fighter squadron in combat role. . . . FO. Alex Hamilton of Westmount, Que., is his neighbor as engineer officer with another Spitfire squadron. Hamilton was a quarterback, Hall an outside wing on a McGill club that won the intercollegiate title a few seasons back. . . . FO. Bob Keefer of Montreal, also a backfield star of that grid team, renewed acquaintances with his old mates recently after having been interned in Eire following his bomber's forced landing. Bob's back home now. Autumn thoughts of Canadian airmen are turning to hockey. Many of Britain's big artificial ice rinks already are open for the long season of skating here. Hockey enthusiasm ran high last winter and with vastly increased personnel this season, R.C.A. hockey is due for another upward trend. An ever-green veteran of the ice lanes is Flt. Lt. Ted Howe, formerly of Winnipeg and Regina and once a standout in hockey and boxing. Last winter he was adjutant of a Canadian squadron. Being in the "over 40" category didn't keep him on the sport sidelines. He played defence for the Squadron Club.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

THE FOURTH SATURDAY IN October, 1922, was an extremely dark day in the annals of baseball in Belleville. Only a few days previous the then heralded Belleville Grand Trunks had journeyed to Galt where they won the first game of the 1922 senior O.B.A. finals by a 7 to 5 score and over 4,000 Eastern Ontario's diamond lovers jammed the old Fair Grounds here in high hopes of seeing Belleville win its second senior provincial baseball title in four years. But alas, it just wasn't to be. Up in Galt the Grand Trunks had benefited by Terrier errors and not to be out-done the old Trunks reciprocated with two had errors on the home diamond, both helping the Terriers to win 4 to 3 and force a third and final game. The clubs met and tossed a coin whether the third game would be played in Guelph or Peterboro neutral parks in respective ends of the province. Galt won the toss, but we'll wait until next week to see just which team won the game.

NOTED FOR THEIR POOR base running that season, the Grand Trunks proceeded to display their poorest efforts at circling the base paths and lost golden opportunities to score, despite two bad and costly errors that gave Galt two runs and subsequent victory. Friendly Graham was Coach Bush McWhirtter's pitching choice, while Walter Gerow again pinned his hopes on his ace, Jack "Chief" Williams. Galt out-hit Belleville ten to eight with Grove, Galt's centre fielder, and Gordie Hines, their third sacker, each getting two hits. "Peeney" Mills blasted out a triple and single, Johnnie "Crock" Williams got two singles and Harry Mills a double, but Harry was nipped twice going into third. Williams struck out seven to Graham's one that day, but hit three Galt batters while pitching inside. Vern Weir scored Belleville's first run in the initial frame, while W. Mills scored our second in the third and Belleville's last run went to Mills after his triple in the fifth.

GALT GOT TWO IN THE second after Babe Casey lost Normie Hines' lifter into the sun and tied it up after Harry Mills bobbled Wilkinson's roller in the seventh. Galt won the game with the odd run in the eighth. Perhaps two of the most disappointed fans in the park that day were Jakie Solomon, manager of Peterboro' and Al Heckman, who was the Petes' sensational moundsman for years. Both were here to become two of the chief disappointed Belleville supporters. Galt changed their line-up slightly from the first game, "Friendly" Graham pitching to his brother "Buck," while Wilbur Kress who hurled in Galt, replaced Oliver in the outfield. The Belleville nine went to bat identical to that of the initial contest. It was an ideal autumn afternoon with patrons present from Galt to Montreal, the chief one being Knotty Lee, then business manager of the Toronto Maple Leafs, whose only interest was in affixing Williams' signature to a Leafian contract for the following season. Lee's heeding fell on deaf ears that fall, however.

FRIDAY'S ST. MIKES - B.C.I. Junior Interscholastic game was postponed one week owing to commencement exercises at St. Michael's Academy. The standing of the Bay of Quinte COSSA Interscholastic junior football group today reads:

Albert College	1	1	20	36
Belleville C.I.	0	2	5	31

Games next week—Monday, St. Mikes at Albert; Wednesday, Albert at Belleville Collegiate; Friday, St. Mikes at Belleville Collegiate.

In the only senior Interscholastic game played in the Bay of Quinte COSSA group Coach Paul Goyette's Albert College seniors blanked the B.C.I. "Collegians" 26 to 0. The return game will be played on Nov. 4th.

REMEMBER WHEN. Joe DiMaggio, whose big bat earned him the American League batting champion and helped the New York Yankees win a fourth straight world series title, was voted the most valuable player in the junior circuit three years ago today?

IT WAS MORE OR LESS POPULAR demand that prompted Promoter Frank Tunney to rematch Whipper Watson and Earl McCready in an extended time limit bout for next Thursday here. The Belleville rasslin' fans stamped their approval on the one hour no-decision scrap staged by these two popular matmen the other night, so what more could Tunney do than rematch them over a longer route? No doubt Pedro Martinez will storm and rage, but the mad Mexican's turn may yet come and when it does, watch out.

THIS AND THAT . . . After Big Cal Hubbard finished his chore umpiring the world's series (at $2,500) he hurried to Geneva College, where he is head football coach . . . Back in 1911 Bill Brennan clicked with the same picture, but Bill was coaching at St. John's College . . . Brennan was fired from his coaching job after umpiring a world series, however . . . Branch Rickey won't say whether or not he's accepted the position of general manager of the Dodgers . . . Joe Louis, or rather Sergt. Barrow, is astride a horse most of the time now, as he's training in the cavalry . . . Reports say the heavyweight champion has taken on more weight that is customary for the heavyweight champion

GIVEN THE GO-BY

Pedro Martinez, Mexican wrestling champion, who personally challenged any man to a bout in the Hume arena. Martinez directed the challenges particularly towards Whipper Watson or Earl McCready, chief aspirants for a championship bout with John Katan, British Empire champion. McCready and Watson wrestled one hour without a fall here recently and return to the Hume arena for a 90-minute time limit main bout next Thursday in an elimination bout.

An important message to every motorist who has wondered:
How Good Will Tires Be When They're Made With Synthetic* Rubber?
● More than two years ago, hundreds of patriotic corporations and car owners were already making road tests with a new kind of tire. It bore the famous Silvertown name. But more than half its rubber was synthetic . . . B. F. Goodrich Ameripol.
Since that time synthetic rubber has leaped to new importance. A large part of our war effort depends upon this continent's ability to produce good tires from synthetic rubber. The tires we will drive upon after the war may well be synthetic.
Hence the question, "How good will these new tires be?" is a vital one. There are several ways to answer it. Perhaps the best way is to let you read what actually happened when tires made with Ameripol were put to the test of day-after-day driving. Perhaps the best people to tell you are those who owned the cars and did the driving.
The letters quoted here are only a few of many received. We hope that others who patriotically co-operated will understand that space limited the number of statements we could print.
*NOTE: This advertisement is not intended to give the impression that tires made with synthetic rubber are on public sale. This is not true. And it is not known when it will be true. This is because military needs must come first.

Introduced June 5, 1940
IMPORTANT: Canada right now needs scrap rubber of all kinds . . . your old tires, old rubbers, old boots. Turn them over to the scrap collection agencies.
Aetna Life Insurance Co.—"We put these tires on our Dodge car and ran them for approximately 14,000 miles, at which time they were replaced. As far as we could determine, the tires gave service just about equal to genuine rubber tires." Rawdon W. Myers, V.P.
Beech-Nut Packing Company—"Altogether we would say that they showed up well, and we would be just as satisfied to buy them as tires of natural rubber." C. N. Robinson, Director of Purchases
Car Owner—"On November 10, 1940, I purchased four Ameripol tires because I was interested in finding out what value they had and after 27,000 miles of service I was well pleased. They were driven every day over all kinds of roads. They wore as even as any other standard tire and could have been driven at least 10,000 miles further under the present emergency." S. O. Anderson
General Baking Company—"The following mileage was obtained on the four tires: 24,333 miles, 24,330 miles, 28,310 miles, 27,035 miles. "These tires are worn smooth, but no fabric is showing and carcasses appear to be in good condition The earned mileage as above is normal and compares favorably with regular line tires." Farrar Tilney, Director Purchasing Dept.
General Outdoor Advertising Co.—"To date, these tires have been driven 16,000 miles; and from my inspection of tread wear, they show very little wear, indicating we may expect an additional 16,000 miles' service." B. W. Robbins, Pres.
Pepsi-Cola Bottler—"I traded the car in, and a doctor friend of mine has since re-traded the car, and we have lost track of it. I had 6,000 miles' service, the doctor had between 4,000 and 5,000, and the tire still looked like new. I would say that the Ameripol tire will give better service than those made of ordinary rubber." Charles S. Bunch Petroleum Machine Company—"We bought Ameripol tires and drove them 10,000 miles, at which time they showed only 1-16" wear on the tread. We consider this exceptionally good service due to the fact that they were driven at high speed over all sorts of oil field roads. Their riding quality is equal to rubber." G. J. Armstrong, Pres.

'NOTABLE' DAMAGE

One, commanded by Sqdn. Ldr. J. C. (Obby) Fee of Calgary, struck at eight engines; the other led by Sqdn. Ldr. L. V. Chadburn of Aurora, Ont., shot up four. These two squadrons together have damaged 16 locomotives in little more than a week.

Unlike moonlit Thursday night, heavy clouds shrouded the target at Genoa last night but the raids were carried out on a heavy scale nevertheless, evidently timed to prevent the Axis from rushing men and material from those sources to the desert battlefields where the Allies just then were launching a new offensive.

It was understood at least two R.C.A.F. squadrons took part.

Notable Damage At Savona.

The Italian communique said the damage in Genoa and Turin, both heavily raked the night before, was not serious but that in Savona "the damage was more notable".

The R.A.F. caused no casualties in last night's raid on Genoa, the Italian communique said, but a large number of casualties was caused by "excessive crowding in a shelter". On the previous night, 29 were killed and 121 injured at Genoa, the communique said.

The communique reported one person killed and ten injured at Turin last night and thirteen killed and 46 injured between Savona and Vado Ligure, a small seaport three miles southwest of Savona.

The last time Northern Italy was bombed on successive nights was Aug. 26 and 27, 1940.

Air-raid alarms sounded twice in Berne, Switzerland, last night, just as they did Thursday night, when upwards of 100 bombers crossed the Alps by the light of a full moon, damaged the arsenal city of Turin and dumped upon Genoa, Fascist naval base and supply port, the greatest weight of bombs ever dropped upon Italy.

Swiss Fire At Planes.

Anti-aircraft guns at the capital of neutral Switzerland fired a few shots shortly before midnight, when planes were heard overhead, a dispatch from Berne said. Basel and Geneva also had alarms.

The first announcement of the raid here did not disclose the specific targets or the size of the attacking squadrons, but the fact the Swiss alarms lasted 55 and 65 minutes indicated a considerable number of planes was involved.

The Rome radio said King Victor Emanuele and the queen had spent four hours yesterday walking through the ruins and visiting the injured at Genoa, where great damage was acknowledged.

Nazi-occupied France, the Netherlands and Germany were attacked yesterday by daylight. Three planes were reported lost.

Canadian airmen made six thrusts across northern France and attacked many targets in the area inland from Le Touquet and Dieppe, an R.C.A.F. communique announced.

"At least a dozen locomotives were damaged, as well as armored cars, gun posts and other targets," the communique said. "One aircraft is missing."

The British Air Ministry said R.A.F. bombers, Wellingtons and Mosquitoes, struck at objectives in Germany's Ruhr and the Rhineland and a Hengelo factory, while Spitfires and Mustangs executed other forays over France.

"One aircraft of the Bomber Command and one of the Fighting Command are missing," the ministry said.

JAP INVASION

On the same day, seven enemy bombers with a fighter escort sought to bomb the airfield, springboard of the United States aerial offensive.

The Allied and American aerial attacks since the strong enemy naval forces were sighted about 10 days ago thus far have sunk or damaged five Japanese cruisers, 10 destroyers and 14 other ships, mostly transports.

One bomber was shot down by anti-aircraft batteries and two others were damaged. Fighters intercepted the Japanese fighter planes and destroyed six of them, the navy added, at the cost of two "wildcats."

Entire Group Shot Down

Several groups of enemy planes renewed the attack the next day. Flying conditions were poor, the navy said, but the fighters shot down an entire attacking group of five bombers.

American positions on Espiritu Santo Island in the New Hebrides were shelled the night of Oct. 22 by an enemy ship, presumably a submarine.

The Allied bombing raid on Japanese naval concentrations, believed to be sparring for an invasion opening, was the second in two days. Co-operating with the American command in the Solomons, the planes from Australian bases previously dropped 10 tons of bombs on Japanese vessels in Bougainville's Buin Harbor.

12 KILLED IN ARMY

Martin, a Telephone Company repeater station guard at Whitewater Station, near the scene of the crash, in addition to serving as a civilian defence plane watcher, told a reporter he saw two planes, one about one and a half miles behind the other and both flying at about 8,000 feet.

Both Twin-Engined

"I watched them for some time," he said. "Both were twin-engined. The one in the rear veered away into a cloud and I thought it had changed its course.

"But it came back and slid in so close to the other plane I couldn't tell them apart. Then bits of spraying metal began flying out from the planes."

"Would you say the planes collided?" he was asked.

"I wouldn't say they didn't," Martin replied, and expressed his willingness to testify before an army board of inquiry as to what he saw.

Immediately after the metal began falling from the planes, Martin said, the forward ship started to fall and went into a spin. Then a larger section of the tail fell off. The rear plane, meanwhile, continued flying. Martin said he could not determine whether either ship was a civilian or an army craft.

Crew of Three

The crew of three and all nine passengers were killed, Airline officials announced. Among the dead was Ralph Rainger, song writer, who composed such popular numbers as "Love in Bloom," "June in January" and "Here Lies Love."

American Airlines announced the names of the crew members as Capt. Charles F. Pedley, pilot, First Officer L. F. Repport, co-pilot and Estelle Regan, stewardess, all of Dallas, Texas.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror"

Sherlock Holmes, master detective, comes out of retirement again this time to tackle the most formidable problem of his career. Summoned back by pounding war drums, Sherlock's amazing genius is matched against enemy saboteurs in a timely movie adventure titled "Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror," latest Universal action thriller which opens next at the McCarthy Theatre.

Basil Rathbone has the role of Holmes while Nigel Bruce portrays Doctor Watson, the sleuth's companion.

Prominent in the sizeable cast are Evelyn Ankers, Reginald Denny, Thomas Gomez, Montagu Love, and Henry Daniell.

Story is Timely

The story, based on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's "His Last Bow," takes for its theme the mysterious saboteur depredations which are invariably foretold by enemy broadcasts. Holmes, it is said, enters this modern field with the same methods he created to solve the murder mystery in "A Study In Scarlet," back in 1886.

Rathbone, announcements say, is the seventh Sherlock Holmes to appear on the screen. The first was William Gillette, who created the role on the stage in 1899 and made the original Sherlock Holmes movie two generations ago. The late John Barrymore once made a Holmes picture, while in English films, the sleuth was portrayed by Ellie Norwood, Arthur Wontner, Raymond Massey and Clive Brook.

"Youth on Parade"

In addition to "Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror" the second feature offering promises to be one of the season's grandest fun-musicals "Youth on Parade," featuring John Hubbard, Ruth Terry, Lynn Merrick and Tom Brown. Latest Universal news events will also be presented and include an actual attack by R.A.F. bombers on vital Nazi-controlled war plants in Paris.

AT THE BELLE

"Wake Island"

The dramatization of one of the most spectacular battles of this war will be on view when Paramount's "Wake Island" today reaches the screen of the Belle Theatre.

The gripping reenactment of the epic stand of a handful of courageous Marines who staved off Jap invasion for fourteen days, features a great cast headed by Brian Donlevy, Robert Preston and Macdonald Carey. Also included in the roster of players are Albert Dekker, Walter Abel, Barbara Britton and William Bendix.

Insuring authenticity of detail, "Wake Island" was filmed with the cooperation of the United States Marine Corps. John Farrow, distinguished Hollywood director and himself a lieutenant commander in the British Navy until recently invalided out of service, directed the new film drama.

It is throbbing, vital drama that the new picture promises as entertainment, plus the essential meaning of this war and what it entails. The subject should never be forgotten, and "Wake Island," telling, as it does, the story in terms of human dramatic events will help see to it that it never shall happen again.

"Wake Island" brings to the screen a mighty piece of screen entertainment, and what with the able hands that have fashioned it, it will measure up to the immense task it must perform—to make plain its vital message and to be a picture of exceptional entertainment worth. From all accounts it is.

Certainly it has the qualities of really great screen fare. It's theme is unexcelled for stirring human drama. On that Pacific isle men outnumbered and outstripped in planes and guns, fought on against hopeless odds. Yet so fierce were their convictions and so great the inspiration of their loved ones, left behind somewhere, that they resisted the enemy for fourteen glorious, thunderous days.

"Wake Island" recapitulates in its story the whole stand, the sinking of a Jap cruiser by our aircraft, the many times invasion attempts were repelled, the emotions experienced by Marines and civilians as the battle was being fought.

"Wake Island" is definitely the picture of our times.

A color fun cartoon, "At The Dog Show," the Belle News of the World, McFarlane Twins and orchestra in a smart and an entertaining Sportlight film, precede the feature attraction.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Bombs Over Burma"
(First Belleville Showing)

Assigned to a dangerous mission by the Chief of the Chinese Intelligence Service, Anna May Wong gives a fine performance in the P.R.C. war drama, "Bombs Over Burma," due at the Capitol theatre on Sunday midnight.

The picture is packed with taut suspense which holds the audience to the very end, as Miss Wong in the guise of a school teacher, finally tracks down the Japanese spy who is sending the code messages that result in the bombing of supply trains bound for Chungking as they travel along the Burma Road.

Miss Wong starts her investigation as she boards a bus at the Burma border, driven by a young American, played superbly by Nedrick Young. In the party aboard the bus are Leslie Denison as Sir Roger Howe; Dennis Moore as an American traffic expert; Judith Gibson as the young daughter of an American surgeon in Chungking; and Dan Seymour as a Portuguese mechanic.

Stop at Monastery

That night the bus passengers put up at a wayside monastery in charge of a kindly monk, played by Noel Madison. A convoy is bombed to bits close by, showing that the Japs knew exactly when and where to strike. Young finds someone has stolen the distributor from his engine, so that the party will be forced to stay indefinitely. It is evident that someone in the group is the spy, giving the Japs information. For a time, Miss Wong suspects the monk, when she discovers that he operates a short wave station hidden in a room behind a large image of Buddha.

But the monk proves to her that he also is in the service of the Intelligence department. The uncovering of the spy comes with dramatic surprise. Here is a timely tale of current events in the war-torn Far East that will hold you breathless as it unfolds with a succession of surprises.

"The Westerner"

The added feature attraction depicts the heart quickening story of a country wild and young where a beautiful woman could set a man mad....and cattle man and settler disputed every foot of ground to the death! Emotions as fierce and unbridled as untamed country which bred this dare-devil race of men crowd through this stirring drama ....brought to you in spectacular grandeur starring Gary Cooper, Walter Brenan, Fred Stone and Doris Davenport. Like fire across the prairies, a great feud sweeps the plains of an era gone by!

Army Is Rested.

The 8th Army is rested and re-equipped.

Gen. Alexander, "the last man out of Dunkerque" in the 1940 withdrawal from France, is reputed to be one of the most pugnacious officers in the army.

Sturdily built, with a square face and tight lips, he is an Irishman whose slogan is "attack, attack, attack, even if you are on the defensive". At 45, he is the youngest major-general in the army.

Sent to Burma, he kept the Japanese at bay for four months in a remarkable fighting withdrawal over hundreds of miles of jungle country to India.

This is probably the first time in his military career that he has commanded land and air forces equal to or superior to the enemy forces in numbers.

His personal commander in the field in charge of the 8th army is the 54-year-old son of a Bishop, Lt.-Gen. B. L. Montgomery, a teetotaller, a non-smoker and a firm believer in Spartan methods of training.

Third Assault Launched.

The assault is the third launched by the Allies in North Africa since start of the war.

Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell first drove the Italians from Cyrenaica, eastern Libya, in an offensive launched in the fall of 1940.

Then Nov. 9, 1941, Sir Claude Auchinleck smashed westward from the Egyptian border past Bengazi before being driven back by Rommel's counter-offensive.

(Military opinion in London is that this time the 8th army will make every eort to wipe the German and Italian armies from Africa and clean up the Mediterranean.

(If the Mediterranean were reopened to Allied shipping it would save transport vessels thousands of miles of travel and simplify the problem of supplying forces in India.)

Heavy Aerial Action.

"The 8th Army, with strong air support, attacked last night," the communique said. "Fierce fighting developed and is continuing.

"Allied air forces during the night of Oct. 22-23 and yesterday continued their pressure on enemy landing groups in the forward area."

Eight enemy fighters were declared destroyed and many others damaged yesterday in this aerial action against the German-Italian forces on the El Alamein front.

Axis fighter-bombers continued their attacks over Malta with negligible results and three were destroyed, the communique said.

"From these and other operations," it was announced, "four of our aircraft failed to return, but one pilot is safe."

To the last gun!
To the last plane!
To the last man!
This is worth fighting for!

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

Stephen's Defeat

"Greetings!" Stephen said. "All alone?"

Judith tried to smile. It was difficult to pretend that nothing was wrong. "Yes, all alone."

"You look nice and cool." He came upon the porch and sat in the other white wicker chair opposite her. "Cigarette?"

"No, thanks."

He frowned as he glanced at the sky streaked with vivid twilight colors.

"You know, it's too bad we don't have daylight saving here."

She smiled. "You mean it would give you time to play a round of golf before dark."

He grinned. "Stop it. . . .Are we doing anything tonight? Movie or something?"

"Let's just go for a ride."

A ride through the warm summer night, her hair blowing back from her cool face, her mouth tight while Stephen told her of an amusing incident at the office that day. She thought, "please don't let him say anything about Quebec until I tell him."

"Couldn't we stop somewhere, Stephen?" She had never suggested it before.

"Anything you say."

He turned the car from the highway to a dark wide road and brought it to a stop on a bank overlooking a quiet river.

All the sounds of a summer night were in the air. Below small waves rippled to the white beach, and down the beach the lights from summer bungalows winked a welcome. On the river a brightly-illuminated excursion steamer sailed slowly.

For a few minutes they sat there seeing the lights and hearing the noises of the night. Then Stephen turned his head and looked at him. In his look were anxiety and waiting; in hers guilt and shame.

"Stephen, I'm not going on Saturday. That is, I'm—I'm going to meet you in Quebec."

His eyes narrowed and he frowned. "You're not going? Why not?"

"I've got to be in New York for a few days. I—"

"You mean you're going back to New York—to look for a job?" Before she could explain he turned his head away quickly and looked down on the river. One hand clenched the steering wheel. "I thought you'd do that sooner or later. That—that's just what I thought you'd do. I knew I didn't have a chance. I've been crazy about you from the very beginning. I never was about any other girl. I never could just play around. It seemed such a waste of time. Besides, I have what is probably a screwy idea that I wanted to keep myself for the girl I married. . .There was certain things a girl had to be. You were all of those things. You were—the best.

"Sounds sort of dumb' talking about it now. I'm not good at this romantic stuff. I feel a lot of things I can't say. I wanted to tell you all this before, but I suppose I was afraid of being turned down cold and that would finish our seeing each other. . . It hasn't been easy being with you a lot and not making love to you. I'm not—But, never mind. I won't go into that.

"I've been around with other girls, sure, but they were only a blind. I didn't want you to know how crazy I was about you. I stayed in Clinton because of you. I've worked with you in my mind." He chuckled, but it was a bitter chuckle directed to himself. "I knew you could never love a failure and that if a man didn't make good, you'd think he didn't have brains and ability and you could not love or live with a man who didn't have both."

"Stephen, I didn't—" This hurt, this hurt terribly.

"You didn't encourage me. Is that what you mean? No, you didn't. So why should I be sore at you? I'm not. I should have known that sooner or later you'd go back to New York and—maybe to the man who gave you that bracelet." He chuckled again, the same bitter chuckle.

"I kept hoping that sometime I'd see you without it. But you still wear it. You're wearing it now.

"Do you remember the day Dick was buried? I looked at you and—and it was as if you were—my wife. You see, I've been taught to have the utmost reverence for that word 'wife'." He took a deep breath. "The joke is on me, I suppose, but I don't in the least want to start laughing."

It was as though he were offering his heart, an honest heart with no adornments, no lies, no secrets. . .Judith thought, "I am going back to New York—to stay. I can't tell him about Max now . . .not after what he has said to me. I can't bring Max into this. He doesn't belong."

Stephen said, "You don't have to meet us in Quebec, Judith. I'm not going. Harriet and Larry and Katherine and Ralph will have fun. I'll go up to Lake George. There's a gang going up."

Mary Anderson's "gang."

"Will you take me home now, Stephen?"

He nodded. "Glad to."

The ride back was almost unendurable. They said nothing and she felt his hurt keenly his drawing away from her. She felt that she had come to the end of a good book she did not wish to finish.

The Barth home was dark. They walked up the path as they had so often on happier occasions. On the porch she turned to him.

He spoke first. "I won't come in Judith. It would be sort of silly to sit around and talk." He smiled. "I hope you'll be very happy."

He held out his hand and she took it and held it. She did not want to let go.

"Stephen, I've had luck and happiness, knowing you. People say such trite things when they are saying good-bye." Her throat ached. "Let's make it brief and-"

His mouth pulled at one corner. "And sweet?"

"I don't want you to go, but I know I've no right to keep you."

"Don't worry about me. I'll be okay. I shouldn't have said."

"You said it very well."

"I thought we were going to make it brief. Well. . . good-bye, Judith."

"Good-bye, Stephen."

She stood on the porch and watched him go, wondering whether she were crying because she was sorry for him or sorrier for herself. She continued to stand there long after the new car had driven away—when she entered the house it was to pack only the things she would need in New York.

The next day Judith worked in a kind of daze, and in the evening had dinner with her parents. The cruise was one subject they avoided and though they tried to keep the table conversation pleasant, she was conscious of their anxiety and disapproval.

"I've decided to go to New York tonight," she announced quietly.

"I'll take you to the station," her father said.

They walked in the living-room until she came downstairs and she noticed a quickening in their conversaton as she came in the room, wearing a navy silk coat over a print frock and a navy hat with an upturned brim. She thought then, "I'll have to call Emily and Tim. I won't see them either."

They wouldn't ask her any questions and her mother tried pitifully to be cheerful as they rode to the station.

"I called on our new neighbor today, Nicholas. Really, she is the strangest woman. From out West somewhere and says exactly what she thinks. Brutally frank about everything, but I had a feeling she'd be the first to send you something if you were sick or in need. She said my new hat was atrocious for a woman of my age. I had to agree with her. Judith, don't you think that modern furniture is bad in a colonial house?"

"I've often thought it was, but I know it's done."

It seems to me to be more fitting in an apartment than in a house. I don't suppose I'll ever get used to it. I always feel I'm on a movie set. Nicholas, did you speak to Harry today about coming to dinner next week? I'd have called him, but I knew you were at lunch with him today."

"We made it for Wednesday."

"That's fine. Thursday is my Red Cross day and Bessie is going to keep an eye on the children. Things have changed since the last war when I worked with the Red Cross. Really, one should know first aid and particularly people with young children. Harriet is getting a great deal out of it."

The Clinton station on a summer night. On Christmas night, while she was thinking of Max, Stephen's arms in his great brown coat had taken her eagerly and he had kissed her awkwardly.

"You haven't much time, Judith," her father said.

They waited beside the tracks while she bought her ticket.

When she joined them her mother said, smiling, "Makes me want to go away, Nicholas. You know, one of the things that impressed me in the little travelling I've done is that from about 6 to 7 at night the kitchens are lighted. America's eating time." She turned to Judith and put her arms around her and kissed her. "You'll let us know when you're coming home, dear?"

"Of course. My plans are." She had no plans. She knew only that she was seeing Max tomorrow.

"Yes, yes, I know."

Judith turned to her father. She had to stand on the toes of the small blue pumps to put her arms around his shoulders. "Good-bye, Dad."

"Good-bye, honey. We'll be waiting to hear from you."

She thought, why don't they say it? Why are they being so kind to me?"

"You'll hear from me in a few days."

"Need any money?"

"No."

He patted her shoulder affectionately. "You never do. You're an independent brat. Always have been. Run along."

Judith did not glance back. She couldn't. She knew too well how they looked.

REPRESENTATIONS ARE MADE TO U.S. ON 'TIME' STORY

Defence Department Says Report in 'Time' 'Contains Number Of Of Falsehoods'

PUBLISHER'S STATEMENT

Ottawa, Oct. 24 (CP).—The government, in a statement issued through the Defence Department last night, replied to what it called "misleading and damaging inaccuracies", in a report published by Time Magazine on disturbances at the Bowmanville, Ont., prisoner of war camp and said representations had been made by Canada to the United States regarding publication of the Time report.

The statement said the report published in the United States news magazine "contains a number of falsehoods", and it specified four which were described as "the more important".

It denied that tear gas or any other kind of gas was used in quelling the disorder which broke out Oct. 10 over shackling of German prisoners held at the Bowmanville camp. The Time article said that "after 35 minutes of high pressure water and tear gas", the Nazis (who had barricaded themselves in their barracks) "marched out smartly in military formation".

The government statement denied that machine guns had been used, saying that only four "warning" rifle shots were fired. One of those richocheted and wounded a prisoner slightly in the leg. Time's story said "a couple of tentative machine-gun blasts were fired" when the Nazis tried walking out with a Canadian captain whom they had captured in front of them.

Report On Rations Denied.

The statement denied that prisoners' food rations had been stopped. Time said "the prisoners had gone two days without food" on Canadian Thanksgiving Day, (Monday, Oct. 12).

The statement also denied that 126 of the prisoners had been sent to another camp. Time said the Veteran's Guard of Canada, which polices the camp, managed to snatch 126 of Bowmanville's Nazis and send them to another camp to be bound."

The Defence Department statement said the representations to the United States Government were made necessary by the "distortions and inaccuracies" of the Time report, "which will not only provide the enemy with material for propaganda, but may also be used by the German authorities as an excuse for further ill-treatment of Canadian and British prisoners of war in their hands."

In Washington, the Canadian legation announced last night that the Canadian Government has made representations to the United States Government regarding Time Magazine's report. It was understood a note was delivered to the State Department setting forth the official view on the censorship regulations involved and seeking an investigation of the source of the Time story.

Embarrassment Regretted.

In New York, P. I. Prentice, publisher of Time Magazine, said "Time very sincerely regrets the embarrassment its story has apparently caused the Canadian Government. We certainly would not have published it if we had felt that this uncensored mailed report was in fact an international military secret."

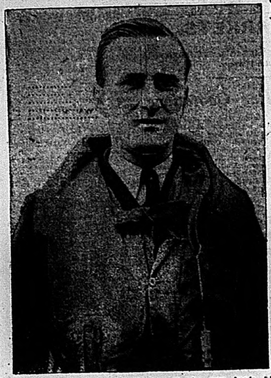
Veteran of Battle of Britain Now Chasing Huns in Egypt



Suadron Leader Paul B. Pitcher, of Montreal, who now heads his third R. C. A. F. command in the Middle East.

R. C. A. F. Photo

Editors—Note—This is the latest in the series of biographical sketches on commanding officers of R. C. A. F. squadrons overseas.

In the land of the Pharoahs a Canadian fighter pilot, veteran of the battle of Britain, "carries on".

Squadron Leader Paul B. Pitcher, youthful Montreal lawyer, finds himself in a distinctive class, as he heads a Canadian unit in a second major air offensive. He is one of the few "originals" of the famous No. 1 Canadian Fighter Squadron, which saw extensive action in the Battle of Britain, still remaining in an active theatre of war.

One by one, survivors of that squadron, who donned air force blue at the very start of hostilities, have been withdrawn from "ops" in England. The majority have returned to Canada to form new squadrons for home defence, or utilize their wide combat experience in administrative posts. Pitcher, Squadron Leader Vaughan Corbett, D. F. C., and Flight Lieut. Bev. Christmas, Montrealers all, were the last of the No. 1 'originals" to remain "operational" overseas.

Corbett relinquished command of his Canadian Hurri-bomber unit to Squadron Leader Bob Morrow last December, and with Pitcher returned to Canada on temporary duty. They were back to England before winter was spent, but Corbett was designated as Director of Air Staff, RCAF Overseas. Now Morrow also is back, but only on leave, and was recently married.

Christmas in the meantime had travelled to the Middle East, and was flying fighters in tropical setting. Times have changed for him, also. He went on to South Africa as instructor at an Operational Training Unit, later returning to Canada.

Has Been Around

Paul Pitcher has been around a lot since that fateful day in September, 1939, when Hitler threw the world in turmoil. He was a civilian aviator in those days, and part time serviceman with the 115 auxiliary Squadron in Montreal.

War has taken him to England twice. His fighter planes have given him a bird's eye view of many parts of the United Kingdom, the sky battle-ground above the English Channel and the North Sea, Northern France and the Low Countries. His duties have taken him to peaceful Bermuda. He has flown the Atlantic, seen Cape Town, South Africa. Now he flies over the sandy deserts, the blue Mediterranean, the land of pyramids and Sphinx. He has been around a lot— and seen a lot of the grimmer side of life.

Convocation at McGill University in the Spring of 1937 hardly indicated the life he was soon to follow and a legal career on St. James Street was rudely interrupted.

Squadron Leader Pitcher heads his third command as he leads his Royal Canadian Air Force Squadron in the Middle East. His first came comparatively early, when he took over from Squadron Leader, now Wing Commander Gordon R. McGregor, DFC., as commanding officer of No. 1 Canadian Fighter Squadron. A siege of pneumonia and pleurisy forced his retirement temporarily, and Flight Lieut., now Squadron Leader, Christmas stepped into the vacancy.

In July of last year he was given the task of forming a new RCAF fighter squadron. He led it until late December, when he returned to Canada for a brief spell. On arrival in England in March he found a new posting awaiting him. He was given command of another Canadian squadron, with almost immediate prospect of heading for the Middle East.

There were familiar faces in that squadron, particularly his two flight commanders, Flight Lieut. W. H. Pentland, Calgary, and Flight Lieut. F. B. "Brad," Foster, Montreal. There were many strange faces too, youngsters who had come up through the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, enthusiasts all, aching to come to grips with the Hun.

Cool Under Fire

"He's not only a mighty good flier, but he is an exceptionally good leader," an old flying comrade of Pitcher's declared. "He's particularly cool under fire. Paul is thinking all the time, which is a prime requisite in these days when formation work is absolutely essential. His boys, in addition to being very fond of him, have extreme confidence in him, and give him his due respect as squadron commander."

Old companions of No. 1 Fighter Squadron days tell of the time when Pitcher received a "bawling out" for saving his plane from destruction. He was on the carpet for not baling out.

Lands Crippled Plane

It occurred during the Battle of Britain when Pitcher and Squadron mates were engaging Nazi fighters in the Dover area. His Hurricane was badly shot up by machine gun fire, puncturing the fuel tanks. His wings were dripping wet with petrol, and fire seemed certain any moment. His logical move was to bail out—but not Pitcher. He maintained control of his plane, and by brilliant manoeuvring brought it safely to land.

"The miracle is that he did not catch fire. It should have fired when he throttled back" declared his friend Vaughan Corbett. "There were 'bags' of petrol dripping from his wings, and he put up an exceptionally good show in getting that plane down without further damage."

Pitcher, who borders the 30-year mark, was born in Montreal, where his wife, the former Miss Josephine MacDougal, and young child, reside. He was educated at Trinity College School, and later entered McGill University, graduating with a degree in law in 1937.

Ancestor Of The Machine Gun

(From a bulletin of the Smithsonian Institute)

For, at least two-thirds of human history the boy was the prime weapon of warfare and the chase. When white men first came to the new world the value of guns as military weapons compared to the fast and silent bow was still in dispute. About the only advantage of the musket was that it would propel a missile farther, but it was little more accurate, was noisy and cumbersome and required longer to load and discharge. But the bow has undergone remarkable development in many lands.

The most elaborate development was the crossbow. It was a bow combined with a stock, like the stock of a gun, and had a trigger release. This was an important weapon with the Roman legions.

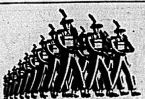
As the centuries passed, it became more and more powerful and more and more difficult to handle. As least in its later stages, a crank and windlass were necessary to flex it.

The weapon began to lose its military significance at the battle of Cressy in 1346, when Venetian cross-bowmen, the best in Europe were slaughtered by the English yeomen armed with the longbow lighter and easier to handle.

The Chinese repeating crossbow was the forerunner of the machine gun. First mentioned in Chinese literature about 1600, it was last used in actual battle in the Sino-Japanese war of 1895. It was equipped with a magazine containing 20 arrows and a stock of two grooves, so that two arrows could be fired at once.

The stock could be reloaded immediately by pushing forward and pulled halfway back to restring the bow. Pulled all the way back it released the trigger and fired the two arrows.

It was much lighter and easier to handle than the European crossbow, although still the strength of a powerful man was necessary to manipulate the handle. It was a most efficient weapon when used simultaneously by a large number of men.



COLUMN OF THREE'S

The health of the "gentlemen in battledress" is one of the most important phases under consideration at all times by the Canadian Army.

Once a civilian enlists in the Army he is given the best of medical care. He is confined to hospital even with a common cold. This is a precautionary measure, for sometimes such a minor ailment may be the start of a more serious illness. It is the conviction of Army medical authorities that prevention is better than cure.

In order that the soldiers' health may be better looked after, a call for 800 physicians has been issued. Many of these are required in Military District No. 3.

Already Canada's armed forces have in their ranks 20 per cent of the medical men of the Dominion, and the Army itself is seeking another 15 per cent to ensure and safeguard the health of every individual soldier.

These physicians will be enlisted into the Army through the cooperation of the Canadian Medical Association. They will be absorbed into the Army without endangering civilian health by depleting the number of doctors needed to maintain public health at its present high standard.

Graduating medical students are offered a spendid opportunity to serve their country in this manner.

While some will be placed in district depots to examine recruits to ensure their fitness for active services, many will be placed in base hospitals to take care of those sent back from the front lines as casualties, while others will themselves see action and will administer to the wounded during the heat of battle

No matter whether it is administering to the wounded in battle, or tending the sick and injured in base or military hospitals at home, physicians have a great service to perform. Not only can they relieve pain and suffering, but by a kind word and consideration here and there can do much to keep high the morale of Canadian soldiers

No Loose Talk

The sharp ears of enemy agents are everywhere, and M. D. 3 headquarters draw attention to the fact that the seriousness of loose talk cannot be emphasized enough.

Train travel by soldiers has become greatly increased with the conservation of rubber and gasolihe, and as a result large concentrations of men in uniform are now found in railway coaches. . . an ideal place for a saboteur or the member of an espionage ring.

Discussion of military operations or equipment, or anything pertaining to army life, is taboo. A careless statement to a soldier friend may cause the death of hundreds of soldiers elsewhere, among whom may be a brother or a very dear friend.

Great Comradeship

With the crossing of the border between Canada and the United States made easier for members of all branches of the service in both countries, a great comradeship has sprung up between the "Canucks" and the "Doughboys".

No matter where the Canadian soldier travels in the country south of the border he is received with welcome arms, not only by the U. S. Army, Navy and Air Force personnel, but by civilians alike.

Non-commissioned officers and privates of units stationed in Military District No. 3, who have spent short furloughs in the U. S., have been loud in their praise of the treatment received during their visits.

Four N. C. O.'s of the Canadian Army on a recent visit to Syracuse, N. Y., were unable to spend any of their own money, except in one instance. They met some U. S. Army Air Corps personnel who took them in tow and found them billets at an air station, where they were given meals and taken on a tour.

British makers of paint spraying equipment have built a machine with which three persons can paint 5000 shells in eight hours, doing the work of 120 persons in one-fiftieth of the time.

A Philadelphian has invented a strap made of a rubber compound to ground accumulations of static electricity in an automobile and eliminate the noise made by chains dragged for the purpose.

Cossacks Are Old Fighters

Long Tradition as Men of War Goes Back to Antiquity—This Year They Have Been Fighting For, and Losing Their Don Homes as Nazi Armored Hordes Press on

(By E. R. Schaaffter in Kansas City Star)

The Cossacks of the Don have been fighting for, and losing, their own homes this summer as the armored hordes of Germany pressed on toward Stalingrad. How many Cossacks have died fighting on the roads to Stalingrad, no man can say. They have died as Cossack men have always died, fighting with a fierce zest and pride.

Last winter Cossack horsemen harried the half-frozen Nazis on the plains around Moscow. On their shaggy ponies they swept down on disabled tanks, and sabred such of the gunners as their rifles had not reached. This summer the Germans with great losses have cut their way through the Cossacks' own country along the Don River.

Pleasant Land

"In recent years," reports the London Times, "it has been a pleasant land to visit. The villages are built in the traditional Cossack fashion, with garden around each house and with broad green meads instead of the usual dusty village street. Such a village may stretch for more than a mile. The low whitewashed houses seem always clean and cool below the shadows of the acacias; and fearsome dogs — the Cossack household pets — leap at their rusty chains to rend the passer-by."

From the days of the Roman Empire the plains north of the Black Sea have been a battleground. The Romans, seeking to hold the known world in check, were willing to let the wild riders whom they called Scythians hold those Black Sea plains so long as they could keep them out of more settled Roman lands. The Cossacks doubtless are descendants of thos Scythians, with various admixtures of fighting blood. They call themselves the Free People, and they declare that when Russian nobles first began to reduce their farmers and villagers to slavery, the bolder Russians went south and became Cossacks.

Genghis Khan

When Genghis Khan and his Mongols surged into Europe, they found the Cossacks waiting to dispute their path. When the Turks came butchering in the name of the prophet Mohammed, the Cossacks again were fighting. They fought early; they fought late; they fought Tartars and Turks. They fought the Poles and Russians who sought them as frontier guards and afterward forgot their promises to the Cossacks when danger was less pressing. Soon or late they fought most of Europe and a lot of Asia.

In the brief intervals when they were not fighting, the Cossacks of 400 years ago feasted, drank, made love with equal vigor. Six hundred and forty Cossacks of the Don set out to explore and conquer Siberia in 1579, presented it to Czar Ivan the Terrible as a peace offering for having disturbed the peace along the Volga River. Siberia is almost a quarter of the habitable globe.

The Cossacks of the Don first fought for Ivan the Terrible about 1551, helping him to destroy the Tartar power which was a constant menace to the peace of Russia. In return for fighting, they were granted the right to establish their own military settlements and fortresses. There was a time when the Cossacks called themselves the republic of the Don.

Fought Poles

Cossacks who lived along the Dnieper River fought for, and afterward against, the nobles of Poland, which, at the beginning to the sixteenth century, was a stronger kingdom than Russia. These fighters called themselves the Free Cossacks of the Ukraine. When the Turks did not invade their country, the Cossacks often sent raiding parties in boats over the Black Sea to Turkish territory.

Although education was rare among the Cossacks and much of their history has come down to us in ballads, sung over wine cups and in the blaze of camp fires, enough has survived to prove the Cossacks were masters of a vigorous language.

In 1675 a Tartar Khan of the Crimea attacked the Cossacks in one of their own strongholds, helped by Turkish troops lent by the Sultan Mahmoud III. The Tartars and Turks expected to find all the Cossacks drunk and overstuffed with food, for it was Christmas time. But at the last minute, the Cossacks discovered the enemy outside their stronghold. Sending their best marksmen to the loopholes, they had the rest load and reload guns and pass them to the marksmen. The Cossacks mowed down the Turks and Tartars, and they fled.

Write to Khan

The Khan and the sultan attempted to smooth the matter over by correspondence. To the khan the Cossacks replied:

To the Khan of Tartary, Our Unworthy Neighbor:

We the Cossack troops would never have conceived the idea of entering upon this war had you not commenced hostilities. You have sent against us (what treachery) not only your savage Tartars, but also the troops of that old fool, the Sultan. Had it not been for the intervention or our constant Friend, the great Lord Jesus, we might all have perished in our sleep. Now since your disloyal ways have brought upon you disaster—refrain from troubling us. Otherwise we will treat you after our fashion, and that of our noble Cossacks ancestors, by beating down your own gates.

To the sultan the victorious Cossacks wrote:

Thou Turkish Devil:

Brother and Companion of Lucifer himself! Who dares call himself Lord of the Christmas—but is not! Babylonish cock! Brewer of Jerusalem! Goat-keeper of the herds of Alexandria! Swineherd of the Greater and Lesser Egypt. Armenian Sow and Tartar Goat! Insolent Unbeliever! May the devil take you! The Cossacks refuse every demand and petition that you now make to them—or that you may in future invent! Thank us for condescending to answer you!

BRITISH BATTER GAPS IN ROMMEL'S DESERT LINE

Overrun Two Axis Lines in One Sector In 2-Mile Advance

Enemy Unable To Dislodge Troops From the Areas Already Gained

HEAVY AIR ASSAULTS

(By DON WHITEHEAD)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Cairo, Oct. 26 (AP) — Pressing its attack, Britain's Army of the Nile beat off German and Italian attempts to close the gaps driven into the El Alamein line, and moved infantry, tanks and mobile artillery forward today under strong aerial cover for the expected test of strength with Field Marshal Rommel's main tank forces.

Much of the battle still was being fought in the air where yesterday's Allied bag was seven Axis planes.

R.A.F., United States and South African bombers and fighter-bombers joined in an unceasing assault upon Rommel's massing tanks, his lines of supply and his grimly-beset defence system in the 40-mile battle belt between the Qattara salt marshes and the sea.

Penetrate Defence System

Battlefront dispatches indicated that the 8th. Army had penetrated well into the Axis advance system of minefields, barbed wire barriers and strongpoints and were fanning out toward his main defence centres.

(Cairo dispatches published in London newspapers said two Axis defence lines had been overrun in one sector in a two-mile advance, half way through the enemy defences.)

A communique said armored units on both sides had been involved in preliminary engagements and reported that "the enemy was unable to dislodge our troops from the areas already gained."

"Up to 6 p.m., yesterday," the war bulletin announced, "1,450 German and Italian prisoners had been taken."

U.S. Forces in Battle

"Black Scorpions" of the U.S. air forces operating from a desert base, reported shooting down four and damaging three Axis aircraft over the El Alamein battlefield as the Germans and Italians sent up more planes in an attempt to ward off Allied bombing and strafing. Only one Allied plane was lost in the sharp dogfights all the way from 16,000 feet down to 1,500.

(Fighting French forces with the 8th. Army were described in London as the largest French force yet to participate in the North African operations. They are commanded by Gen. De Larminat and include Syrian reinforcements under Brig.-Gen. Pierre Koenig, who commanded the Fighting French stand at Bir Hacheim Oasis during the German offensive which drove the Allies out of Libya earlier this year.)

A communique from British headquarters this morning placed heavy emphasis on the aerial blows being delivered against the enemy and declared that Rommel's attempts to close the gaps in his lines had failed.

"The enemy was unable to dislodge our troops from the areas already gained," the bulletin said laconically.

Axis air activity increased somewhat yesterday as Rommel's fliers sought to ward off the terrific bombardment to which his ground troops were being subjected, but Allied pilots had a successful day, shooting down seven enemy planes and damaging many more, headquarters said. An Axis supply ship also was reported bombed and sunk in Tobruk harbor.

The communique mentioned only minor clashes between armored units, bearing out dispatches from the front indicating that the main armored strength of the opposing armies was not yet engaged.

15 JAP SHIPS SUNK, DAMAGED IN RABAUL HARBOR

100,000 Tons of Shipping Sunk or Destroyed in Three-Night Toll

NO ALLIED LOSSES

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Oct. 26 (CP) — Flying fortresses smashing at a concentration of Japanese ships in the harbor of Rabaul, New Britain, have sunk a gunboat and possibly destroyed three merchantmen for a three-night toll of 100,000 tons of shipping destroyed or damaged, it was announced today.

Fifteen ships have been either sunk or badly damaged in the three nights of attacks on the harbor.

In the latest raid, a communique said, 17 tons of bombs were dropped on the Rabaul area, sinking the gunboat with a direct hit and leaving three merchantmen totalling 12,000 tons listing badly or on fire.

"This brings the total tonnage by actual observation completely destroyed, or badly damaged, in this harbor during the last three nights to approximately 80,000 tons," the communique said. "At least 20,000 tons in addition are believed to have received more or less serious damage."

No Allied Losses

There were no Allied losses.

In another section aimed at hampering Japanese efforts to reconquer the Solomon Islands, Allied airmen went to Kavieng, New Ireland, where a Japanese four-engine bomber was destroyed on the ground. Fires started among supply and fuel dumps were visible for 90 miles, returning pilots said.

Other bombers raided an airdrome at Kupang, Netherlands Timor, starting huge fires.

Fighting continued in the Owen Stanley range of New Guinea but the general situation was reported unchanged.

Allied attack planes swept up and down the trail north of Isurava in support of ground action.

A spokesmen said the Japanese continued their determined resistance from prepared positions near Alola, less than nine miles south of Kokoda, Japanese base.

Alola is still high in the Owen Stanley Mountains and short of the dropping-off point where the trail falls sharply toward Kokoda.

Hand-to-Hand Fight Expels Nazis From Factory Property In The City

(By HENRY C. CASSIDY)
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Moscow, Oct. 26 (AP)—Red Army troops held fast in blackened Stalingrad today as the Germans launched another assault after furious artillery preparation and in a fierce engagement which at times developed into hand-to-hand fighting expelled the Nazi forces from a factory property into which they penetrated yesterday, the mid-day communique said.

German infantry moved into the assault in a factory area with tanks leading the way but the Russians reported that their artillery fire decimated and put to flight an entire regiment of infanry.

The Russians then launched their own attack to drive the Germans from the ground they had gained the day before.

Reports from the front northwest of Stalingrad continued to be favorable, the mid-way communique reporting that a number of German blockhouses and trenches were occupied, five tanks destroyed and a company of enemy infantry knocked out. It is in his area that the Red army is trying to bore into the flank of the Germans to ease the pressure on Stalingrad.

Canada Thanked by Ernest Bevin For Help in War Effort of Allies

By SCOTT YOUNG
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 26 (CP). — Labor Minister Ernest Bevin, today told British and Canadian newspapermen at a press conference for Humphrey Mitchell, Canadian labor minister, that Canada has been "a tremendous help in the war effort of the United Nations".

"I do not think there ever has been a time in history," he said, "when the productive manpower of two countries has been dovetailed as closely as are those of Canada and Britain now."

Britain's labor minister's remarks followed a brief review by Mitchell of Canada's war effort, and a question and answer period during which British newsmen sought and got details on the subject in which they showed intense interest—Canada's wage and prices-control policies.

Mitchell gave an account of Canada's accomplishments while Bevin sat at his left, elbows on the table, a cigaret drooping from the exact centre of his mouth, listening intently.

Mitchell explained the recent centralization of Canadian manpower control in the labor department and said thanks were due Bevin for technical advice in setting up the new structure. He said this year Canada is spending more on the war than she did in the entire First Great War.

As he was saying, "Canadians are in this war to the same degree and extent that you are" the alert sounded outside.

The all clear sounded as the conference ended, after Bevin paid tribute to "Canada's quick, co-operative response to any requests." He said:

"I do not want the contribution merely measured in terms of quantity because sometimes that means a vast amount of material which is unusable.

"Weight and resiliency of Canadian output in the last two years—particularly during 1940 had not many friends—were a salvation to use. Canada has played a great part in the equipment of the Middle East Army and the forces of this country.

"Now we have lost certain raw materials, Canada is a savior to us by moving men about to increase production of vital metals like nickel. An immence help not only to us but to all the allied nations in a period of great need.

"I feel this thanks not only comes from me and the British government but from the whole British people."

16 Persons Killed In Ferry Command Crash Near Montreal

By JACK BRAYLEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, Oct. 26—(CP)—Sixteen persons were killed this morning in the flaming, twisted wreckage of a giant Ventura aircraft which exploded after plunging to earth on a farm in the north-west district of Montreal Island.

The crew of two and fourteen others, believed to include R.C.A.F. personnel and contractors' employees, died in the crash of the aircraft, announced officially by the Royal Air Force Ferry Command which operated it.

The crash came at 10.20 a.m., E.D.T., as the plane, a "local" used for trips to Labrador, was flying two and a half miles from the Montreal airport at Dorval.

All Died Instantly

The official announcement, reporting that all died "instantaneously," said names of the crew and passengers would be made public as soon as next-of-kin were notified.

The ill-starred aircraft plunged into the ground on the farm of Albert Laframbois, 200 yards from the Cote De Liesse road which connects the airport with the north-west districts of the City of Montreal.

Terrific Explosion

An explosion described by witnesses as "terrific" roared through the air as the plane hit into a ploughed field beneath a tree. Several explosions followed and a great sheet of smoke and flame shot up from the crumbled wreckage.

Ambulances and fire apparatus from the nearby airport screamed to the scene within minutes after the crack-up but flames already were turning the massive aircraft into a heap of smoundering, smoking embers.

A heavy police guard was thrown about the farm and kept everyone, including newspapermen, at a distance.

On Way to Newfoundland

Pierre Paul Allard, 20 year old worker on a nearby farm who was first to reach the crash, said ferry command officials told him the plane had just taken off from the Dorval Airport and was on its way to Newfoundland.

Allard said that apparently something was wrong with the aircraft because "it roared over the barn I was painting, in a lopsided fashion." He added that it was "very low" and it crashed at a "terrific speed" into the LaFrambois farm, only a short distance from the farm buildings.

"There was a terrific explosion, followed by other explosions and a gigantic cloud of flames and smoke," said Allard.

"As I ran across the field, bits of scattered plane fell near me. I couldn't get very close to the plane, though because the heat was so terrific."

Nosed Into Field

Allard and other neighborhood farmers who had reached the scene got in touch with ferry command officials.

Mrs. Alfred St. Germain, on whose farm Allard was working, said the plane nosed into the field in its crash on the Laframbois farm.

The official announcement follows:-

"The R.A.F. ferry command announces with regret the crash of a Ventura aircraft carrying passengers in which 16 people, including the crew of two were instantaneously killed.

"The plane crashed 200 yards from the Cote De Liesse road about 2 1-2 miles from the Montreal airport at Dorval at 10:20 a.m. (E.S.T.).

"The names of the crew and passengers will be published as soon as the next-of-kin are notified."

R. A. F. INFLICTS UNTOLD DAMAGE ON ITALY'S PLANTS

Supply Centres for Rommel's Desert Army Suffer Considerably

VICHY PROTESTS

London, Oct. 26—(CP) — At a cost of only eight bombers, the R.A.F. was reported today to have done untold damage to war industries and supply centres in Northern Italy in a smashing new offensive in which home-based aircraft struck across the towering Alps four times in three days.

Capping the attacks was a heavy assault Saturday night on Milan, site of the Caproni bomber works, where four-motored bombers unloaded a vast weight of bombs—including two-ton "block busters."

Pilots who participated in the Milan raid said that buildings in Italy's second largest city "went flying" as stick after stick of bombs fell on the targets.

Only a few hours earlier a large force of Lancasters had raided the same city in broad daylight — the first daylight bombing expedition against Northern Italy since the beginning of the war. Canadian fighters formed part of the escort on this raid.

Genoa and Turin were bombed Friday night for the second night in succession. Savona, 25 miles west of Genoa, was attacked simultaneously.

While Britain was assessing results of these assaults the Vichy government said it was filing a

Naval Supports Incessantly Hammered by U. S. Bombers

JAP CRUISER HIT

Washington, Oct. 26 (AP)—Despite incessant pounding of their naval supports, the Japanese have landed fresh troops on Guadalcanal and are hammering determinedly at American defences.

The United States navy department reported last night that enemy troops, using tanks and heavy artillery barrage, threw themselves against the western lines five times Friday night and Saturday morning. Each time they were hurled back.

The first four attacks were repulsed by army and marine corps troops and artillery batteries, which destroyed five enemy tanks. There was no mention of American tanks in action.

The fifth onslaught, early Saturday morning, was broken up by aircraft and artillery, with loss of one United States plane.

Yesterday morning additional enemy troops were landed from transports on the northwest end of Guadalcanal, the navy reported, adding:

"No amplifying report on these operations has been received."

Subscriptions Now Nearing Halfway Mark In Victory Loan Campaign

SUBSCRIBERS UP

Ottawa, Oct. 26 (CP).—National headquarters of Canada's third Victory Loan today reported a number of large subscriptions as the drive entered its second week and neared the half-way mark of the $750,000,000 minimum objective.

But there was no new cumulative total in today's statement for the press.

Total subscriptions at the close of Saturday's business were $312,410,900 it was announced last night. The next total will be made public tomorrow.

Saturday's receipts were $53,642,850, from 71,254 subscribers. The total number of subscribers at the end of last week—first week of a three-week drive—was 331,229, which included 53,926 employee subscriptions under the payroll savings plan for a total of $5,100,000.

More Subscribers.

After making allowance for differences in the reporting system and conversions included in the last loan, headquarters estimated that at the end of Saturday's business the third Victory Loan had 25,000 more subscribers and roughly $50,000,000 more cash than at the end of the first week of the second Victory Loan.

Large subscriptions reported today included $12,000,000 from the Great-West Life Assurance Co. of Winnipeg and subscription from Newfoundland where the Newfoundland Savings Bank of St. John's subscribed $200,000. For the third loan a canvass is being made both in Newfoundland and the British Isles among Canadians temporarily resident there, including the armed forces.

The subscription was signed late Saturday of the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. and the C.P.R. Employees' Pension Fund of $12,500,000.

Chairman's Comment

Commenting on results of the campaign to date, G. W. Spinney, chairman of the National War Finance Committee, said:

"The dollar total for the first week can be regarded with moderate satisfaction, but no more than moderate satisfaction.

"From the number of subscribers, and the classifications into which they fall, it is apparent that working men and women are responding more rapidly than in the earlier stages of the last campaign. The average payroll savings plan subscription is aroun[illegible]95.

"While this response is pleasing, there is a long way to go yet.

"It is also noticeable that subscriptions from corporations and institutions which are generally shrewd in their investments, are somewhat increased. The larger proportion of the increased returns over the comparative period of the last loan reflects these increased corporate investments.

Many Stories Told of Deeds of Valor Of Canadian Airmen Overseas

Ottawa, Oct. 26 (CP).—Deeds of valor performed by Canadian airmen overseas which "warrant great honor but because of one reason or another cannot come under the limelight of official recognition," are recounted in an R.C.A.F. announcement released here today.

In none of the accounts were names of the men involved made public.

In one instance, the announcement said, the commanding officer and engineering officer of a "certain Canadian bomber squadron in England" dashed out to a burning bomber to assist the crew to escape before the bombs, still hanging on the plane's belly, exploded.

Engine trouble had forced the pilot to return to his base. When he landed, the faulty engine burst into flames, and the aircraft was soon ablaze.

"The pilot calmly taxied the burning plane as far away from the station buildings as possible, and then he and the crew scrambled out and ran for it. Meantime, the commanding officer and the engineering officer, witnessing the accident from the control tower, grabbed a car and tore off to the scene.

"In the darkness, they passed the crew without seeing them. The bomber was well alight when they reached it, but despite the heat and flames, and the danger of the bombs exploding, they satisfied themselves that the plane was empty. Then they ran for it. As they raced away the exploding bombs threw them on their faces.

Another hero of a different kind, the announcement said, was a rear gunner who was always sick in the air, but who was so determined to play his part in the war that he had carefully concealed his malady.

It was not until after his seventh operational trip that the medical officer of the station where the Canadian squadron was based became suspicious. Fellow members of the air gunner's crew were unaware of his failing.

"It is bad enough," the R.C.A.F. said, "to go on a bombing trip feeling fit and well. To go up with the foreknowledge that one is inevitable going to be ill as well—and air sickness is a worse form of seasickness—requires a courage which is difficult to assess.

Canton Airdrome Also Damaged By Powerful Raid

Japanese Conquerors of British Crown Colony Surprised By Suddenness

MANY FIRES STARTED

Chungking, Oct. 26 (AP)—United States army air force bombers struck at Hong Kong early today for the second straight day and followed up with an attack on the White Cloud airdrome near Canton, it was announced.

The north point power station in Hong Kong was destroyed in this morning's attack, a communique from Lt.-Gen. Joseph W. Stillwell's headquarters said, as all bombs landed in the target area.

In the raid later on the White Cloud airdrome which is northeast of Canton, the war bulletin said, many fires were started and a heavy explosion was noted.

The Japanese attempted to intercept the bombers but both missions were accomplished without loss of a single plane.

Bombers Protected

Medium bombers protected by fighters scattered high-explosive and incendiary bombs among the warehouses and ships in Hong Kong yesterday, surprising the Japanese conquerors of the British Crown colony with the greatest raid yet executed by the China air task force.

Those arraigned were:

Patrick T. Lynch, well-known Montreal sports promoter and president and general manager of Engine Works and Trading Limited.

Patrick D. Lynch, 21, his son, who was production manager of the firm until his enlistment in the Canadian Army recently.

Group Captain, W. D. Van Vliet, Dies in Ottawa

Ottawa, Oct. 26 (CP).—Wilbert Denison Van Vliet, officer commanding No. 110 Army Co-operation Squadron—when it became the first R.C.A.F. unit sent overseas in this war, died in hospital at Victoria last night, it was announced here today.

A former football and hockey player, Group Capt. Van Vliet was prominently known in Winnipeg and Ottawa before he went overseas in January, 1940. He was 39 years old.

It was believed here his death was due to a heart condition.

Went Overseas In '39.

The 110th Squadron went overseas to be the eyes of the army and its commander, appointed to that post in December, 1939, did not go overseas merely to direct operations.

"Certainly I will be in the air," said the former north-country pilot who joined the R.C.A.F. in 1926.

His ancestors helped settle New York when it was known as New Amsterdam—and Van Vliet himself was known widely as "The Flying Dutchman". He became one of the men who helped open the airways of the north and had many dangerous experiences in that rugged area.

Took Staff Course.

In 1937 he took an R.A.F. staff course in England and the next year went to the School of Army Co-operation overseas. Then he came back to Canada and took over command of No. 2 Army Co-operation Squadron at Trenton, Ont.

In his student years the group captain played with Canada's top-flight amateurs at football and hockey. On the ice he was "Wib", in the air "The Flying Dutchman". Van Vliet graduated from University of Manitoba sixteen years ago with the degree of Bachelor of Science, but he stayed with flying.

32 Children Overcome by Gas

Toronto, Oct. 26 (CP — Premier Gordon Conant will consider today the findings of a preliminary investigation into a near-disaster in the Pape Theatre in East Toronto, Saturday, when 32 children were overcome by escaping coal gas.

The approximately 400 other youngsters in the building were said to have been all affected to varying degrees by the gas, which circulated through the theatre's air-conditioning system.

Two off-duty constables were given credit for averting a possible major tragedy. Told by a woman that something was wrong, they rushed into the place, and on smelling the gas, threw open all exit doors and started ushering the children out.

"They were falling down like nine-pins all over the place," said one of the policemen. Many of the children had to be roused from a stupor and assisted to the street.

Quints Are Given First Permanent Wave

Toronto, Oct. 26—(CP) — The Dionne quintuplets had a new surprise today. They got their first permanent wave in preparation for their Victory Loan afternoon and evening appearances at Maple Leaf Gardens today, tomorrow and Wednesday.

"It will just have a suggestion of a wave," the hairdresser explained. "We are taking the very best of care of the Quints' hair. This wave should last a long time and they will be able to comb it out themselves."

The injured women are Mrs. Harold Humphrey, 191 Ann Street, and Mrs. Elsie Nelson, 272 Ann Street.

Mrs. Humphrey had attended Tabernacle United Church anniversary service and while descending the steps into the church vestibule, when she unfortunately missed her step and fell heavily breaking her arm. Mrs. Nelson was visiting her niece Mrs. Harry Moorman, when the decision was made to attend evening church service. In some manner she slipped, while attempting to get into her car at the curb and fell breaking her hip. Both women were attended at the hospital by Dr. G. S. Cronk, who reduced the fractures.

HEIFER CALF STOLEN NEAR TRENTON

With the stealing of livestock becoming alarmingly prevalent throughout the Bay of Quinte district, Provincial Police today learned that a valuable heifer calf, the property of Marino Baldino, Byron St., Trenton, had been stolen from a nearby pasture field over the weekend. The calf was valued at $85.00, Mr. Baldwin reported.

However, Provincial authorities were told that several sheep, reported stolen at Shannonville last week, had been recovered. The sheep had apparently wandered away from a flock and were not stolen as first reported to police.

TEEN-AGE LAD ADMITS THEFT

A teen-aged local youth boldly walked into the service station operated by J. P. Clarke at the corner of Charles and East Dundas Sts., and systematically stole money, city police learned over the weekend. Considerable property damage resulted to the fronts of both vehicles. Hazelton informed investigating police he had attempted to pass another vehicle at the Coleman St. intersection when the accident occurred. It was raining at the time.

Farquharson, Corbyville, is safe in hospital although suffering from a wounded hand.

The official notification was received today from R.C.A.F. headquarters at Ottawa and greatly relieved the minds of Mr. and Mrs. Farquharson, who had not heard from their son for several months.

No details of the action in which their son was shot down was contained in the brief message from Ottawa but it was announced Gordon had been picked up in the Mediterranean after being forced to bail out from his wrecked plane. It was intimated he is now in hospital at Malta.

Warrant Pilot Officer Farquharson has been stationed at Malta since last July and many friends in Belleville and district will be pleased to learn of his safety after an extended period in which no word had been received.

Tabernacle Ch. Celebrates 65th Anniversary

"The things which we are thinking and which we are saying today are the things that are laying the foundation of the new world order to come after this war is won."

So stated Rev. Ralph E. Spencer, M.A., B.D., minister of Tabernacle United Church, as he spoke to a joint congregation of the three United Churches in the city at the 65th anniversary services at Tabernacle Church held on Sunday. Rev. Spencer spoke on "Convention or Conviction," and emphasized the importance of whether lives were guided by one or the other influence.

"Are we being motivated by convention or by conviction in what we say, in what we do, or in what we believe?" asked Mr. Spencer. This is a question which must be answered, he stressed.

As to the difference in the two vastly different modes of life, Mr. Spencer referred to the Old Testament and chose as his text the story of the Pharisees and the Publicans. He claimed the Pharisees were the conventional tpye, whose lives were motivated by worldly things and affairs, while the Publicans were truly concerned about their relationships with God.

Religion, he claimed, was very often approached with the view of having it harmonize with convention, or having it conform to business conceptions. The Church is the greatest moral influence in the community but it must be supported because of its true relationship to God rather than for its moral influence, or this influence will be lost.

Turning to the prophecy of the new world order to be established after the war, Rev. Mr. Spencer claimed in many instances the Church is supported during wartime because it is a great instrument in the prosecution of the war.

As was the case in the last Great War, very often after the war is won, the Church is forgotten. "Convention is respected only to a certain point and then it is forgotten," he said.

No Room for Hate in World

The speaker claimed that certain convictions were necessary for the establishment of a new world order after the war. "If we don't want Nazism or dictatorship, nor even Democracy as it was prior to the war, then we do need a new world order," he admitted.

There is no room for hate in the world if the world is to see peace. "Hate pitted against hate, merely creates more hate. Hate cannot bring peace."

If there is to be true peace in the world something new must be found — something like the Kingdom of God. "The new world order must be founded on the Order of Jesus Christ," Rev. Spencer concluded. "The same basic need for the Christian faith is needed for the new world order."

One of the features of the evening service was the attendance of the teaching staff and student body of Albert College. Principal of Albert College, Rev. Dr. Bert Howard, assisted in the service, as did Rev. J. A. Dilts, minister of Holloway Street Church.

Special music was prepared by the church choir for both services under the direction of the church organist, Mrs. M. P. Duff. During the morning service the choir sang "Praise Ye The Father," as an anthem offertory, while Mrs. W. C. Gault and Mr. Ed. Shortt sang "The Lord is My Shepherd," as a duet. The topic of Rev. Mr. Spencer's sermon for the morning was "The Ebb and Flow of the Christian Church."

During the evening service two anthems were sung by the choir, "Spirit Immortal," and "Listen to the Lambs," while Mrs. Barclay sang a solo.

Defence Group To Hold Meeting

Belleville citizens are reminded that Captain McIntyre Hood, Secretary of the Ontario Civilian Defence Committee, will speak at an organizational meeting of the Belleville defence committee in the auditorium of the Belleville Collegiate at eight o'clock this (Monday) evening.

An interesting program has been arranged by Mr. Harold Seldon, vice-chairman of the local committee, with plans being made to have a demonstration on the collegiate lawn of the A.R.P. portable gasoline pumper furnished by the provincial committee to the local organization. The pumper was first demonstrated at the fire hall on Sunday morning with officials stating the minute-sized pumper develops remarkable pressure, sufficient to throw three streams of water over any building of average height.

Members of the Red Cross emergency nursing unit will attend tonight's meeting in a body, as will members of the St. John Ambulance Brigade. The Ontario Volunteer Constabulary will also be on hand, as well as members of the Belleville Civilian Defence Committee.

Mr. Seldon promises that Captain Hood's message to the Belleville people will be one of paramount interest to all persons interested in civilian defence work and extends a very cordial invitation to all citizens to attend the meeting as it will be the last occasion upon which Captain Hood will be able to address a local audience.

O.E.S. CANTEEN GIVEN TO BRITAIN

Above is the first of two Mobile Canteens to be presented to Britain by the Belleville District Order of the Eastern Star. The canteen was given to the Gordon Smith Institute for Seamen, Liverpool, and was accepted by Admiral Sir Percy Noble, officer commanding the Western Approaches. The presentation was made by Mr. A. E. Bryan, Canadian Trade Commissioner in Liverpool, who represented the members of the Eastern Star of Belleville and District. A second canteen has arrived in Britain and will be presented shortly.

Scene in Liverpool as One of 2 Mobile Canteens, Gift of Eastern Star in Belleville, is Presented

Indicative of the splendid work being done in the present war by the members of the Order of the Eastern Star in this city and district are two Mobile Canteens bought and equipped by funds raised by the lodge organizations here, and presented to Britain through Canadian representatives in the "tight little island."

The first canteen, which was built with funds raised by the district, was presented to the Gordon Smith Institute for Seamen, Liverpool, recently and the second canteen, provided by the efforts of Belleville and Minerva Lodges O.E.S. of Belleville, is now in England and will be presented shortly.

In a letter to Mrs. A. Nayler, O.E.S. District Convener here, the Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner in London, wrote: "I can assure you that you and your organizations have filled a much-needed want and will earn the gratitude of thousands of men who will benefit from these gifts. I am adding my own thanks for these most welcome gifts."

Presentation of the first canteen took place outside the Smith Institute and was made by Mr. A. E. Bryan, Canadian Trade Commissioner for Liverpool. The canteen was formally accepted on behalf of the seamen of Britain by Admiral Sir Percy Noble, officer commanding the Western Approaches, before a large representation.

A half-hour after the formal presentation was made the canteen was in use. It will be used on the water front, and will meet destroyers and other naval craft when they dock. A fine tribute to the members of the O.E.S. here and the Canadian Navy was given by Admiral Noble. On the front of the canteen is inscribed: "Presented by the Order of the Eastern Star, District no 12, Belleville, Ont., Canada, to the Gordon Smith Institute for Seamen, Liverpool."

CAPT. D. B. CHRISTIE
(Picton)

Picton, Oct. 26—A sailor for more than fifty years, Capt. Duncan Beith Christie, passed away suddenly at his home here. He was preparing some lanterns to be placed on the bay to guide local shipping when seized with a heart attack. Though retiring in 1932, Capt. Christie, by virtue of his intimate knowledge of Bay of Quinte waters, was called up to act as pilot for freighters and oil boats until a short time ago when he did not feel equal to this task.

The funeral was held this Monday afternoon, Rev. J. F. Reycroft officiating. The service was under Masonic auspices and interment was in Glenwood Cemetery.

Capt. Christie was known in marine circles all over the province. He was closely identified with the Mariners' Service held annually at Cherry Valley.

He first sailed in the passenger boat Pilgrim which operated from Deseronto to Napanee in the heyday of passenger boat days. His first command was the passenger boat, Ella Ross, for three years. He was part owner of the Str. Brockville. Other passenger boats Capt. Christie sailed on, some as master, included the Quinte, from Picton to Belleville; Hero, Aleatha, Varuna, Glenburne, Belleville. He was mate on the Toronto on its Prescott-Toronto run and commanded the White Star, a Hamilton to Lorne Park Ferry. He was mate for four years on the Marcassa. His last command was the Glen Allan, Picton to Montreal package freighter. He retired ten years ago but continued to act as a pilot from Kingston to Bay of Quinte ports. Capt. Christie was a member of the United Church and a member of Prince Edward Lodge No. 18, A.F. and A.M. He is survived by his wife, two sisters, Mrs. Wm. Barker, Elmbrook and Mrs. T. W. Rowland, Kingston, and a brother, Jack Christie, Belleville.

Mrs. Merritt, Wife of V. C. Winner, Lights Torch of Service in Toronto

Toronto, Oct. 26 (CP)—Mrs. Charles Cecil Merritt, wife of Lt.-Col. Merritt, awarded the Victoria Cross for valor at Dieppe, last night kindled a flame in Varsity arena which lighted a Torch of Service, a symbol of Toronto women's pledge they will back the fighting services by purchases of Victory Bonds and faith and service on the home front.

More than 7,000 persons were present for the ceremony. Officers of 70 women's organizations in Toronto lit Lamps of Service, huge candles strong in groups across the floor of the arena.

Special guests at the ceremony were Lieut. Thomas Pullen of Oakville, Ont., who was on the H.M.C.S. Ottawa when the ship was torpedoed and sunk in the Atlantic; Pte. Alex Chisholm of Toronto, who took part in the Dieppe raid and PO. E. R. Long, D.F.M., of Toronto, who has taken part in many raids on Germany.

Trenton and District

Trenton, Oct. 26. — (Special)— Fall flowers, and leaves were used profusely in decorating of King St. United Church on Sunday for the sixty-fifth anniversary services. Both services were largely attended by members and visitors and the music was excellent for the occasion. The anthem in the morning, "Praise" by Alec Rowley was well rendered by the choir, while the charming solo "How Beautiful Upon the Mountains" was appropriately rendered by Mrs. Kenneth Crews. In the evening the choir rendered the anthem "Sanctus" by Gounod with Mr. Claude Huffman taking the solo parts. A violin solo by Mr. John Wickett was well received.

Thes minister Rev. J. D. Martin, B.A., had charge of the morning service while in the evening, Rev. James Semple, B.A., S.T.B., Th.D. of Belleville, officiated.

Grade "A" eggs held firm at 55 cents on Saturday's market with pullets and mediums bringing from 45 cents up. Chickens were plentiful but the price still high some of the larger birds bringing $1.75 each. Butter 38, 39 and 40 cents.

Several varieties of apples were offered $2.00 per hamper for McIntosh and Taiman Sweets, some spies $2.25 per hamper. Cooking apples of different grades and varieties sold from 25c per basket up.

Vegetables are becoming less plentiful but there is still a considerable amount of cauliflower selling from 15c up, cabbage 5 and 10 cents, celery 15c for hearts, 10c per bunch for excellent quality green, carrots 25c per basket, onions 60c per peck. Potatoes mostly $2.00 per bag.

Delicious home cooking still quite plentiful at various prices.

W.P.T. Board Official Speaks

Trenton women were privileged on Friday afternoon to hear an educational talk by Mrs. John Y. Harcourt of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, Ottawa. The meeting was held in the local Red Cross rooms and was well attended.

The speaker was introduced by Mrs. J. H. Redick who acted as chairman.

Mrs. Harcourt came to Trenton to give householders first hand information on price control and to form a committee to work with the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, this committee to hear and register complaint which any householder might find necessary to register through her daily buying of necessities. She told of inflation during the last war and of the exorbitant prices charged for various foods and said that during the first six months of this war the cost of living rose 7%. This having happened the Government set up the Wartime Prices and Trade Board with Mr. Donald Gordon at its head to make a check to see that no further drastic rises were made. From this a Consumer's Branch has now been set up under the guidance of Mrs. Byrne Hope Saunders, along with thirteen other chairmen for the Dominion. A sub-committee is then arranged in each town to take care of all complaints.

Women 85% of Buyers

"Women of Canada," said Mrs. Harcourt, "do 85% of the purchasing and they must consider it their duty to report to this board any increase in price of any commodity over the same period last year. Naturally," she said, "there are seasonal commodities whose prices are bound to fluctuate, but with the every day purchases this is not the case and it is up to the women of this country to see that prices are kept at a strict level."

Mrs. Harcourt told of the splendid work which had been done by the Consumers' Board in connection with the sugar rationing, getting of sugar to the farm women for thrashers and extra help, also of controlling the sugar for canning purposes. Further work is now being done by this board in connection with the registering of rooms in various towns and cities to accommodate the influx of people where war industries are located and where the armed forces are located. She brought home to the ladies that when Trenton is finally canvassed in this connection, as it will be in the near future, it should be the patriotic duty of every citizen to rent to these people any possible rooming space available.

Working Under Handicaps

Mrs. Harcourt told the ladies many small items of interest such as the fact that while they were too willing to grumble at the lack of adequate service in stores and other places of business, they forgot that many of these places were working under great handicaps due to the shortage of help. She mentioned, for instance, the large departmental store in Toronto doing exactly the same volume of business as done a year ago but with four hundred less employees. Where have these employees gone—into the making of munitions or into the direct armed forces. She told of why deliveries of small orders could not be undertaken, and of the reason, which some people are prone to resent, of druggists insisting on the return of empty tooth-paste cartons before another could be purchased. "These must be gathered up," said the speaker, "as no further metal is available."

A committee of Trenton ladies was set up with Mrs. S. O. Graham as chairman and the speaker urged those present to tell others of the idea that any rise in prices must be passed on to this committee. They in turn will immediately get in touch with Ottawa to have the situation adjusted. "This," said the speaker, "is your effort toward the winning of this war."

Others of the committee were named as Miss Laura Cumming to represent St. Peter's Church, Mrs. R. Roberts for St. George's, Mrs. H. D. Graham, Grace United; Mrs. B. F. Joyce, King Street United; Miss Janet Bronson, Bethel Temple; Mrs. Hall, Baptist; Mrs. F. Hewitt, Salvation Army, and Mrs. Fred Jeffrey, Pentecostal.

Victory Loan Appeal

Mayor H. R. Cory addressed a crowded house at the Century theatre on Thursday evening on behalf of Canada's Third Victory Loan, making a stirring appeal to all present to do everything in his or her power to put this loan over the top. He reviewed Canada's effort since the outbreak of war in 1939 and made special mention of all the splendid lads, yes and some girls, serving from Trenton.

"Hitler's lust for power and world domination was a well known fact to all for many years but we were all too complacent and thought a great deal too much about our own pleasures and not enough of the serious condition of world affairs," he said.

He warned the people that we must get down to hardpan and if this war was to be won "we must do more than buy a bond and sit back complacently with the idea that we were doing our share." He went further to say that before this war can be won more of us must get down to earth, more take up the uniform, and more give their money freely and their work unfalteringly.

"Trenton Quota $300,000

"Trenton's quota, said Mr. Cory is $300,000." "Is your freedom and your way of living worth any part of that $300,000 to you."

"Dare you let Canada and these boys down," cried the speaker, and at this point in the message a review showing the Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment overseas was flashed across the screen. Many of Trenton's fine lads as well as other boys from both counties could be plainly distinguished, Brig. General H. D. Graham (then Col. Graham), Major Bruce Sutcliffe and many others. Here the gathering became very enthused and the rafters fairly rung with cheers.

In conclusion Mayor Cory brought to the public this remark, "dare you look at one dying soldier and truthfully tell him what you have done this day to help to win this war." "Come on Trenton, let's go over the Top."

COSTLY EXPERIENCE

Napanee, Ont., Oct. 26—(CP) — After paying $5.25, William H. Rankin of London, Ont., was able to get enough gasoline to continue an automobile trip to Cornwall, Ont. Rankin ran out of gas here, discovered his ration book was in London, and spent that much money in telephone calls to get the authority to make a purchase.

CANTON AIRDROME

Many fires were started in the Kowloon dock area, a communique said. It was the first Allied raid on the colony since the Japanese occupied it last Christmas day, capturing many British and Canadian troops.

Japanese fighters intercepted the formation after the bombing and the American fliers shot down' 10 Japanese planes and probably destroyed five more. One American bomber is missing and a fighter pilot, slightly wounded made a forced landing in Chinese territory.

Several Ships Hit

Long stretches of the once-humming dock area were blown up by the bombers and several ships were hit. Fierce fires were licking at warehouses and other buildings as the planes headed for their base.

While the bombers were visiting Hong Kong on Sunday, six other American fighters found 20 Japanese fighters in the air over South Yunnan Province, southwest China, and shot down three planes and probably destroyed four more without loss. This brought the day's score over China to 13 Japanese planes certainly destroyed and probably nine others.

Brig.-Gen. Caleb Haynes, Chief of the U. S. bomber command in China, led the bombers on the flight to Hong Kong and Col. Robert L. Scott commanded the fighters. The operation was directed by Brig.-Gen. Claire L. Chennault, commander of United States army air forces in China, from an advanced air field.

Japanese Gives Version

(The Japanese, in their broadcast version of the raid, said eight large planes dropped incendiary bombs from a high altitude over Hong Kong at 3:30 p.m. yesterday. The Japanese Governor General at Hong Kong was quoted as describing the damage as negligible. The Governor General said all Japanese planes involved in the fight returned safely to their base. The raid seemed to indicate American planes were prowling the China sky in increasing numbers.)

Gen. Chennault's air force, in a 12-hour flight Oct. 21, destroyed the power plant and put out of commission a number of the Kailan coal mines 80 miles northeast of Tientsin.

Japan has been drawing heavily on the mines for her industries.

No Japanese planes were encountered and all the American planes returned.

OVER-RUN 2 AXIS

Battle Mounts in Fury

Advices from the front indicated the battle was raging with mounting fury along the whole 40-mile front between the Mediterranean shore and the Qattara salt marshes, but yesterday's report said the main armored forces of the opposing armies apparently were not yet engaged.

Rommel's armored formations, however, were said to be moving up to meet the advancing British forces, and it was these units upon which the full fury of the Allied aerial assaults was concentrated.

British and American [illegible], flying in relays, dumped tons upon tons of explosives on the massing Axis armored division from dawn to dusk yesterday, attempting to scatter and destroy them before they could join the battle.

The attacks were pressed home from low levels with strong fighter protection and were almost unopposed, headquarters said.

Quiet Confidence

Official quarters gave few details yesterday on the progress of the land fighting, limiting themselves to the announcement the enemy's main positions had been penetrated at some points, but there was evidence of quiet confidence in the outcome.

Lt.-Gen. B. L. Montgomery, commander of the 8th Army, said plans for the offensive had been well-laid and that its objective was to "destroy Rommel and his army."

"British and Allied troops fighting in front are first-class soldiers and I am determined they will have success," he said.

While the full strength of the forces massed by the Allies remained a military secret, it was generally believed they held superiority in men, tanks, guns and planes.

Rommel Has 125,000

According to best estimates, Rommel has about 125,000 men at his disposal. These include two German armored divisions, two Italian armored divisions—the Trento and Folgola; a German motorized division; a partially-motorized German infantry division; and at least six Italian infantry divisions.

The Allied ground forces involved in the opening phase of the battle were known to include Australians and New Zealanders, the South Africa 1st division, the Northumberland 50th division, the Highlands 51st division and units composed of fighting French and Greeks.

A communique issued by U.S. army headquarters yesterday said that fighters, fighter-bombers and medium bombers of the desert air force had made continuous and repeated attacks on enemy positions, gun emplacements and motor vehicles.

"Many direct hits were observed on gun emplacements and motor vehicles and many fires were started," the communique added.

Only 12 Planes Lost

Despite the extent of the Allied aerial operations yesterday only 12 planes were reported lost, and the crews of some of these were saved. One Axis plane was shot down—a disparity in losses apparently accounted for by the fact that few enemy aircraft dared take the air.

While the battle raged on in the Egyptian desert and in the skies above, British submarines continued their attacks on the enemy's Mediterranean supply lines in an effort to prevent Rommel obtaining reinforcements of men and equipment.

An Admiralty communique issued yesterday in London announced the sinking of five Italian supply ships, listed an enemy destroyer and an armed merchant cruiser as probably sunk and said five other supply ships hatd been damaged.

These losses, the bulletin said, brought to 24 the number of Axis supply ships, sunk or damaged by British submarines in the Mediterranean during October.

RED ARMY TROOPS

trenches and killed 700 Italians. The lull in the Mozdok area of the Caucasus where the Germans are trying to drive to the Grozny oil fields continued, but the Russians said their artillery fire destroyed 20 trucks and a company of infantry.

Red army reserves, especially trained for street fighting, were sent into Stalingrad as the German assault grew more intense with the return of favorable weather.

Nazis Threw in Many Troops

It was not clear from dispatches whether the Russians gains within Stalingrad completely nullified the German occupation of two new streets in the city as reported by Soviet High Command earlier. The Nazi advance had been made at the cost of enormous losses.

The Germans threw two divisions of fresh infantry into the battle and backed them up with fleets of tanks and planes, but the Russians, after nine weeks of siege continued to slug back at every corner, dispatches said. Within the city alone, 3,000 of the enemy were reported killed yesterday as the Germans made their advance.

Of the fighting within Stalingrad, the Soviet midnight communique said:—

Defend Every Building

"Soviet troops repelled repeated tank and infantry attacks. The heroic defenders of Stalingrad are stubbornly defending every street and every building. At the cost of enormous losses the Germans succeeded in occupying two streets in a factory settlement".

Southeast of Novorossisk, the Russians said, Red Army Scouts broke through enemy lines and attacked a German staff bus. Twenty German air force officers were reported killed and important documents captured. Two companies of Rumanian infantry were wiped out in a battle with Russian Marine units, Russian advices said.

Dispatches from the northern front told how 16 enemy motorboats and pontoon boats were destroyed and 15 planes shot down in a land, sea and air fight three days ago which followed an attempted German landing on a Soviet Island in Lake Ladoga.

"Part of the enemy force which succeeded in reaching shore was hurled into the water and annihilated", Pravda said.

R.A.F. INFLICTS

strong protest against alleged attacks by R.A.F. planes on six different localities in the unoccupied zone Saturday afternoon.

Vichy Protests Raids

Vichy said raids occurred in the regions of Vichy, Montlucon and Domerat, all in the Allier department and at Roanne, Chatreauxroux and Annecy.

"They constitute a deliberate aggression effected in broad daylight and in the unoccupied zone against the civilian population of a disarmed country." Vichy asserted.

An earlier Vichy announcement issued in Paris claimed hedge-hopping British and American planes had machine-gunned French farm workers near Fecamp and Amiens in the Occupied zone, causing casualties.

A Reuters news agency dispatch from Berne said the Swiss government also was protesting to London over alleged violations of Swiss territory in connection with the raids on Northern Italy Saturday night.

Italy Admits Damage

Air raid alarms sounded again in Berne last night but there was no indication here the R.A.F. had been busy over Northern Italy.

The Italian radio tacitly acknowledged that the raids on Genoa had badly disrupted the city's transport system. Rome put the number of casualties in the first raid on the city at 39 dead and 190 injured, and reported 35 were killed and 67 injured at Savona.

There was comparatively little aerial activity over Britain during the weekend, although a few German raiders bombed scattered localities in eastern England Saturday night and several places on the southeast coast were attacked yesterday. Some casualties were caused.

Gordon Issues Order to Prevent Liquor Hoarding

Toronto, Oct. 26 — A one-bottle per day liquor rationing order was laid down this weekend by the Ontario Liquor Control Board to balk panic buying and to prevent hoarding.

Recent Federal moves under war-time emergency authority to channel alcohol into munitions instead of beverage brews has caused heavy buying in an attempt to beat a drought which Chief Commissioner A. St. Clair Gordon states is not threatened.

Sales from stores during the past few days, he said in a statement, "have been of such volume as to indicate hoarding of liquor." The chief commissioner said there are "ample supplies of all classes of spirits available."

But, effective the moment the dispensaries open Monday and as a result of the upsurge in buying, Mr. Gordon has ordered "that for the time being, the quantity of spirits—whiskey, brandy, rum, gin, etcetera—purchasable by any citizen will be limited to not more than one bottle per day."

In Mediterranean Theatre

Interest has turned to the Mediterranean as British bombers have hovered over great production centres of North Italy and caused heavy damage by their great loads of bombs and as there are signs of a developing offensive along the North African coast in the Egyptian theatre.

The Mediterranean struggle has been one of the most important divisions of the war. For thousands of years this Sea has been the great highway of commerce. Its waters touch the shores of three continents, which made up the ancient world, Europe, Asia and Africa, and it has always been connected with trade routes to the east and northeast into Russia as well as to the Orient and to the interior of Africa through Egypt. Its importance is increased for the modern world by the Suez Canal. In the war it holds a very important key to the future. Britain's growth of power with her successes in the Inland Sea has been one of the great achievements of the war, while for Italy it has meant woes innumerable and for the Germans disappointment.

Open Our Ledger Before World

Walter Pidgeon, a native of Canada and one of the greatest of English-speaking actors of stage and screen in an appeal for the Third Victory Loan at Ottawa said "Let us lend every dollar we can so we can open our ledger before the whole wide world and not have to blush because we haven's done our part."

Returns for the first week of the campaign show that this is the spirit in which Canadians are responding to the appeal, the total sales announced as the second week begins being $312,410,900 throughout the Dominion.

This means that over 40 per cent has been raised in the first week. It means that this week and the next must see and will see a continuance of the same support of the war effort in the sale of the new bond issue.

From all hands comes word of the generous reception given the bond salesmen and the readiness with which the persons canvassed respond.

In many instances there is no necessity to appeal, so well do the people understand their responsibility and privilege as citizens of this democratic nation.

The people of Canada are blest with a smiling land of immense natural resources and the resources of the democratic national spirit. Everything in Canada calls out the highest instincts and motives in her people. It is a land where money has value and where the people possess money. As they realize their freedom they cannot avoid thinking of the sad state of lands overrun by the Nazis in Europe, who have issued worthless money for the goods of the people compelled to sell to the invaders. So to Canadians to invest money in the defence of the country which has provided great opportunities, which has offered great protection and which is doing her share to help the Motherland in her task with the United Nations in saving the world for freedom is the chief duty at this time.

These are days of opportunity and what people do in these days during the campaign must show the home front at its best in helping in the greatest task which has ever rested upon a people to cleanse the world of such evils as those of Nazism and Fascism and to make clear the way of democracy and freedom.

To use another remark of Walter Pidgeon's, "This is the people's war. We are the fighters. Fight it then! Fight it will all that is in us! And may God defend the right."

In British Hotels

In some of the large hotels of London in the not distant future, guests may be required to make their own beds, keep their own rooms clean and shine their own shoes, according to the London Evening Standard.

This may be something that many have never thought of but the labor shortage has become so acute that some of the West End hotels are reduced to skeleton staffs, barely able to cope with the most essential daily work. So far the inroads on help gone that in very few places can meals be served in guests' rooms and maintenance of a lift or elevator service is often impossible.

THE BELLEVILLE KEY

The story of the Belleville key
Has fairly landed back on me
And proved a perturbator.
Allow me now the truth to tell
And all will rosy be and well
With this poor Moderator.

The key, a symbol or a sign
Of Belleville's graciousness benign
Was truly given to be mine
As being Moderator.
A replica of Belleville's keys
To homes where welcomes always please
Each visitator.

A gift it was; and though not gold
It spoke of that which from of old
Is worth much more—
The friendly heart that chiefly can
Bring comfort to a brother man .. . .
Whereof we found great store.

Wherefore I'll do what Belleville meant
And keep the key so given, not lent,
For all the folk I represent.
And maybe later,
Remembering those hearts of gold,
I'll hand it to the Church to hold.
Yours truly, Sclater.

—Toronto, Ont.

The above poem appeared in a recent edition of the Toronto Saturday Night and as can be seen was written by the Right Reverend J. P. L. Sclater, Moderator of the United Church of Canada.

Behind the poem is a story. Shortly after the opening of the Tenth General Council of the United Church in Bridge Street Church here a few weeks ago, Alderman H. J. Clarke, acting mayor of the city at that time, extended the official civic welcome to the 284 commissioners of the United Church here for the General Council.

The Moderator had been elected to his high office the day previous and Alderman Clarke with his usual eloquence, formally presented Dr. Sclater with a gold key emblematic of the freedom of the city.

With his rare sense of humor at its best, Dr. Sclater thanked the alderman for the courteous gesture and remarked "I do not care what this council thinks, or what anyone thinks, this key is mine." And he promptly placed the key in a pocket beneath his robes of office.

The inference, a mistaken one, as it was afterwards discovered, was that the key given the Moderator was one used for the occasions of welcome to distinguished guests to the city, and the Moderator, in lighter vein, decided to keep it.

Accordingly, an ambitious member of the press, smelling a good story, placed it on The Canadian Press wires and the incident was flashed to all parts of Canada.

But, ah, here is the sad part.

Dr. Sclater, who enjoys a well-deserved popularity not only in his own Toronto but in many parts of the Dominion, received letters, cables and telegrams remarking generally upon the incident. Leading dailies of the country gave the story prominent positions on their pages, which added to the influx of communications which reached the Moderator's office.

In his brilliant way, the Moderator has clarified the situation in the above well-penned lines. He not only explains the predicament in which the original story placed him but pays a fine tribute to this city and its residents.

It is to be regretted that the high-ranking churchman was placed in such a more or less embarrassing position, but we feel sure that with his characteristic generosity,he will forgive the erring scribe, and that the incident will soon be filed among pleasant memories of this city and the Tenth General Council.

MASCOT REAL SEA-DOG

Mascot of H.M.S. Stork, Buster, is a regular sea-dog. He was found as a small puppy, alone on a float far out in the Atlantic, crewmen reported in London. Wet, cold, unnerved, he quickly took an interest in the Stork. He showed his democratic spirit by spending part of the day in the officers' wardroom and part in the mess deck. He has been present at three U-boat kills, and has seen quite a few enemy planes shot out of the sky by his shipmates. The deep thunder of depth charges leaves him unmoved. It is a mystery why the sound of the alarm bell is the only thing that can induce Buster to climb a ladder under his own power. At other times he waits to be carried up or down.

LITTLE GARDENS

I like the little gardens best, the fifty feet of soil
That signify from spring to fall their owners' willing toil,
The gardens large are grand affairs, but all the bodies tired
In keeping lawns and hedges trim, from dawn to dusk were hired.

The little gardens gay with bloom proclaim devoted care.
Somebody long has braved the sun to have such neatness there,
And someone rose at dawn, no doubt, those simple beds to weed
And worked and saved and sacrificed for bush and plant and seed.

Behold, how soon disaster comes and ruin lays things bare
And weeds beset all lovely things when gardeners cease to care.
A week, and beauty is no more; two weeks, all charm has flown!
For little gardens cannot live without the love they've known.

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

Army Regulations and the Election Campaign

New York, Oct. 26 — All elections are preceded by a good deal of demagoguery. The attempt of the Congress to place restrictions on the army in respect of the latest group of recruits, namely those of eighteen and nineteen is demagogic. It is a vote-catching measure.

That it should be accompanied, in the case of Senators Taft, Tydings, and others, by reflections on the British only indicates that the old isolationist spirit is not dead. Senator Tydings uses the occasion to suggest that he "does not want to see the United States doing too much of the licking. I want to see the others bearing their fair share of the burden."

I don't quite understand what Senator Tydings means. Field Marshal Smuts, the South African Premier, speaking before the joint House of Commons and House of Lords a few days ago, was more gallant and more just. He thought of the millions of Russian dead and had the grace to say that thus far Russia has borne more than her share of the burden in this war. Congress also might remember that the United States had [illegible]000 casualties in the last war, to the British million. It also might remember that in the Battle of Britain, in which Britain fought singlehanded and alone and held the last fortress on the Atlantic, the civilian casualties were over 50,000, and that Britain's war losses to date are very considerable indeed.

How Russia Talks

I wonder what our impression would be if a Russian politician stood up in Moscow and said, "Let us not do too much of the licking. Now it's their turn." Although the Russians have asked for a Western offensive, they never for a moment have suggested that they would then stop — until, perhaps, our casualties rose to their probable five millions.

Senator Tydings remarks suggest a misunderstanding of the entire Allied situation. Up until now none of the Allies has done "too much of the licking". All of us, on the contrary, have received too much of a licking. And it is going to take all that we have got, all together, to lick the Axis combination.

It is going to be quite impossible to win this war if each of the Allies says, "After you, gentlemen". That political attitude almost lost this war for us before it began.

But there is a further consideration. We not only have to win the war but we have to make a peace that will stick. I think that Congress hopes that the United States will have something to say about the peace. But you can't expect to win the war by Russian, Chinese and British blood-letting, and then come out and tell them, "We, the Americans will make the new world".

Why Army is Dismayed

Actually, these restrictions proposed by Congress will disorganize the army, and, therefore, add to our casualties in every group. That is why the army is dismayed by them.

All armies are jealous of manpower and anxious to fight with as few losses as possible. On the other hand, a soldier is a soldier, whatever his age may be. Good units are units of mixed ages, combining the staying power and leadership of the more mature men and the elan and courage of the more youthful.

If the more youthful—the selectees of 18 and 19 years—were put into separate units, the fact of a longer training would not be to their advantage. That was demonstrated in the last war, when, on the German side at least, whole regiments of well-trained students were decimated in the battles of Belgium ,because they showed more courage than sense.

The administrative system of the United States army sends all selectees for three months' basic training, and then assigns them to divisions, which are further trained as units, or teams. Every attempt is made to siphon these newer recruits into units already containing older and more extensively trained men. If the proposals of Senator Taft are adopted, then, before any of these units can be used, the men under 19 would have to be pulled out, and somebody else substituted, which simply would mean administrative chaos.

The Question of Youth.

The British also started their war under serious restrictions imposed by the politicians — restrictions which the British Army, like the United States, has done its best to have completely removed. In the British case these restrictions were modified by the fact that a large proportion of the total armed forces are volunteers, and that to them the Parliamentary restrictions never have applied. Boys of 18 have been fighting in the R.A.F. and are already veterans. Boys of 16 to 17 have seen perilous service in the British merchant marine.

Until Oct. 22 of this year British conscripts were not put into uniform before they were 18 1-2, but two days ago Ernest Bevin, the Labor Party Leader, gave his consent to reducing the age to 18, after Winston Churchill had made a strong plea, as did President Roosevelt in this country, for a reduction in the age limit.

If this is a people's war, every one must service where he is most fitted to serve. The matter of who is fit to serve in the armed forces must be decided by the General Staff. It certainly cannot be decided in Congress. It is interesting that the very men who are against any prodding of the army to more aggressive action should now themselves be prodding the army to prevent more aggressive action.

SNAKE HANDLERS

Three members of a backwoods church in Kentucky were recently held to a grand jury on a murder charge for participating in a meeting at which another member of the congregation was fatally bitten by rattlesnakes.

The judge ordered the sheriff's deputies to kill four large rattlesnakes that were alleged to have bitten the "murdered" man while being handled at a religious meeting in the church.

Incidents of this kind often occur in certain sections of Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee and Kentucky, and they became so frequent in Kentucky that the legislature in 1940 passed a law making it illegal to use snakes in religious ceremonies.

The religious groups who make a practice of handling snakes in church are sometimes referred to as a "snake cult."

This creates the impression that these people are snake worshippers and that they indulge in snake "charming."

But snake charming and snake worship are not involved in this particular practice.

These people are fundamentalists and interpret very literally, and undertake to put into practice, certain passages in the New Testament.

In Mark 18 it is related that Jesus, after the Crucifixion appeared to the eleven Apostles as they sat at meat and upbraided them with their unbelief and hardness of heart, because they believed not them who had seen Him after He had risen from the grave.

Jesus told the eleven that certain signs would follow them that believe, and one of these signs would be: "They shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them."

According to Luke 10:10, Jesus said to the seventy after they returned:

"Behold, I give unto you power to tread on serpents and scorpions, and over all the power of the enemy: and nothing shall by any means hurt you."

The snake handlers of the mountains of Kentucky and adjoining states accept these passages literally and they sincerely think that if their Christian faith is firm enough they can "tread on" and "take up" with their bare feet and hands rattlesnakes, copperheads and other poisonous snakes without being harmed.

They do not worship the snakes, nor do they pretend to charm them or exercise any power over them, but simply use them to put their own faith to the utmost test, according to their understanding of the passages quoted above from the Scriptures.

Q-Boats of Last War Best Means Of Fighting Submarines in This War

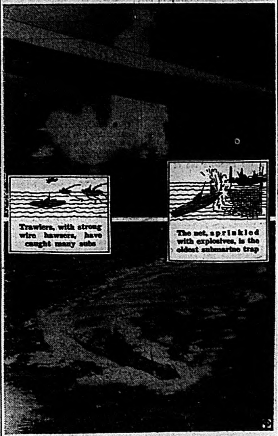
(By ANDREAS DORPALEN)

(Central Press Canadian Correspondent)

New York, Oct. 23 — A recent announcement, not long ago, of the German admiralty claiming that a British "submarine trap" had been damaged by a torpedo boat indicates once again that ingenious devices are being worked out to overcome the U-boat menace.

Of all submarine traps, the oldest is the submarine net. It is used to protect the entrance of harbors against hostile underseas raiders. Submarine nets consist of toughened strands of 10 foot mesh, 200 to 300 feet deep, with explosives profusely sprinkled up and down the nets. Upon coming in contact with such a net, a submarine is immediately blown up.

Another device used by the British during the last war were trawlers lying in wait for U-boats. Seaplanes upon spotting a sub would signal them its position. The trawlers would then get out strong wire hawsers and steam toward the submerged craft. When passing over it, the hawsers would catch on to bow or stern. The trapped U-boat, unless it came up was then blown up with depth bombs. However, the great loss of trawlers made these operations too expensive, and they were soon given up.



Trawlers, with strong wire hawsers, have caught many subs

Q-Boat Effective

In the latter part of the last war, however, Britain developed a very effective trap—the Q-boat.

Q-boats were well-armed vessels, which were, however, disguised as innocent-looking tramp steamers. They were equipped with disappearing mountings for guns, and concealed guns and cannons behind collapsible bulwarks and fake hatchway covers.

These Q-boats plodded slowly through the submarine-infested waters of the Atlantic, seemingly an easy prey for any U-boat. Upon sighting one of these decoy ships a U-boat commander would therefore decided to save his torpedoes and sink the vessel by shelling it with his deck gun. He thereupon rose to the surface. At that moment one-half of the Q-boat crew, the so-called "panic party", took to the lifeboats and pulled away from their ship. Deceived into utter security by them, the U-boat approached its "victim."

The other half of the Q-boat, however, was lying concealed behind false tarpaulins and hatches with its guns aimed at the approaching U-boat. As soon as the latter had come within point-blank range, the British broke out the White Ensign and the Royal Navy. Hatches and bulwarks collapsed suddenly, and a well-aimed hit from a 12 to 16-pounder sent the surprised German to the bottom.

Change in Tactics

Even after the German admiralty had learned about this device and orders went out to every U-boat to torpedo even the smallest tramp steamer instead of shelling it with the deck gun, Q-boats did not lose their effectiveness altogether. Again, the "panic party" would play its deceptive role, but this time after the ship had been struck by a torpedo. The U-boat would then cautiously circle around it, and, only after feeling sure it was rapidly sinking, break surface. But as soon as it emerged from the water it was greeted by a salvo of shells. For braving the rising water in the boat, some members of the British crew had been holding out on the sinking vessel, waiting to pay back the attacker before abandoning ship.

The existence of these Q-boats was not revealed until months after the end of the last war. For obvious reasons the United Nations are just as secretive about whatever submarine traps they are using now.

British Drive In Egypt Will Assist Russia

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

A full-scale British offensive in Egypt, unquestionably primed with high hopes of routing Axis forces from North Africa, came at a critical moment for Russia.

Coupled with the first onset of winter in the vital Don-Volga steppes on the Stalingrad siege perimeter, it looms as a definite Allied second-front operation calculated to compel immediate heavy withdrawals from Russia of Nazi airpower to meet the triple land-sea-air threat across the Mediterranean.

That must lead to Nazi abandonment of the effort to anchor a winter defence line in Russian on the Volga at Stalingrad if the Allied Egyptian offensive is driven home successfully. It well might mean a Nazi retreat on a wide front in Russia, both in the Don-Volga bulge and southward in the Caucasus, if Rommel's African corps is badly mauled in Egypt.

Weather Favorable

The effect of a swift British advance to or beyond the Egyptian-Libyan border, probably would more quickly and decisively influence the situation in Russia than anything else short of a major invasion attempt against the continent from the west.

Even Nazi war bulletins from the active fronts in Russia have been filled for several days with weather excuses for delay. That had already forecast another winter halt for Hitler in Russia short of decisive achievements.

The British offensive in Egypt starts with weather portents in its favor. The best fighting season in the North African desert is at hand, That has been among the factors indicating for weeks that the first strong Allied counter-blow to aid Russia would be struck in North Africa.

There seems no doubt that it is a full-scale offensive. Its complete scope and strategic pattern may not be discernible for several days.

Seek Annihilation.

With Allied aircraft battering at Axis communications far in rear of the land attack jump-off on the El Alamein line and British fleet units turning their guns on key points along the coast like Matruh, it seems obvious that the first attempt of the Allies is to pin Rommel in the narrow corridor between the sea and Qattara Depression for annihilation rather than to drive him back into Libya.

Word of the Allied offensive in Egypt must greatly hearten the Russians. They were already bolstered at Stalingrad and other points under desperate attack by the close approach of winter. Rain, snow and flooded streams are unquestionably disrupting Nazi supply lines. Any heavy withdrawal of Axis planes or troops from Russia to help Rommel would inevitably prove a signal for redoubled Russian counter-offensive efforts in the Don-Volga corridor. At that point Soviet forces have been inching their way day by day through the Nazi "barrier" deployment protecting the left flank of Stalingrad's besiegers. A Russian breakthrough there would be disastrous for Hitler and winter conditions do not impede Russian forces as seriously as they have the Nazi invaders in the past.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was opening his mail at breakfast, saying, Bills and bills. No matter what color the envelope is, there's sure to be a bill inside. I remember the time when people used to write me a social letter occasionally, but I guess I'm just becoming an uninteresting old bill payer, he said.

No you're not, pop, G wizzickers, I said and pop said, Thanks for the moral support. Would you write me letters if you were old enough to be away in the army, or I was young enough, he said.

Sure, pop, I'd write you some anyways, I said.

Giving me an idea, and I hurry up finished my milk and quick went and sat down at ma's desk and wrote pop a social letter and stuck it in his side pocket while he was going out the front door, saying in it:

Dear pop, Iff anybody ever asks you if you ever received a letter okay without a stamp or even without an envelope, you can tell them yes, because this is it. Nothing much new has happened since I saw you last, which was while you were drinking your second cup of coffee, except I upset a small amount of ma's ink trying to hurry and finish this letter before you went out, and anyways the effects will probably interest ma more than what they will you, unless maybe she makes a special effort to get you interested when you come home, which I sincerely hope not for my sake. Maybe it would of been safer to of written to you in pencil, but it's too late now, and anyways ink is more polite. Well, I better stop now because I hear you scraping your chair back getting ready to go to your office. your loving and affectionate son Benny Potts.

Fattening Poultry For Marketing

(Experimental Farms News)

That it pays to fatten poultry before marketing becomes evident when two important facts are considered. First, that birds will gain more weight in the same time on less feed while being fattened than if not so treated and second, that the public will pay a higher price for fattened birds, says H. S. Gutteridge, Poultry Division, Central Experimental farm, Ottawa.

Cockerels of all ages, whether broilers, fryers or roasters should be fattened, but capons are normally sufficiently well finished without fattening or at least with very little attention. Soft feeding in fattening crates for from ten days to two weeks, depending upon the condition of the birds at the start, is the most satisfactory method and produces birds of the highest quality. Pen fattening is the best alternative to crate fattening but requires a longer period (three to four weeks) and does not produce the same quality and finish. It is important to use only cockerels which are healthy and vigorous as diseased or unthrifty birds will be apt to lose weight under the necessary conditions of confinement in fattening. Any room which is free from draughts but which allows sufficient change of air is satisfactory for fattening. It should be darkened down somewhat between feedings to restrict the birds activity as much as possible.

Feeds Important

Perhaps the most important single factors in successful fattening are the proper choice of the most suitable feeds. Cereal grains make up 80 per cent or more of the feed mixture. Ground oat groats or ground oats with the hulls sifted out and ground corn give the greatest gain and increase in fat of any of the grains. Buckwheat and wheat are slightly less efficient and oats (with hulls) and barley are not so satisfactory as the other grains. A mixture of these cereals not too finely ground may be used bearing in mind that they may be expected to give satisfaction according to the order in which they are stated above. 6 to 10 per cent of meat meal and 5 per cent of mutton or beef fat further improve such mixtures for fattening although good gains can be made when only cereals are used. All feeds should be fed mixed to a moderately sloppy consistency with either skimmilk, buttermilk or unwatered whey. Starve the birds for 18-24 hours before feeding and in the first feeding dissolve epsom salts at the rate of three quarters of a pound per 100 mature birds. Feedings should be given twice daily in such quantity that they will clean it up in twenty minutes to one half hour when any unconsumed residue should be removed and fed to other stock. They should have water to drink between feedings. The birds should be watched carefully and any which refuse their feed for more than three or four days or which eat only sparingly should be removed and marketed as they will not fatten well.

The birds should be starved with water to drink for 10 to 14 hours before killing and care taken to avoid bruising. They should be plucked carefully and chilled as soon as possible after killing.

Jap Light Cruiser Hit

A light cruiser and a destroyer were hit in a raid over the Shortland Island area during the night of October 22-23, and a heavy cruiser, or battleship, was possibly damaged by a torpedo hit.

On October 25 dive-bombers swooped down on an enemy force of cruisers and destroyers immediately north of Florida Island, which is about 13 miles north of Guadalcanal, and damaged a cruiser. The preceding night another enemy cruiser was reported probably damaged about 300 miles northeast of Guadalcanal.

In addition, Australian headquarters reported that flying fortresses had sunk a Japanese gunboat and damaged three merchant vessels at Rabaul, New Britain, bringing to about 100,000 tons the toll of shipping destroyed or damaged at that port in three nights. The bombers, all of which returned safely, also hit fuel barges near the wharves, causing a series of explosions and fires which were visible for 100 miles.

The land fighting which started on Guadalcanal Friday night was preceded by an aerial attack during which Grumman "Wildcats" destroyed an entire fighter escort of 20 Zeros, shot down one of 16 enemy bombers and damaged three others.

To Make Better Coffee

IN these days of coffee rationing, ability to make uniformly good coffee means much. For this, proper care of your equipment is very important. To get best results, follow these simple rules:

1 Keep all utensils, whatever kind, scrupulously clean. Use a slender brush for spouts, tubes, crevices and grooves.

2 Sediment and stains affect flavor. Ordinary washing will not remove them, so scour often with a suitable scouring material.

3 Never put your coffee maker away after use without washing with clean, hot, soapy water. Then rinse with boiling water, drain and dry.

4 If you use a cloth filter or bag, wash it after use with water and baking soda—not soap. Rinse and keep it submerged in clean, cool water.

5 You can only get best results from good coffee—correctly ground for your method of coffee making.

MAXWELL HOUSE is a blend of the very finest coffees the world produces, roasted by a special process that captures every atom of its extra flavor and rich, full-bodied goodness. It offers you precisely correct grinds for each type of coffee-maker—DRIP and REGULAR.

Because it comes sealed in a Super-Vacuum tin by the Vita-Fresh process, Maxwell House Coffee reaches you as fresh as the very hour it left the roasting ovens. It is always:

Girls' Work Theme Of Demonstrations And Fine Addresses

Mrs. G. A. Helson, Warkworth, presented at the Women's Institute Convention, by means of a program in which the girls gave interesting demonstrations and talks, the reports of progress of girls' work in the past year. The session was under the direction of Miss Jean M. Scott, Home Economics coach.

Mrs. Helson gave an interesting report of the achievements of the girls in their work for the past year. There are nineteen Girls' Clubs organized with 143 members. As Mrs. Helson described the projects entered upon by the various clubs, representatives of these groups gave interesting demonstrations. The making of sleeping garments was studied by Roseneath Club of which Mrs. Grigg and Mrs. Thackeray are leaders. Mrs. Halstead, Misses Doreen Nicholl and Phyllis Parker, each wearing the smart ensembles of pajamas and housecoats that they had completed described what they had learned in this project.

Finkle and Miss Lugo Prest, club member, described the studies and showed the health defence chart made. Phillipston Zion Girls' Club, led by Mrs. Harry Ketcheson and Mrs. D. Rome made personal charts, a sample of which was exhibited with comments by Mrs. Ketcheson. Excessive Use of Sweets and Starches Revealed as Cause of Teeth Decay.

The controversy which has been going on for many years as to what causes tooth decay is beginning to "crack" open.

Dr. Russell O. Collins and his associates of San Francisco have published their finding which seem to prove that persons who eat too many sweets are likely to have tooth decay. The doctors made studies of more than 350 students at the University of California, the purpose being to learn whether or not the reduction of starches and sugars in the diet would help in overcoming tooth decay.

All of the students were carefully examined. They were divided into three groups, depending on whether or not they had decayed teeth; some slight degree of tooth decay, or a great deal of tooth decay.

The diets of the students were carefully studied to determine whether or not the diets contained all of the minerals and proteins. Furthermore, cultures were taken from the mouths to determine whether germs known as the Lactobacillus acidophius were present. It is believed that the use of the diet too high in starchy foods and sugars may cause these germs to thrive in the mouth, and that these germs help to produce tooth decay.

In the group of students who had no caries, more than four-fifths had no Lactobacillus acidophilus in their mouths. In almost nine-tenths of those with caries these germs were found in large numbers. In the groups which had only slight caries, about three-fifths had none of these germs.

A careful study of the diets, in regard to the amount of protein, calcium, lime, phosphorus, vitamins A, B-1, C and D, showed that these substances were not found lacking to any great extent in the diet of those with a great deal of caries than in the diet of those with no caries. This would seem to indicate that tooth decay is not dependent to any great degree on the presence of the various vitamins and minerals in the diet, but rather on the amount of starches and sugars which are eaten, which in turn tend to cause the Lactobacillus to grow.

A study of the amount of sweets taken showed that in those with no tooth decay the average intake expressed in teaspoonfuls of sugar daily was about 10.4. In those with a great deal of tooth decay, the average was almost 18 teaspoonfuls. Persons with tooth decay would do well, it seems, to avoid the excessive use of sugars and starchy foods.

Poor Letter Gets a Poor Response

What Boners Did He Write?

What a slap in the face! In response to his letter he gets this cold, curt note. WHY?

Maybe HIS letter was disappointing. Maybe she tore it open very eagerly, only to find it a string of choppy, ungrammatical sentences: "I sure am busy. Haven't been to a movie yet."

So many people are careless about letter-writing, thinking it's a special art, hard to learn!

It's simple to check on errors—to write correctly "surely am," to put the subject "I" before "haven't been."

You can easily make your letters interesting by just telling little things. About your movie, say: "Hope got laughs, all right!" You are busy? Write: "Papers are on my desk in two-feet stacks!"

If you are careless about business letters, of course, you'll never get the job. Do you write: "I saw your ad in today's newspaper and have had four years experience and I could take the job right now?" Learn to be clear, correct!

Our 32-page booklet points out common grammar mistakes, helps enrich your vocabulary, suggests topics to write to friends, rules of good business letters. Gives 24 model social, business and friendly letters.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Good Cookery Equals Love Potion of Ancients

Girls who know so little of cooking that they can barely distinguish a gas range from an electric refrigerator, are making a pretty serious mistake.

Of course, many girls don't think so. They say life isn't built around a kitchen. What young husband they ask scornfully, wants to spend hours waiting for a roast to cook, or for greasy dishes to be washed? He'd rather be on the go, and his wife, if she's the right sort, will go along with him. It's true, people have to eat, but why hang over a hot oven when there's a cool drugstore counter less than a block away?

If you think you're right, try the boy friend and see. Ask him to supper — that is, if you can manage the cooking yourself. If you can't better experiment a bit at first.

For instance: Are you really clever with your hands, as well as clear-headed enough to plan a program and carry it out? Can you crack jokes with the boy friend while you see that the muffins don't burn, or the water in the kettle doesn't boil away?

In short, can you not only produce a good meal, but do so without burning your fingers, losing your temper or even seeming overworked? If you can, you're in luck.

That boy friend whom you like better than any boy you ever knew and whom you want to like you just as much, may not have seemed impressionable. He may not have noticed the new dancing frock or the new permanent. What next?

You're in Love and you've just got to have him, and it will certainly lend a rapture to the boy friend's delight if you show that you know how to feed him.

Perhaps he's been brought up on mother-cooking, and has a high standard. Perhaps he has a sickening intimacy with the can-opener, and no standards at all. In either case, you can count on a response to your skill — if you have any.

It isn't that all men are gluttons. You wouldn't for a moment let me suggest that this boy friend of yours could be greedy. But even the youngest and flightiest of them like to be able to count on comfort and peace and regularity whenever they may need it.

Good food, prepared without fuss, is to them a symbol of contentment, a guarantee of happiness; it's solid reassurance in a world of uncertainties.

Can-openers and quick-lunch counters are precious helps to all of us in emergencies. But if a girl wants the modern equivalent of the love potion, she'll have to light the gas flame or turn on the electricity and set the refrigerator whirring.

It is scarcely possible for a man to be so changed, so "modern," so different from his ancestors, that he will not succumb to a good dinner. All unattached girls, please notice!

With their Kittyhawks waiting behind them like eager birds, a group of Canadian fighter pilots lean over their maps while discussing the day's operations. One Jap fighter plane was bagged recently by Wing Commander Kenneth Boomer of Ottawa.

High over the great mountain ranges of Alaska speeds a flight of R.C.A.F. Kittyhawks, ready to meet in the air anything the Japs may send against the shores of this northern outpost of the continent. Each day the aircraft of Canadian and United States forces cover many miles over dangerous mountain country and the lonely waters of the northern Pacific. In the case of a large scale invasion of North America by the Japanese it is probable that these aerial fighters would be out in front to bear the first shock. They have already clashed with strong forces of the Jap and bombed his outposts on a number of occasions.

Balmy Beach Cinch Second Place in League Standing By Defeating Hamilton by 7 to 5

Game Was Comedy of Blunders With 21 Errors Committed

OAKWOOD WINS

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto Balmy Beaches are rolling along the comeback trail today, but even their warmest supporters aren't waving playoff flags or singing victory songs. The climb from football obscurity has been too painful a process for that.

In fact, off Saturday's showing, Beaches can be compared without malice to a boarding-house Barrymore taking bows for a slightly off-color performance. They finally caught the cue in the final act of their little comedy with Hamilton Wildcats, but they fumbled their lines repeatedly before the grand climax. Between them, the teams committed 21 errors.

Hamilton opened the scoring in the first quarter when Joe Krol fired a 40-yard pass to Jim Pumio, who skipped five yards for an unconverted touchdown. There wasn't an encore until the fourth quarter. This time Bobby Porter did the flinging and Beaches Ross McKelvey carried the ball 15 yards for the major score.

Made a Blunder

At this point Hamilton made a monumental blunder by electing to let Beaches kickoff. That set up Sammy Sward for two singles to give Alex Ponton's club a 7-5 triumph, their fourth straight victory and second place in the Ontario Rugby Football Union standings behind Royal Canadian Air Force Hurricanes. Defeat slithered Hamilton into fourth place a point behind H.M.C.S. York.

Wildcats actually moved into position for possible winning points less than a minute from the final whistle, but Sward spoiled Al Lenard's attempted 35-yard placement.

Oakwood Indians Win

In the second half of the weekly doubleheader at Varsity Stadium, Toronto Oakwood Indians opposed Kitchener-Waterloo Panthers, the only team they have been able to beat this season and did it again 9-0. Annis Stukus kicked a placement in the first quarter, Doug Brennan kicked to the deadline in the second and Bob Henry completed the scoring in the same session after taking a lateral from Norm Dyce. Panthers couldn't threaten in the second half, despite stout backfield displays by Gus Scheiers and Doug Smith, who has blossomed unexpectedly into one of the best kickers in the league.

Not that it mattered much, but the victory gave Indians a secure hold on fifth place, four points ahead of the winless Panthers.

CANADIENS' ACE?

Terry Reardon, ABOVE, property of Boston Bruins, but playing with Montreal Canadiens, may centre for Toe Blake and Gordon Drillon to make up the Flying Frenchmen's first string line this hockey season. Blake and Drillon are noted goal-getters and with the hustling Reardon between them might form a line that could cut a wide swath in the wartime N.H.L.

PATRICK SIGNS ROOKIE GOALIE

Steve Buzinski of Swift Current to be in Twine for Rangers

By MARSHALL BATEMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Winnipeg, Oct. 26 (CP)—Lester Patrick is going to gamble for the second straight year on an amateur "kid" goalkeeper for his National Hockey League New York Rangers.

The "Silver Fox" came to Western Canada, plucked little Steve Buzinski from Swift Current, Sask., and almost signed him immediately to fill Sugar Jim Henry's shoes.

Henry, Winnipeg product, became the first amateur to make good without first having seasoning in minor professional circuits. Now Henry is in Canada's active army.

In Buzinski, the Rangers board of strategy believe they have a goalkeeper more polished than Sugar Jim, who was placed in the nets as a last minute substitution for "Buck" Kelly last season when the latter suffered a nervous breakdown.

The 26-year-old Buzinski, who was a major factor when Swift Current Indians won the western Canada intermediate championships from 1938 until last season, is somewhat like John Ross Roach, famed Ranger goalkeeper of a few years back.

A slim, 140-pound, catlike blocker, he is serious and cool under fire.

Born at Dunblane, Sask., he first played in organized hockey as a junior for the Saskatoon Nutana team in 1934-35.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, Oct. 26—(AP)—Going back, going ba-a-ack, going back to Nassau Hall. . . . Suppose every odd grad gets that feeling about his college sometime, but it didn't hit you until you went down to Princeton to cover the Princeton-Brown game Saturday. The place hasn't changed much.

The stadium looks the same, except that you sit in a reasonably comfortable, covered press box now instead of out on the hard concrete. . . . And you don't have the enthusiasm you had for Bully Dickinson's team back in '22. . . . Remember, that was when Bill Roper told 'em, "a team that won't be beat, can't be beat." . . . And he was right.

You saw your first Yale game that year, too. Princeton wasn't supposed to win that, but Yale couldn't get past the one-yard line and pretty soon Bob Beattie got away for a good run and Ken Smith kicked a field goal and you won 3-0. . . . This year's team is a lot like that one. . . These kids weren't supposed to beat Navy or Brown or to tie Penn, but they did it.

Some of the other seasons were not so successful, but they bring back their pictures. . . When Notre Dame's Four Horsemen came in and handed your Tigers a couple of lickings.

You're back on the campus again in the quiet of dusk, the crowd gone and you see Princeton as you like to remember it. . . . Going back, going ba-a-ck. . . . Say, fellow, what are you getting sentimental about? You've lived within 60 miles of the place for 15 years and you haven't been going back.

Canada's Athletes at War

By MIKE GREENSTEIN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Toronto, Oct. 24 (CP)—Joe Haley of Trail, B.C., one of Canada's best known track and field athletes, has joined the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Joe holds the Canadian high jump record at six feet five inches and has represented the Dominion in many international meets. At the British Empire Games, held in London in 1934, Haley tied for first place in the high jump. He represented this country at the Olympic Games in Berlin and was eighth among 48 contestants in the final standing. His standing was the highest in the high jump attained by any Canadian or other member of the Empire.

He also took part in the British Empire Games in 1938 at Sydney, Australia, placing third at the time.

George Kemp of Saskatoon, who enlisted in the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve, had quite a career as an athlete behind him when he joined up.

He was a track and football star in his high school days and also turned in a trick with the Saskatoon Quackers hockey outfit before his enlistment.

Among the members of the now defunct Vancouver Adanacs Lacrosse and Basketball Club who have enlisted in the armed forces are: Ted Bradbury, Gordie Saunders, Bob Phelan, Bob Lee and Ken Matheson, all members of the R.C.A.F. and all former lacrosse stars.

From the basketball bracket of the club are Ralph Burton, an instructor in the air force and Reece Temblett, in the army.

George Meen, who was one of the best linesmen produced by Warren Stevens on University of Toronto football teams, is a lieutenant in the Royal Canadian Artillery.

Torchy Peden, famed six-day bike rider, is at present holding down a job in a war plant in Cleveland.

Bob Isbister, one of Eastern Canada's greatest backfielders and kickers, and former University of Toronto, Toronto Argonauts and Hamilton Tigers football star, is a officer in the navy.

"Whitey" Rimstad, who played with Lethbridge Maple Leafs hockey team for the last two seasons is in the army and stationed at Calgary.

With him at the barracks there are three former teammates, Kenny Stewart, Don Culley and Doug Lane.

N. H. L. Training Notes

(By The Canadian Press)

Bill Klum is a good name to paste in your hatband for future reference. Klum probably won't make the National Hockey League this season, but if precedent means anything it won't be long before he does. He comes from Eveleth, Minn., which has given the game such great goaltenders as Mike Karakas, Sam Lo Presti and Frank Brimsek.

Johnny Conick, the right winger from Hamilton Majors who is seeking a spot on Toronto Maple Leafs third line, doesn't like having to shadow Dave (Sweeney) Schriner. "That fellow is really deceptive," said Conick, describing what happened at one practice. "I was watching him closely and he appeared as though he wasn't going to make a move. I turned to watch the play and then, boom. There he was in front of the net hammering the disc past Turk Broda."

Coach Clarence (Happy) Day told The Canadian Press at St. Catharines, Ont., he would like to carry 18 players this season—"But where am I going to find them?" As things stand now, Leafs may start the season with 14 players—three forward lines, four defencemen and one goaltender. At that, Day still isn't sure about his third line. Only Gaye Stewart at left wing is a sure-fire starter with the other candidate still unsigned.

Leafs hope to obtain Tommy Cooper, 156-pound right winger of St. Catharines senior O.H.A. entry. But Cooper so far has refused all offers. He came to St. Catharines last year from Winnipeg and set some kind of record by allowing his rival wingers to score only one goal during the entire season.

Coach Dick Irvin is pleased with Canadiens but he'd like a little additional power at left wing. He's still in the market for a winger, but it's his own secret whether he has anyone particular in mind.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

Toronto, Oct. 26—(CP)—Perfect functioning of each individual player on a team is probably more important in rugby football than in any other game. The ball-carrier usually receives the plaudits of spectators but the linemen, the ends, the blocking backs make those long runs and yard-gaining line smashes possible.

Fred (Peterboro Examiner) Craig has a word for these unsung heroes with the complaint "that existing football scoring records utterly fail to give an accurate picture of scoring plays. This was borne out by the Navy-Air Force game in Toronto Wednesday night. Each of the contending teams registered a touchdown by the forward pass method for five of the seven points scored by each club but the scoring summary contained only the name of the receiver who was credited with five points while the guy in each case who fired the touchdown pass got exactly nothing for his contribution."

True, the forward passers played their parts perfectly but the passers would have been smothered without blocking protection; they would have found no uncovered receiver if other potential receivers had not feinted the pass defence out of position. It would be impossible to describe each individual contribution to a successful football play but sports writers must mention point scorers because they are of primary interest to the average fan.

Incidentally:

Lieut. Tiny Herman, former Ottawa Rough Rider football star, returned home on leave after 18 months on active service aboard one of the Royal Canadian Navy's corvettes. "There's nothing like it," he said of his navy experience. "It keeps you busy but I wouldn't miss it for the world." . . . . Spectator attendance at Winnipeg High School football league games is reported better even than last year when the league drew more than 50,000 during the season. . . . Vancouver, home of several Dominion basketball champions, expects its current five-team league will be up to standard with many of the name players of other years again in action.

Collegiate News

B. C. I. & V. S.

Assembly: Wednesday, Oct. 21

Our morning assembly began well with an excellent march (by Sword and Lance) played by the band, following which Mr. Burgess conducted our devotional exercises and we sang the hymn "O God of Love."

Mr. Hill gave an account of our war stamp and certificate sales and we were very gratified with the week's total of $322.75. Let us maintain this amount from this time forward. X-A leads all forms with the sum of $147.10, and is registered by Mr. Davidson who formerly registered last year's top form, XII-A. What is your secret of inspiration, Mr. Davidson?

The following notices were read by Mr. Turner: Miss Bunting will preside at the noon-hour meetings of the Red Cross Club, and there will be regular meetings every two weeks; Miss Dwyer desires the names of all ex-students on active service since May, 1942. Have you contributed a knitted article to the "refugee box" yet? And has your form bought a blanket-for-Britain? Please bring any leather you may have to room 210.

Mr. Turner then gave the general announcements. It seems that the Chief of Police has requested that students refrain from cycling against the traffic on Campbell St. No court action will be taken against offenders (we hope) but you would certainly look silly with a broken neck. Beginning November 3, there will be a series of radio broadcasts entitled "Youth in Wartime" beginning at 4.15 and continuing until 4.30 p.m.

The Department of Education recommends that we listen to these timely broadcasts. In the very near future students will be supplied with invitations pertaining to the pageant on Friday night. The school band and the Glee Club will be in attendance, and it is rumored that there will be Air Force talent. (Rumour confirmed: Ed.) Captain Hood of the A.R.P. will address the school on Monday at the conclusion of the eighth period.

At this point we were delightfully entertained by the Glee Club which rendered two selection: "Sing a Song of Sixpence" and the charming "Aura Lee." Mr. Maybee then conducted the band in playing the hilarious "Mosquito Parade" and the old favorite "Sunset on the St. Lawrence." The National Anthem was sung, and our pleasant morning assembly was concluded.

Dramatics:

Due to the difficulties of procuring the stage for rehearsals around this time, the school play has been postponed for a week. "Our Town" will be produced on Nov. 19 and 20. Don't be silly! Who ever heard of an actor who would be too superstitious to act on Friday the 13th?

The addition of Lloyd Gladwell to the cast, in the romantic lead of George Gibbs was somewhat of a surprise. Other members of the cast recently announced include Bob Dickens as the paper-boy; Stuart Wood as the milkman; Muriel Semple as Rebecca Gibbs; Wallace Muir as Wally Webb; David Marcus as the choir-master; Ruth Blatherwick as the town gossip; Sam Lazier as Sam Craig and Douglas Bird as the undertaker. (!)

Cuff Notes:

Due to the mix-up of "Letters to the Editor" would all future correspondends please address their mail: "Cuff-note editor, B.C.I.V.S." and leave it in Room 114. All letters must be signed....Now that there is to be no Elevator, what is to become of that school institution—the taking of photographs in the library of this club and that class? Just being curious, of course .... Penny Cavanagh, Jim Greer and Don Beavis head the cast of the Victory Loan Pageant.

The trouble about cutting—well, embarrassing—speeches from the play lies in the fact that "to the pure, all is pure."....Congratulations to the artist who did the poster for the "keep-up-to-the-minute" window for the Library Club. No matter how much you feel that you can never face another class with this or that master, one glance at the window and, well, you just sort of melt. It's just a transferring of the emotions, a psychological friend tells me..Somehow we forgot to cuff-note the arrival of Margaret McAllister of Collingwood in our Grade XI. Belated greetings, Margaret.

Short Sport Shots:

"We dood it before,
And we did dood it again."

That's right—you guessed it. Albert College, 14; B.C.I. 5.

Although it's ancient history now, for the second time in two games we have come out on the short end of a rugby score. Inability to score when within Albert's 20-yard line proved to be our downfall. You've probably either seen or read the account of the game in the "Intell." so I won't got into that. However, I will say that if Albert didn't have a certain Mr. Fred Aboud the score would very likely have gone the other way. But here, here. What am I saying? I'm not supposed to fill up the Collegiate News column singing the praises of an Albert student. Therefore, I shall pass out orchids to the following:

"Bud" Bateman, who scored all our points by kicking a beeooful 30-yd. field goal and also kicking to the deadline twice for single points each time, besides his good defensive play.

Bruce Philp, for his ability to stop Fred Aboud (he was the only fellow that did) and also because he could cut through very slight openings in the line, consistently, for short gains.

ATHLETES REPORT TO R.C.A.F.

Two of the Maritimes' outstanding athletes, Carl and Frank Ripley of Amherst, N.S., have reported to No. 1 Manning Depot in Toronto to begin training as airmen. The Ripley brothers, PICTURED ABOVE, are twins. Last year both of them played hockey for Amherst St. Pats who won the Maritimes championship, while the year before, Carl, LEFT, teamed up with Baltimore in the Eastern Amateur league.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

A name that once struck terror into the hearts of the opposition was hockey personified years ago will again be on the lips of puck patrons. The Kingston hockey team has reverted back to the historic name of the "Frontenacs". To veteran hockey lovers the name Frontenacs will bring back fond memories of the days following the turn of the century, when such hockey greats as Scotty Davison, Ray Marchand, George Van Horne, Chaucer Elliott and George Richardson played for the old Frontenacs. Then there was the hey day of "Bouncer" Brouse, the Milan and the Stewart brothers, symbolic of Kingston's great Frontenac juniors. Then after the last war it was such men as Lloyd Brown, Joe Smith, Bill Cook and others who carried the Frontenac banner to heights. Many a hectic battle Belleville and Jim Sutherland's great Frontenacs engaged in, all classics of Canada's national sport.

Commenting on the returning to the hockey moniker "Frontenacs", Kingston scribe Bill Walshe brought up some memories that local fans will appreciate. Here it is: "A famous name returned to Canadian sports with the Kingston Hockey Club adopting the time-honored title of Frontenacs instead of the nickname Combines. There has been talk among hockey officials for some time to change from the name of Combines, which has now become common all over the country with so many amalgamations. New names were considered but none suited so well as the grand old county name of Frontenac. The name Combines passes after a short but creditable record. First used two years ago to express the combination of college students, servicemen and civilian residents, it was carried to the O. H. A. Senior B championship and then returned the city to the major ranks of amateur hockey last season. The name Combines served its purpose but it lacked individuality. Old Kingston residents have many memories of former Frontenac teams that have given the city an enviable position in the history of the great winter game. Frontenacs won the first O. H. A. junior championship ever decided for Kingston in 1893 and appeared in the first intermediate final in 1897, losing to Berlin but returning in 1899 to take the title. Lamb in goal, Rigney, point, and McDowell, cover, with Cunningham, Reynar, Harty and Murray as forwards were members of the first Frontenac intermediate champions. In their losing final against Berlin (now Kitchener) the Frontenacs played against Joe and Ed Seagram, whose shots are still famous."

Continuing Mr. Walshe adds: —"The Frontenac name is one of the most famous in O. B. A. junior hockey, being the first credited with a championship almost half a century ago," continues the Walshe story. "Walker, in goal, McRae, Point, Irwin, cover, with Sutherland, Lowe, Sears and Harty were other members of the team. In 1903 Frontenacs were runners up to the original Toronto Marlboros for the O. H. A. junior title and Frontenacs with the name Beechgroves added, won the Ontario junior honors in 1904. MacDonald played goal for the 1904 club with Harold Clarke point, George Van Horne, cover, and forwards Herb Clarke, Potter, Williams and Derry. Frontenacs returned to the Ontario junior finals again in 1910 and 1911 to win two in succession, a trick that was not repeated again until the recent Oshawa Generals. R. Marchand, in goal, the mighty Scotty Davidson was point, Mel Hyland, cover, Bouncer Brouse, Batt, Hunt, Reg. Somerville and Leo Millan were forwards.

Remember when the famous horse War Admiral, thought out of racing for more than a year, came back to top form six years ago today when he won by nearly three lengths over Aneroid in a mile-and-one-sixth overweight race at Laurel?

On Saturday afternoon the Albert College seniors and Stirling High School played an exhibition six-man football game on the Albert campus. The Stirling kids had never played the abbreviated game before, which adds to their prowess in a 13-all tie. However, the feature of the game was the final play. It seems Stirling was trailing 13 to 12 with only one play left in the game. The Stirling squad was scrimmaging on the mid-field strips and every person was looking for a long pass, pitched in final desperation. However, the Stirling kicking back stepped three paces to the rear, took the pigskin and booted it well over 55 yards into the coffin corner for a single point to tie the game in a gamble that showed the Stirling kids had the courage of their convictions.

Apparently Pedro Martinez, Mexico's gift to the wrestling fraternity, wasn't putting on any clown act when he challenged either Billie Watson or Earl McCready last week. When Skipper Frank (you select your own rasslers) Tunney tried to sign Martinez to a preliminary contract for Thursday night's bouts here Senor Pedro gave his boss the well-known brush off and flatly refused to come to Belleville unless given top billing. Tunney was really over the well known barrel, as he had a perfect drawing picture in a return bout between Watson and McCready in a 90-minute time limit scrap. However, Tunney still wanted Martinez on the card if for no other reason than his drawing qualities. But, Pedro wasn't for having anything but a headliner spot and won't be here Thursday. In the meantime Tunney is scurrying around for prelims, for his big 90-minute feature show.

..THIS AND THAT . . . Mister Big Tail — Whirlaway himself—roared from behind to win the Washington handicap at Laurel, Md., on Saturday, beating Thumbs Up by a half a length . . . Toronto Peoples took the first two games of the O.A.S.A. senior "A" finals and now the Hamilton "Pee Gees" are faced with the problem of winning the remaining three games if they expect to win . . . Nobody else does . . . Scoring five goals in the final period the Montreal Canadiens, of the N.H.L., beat the Washington Eagles, of the American League, 7-3 last night. CLASS C AND D BASEBALL LOOPS LIKELY TO CLOSE

Drafting of 'Teen-Agers' Into Army Given as Cause

70 CLUBS TO FOLD

Chicago, Oct. 26 — (AP) — Collapse of class C and D minor baseball leagues was foreseen today by Billy Webb, supervisor of the Chicago White Sox farm system, by drafting 18 and 19 year olds for war service.

Webb believed some 70 ball clubs would fold and only 20 per cent of their 400 players would survive

After talking with other farm bosses, Webb opined that the top minors — class B, A, A1 and A-A leagues, which lean heavily on the majors for material as well as money — could be strengthened greatly with seasoned players, if the majors boosted their reserve lists and reduced their active lists.

The 16 major league clubs must not have title to more than 40 players, including those under option, contract or reservation, and this number must be reduced to 25 by the 31st day of the playing season.

If each club trimmed its active list to 23, a total of 32 good men could be released to the minors. Many more could be handed down in the process if the authorized roster of 40 were enlarged.

Need Working Agreement

"C and D players left after the draft could be absorbed in the turnover," Webb said. "The need is great for a closely-knitted working agreement between the majors and minors and will pose a problem at the baseball meetings here in December."

Webb thinks the C and D leagues are doomed despite many 17 year old boys competing in them.

"These youths will enlist," Webb observed, "in order to pick their own branches of service, or will turn to defence industries for more money, or will regard it a waste of time to put in a year of baseball towards a career which may never be realized."

Only married players with children will remain, he said, and they can't gamble on a career for $85 a month in a D league.

"About 10 or 12 minors will operate in 1943," Webb guessed. "Two years ago we reached a peak of 42. Last season there were 27."

SPECIAL MEETING OF LOOP CALLED

Cornwall Objecting to Dearth of Home Games in Schedule

Montreal, Oct. 26. (CP)—A special meeting of the Quebec Senior Hockey League has been called for Tuesday to study requests that Ottawa and Cornwall be given more home games.

The request of the Ottawa and Cornwall teams have delayed adoption of the season's schedule which was tentatively slated to open here next Sunday with Quebec meeting the Montreal army team and Cornwall the Royal Canadian Air Force in a doubleheader.

On announcing that the special meeting will be held, League President George Slater said that entries outside Montreal have asked for more home games, but the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association has requested that travelling be curtailed as much as possible.

Urgent to Take Care Jute Bags

Among goods that are becoming increasingly short in supply are jute bags. Farmers are urged not only to take special care of every kind of bag, but to keep them moving back into the trade.

With filled bags care should be taken to see that they are not stacked so high as to rupture the bags on the bottom. No hooks should be used and every precaution taken to prevent damage by rats and mice. The bags should be stored in a dry place. When opening them open by the seam by cutting the string, not the cloth. Empty bags should be well shaken then hung over a wire in a high, dry place. As soon as possible deliver the empty bags to your supplier or sell them to a second-hand bag dealer or licensed peddler. This will mean the bags will soon be in re-use again, cleaned and repaired, if necessary.

It is illegal to mutilate or destroy any kind of jute or cotton bag.

Don't hoard bags. Get them back into the trade as they are urgently needed as containers for essential products.

Due to war conditions supplies of jute from India are most uncertain of supply.

8 Merchantmen Sunk Last Week By Axis U-Boats

(By the Associated Press)

Axis submarines destroyed eight merchantmen—seven of them United States cargo craft—in Western Atlantic operations, announcements last week showed.

Disclosures last week also revealed that five more United States vessels had been sunk out of Russia-bound convoys by enemy planes in the North Atlantic. These sinkings were not included in The Associated Press count of announced Western Atlantic marine losses, which stands at 502 since December 7, 1941, as they occurred far to the northeast of North American coastal waters.

At least 19 seamen perished in attacks announced since October 18; ten are still unreported, but 227 persons were rescued and safely landed at Allied ports. The captain of a United States vessel, whose imprisonment aboard the raider which torpedoed his ship was reported last Wednesday, was the twelfth skipper to be so treated by submarine commanders in recent months.

Seven American merchantmen and one Panamanian were reported last week as submarine victims.

"Wake Island"

As gripping a film as has ever been projected on the screen came thundering into the Belle Theatre Saturday.

It was Paramount's "Wake Island" a master piece of a movie telling the story of the little band of outnumbered Marines who for fourteen days stood off the pounding of Jap invasion forces and by so doing thrilled the hearts of all Americans and wrote glorious Marine history.

The fact that "Wake Island" was filmed with complete Marine Corps co-operation stands out unmistakably. The realistic land, sea and air battles are thrilling testimonials to the fact.

"Wake Island", bear in mind, isn't all battle scenes. The film has a very definite story, scripted by W. R. Burnett and Frank Butler. It is the story of the men who fought the battle, and therefore is a highly personal dramatic take that becomes magnificent film entertainment as acted by an inspired cast and forcefully directed by John Farrow. It has humor and gaiety amid the shambles of furious battle.

The picture starts just a few days before the Pacific atoll was attacked. Even then there was a sense of impending danger which led to the island being fortified.

Then it came. The invading forces hurled their might by land, sea and air against a handful of Marines and civilians. Against these heroic defenders the Japs had to pay a terrific toll—and for something they're going to have to give back anyway.

The film takes you right through the furious battle and makes you feel in every fibre the almost incredible heroism of that small contingent of fighting Marines.

Outnumbered and facing superior forces with the knowledge they were going to take a terrific pounding to make the Japs pay a terrible toll the Leathernecks fought on, determined what they wanted.

Each performance of the actors is flawless. They themselves go through their roles as though inspired, which they undoubtedly were, just as the entire American public was by the magnificent stand made by our Marines.

As red-blooded movie entertainment, "Wake Island' should not be missed. As an example to every American of courage and determination against odds, it must be seen.

A color fun cartoon, "At the Dog Show," The Belle News of the World, McFarlane Twins and orchestra in a smart revue and an entertaining Sportlight film, precede the feature attraction.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Bombs Over Burma"
(First Belleville Showing)

Anna May Wong gives one of the finest performances of her long R.C. timely war drama, "Bombs and distinguished career in the P. Over Burma," now playing at the Capitol Theatre.

The dramatic story unfolds as the group of travels, including Americans, and a titled Englishman and his Indian servant, are forced to stop at a wayside monastery overnight when a bridge is washed out by heavy rains. The monastery is in charge of a kindly monk, played by Noel Madison. But on discovering him disappearing behind a statue of Buddah, Miss Wong investigates and finds a hidden room from which the monk is sending short wave messages on a powerful station. She thinks she has uncovered the Japanese spy she is after.

Others in the cast are Nedrick Young, Frank Lacteen, Dan Seymour, Dennis Moore and Judith Gibson. Miss Wong does a fine bit of poignant and moving acting in an early scene as the Jap bombers come over Chungking and machine-gun her classroom, killing her favourite pupil. Don't miss this timely war story that makes you feel events as they have happened along the famous Burma Road. "Bombs Over Burma" was directed by Joseph H. Lewis from an original story by Milton Raison.

"The Westerner"

The added great attraction now showing at the Capitol stars Gary Cooper, Academy Award winner, at his best in "The Westerner." Big as the vast western plains in the turbulent era of flaming feuds and new frontiers!

An impassioned story! The feuding, fighting prairies where reckless men disputed the wild lands and fought for the love of women. A thrilling drama intensified the sure touch of Goldwyn showmanship! Roaring action in the days when Judge Roy Bean was "the law west of the Pecos." Samuel Goldwyn presents Gary Cooper, "The Westerner" with Walter Brennan, Fred Stone, Doris Davenport and cast of thousands. Don't miss it.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror"

Starring Basil Rathbone in the title role and Nigel Bruce as Dr. Watson, the same roles in which they appear weekly over the radio networks, the new screen hit, "Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror" opens today at the McCarthy Theatre. Other notable featured players in this production include Evelyn Ankers, Reginald Denny, Thomas Gomez, Montagu Love and Henry Daniell. The second feature which is presented in addition to "Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror" is an excellent musical-comedy, "Youth on Parade," featuring John Hubbard, Ruth Terry, Lynn Merrick and Tom Brown. Two short subjects are also presented "Freighters Under Fire" and Universal News Events.

"The Talk of the Town"

Belleville theatregoers are also to enjoy the sensational new comedy hit "The Talk of the Town," starring Cary Grant, Jean Arthur and Ronald Coleman, this weekend at the McCarthy Theatre.

Winter Control Of Cattle Lice

Cattle lice which causes serious losses among cattle should begin before the animals go into winter quarters. The stable should be thoroughly cleaned beforehand. In winter quarters, it is estimated that one pair of lice, if brought into the stable and left uncontrolled, will increase to over 20 millions in the four months of November, December, January and February. Generally, there are three kinds of cattle lice—the small reddish yellow louse and the two varieties of blue sucking lice, the long-nosed and the short-nosed species.

There are several methods of controlling lice: by washes of drugs and drug mixtures, dusting powders and dipping. Dusting powders are not so effective as washes or dips, and dipping can seldom be used owing to the lack of dipping vats large enough for cattle.

Stabled cattle can be economically treated with raw linseed oil. Boiled linseed oil or paint oils should never be used on any living animal. Raw linseed oil should be applied firmly, but without hard rubbing of the skin, with a brush at the rate of four ounces per cow and repeated at intervals of 20 days or less. After treatment the animals should be allowed to remain quietly in the stable, and should not be exposed to strong sunlight for at least 12 hours, so as to avoid the danger of oil-burns.

Creolin of commercial grade, applied with a woollen cloth or medium stiff brush in two per cent. solution in warm soft water is an old and favoured wash for the control of lice. Coal tar creosote dip may also be purchased and when used with either cold or warm water is ready for use. Applications of coal tar creosote and other solutions can be made more thorough by spraying than by hand.

Need to Lubricate Farm Machinery

With farm machines now rationed and repair parts more difficult to get farmers would be well advised to pay more attention to the lubrication of farm machines and equipment, say the Agricultural Engineers of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. The expense and time invested in good lubrication pay big dividends.

In addition to maintaining a lubricating film between the bearing surfaces the oil or grease that is on farm machines performs several other functions. The bearings are cleaned. Rusting and pitting of the bearings are prevented when the machine is idle. Exposed metal surfaces during storage periods are protected.

The oil and grease used for lubricating should be kept clean so keep the containers' covered to exclude dust and dirt.

Three or four different oils or greases meet the lubrication requirements of nearly all farm implements. Usually not more than two lubricants are needed for any one implement. Machines operating the year around may require lighter oil and grease for winter than for summer. Badly worn bearings may need a heavier oil that is not thrown out so quickly. Oil of the same viscosity or stickiness as is used in the tractor motor usually is suitable. Crank case oil may contain grit and if used on bearings may be harmful.

The United States supplies about 85 per cent. of the radio tubes in use in Iraq.

Plastic pipes that can be joined by heating them have been invented for household water systems.

CHAPTER 29
Judith Meets Max

When finally Judith was settled in an attractive hotel room it was too late to telephone Emily. Turning off the light, she sat in a chair by the window and looked at the electric fairyland that is Manhattan at night. And she felt as lonely as she had the first night she had come to New York determined to be the best fashion artist in the business and had cried herself to sleep in a small, frigid room.

Only the loneliness remained, for the determination to be the best fashion artist seemed not worth the necessary effort now. So ambition had gone the way of many of her former ideas.

She had left Clinton and now Clinton had banished her . . . because Stephen was there and Clinton was too small for them who would be bound to see each other. You could not merely be courteous and polite to a boy who had offered you his heart. Clinton had banished her because Stephen Larrabee loved her. And how unfair Judith was to fear he would stop loving her.

Where was the Judith to whom New York had once been a city to be conquered? Sitting in a hotel room a few years later, counting the hours until she saw Max Worthington who had hurt her into tolerance and driven away her ambition and sent her back to the people who had always loved her and to one to whom she was "the best."

Beyond tomorrow she knew nothing. If Max had plans, he had not spoken of them, and you never questioned him. That awful sense of drifting, conquered after she had begun to feel that her roots were in Clinton, came back to her again. And after tomorrow? What indeed after tomorrow? Max was a man who gave a girl a past, but not a future.

She slept fitfully and awoke with a start. the room was flooded with sunlight. "I'm going to see Max," she thought, and the old excitement flamed.

After breakfast she took a walk. Then she called up Emily.

"This is Judith, Emily. I came up last night, but it was too late to come out there. How are your two Tims?"

"Fine. Both of them."

"I'm not sailing, Emily. Max is here."

"Max! Oh!" She paused. "I thought—I'd hoped you were over that. Never mind. I shouldn't have said it. I liked him very much. But when am I going to see you? I want you to come out."

"I'll call you tonight."

"Make it tomorrow morning. Tim and I will be in New York tonight at the theatre. Ames was out to see us recently. He looks splendid. I don't think he minds about Phyllis at all. Well, call me in the morning, darling. I'm dying to see you."

Walking along the sultry streets, she felt only loneliness again and soon returned to the hotel room. She thought, "Max was only a voice over the telephone telling me to meet him. Not asking me. Telling me. He hasn't changed. He's too seasoned to change.

"Max . . . Think of Max and memorable hours with him. Do not think of your friends and your sister arriving in New York this afternoon and Stephen driving alone to Lake George. Alone? Hardly. Almost as vivid as her memories of Max was the visualization of Mary Anderson's blonde head close to Stephen's dark one in the car. But think of Max, this is his day. And isn't this the day you've longed for?

It seemed to her that time had ceased. She went down to the dining-room for luncheon and when she returned to her room, it was only 2.30. She could dress leisurely. But she found that she was dressing quickly with hands that fumbled from weakness. When at last she looked at herself in the full-length mirror, she saw a rather tall girl in a soft-toned print frock, a broad-brimmed red straw hat and black patent leather pumps.

There was still time, too much time for faces to spring at her, particularly the face of Fay. She could see a room with a piano and Max's photograph on the piano and hear what Fay was saying again. She thought, "I can't help these things. I can't solve them. I've always done what I thought was right at the time and I've never consciously hurt anyone. Or am I excusing myself? I don't know. I only know that in an hour I shall see Max again."

She came out of her hotel and got into a taxi.

Later she thought, "I'm weary of fighting myself. The contentment I felt in Clinton, wasn't it happiness also? Am I learning to distinguish excitement from happiness? I wasn't happy there. Sometimes I was excited and sometimes I was smug. I was always waiting for something wonderful to happen to me. The average, normal things weren't good enough for me. Yet they gave me contentment in Clinton. My family's love gave me contentment. I don't want to come back here again. I have a past, but no future. Max must give me a future today."

The taxi stopped and she stepped from the daylight glare to a cool, dim, luxuriously-furnished lobby where people, young and old, smartly dressed, came and went.

That Max had not arrived she was glad.She would have a few minutes in which to prepare herself. She selected a high-backed blue chair and tried to look comfortable and unconcerned.

She saw Max coming through the revolving doors. Her pulse quickened because he was unchanged. When he saw her, smiled and hurried to her, it was as though her pulse died. No, Max had not changed. His eyes were no less blue and knowing, his features had lost none of their strength.

He took her hands and held them tightly and looked into her face.

"Judith, you look very lovely." His voice was less precise, less demanding.

"Thank you, Max. You are looking very well indeed."

"I'm late—as usual."

"It doesn't matter."

"You're very sweet. But let's not talk here."

The lounge was dim and cool and luxurious, too, with many mirrors. Few people were there. Judith and Max sat side by side, their shoulders touching.

A serious Max turned to her and his voice was very gentle. "You're not sailing, I appreciate that. I can well imagine it took a good bit to get out of it."

"Telephone calls chiefly." That wasn't exactly true. She had seen Stephen!

"You are not different except in the ways that made me love you."

"Love?"

He frowned. "I deserve your scorn. I couldn't write you. I had to see you. I talk much better than I write and I didn't want to be misunderstood by trying to put my thoughts on paper. It's a long story."

"I know that story, Max."

"But what you don't know is that I was a man in love with two women. I am not turning back to you, Judith, because I have never really turned away from you. You were what I once told you you were—a meteor across my sky. Did we both know in the beginning that it would mean so much to us? Frankly, I didn't . . . But in no time you and Fay were equals in my affections. I know its difficult to understand that and believe it. I can't help whether you believe it or not. It's true. Your letter of resignation hurt me more than anything has ever hurt me. I can be hurt, Judith. This exterior is not as thick as I would have most people believe."

"Then why did you pretend it was?" She had never questioned him before.

"Because I didn't want to marry anybody." There were fine wrinkles around his eyes when he narrowed them. "I never felt it would be fair to ask a woman to share my roving life. I am not cut out for anything else, and even if I were, it's too late for me to try anything else. I'm too old." He smiled.

"Yes, Judith, I'm too old. In a very few years I shall be a middle-aged man. That, I'm sure, has never occurred to you. You were sweet and young and lovely and intelligent. You were someone very special. I never intended for you to get the hold on me that you did get. Perhaps if I had lived less violently and you had lived more the gap in our ages would not have made me tear up the various letters I began to you. You underrate yourself, Judith. Your love for me flattered me immensely."

"Flattered you?"

He nodded. "I told you once that you made me romantic. You made me ridiculous, too, almost ridiculous enough to ask you to marry me. I can't expect you to understand about Fay."

"Because I loved you, Max, could I blame her for loving you, too?"

"You're very fair."

"You told me once that I was arrogant. I didn't believe you then. But I know now that I was both selfish and arrogant and wrong about so many things. I had to be hurt to understand and to appreciate the things and people I'd taken for granted. I had to be hurt to see that I didn't really want to be successful. My father told me that a lone successful person is the loneliest person in the world. . . We were very romantic, Max, but we weren't very real. We were never commonplace, but I've learned to value the little, common, ordinary things that keep people close. You kept from me the real knowledge of you. We never shared anything. You came and went like a man in a play, a man whose outside life you have to visualize."

"I loved you very dearly. You won't scorn me for saying it now, will you?"

"No. No. I believe that you did. And you've answered a puzzle that has tormented me for a long time. 'Doubt everything and everyone, if you must, but never doubt my love.' You said that to me. You loved me but you were afraid."

He nodded. "Of being a middle-aged man married to a young girl. Afraid of being unfair to you. Life owes you so much I can't give you, Judith. It's ahead of you and finished for me. You're the—the too bright sun."

Little Benny's Note Book

I was taking a walk with pop and we heard a policeman's whissle and somebody's brakes skreetched, and pop said, Wowie, that taxicab went right past the light, and there goes the traffic officer stalking over to give him a ticket. I musn't miss this. Next to a sunset nothing appeals to my artistic sense like a traffic officer's face turning redder and redder as long as it's not turned on me at the time, he said.

And we walked over to hear what the policeman was starting to say to the taxicab driver, and he was saying, Say, you, did you ever happen to hear about traffic regulations?

Sure, I've heard about them from better looking cops than you, the driver said, and the policeman said, What's that, say, watch your gab there or I'll see that your lip gets buttoned up good and tight in a nice quiet cell.

Chirp away, brother, you cant worry me, I been worried by experts, the driver said. This boat of mine is practically sailing on its rims right now, and they tell me I cant get no more tires even if I'm lucky enough to get gas, so who do you think you are to make me feel bad? he said, and the policeman said, Now that'll do of that, see? You ran through that light and I'm going to write you out a ticket and push it right in your ugly map, see? he said.

Go ahead and write it, beet face, if you can write, the driver said. They wont even let me buy a couple of little parts to keep this cab from rattling itself to death, so I expect to have plenty of time to plead innocent and drag you through the courts with that ticket till you're an old man with such a permanently red mug it'll keep flashing like a lighthouse beacon 24 hours of the day, he said, and the policeman said, Aw go on go on, keep going, get out of here.

With eight honor flags fluttering proudly on the staff of the school indicating that personnel has contributed eight hundred per cent of a quota of $1,500 to the Victory Loan, No. 5 Initial Training School on Saturday was host to five hundred civilian guests on "Open House" day.

The school, in conjunction with other stations of the Royal Canadian Air Force in Canada, threw open all its training, accommodation, messing and recreation facilities to the public in support of the current Victory Loan Campaign. It was learned today, that the school has boosted its percentage of Victory Loan contributions to 1,000 per cent or $15,000. This for the present constitutes a record in air station bond purchases in this section of Ontario.

Guests on Saturday were met at the station gate and escorted by specially appointed personal guides through the various phases of training and the buildings in general.

Demonstrations were seen by airmen in training on the now famous Link Trainers, while the actual work of decompression chamber tests was viewed by the guests.

Spotless kitchens in turn were inspected by the crowds as were the messing halls, the airmens, and non-commissioned officers messes and lounges and quarters.

The equipment stores and the new gymnasium were in turn visited by the civilian guests, who had a first hand insight into how Canada's fledgling airmen pass through the initial stages of their intensive training, and how they live, eat and relax.

As in other air stations of the nation, the daily routine of training was not interrupted by the presence of the large crowd of civilian spectators. The ordinary phases of everyday life went on unhampered and all syllabuses of training were not disturbed by the presence of strange faces.

The Open House day arrangements were under the supervision of the school adjutant FO. E. W. Barnett.

Fire Causes $600 Damage

Damage amounting to approximately $600 was caused to a residence at 59 South George Street shortly before the noon hour on Sunday, when fire of an undetermined origin gutted partitions and several rooms of the frame dwelling.

Furniture of the two tenants in the building was also considerably water-damaged, it was stated by firemen this morning. Household effects in the downstairs apartment were covered by insurance, but no insurance was carried by the roomer upstairs. Tenants in the building were Mr. Alexis Calbury and Mr. A. C. Scott, salesman, whose effects were in an upstairs room.

The fire had gained considerable headway before the alarm was received at the fire hall, according to Fire Chief Lynch. Tenants claimed an alarm had been turned in earlier but firemen stated the call was not received at the fire station.

In the opinion of firemen the partitions of the structure, both upstairs and down, were ablaze by the time the fire-fighting equipment arrived on the scene. The entire south portion of the dwelling seemed ablaze, the fire having got into the roof and the verandah on the verge of falling in. No attempts to take out furniture had been made prior to the arrival of the firemen, it was reported.

In all, three lines of hose were used on the burning structure to control the blaze. Two lines from hydrants were run by firemen upon their arrival but low pressure necessitated the city pumper being brought into play.

Mrs. Calbury told firemen she thought the fire resulted from an explosion in the chimney, but this was discredited by Fire Chief Lynch, who stated the chimney appeared in good condition at the time of the blaze. Mr. Scott, the tenant living in an upstairs room, claimed the house had appeared exceptionally warm for two hours before the arrival of firemen and it is believed the flames had been gaining in progress unnoticed between the partitions.

Successor Lies Among 6 Men

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, Oct. 26 (CP Cable) — Speculation about the man Prime Minister Churchill will recommend to the King as a successor to the Marquess of Linlithgow as Viceroy of India encompasses a welter of possibilities, but unless some outsider comes to the fore in the next few months the choice seems to lie among six men.

The six are Sir John Anderson, Lord President of the Council; Dominions Secretary Clement Attlee; Richard Casey, Minister of State in the Middle East; Lord Greene, Master of the Rolls; Lord Harlech, British High Commissioner to South Africa, and Capt. Oliver Stanley, Minister of Works.

SHOPLIFTERS SAID ACTIVE IN CITY

Shoplifters were reported active in Belleville over the weekend when eighteen pairs of men's socks were reported stolen from the Canadian Department Stores here. A purse belonging to Miss E. Reid, operator of the store elevator, was also reported missing along with $7.00.

Store employees saw two men loitering about the premises late Saturday afternoon, following which the goods were reported missing. Both men were moderately dressed and were seen wandering about from counter to counter without any pretense of making purchases. A description of the men was later given to police.

ALBERT COLLEGE BOARD MEETS

Reports of Progress Presented to Governors—New Members of Board Welcomed

The annual meeting of Albert College Board of Governors convened at the college last week and four new members appointed by the General Council of the United Church which recently met in Belleville were welcomed, Newton Thompson of Belleville, Alex MacGregor of Napanee, J. Carroll Anderson, K.C. of Oshawa and G. J. A. Reany of Hamilton.

Reports of progress were tabled for the past year and were very encouraging. While it was pointed out that the present registration is not quite as large, yet a fine group of young people is attending the college. The falling-off in attendance is due largely of course to young men enlisting in the war services.

Rev. Rev. Peter Bryce moved a resolution of sincere appreciation to Rev. Dr. Howard and staff for the excellent progress which had been made.

Including the recent appointments made by the General Council, the Board of Governors of Albert College is now composed of the following: W. J. Morrison, Belleville, vice chairman; H. W. Ackerman, Belleville, bursar; W. H. Hopper, Cobourg; Donald J. Baxter, Bloomfield; Very Rev. Peter Bryce, Toronto; Fred Deacon, Jr., Belleville; W. B. Deacon, Belleville; Judge G. E. Deroche, Toronto; W. S. Gordon, Tweed; J. H. Gundy, Toronto; F. L. Hooper, Napanee; George F. Ostrom, Belleville; Dr. Fred Routley, Toronto; Stephen Saywell, Oshawa; Dr. W. E. Smith, Toronto; Prof. C. E. Walker, Queen's University, Kingston; E. B. Warriner, Toronto; Dr. A. J. Wilson, Toronto; A. B. Baird, Belleville; Judge C. A. Cameron, Belleville; Rev. George Purchase, Tottenham; Newton J. Thompson, Belleville; J. Carroll Anderson, K.C. of Oshawa; Alex MacGregor, Napanee; G. J. A. Reany, Hamilton.

Coffee to Be Rationed in U.S. Starting Nov. 28

Washington, Oct. 26 — (AP) — Coffee will be rationed starting at midnight, Nov. 28, at a rate of one pound every five weeks for each person in the United States over 15 years old, the Office of Price Administration announced today. On the basis of 35 to 40 cups to the pound, the ration means slightly more than a cup a day per person.

(Coffee and tea rationing has been in effect in Canada since last summer. Ration coupons, used for either coffee or tea, allow four ounces of coffee or one ounce of tea per person per week — but not both. Children under 12 years of age are not entitled to coupons.)

Retail sales will be halted at midnight, Nov. 21, price administrator Leon Henderson said, for a weeklong freeze during which grocers will stock their shelves for the start of rationing.

Hours of Closing To Be Discussed

Fred G. Smart, secretary of the Ontario Retail Hardware Dealers' Association, will be a visitor to Belleville on Monday, November 2, when he will be the guest of the Belleville Retail Merchants' section of the Chamber of Commerce at an evening dinner to be held in the banquet room at the Tabernacle Church.

Mr. Smart is considered an authority on many of the wartime problems affecting business men. He will deliver an address dealing especially with the proposed opening and closing hours for retail business.

The dinner will be open to the general public if reservations are made.

Celebrate Feast Of Christ the King At St. Michael's

Yesterday the Feast of Christ the King was celebrated at the Church of St. Michael the Archangel by a Solemn High Mass at ten thirty with Rev. C. E. Baker as celebrant, assisted by Flight-Lieutenant Rev. Father Abel as deacon and Flight Lieutenant Rev. Father Mikka as sub-deacon. A contingent of airmen and a group of airwomen from Trenton Air Station marched to the church with their band, the parade forming from the market square in charge of Squadron Leader Mirabelli. The church was decorated with flags, and a large flag was flying from the new flagpole on the south lawn of the church.

The sermon was delivered by the pastor, Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G., who welcomed them to the church and spoke on the claims of Christ as King. After Mass the visiting airmen and airwomen, numbering about one hundred and fifty, were entertained in the homes of parishioners.

The Blessed Sacrament was exposed during the day and last evening the Holy Hour was held. At seven thirty a reception of about one hundred candidates into the Angels' Sodality was held. The children's choir sang hymns and there was a procession of the Blessed Sacrament in which representatives of the different societies took part carrying banners. The pastor spoke stressing the significance of this ceremony. Solemn Benediction was given by the pastor, assisted by Rev. A. O'Donnel as deacon and Rev. C. E. Baker as sub-deacon.

Trenton Air Station Is Mecca For Thousands on Occasion Of Victory Loan 'Open House' Day

Large Crowd Personally Conducted on Tour of Station and Its Training and Other Facilities

NO INTERRUPTIONS

Trenton, (Special) — Imperturbable undergraduates of Canada's "University of the Air," as it is dubbed by a high-ranking Air Force official, refused to be bothered Saturday by thousands of civilian spectators who took advantage of "Open House" at the Trenton Air Station, R.C.A.F.

An estimated four thousand people received a first-hand view of how the airmen of the station, both officer and other ranks, live, train and relax under war conditions.

Open house day was held in conjunction with the current Victory Loan drive, and Air Commodore Frank S. McGill, officer commanding and his staff and personnel, went "all out" in their efforts to present a true picture of the part the Royal Canadian Air Force is playing, insofar as the Trenton Station is concerned.

For here are some of the most important training schools in the British Commonwealth Air Training scheme. Here is the only Central Flying School in Canada. Here is No. 1 Flying Instructional School and the Composite Training School which includes administration equipment and accounting training schools.

Spectators, escorted by R.C.A.F. guides were shown how flyer instructors are taught; they saw embryonic administration officers do their basic training; they saw clerks general, clerks accountant, fire fighters, disciplinarians, security guards, service police, airdrome contact officers and nursing orderlies go through their training paces.

They were told of the Re-selection Centre, the only one in Canada in which air crew members whose abilities have been found to be more suitable to other phases of Air Force life are remustered.

And they were shown how four hundred WAAFS (Women's Division) are playing an important role in R.C.A.F. activities. They saw and met these fine young Canadian women, drawn from all parts of the Dominion. They saw them in "action;" they saw them in their comfortable quarters, they saw them on parade. They heard they say, "It's swell; we're having a grand time doing our bit."

Conservation of Waste

Thanks to the courtesy of Air Commodore McGill, Squadron Leader N. A. Nunn, Senior Equipment Officer and Corporal A. K. MacLean, one of the station photographers, who personally conducted the Press party through the station, reporters were able to get a first-hand insight into the many and varied phases of station life and activities.

It was noted that there is a concerted effort on the part of the station to eliminate every possible angle of waste. Used lumber is carefully stored. Used nails are saved and stored for future use. Used clothing is called in and sent away for overhaul. Shoes are carefully repaired and resoled for new use. In the spotless kitchens every available piece of food or fats left over is utilized.

STORES GAS

Huge hollow steel balls such as this one are being used in the United States to store highly volatile products which must be mixed during the final steps in the manufacture of 100-octane aviation gasoline for fighting planes. The spherical structure of these tanks is needed to withstand the tremendous pressures at which fractions, used in the manufacture of the gasoline, must be stored, operating from a Norwegian base.

Self-Contained Community

The station is a self-contained community. It has its post office, telegraph office, library and facilities for practically every need of the airman or airwoman. And its requirements are as great as average small town. It uses 20,000 tons of coal yearly to heat its eighty-three buildings. It consumes 340,000 gallons of pure water daily. Its food consumption is huge. One airman's mess alone serves twenty-one hundred meals each day.

Two theatres provide shows nightly.

Typical of the meals served at Trenton was the menu for the Saturday evening meal. It consisted of hamburg steak, mashed potatoes, salad and celery, biscuits, fresh fruit, bread and butter, jam, cheese and tea and cocoa. And there was a look of content on the thousands of airmen as they filed from their messhalls after the meal.

Airman's Mess No. 2, under Sergeant A. W. Clarke, is typical of the messes at the station. Spotless in every detail, the kitchens and messhalls are the last word in cleanliness. Civilian chefs work under the supervision of mess N.C.O.'s and lady graduate dietitians who prepare the menus which must have the approval of the commanding officer before going to the kitchens. Civilian guests on Saturday saw huge stockpots bubbling with soup foundations. In other large containers cocoa simmered.

Station Show Place

One of the show places of the station is the airmen's lounge. Here the authority of stripes, shoulder or sleeve rings is not allowed to enter. Situated in the basement of one of the quarters buildings, the lounge is the last word in comfort. Lighted with soft subdued glow from shaded lamps, it contains chesterfields and easy chairs, writing and reading tables. Its rich furnishings and hangings make it one of the most attractive as well as comfortable places of its kind on the station.

Adjoining billiard rooms provide further recreation.

Thousands of civilians inspected the airmen's, corporals' and sergents' quarters and messes. In the barrack rooms the beds were neatly and carefully made. Clean linen was apparent everywhere. Floors and walls were spotless. Clothing was neatly piled. It all attributed to the efficiency of the station personnel.

The same conditions of cleanliness and efficiency were evident in the quarters of the Women's Division. Here the airwomen were seen at various phases of recreation and study. Four hundred are now on duty at the station in many forms of employment.

The Hospital

Another feature of the station is its modern well-equipped hospital. Under the supervision of Senior Medical Officer, Wing Commander E. Clarke Noble and Nursing Sister Flight Lieutenant Mabell Montgomery, the institution looks after the physical and medical needs of the personnel of other stations of the district as well as its own. There is a modern operating room, X-ray department, diet kitchens, dispensary and pathological laboratory. Eight medical officers, ten nursing sisters and orderlies staff the hospital. A fully equipped ambulance is on duty at all times when flying is going on.

Equipment

Care and supervision of equipment is another important phase in the station's work. Squadron Leader Nunn is in charge of this work and under the watchful eyes of himself and assistants the huge quantities of various equipment are carefully recorded, distributed and cared for. Airplane parts, engines, clothing, boots and shoes, flying suits, mechanical parts and the one hundred and one other equipment items.

Fire Department

Equipped with up-to-date fire-fighting apparatus, the station Fire Department stands ready at all times to meet any emergency which might arise through fire. Ample evidence of the departments efficiency was seen in a demonstration by the highly trained fire squads with hose and reel. The fog system in which water is broken down into minute particles by high pressure, and which forms a water vapor was seen. The fog not only effectively extinguishes any blaze but forms a protective blanket for the nozzle operator. With this method, he can walk directly into the fire without fear of injury.

Press representatives were taken high atop the water tower of the station where a magnificent view of the Bay of Quinte and other surrounding areas can be obtained. At the foot of the tower is housed the pumps and machinery that daily draws nearly 350,000 gallons of water from Trenton. A powerful beacon light is installed at the top of the tower, which can be seen some twenty miles away on a dark night.

The mechanical transport section, and seaplane hangars where crash-boats and other R.C.A.F. marine equipment are repaired and overhauled during the winter months was inspected by the curious guests. On all sides were heard laudatory comments on the efficiency, cleanliness and life in general on the station.

Squadron Leader Nunn assisted by Flight Lieutenant A. A. Lamport and WO 1 John A. Silver station sergeant-major were responsible for the "Open House' ceremonies, and its unqualified success is due in no small measure to their efforts.

Entertainment was not forgotten. The crack brass band of the station under WO. 2 Hancock played sparkling melodies during the afternoon while Station Sports Officer Horton provided a program of soccer, rugby, basketball, boxing, swimming and other athletic events. In the evening a dance was given by the station sergeants.

Routine Not Disrupted

Routine of the station was not disrupted during the Open House ceremonies. Training was not disrupted, and in the words of the commanding officer, "it was just another day in the life of Trenton Air Station."

Commanding officers under Air Commodore McGill include Wing Commander F. C. Carling-Kelly, Central Flying School Wing Commander J. G. Stephenson No. 1 Flying Instructional School; Wing Commander D. J.R. Cairns, Composite Flying School; Senior Medical Officer Wing Commander E. C. Noble; Senior Equipment Officer Squadron Leader N. A. Nunn; Accounts Officer, Flight Lieut. L. E. Fingarson; Resident Engineer, Flight Lieut. R. S. Anderson; Reselection Centre Officer, Wing Commander R. D. Coath. The station Adjutant is Squadron Leader A. MacLean Haig.

MAIN BLOW OF BRITISH 8TH ARMY SET TO FALL

Extends Its Hold On Enemy Ground In Bitter Fighting

Eighteen Axis Planes Destroyed as Allied Fighters Retain Mastery of Air

CONVOY ATTACKED

(By DON WHITEHEAD)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Cairo, Oct. 27 (AP) — Slashing forward in hand-to-hand fighting under cover of darkness and beating off desperate Axis counter-attacks by day, the Army of the Nile has penetrated Field Marshal Rommel's main positions and widened a road for tank attack through enemy minefields, battlefront dispatches reported today.

As the battle for North Africa raged through its fourth day there was no word of a clash between main armored forces, but the cautious British advance through mines, barbed wire and fields of the navy fire was clearing a battleground for the expected test.

Hold Mastery of Air

Fighters and bombers of the R.A.F., the United States and the South African air forces, hold mastery of the desert skies, affording a tight protective cover over the British advance and a ruinous battering of enemy positions.

Advance ground forces operating within sight of the bombing of Axis troops and strong points sent back their message of praise: "Good show; keep it up."

In all aerial operations yesterday, over the desert, the Mediterranean and Malta, Allied airmen scored 18 to 10 over the Axis in planes shot down.

American fighters intercepted 4 Macchi 202's over the desert and knocked down all four, equalling in a single fight their total bag for the day before.

Medium bombers dealt battering blows at Rommel's land supply lines and his massed tanks, and heavy bombers blew up a merchantman and hit a tanker and barges in convoy attacks.

Fighting Continues

The bitter fighting, on the land and in the air, is continuing, the joint British headquarters-R.A.F. communique said. Of the 18 Axis planes destroyed, 16 were over the desert and two over the Mediterranean. At least three more were shot down over Malta.

Ranging out over Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's supply lines on the Mediterranean, Allied bombers attacked a convoy off Tobruk and saw one tanker burst into flames and a large merchant vessel blow up after hits by bombs and aerial torpedoes.

Long-range Allied fighters shot down two German escort planes after an attack on the convoy.

Axis forces guarding the convoy included four destroyers and a large air escort. Only one of the convoyed ships, a second merchantman, escaped.

Stukas Roar to Attack

The heaviest enemy air blow against the 8th army advance was dealt at dusk last night in a dive-bomber attack on British advance positions. The Stukas roared down in the failing light of evening, but were beaten off by intensive ground fire.

The Allied air forces, meanwhile, began large-scale use of night fighters as a cover for the advances of the army of the Nile by night.

In yesterday's desert fighting, in one instance two important Axis concentrations forming for a counter-attack were broken up by continuous shuttle attacks by American planes.

KING DECORATES HEROES OF DIEPPE AT ROYAL PALACE

Maj.-Gen. Roberts First of 74 Canadians Receiving Decorations

LONG HALL CROWDED

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent.

London, Oct. 2 (CP Cable) — Heroes of the Dieppe raid went to Buckingham Palace to be decorated by the King at a recent investiture, it was disclosed today. The group numbered more than 100. This, the first part of the investiture of men from the combined operations force, was predominately a Canadian occasion.

Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner, Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNNaughton, the Canadian Army Commander and Lt.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, a Canadian Corps Commander, had special seats while Lord Louis Montbatten, Commander of the Commandos, was in attendance on the King, his first appearance at an investitute since being decorated for his own part in the battle of Crete.

Maj.-Gen. J. H. Roberts, who led the raid on Dieppe Aug. 19, was the first of 74 Canadians receiving decorations and, after pinning the Distinguished Service Order to his tunic, the King said: "What a great pity it was we lost so many Canadians at Dieppe, but it was a very good show."

The second Canadian going before the King was Brig. Sherwood Lett, who recently left hospital with his right arm still in a sling. He also received the D.S.O.

Heroes File Past His Majesty

For one hour and 45 minutes Canadian and British heroes filed past His Majesty. More than 500 relatives and friends of those decorated crowded the long hall at the top of the staircase by the main entrance to the palace to witness the ceremony.

The King wore naval uniform. The first to be decorated was Capt. Patrick Porteous of the Royal Artillery who received the Victoria Cross for gallantry while serving as liaison officer between two commando detachments assaulting heavy coastal guns at Dieppe.

Only once before had a Canadian correspondent been permitted to witness an investiture and I watched the ceremony from a seat 15 feet from the King in the gilded, pillared hall with portraits of Royalty on the walls.

More Nervous Than at Dieppe

I watched scores of friends step before the King — appearing far more nervous than when I saw

Cat-eyed Desert Night Fighters Striking Hard at Nazis in Egypt

By EDWARD KENNEDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the Allied Air Forces in the Western Desert, Oct. 27 — (AP) — Included in the great air force striking hard at the Germans in this North African offensive are cat-eyed desert night fighters.

This British squadron flying Hurricanes armed with four cannon has two tasks: one, to catch enemy night raiders and shoot them down; two, to harass the enemy on the ground.

They have been doing both with great success.

When I visited them, I wanted to check on popular notions about night fighters. One is that they eat special vitamin tablets so they can see better at night, another that they are not allowed to eat eggs because of a theory the sulphur in eggs impairs night vision.

The squadron leader and the squadron doctor said the egg legend is untrue. All the fliers eat eggs. Vitamin tablets are left up to each night fighter, if he finds vitamin tablets make him see better and he can find the tablets.

"There is no way of improving sight," the doctor said. "All that can be done is to prevent it from deteriorating."

And then the squadron leader came through with this real explanation of what makes a night fighter:—

All Like Night Flying

"If he has a good record and we can use him, he is accepted. The main thing is whether he likes night flying. If he does, you don't have to worry much about night vision. Most of us would never want to go back to day flying."

Night fighters are the greatest individualists among desert pilots. They strive for none of the close teamwork in day flying. Each man is on his own, lurking around in the sky looking for something to shoot at.

He may be assigned to hang over certain areas where enemy raiders are expected. Or he may be assigned to areas on the enemy's side. Over there he looks for good targets such as a camp, a group of soft-skinned vehicles or a gasoline dump, comes down and strafes it with cannon shells and usually leaves fires behind. He also carries a single bomb for any target worthy of it.

He may lurk over an enemy airfield until planes land and then come down on them.

It is not unusual for his squadron to get 30 vehicles, a gasoline dump and a score of tents in a night's work.

Phases of the moon are important and tactics are altered with its wax and wane.

Huns Driven From Stalingrad Area Out to Steppes

SOLOMONS BATTLE ERUPTED INTO DECISIVE CLASH

Aircraft Carrier Wasp Built in 1939 Victim Of Three Torpedo Hits On September 15th

MANY SHIPS SUNK

Washington, Oct. 27 (AP)—Navy Secretary Frank Knox said today "the issue has been joined" in the battle of the Solomons and that the "Japs have a lot of strength," but the "outcome is not clear."

One day after the sinking of the Aircraft Carrier Wasp was announced, Knox said the navy is "putting up a gamer fight" than at any time in its history.

"I am not foreshadowing the results," he told his press conference "and I am certainly not foreshadowing defeat."

The secretary described the campaign in the Solomons as a war of attrition in response to requests for any comment he could make on frequent arrival of Japanese reinforcements.

Generally, Knox said, the Pacific situation "is about the same as before, a darn tough, stiff fight."

Noting that today is Navy Day—the date for paying honor to men of the fleet—Knox said "in some respects it is the most notable navy day, because the navy in all its history never put up a gamer fight than it is putting up now."

Indications today were that the Japanese, goaded by continual bombing and a realization their march of conquest in the Solomons has stalled, are throwing everything they have into a drive to crack the Allied front in the southwest Pacific.

Loss of the 14,700-ton, $20,737,000 Wasp September 15 was disclosed by the navy last night shortly before it was announced that a full-scale attack was developing around the American defenders of Guadalcanal by land, sea and air.

Both announcements followed a White House conference between President Roosevelt and the naval high command.

Capt. Forrest P. Sherman, 45, commander of the Wasp, said at Pearl Harbor last night the carrier was making a turn when hit and if the torpedoes had been fired a few minutes later they would have missed. The first three hit near the bow and the fourth went wild.

The battle now in progress already has resulted in severe damage to another of the United States four known remaining carriers, the sinking of the destroyer Porter, and lesser damage to other ships.

Axis Code Paralleled Only in History Of Lower Cannibal Tribes

Canadian Minister to United States Tells Detroit Audience Allies 'Are Dealing With Maniacs' and Making of World Peace Will be Harder Than After Last War

Detroit, Oct. 27 (CP)—Leighton McCarthy, Canadian minister to the United States, declared today a parallel to the Axis code of conduct in this war could be found only "in the history of the lower cannibal tribes."

This, said the minister in a prepared luncheon address to the War Chest of metropolitan Detroit, was one of the reasons he thought the making of world peace would be harder after this war than at the end of the First Great War.

"Last time we were at least still working within the tenets of civilization," he said. "With certain dishonorable exceptions, such as the introduction of poison-gas as an accepted German weapon, the recognized code of war had been generally observed.

Calculated Crime Against Peoples

"This time our enemies have been educated in, and are practising, the code of the jungle and the tenets of savagery. To the Axis leaders, the murder of hostages, the starvation of children, the calculated obliteration of whole populations, the torture of prisoners of war, the enslavement, even of their own willing allies are legitimate measures of war."

It is a "discouraging and disturbing picture" but the plain truth, McCarthy said, is that the Allies "are dealing with maniacs who have infected their nations with a mass psychosis and that psychosis must somehow be cured before we can hope for anything better than an armed and troubled peace after this war."

He held out the hope that sometime in the future the example in international relations between Detroit and Windsor, Ont., "and by all the other communities from Boundary Bay to Passamaquoddy" would become "the ordinary pattern of international relations and not a shining exception."

Mutual Dependence

To make that possible, the world will have to accept the only point of view that makes it possible — "the age-old principle of mutual dependence among the sons of men."

"We are beginning to understand that the survival of China and the survival of America may be inseparable," he said.

"That the defence of Egypt is also the defence of Stalingrad, and that the two are just as truly a combined operation as the joint drive that the Americans and Canadians have been making in the Aleutians.

"That while Hitler and his friends are visibly anxious to have us think of ourselves as separate countries, fighting separate wars for separate objectives, this is false and crooked thinking. The Americans, the British and the Canadians at Dieppe were not three separate parties fighting for three separate countries. They were one united force storming that bit of coast on behalf of all the United Nations . . ."

The action of any one of the United Nations was action taken for all, McCarthy said. There was direct connection between "the secret fight of a villager in Bohemia against his Nazi overlord and the survival of these mighty industries in Detroit."

WILLKIE DEMANDS SECOND FRONT AND BURMA DRIVE

Leaders and Military Experts Must be Exposed to Public Opinion

UNCENSORED ADDRESS

New York, Oct. 27. (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie again has urged a second European front, and says that "if we continue to fail to deliver to our Allies what they are entitled to expect of us or what we have promised them, our reservoir of good-will will turn into one of resentment".

"We owe them more than boasts and broken promises", Willkie said last night in an uncensored report of his recent journey to the Middle East, Russia and China. The speech was broadcast throughout the United States over the four major radio networks and was heard in Canada over the National network of the CBC.

The 1940 Republican Presidential candidate declared that the war's record thus far is not such as to inspire "any sublime faith in the infallibility of our military and naval experts". He termed "misdirected censorship" the idea that non-military experts or persons not connected with the government should not make suggestions about conducting the war—"military, industrial, economic or political".

"Let's have no more of this nonsense", he said. "Military experts as well as our leaders, must be constantly exposed to democracy's greatest driving power—the whiplash of public opinion, developed from honest, free discussion".

"We and our Allies must establish a second fighting front in Europe. I also hope that shortly we can put the considerable force in India to aggressive use in an all-out attack on Burma, as Gen. Wavell has urged. Thus we will relieve the pressure of our enemies on China and Russia, our superb fighting allies".

Willkie said the United States is "also punching holes in our res-

GREATER SECRECY DEMANDED BY ADMIRAL OF FLEET

British Government is Criticized by Lord Cork and Orrey

PROMISES INQUIRY

(By FOSTER BARCLAY)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 27. (CP)— The British government, striving to curb "careless talk" on military topics, has been strongly criticized for permitting alleged breaches of security regulations and forced to promise that an inquiry will be launched into what one headline writer called a "betrayal of vital convoys to Russia and the Middle East".

In a hushed House of Lords, Admiral of the Fleet Lord Cork and Orrey demanded greater secrecy involving shipping movements and described complaints from seamen about leakage of cargo destinations.

"I can imagine nothing worse for officers and men in ships that to suspect that the authorities are lax about taking precautions for their safety", said the Admiral. "A statement that the regulations will be enforced in future will do much to reassure not only the men who go down to the sea in ships, but the wives and relatives who have to wait for months in anxiety before they return".

Special Investigations

Lord Leathers, Minister of War Transport, quickly assured the Chamber that a special investigation would be held into the allegations.

Mosquito Bombers, Made All of Wood, Fastest Ever Built

London, Oct. 27 —(CP)— The new British Mosquito bombers being used for bombing missions on the continent are made mainly of wood, it was revealed today, and Peter Masefield, air commentator, said in a BBC broadcast that they are the fastest bombers ever built.

The Mosquito, Masefield said, is "one of the fastest airplanes in the world in any category," and carries a "surprisingly formidable bomb load."

TWO NEW RAIDS MADE UPON JAPS ON KISKA ISLAND

Enemy Installations Attacked by United States Bombers Include Sub Base

NO AIR RESISTANCE

Washington, Oct. 27—(AP)—Two new bombing raids on Japanese installations, including a submarine base, on Kiska Island in the Aleutians were reported by the United States Navy today.

The reference to the submarine base was the first mention of such an enemy installation in the island chain reaching westward from Alaska. However, the navy on several previous occasions had mentioned enemy submarines operating in the Aleutians area.

Both of the bombing assaults were made by army planes. No report of the damage inflicted upon the Japanese was given.

The Navy said that during the raids enemy anti-aircraft shore batteries were active but that no aerial resistance was offered.

In the first raid army "Liberator" bombers guarded by Lockheed "lightning" fighters dumped 18 tons of bombs on the Japanese camp area on Kiska and the submarine base.

600,000 U.S. Troops Escorted Overseas Without a Loss

Pittsburgh, Oct. 27 (AP) — Capt. Leland P. Lovette, Director of Navy Public Relations, said here Monday that the United States navy has escorted more than 600,000 troops overseas "without the loss of a single soldier."

The supply line-fronts he said, are to Russia, the British Isles, the Aleutians, Australia, Hawaii, Africa, Far East and India for China.

Of the long northern supply route to Russia, the captain said:

"That probably is the most important front of the Atlantic. It is the fearful route—the dreadful, the terrible route where a survivor cannot live longer than five minutes.

"We have lost heavily on this front. But if 50 per cent. of our cargo gets through, then it is worth it. The front must be supplied."

He said the navy knew definitely 14 Japanese vessels, including six destroyers, have been sunk in the Aleutians and probably many others.

Russians Beat Off Nazi Assaults On Restored Defences

Pressure Against Nazi Flanks Both South and Northwest Of City Growing

POSTS DESTROYED

(By HENRY C. CASSIDY)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Oct. 27 (AP)—The Germans lost a foothold in the southern industrial section of Stalingrad and fell back to the steppes outside the city today under Red army counterattacks while Nazi assaults were reported to have beaten futilely upon restored defences of a northside factory.

Russian pressure against the German flanks both south and northwest of Stalingrad appeared to be growing and the invaders struggled ineffectually to make more than slight gains within the city, the Russians said.

Reporting on one phase of the action south of the Volga River stronghold, the Soviet information bureau said Soviet units had destroyed 10 machine-gun posts and 26 blockhouses and dugouts at the outskirts.

Japanese Claims "Another Fishing Expedition"—Knox

New York, Oct. 27. (AP)— The Japanese broadcast today their version of a big naval and air battle yesterday in the Solomon Islands area, claiming the sinking of six United States warships, including four aircraft carriers, one battleship and another ship of unidentified type.

In Washington, Frank Knox, secretary of the Navy, said the Japanese claims are "another of their fishing expeditions". The American and Japanese forces in the South Pacific, he added, were engaging in a war of manoeuvre.

This enemy report recalled others emanating from Tokyo after the Midway and Coral battles, which turned out to be greatly exaggerated.

Invasion-Jittery Germans Frantically Strengthening Continental Defences

(By ROBERT BUNNELLE)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London Oct. 27. (AP)—The invasion-jittery Germans are frantically strengthening their continental defences on the basis of a lesson learned from the Soviet stand at Stalingrad a reliable diplomatic source said today.

The lesson is that an ordinary city studded with pillboxes and strong points can be just as effective as conventional fortresses like those of Liege or Namur which the Germans took May 11-24, 1940.

This source, who would not permit use of his name but who is unusually well-informed on continental affairs, said he had been advised the Germans were employing approximately 100,000 men in Stalingrad-style strengthening of cities from Lille to Amiens and along the border of Occupied France from the coast to Switzerland.

Many of these men, he said, were taken off the old fortress type of defence works because the strengthening of a city which already is a maze of concrete, stone and brick naturally is much quicker than fortress building.

Symptomatic of Nazi invasioin fears are daily aerial scouting flights over Britain for hints of when and where the Allied forces are likely to deliver their first body blows.

Generals Disagree

The source said he also had received reports of continued disagreements between the faction headed by Hitler and Gen. Alfred Jodl and one including Field Marshal Fedor Von Bock and Col. Gen. Franz Halder.

Hitler and Jodl were declared to have insisted that German troops press on against Stalingrad and prepare to attack across the ice of the Volga while Von Bock and Halder were said to want the Germans to fall back to stronger, more comfortable winter lines behind the Don.

The Norwegian government in London meanwhile reported that Germany had abandoned long-term industrial projects in Norway and had put into the construction of coastal defence projects the thousands of workers who had been building dams, power plants and factories.

The problem of securing the country against possible Allied attacks are taking precedence over everything, a Norwegian official said.

Insecurity Increasing

"The state of unrest within the country and the precarious state of the sea lanes between Germany and Norway are increasing the insecurity of the Nazi hold over the country", he added.

A Moscow radio broadcast said Norwegian patriots machine-gunned a truck column in the Finmark district of far northern Norway and 27 Germans were killed.

Widespread strikes were reported by the International Transport Workers' Federation to have broken out in Athens and Piraeus, Greece, leading to the use of troops to force the participants back to work.

Three of the strike leaders were executed, 800 were sentenced to long prison terms and 11,000 persons were dismissed, the Federation said.

FAVORS RATIONING TO SAFEGUARD LIQUOR STOCKS

Hotel Association Ready to Promote Campaign for Moderate Use of Alcohol

ABSENTEEISM, LABOR

Ottawa, Oct. 27 (CP)—An offer to use its funds, personnel and property to promote a campaign calling for the moderate use of alcoholic beverages was made by the Hotel Association of Canada in a brief presented yesterday to War Services Minister LaFleche.

The association suggested that the government should consider or encourage a "simple, satisfactory form of rationing to protect present stocks of liquors and assure equitable distribution in future sales."

The brief asserted the regulations under which Provincial Liquor Control Boards functioning were the result of the "popularly expressed choice of the people in each of the provinces," and as such were best suited to serve their wishes.

"If any limitation of hours is to be considered," the brief said, "this limitation should be viewed in the light of local considerations, such as working hours for a majority of the people, particularly those engaged in more intensive war work."

The Hotel Association claimed that any substantial change in the present regulations, either for relaxation or further restrictions, would "meet with considerable public antagonism," and said neither could be justified.

Further, it asserted, advantage should not be taken of the tense emotional conditions of war to effect changes or impose restrictions which would not be accepted under normal conditions.

Survey of Public Opinion

The brief cited recent surveys of public opinion in Canada as its authority for the statement that the Canadian people "are not prepared to accept a condition of prohibition on the sale of alcoholic beverages" and declared "nothing more damaging to Canadian unity of feeling and opinion could be introduced at this time than the issue of prohibition."

MEN NOT IDENTIFIED AS ASSAILANTS

Three men, suspected of assaulting two Chinamen and robbing a Trenton cafe last week, were detained in Port Hope on Sunday, but after the trio had been paraded before the victims of the attack the men were released. Trenton residents could not identify the men. The trio was first seen at Campbellford early Sunday and later apprehended while driving a Willys motor car into Port Hope. They could not be identified as the men to attack two Chinamen and later steal $50.00 from the City Cafe in Trenton.

LEGION AUXILIARY HOLDS EUCHRE PARTY

The Ladies' Auxiliary to the Canadian Legion, Post No. 99, held their regular euchre and bingo party on Monday evening at the home of Comrade Camken, Station Street, about thirty members being present. A most enjoyable evening was spent, the prize winners at euchre being, first, Mrs. Ellis, second, Mrs. Healey, third Mrs. Cleaver and consolation, Mrs. Moreau. TABERNACLE YOUNG PEOPLE MEET

Tabernacle Y.P.S. held their first meeting Monday evening in the Sunday School rooms with some twenty members present, the president, Fred Edmundson, presiding. The program was in charge of the Young Ranger group under the leadership of Hazel Denike. The leader gave as her topic "The Story of a Chinese Christian Nurse in Modern Warfare," who stayed at her post in spite of all hazards. The story was told in an interesting manner and much enjoyed by all. Plans were completed for a Fireside Hour in charge of the Young People on Sunday evening following the regular church service. Delegates were chosen for the sectional rally at Napanee on Wednesday evening. The rally is to be in charge of Miss Marion Daniels and the address given by Rev. R. E. Spencer of Tabernacle Church.

Several games, capably directed by Edith Walker, the recreation convener, brought the meeting to a close.

BELLEVILLE BAND TO GIVE CONCERTS

The Belleville Municipal Band will give a series of nine concerts to be held on Sunday evenings beginning in the near future, Manager Harry Moorman announced Monday.

The series will be sponsored by the three service clubs of the city. Rotary, Kiwanis and Kinsmen whose members will act as ushers for the three concerts allotted to each club. The Sunday evening concerts will be given in the McCarthy Theatre.

2 LARGE STEERS BELIEVED STOLEN

Cattle thieves are believed active in Tyendinaga Township again Monday night, according to complaints lodged today by Mr. J. V. Walsh, Marysville farmer. Provincial Police today were informed by him that two Polled Angus steers, valued at $120.00 each, were stolen from Mr. Walsh's herd sometime Monday night. The disappearance of the two steers marks the second case of suspected cattle rustling in that area within a fortnight. A heifer calf was missing at Trenton over the weekend. With a shortage of beef reported prevailing, the stealing of beef cattle is considered a very serious offence.

No disturbances were heard in the vicinity of the Walsh farm at the time.

LOCAL PLANT IS BROKEN INTO

Believed to have been the work of juveniles, the premises of the Coca Cola plant, Church St., were entered recently and twenty bottles of soft drinks stolen. The matter was reported to police by company officials. Entrance was gained through a north window, it was learned. Nothing but soft drinks were disturbed, indicating juveniles were doubtlessly responsible.

HARDWARE STORE IN CITY ENTERED

Robbers broke and entered the Smith Hardware store on Front Street early today. Police discovered a rear door open at two o'clock this morning. Mr. Douglas Row, manager of the hardware store, was notified and subsequent investigations proved that the rear side door had been forced open with a heavy steel bar. However, the would-be robbers were unsuccessful in gaining entrance to the main part of the store, as a door between the rear and the store proper had withstood all efforts to pry it open. Police reported the door was secure when the earlier beat was patrolled at midnight. Nothing is believed to have been taken, indicating probably that those responsible for the intrusion were seeking cash.

PICKS BERRIES IN OWN GARDEN

Raspberry bushes bearing fruit at this time of year present something of a novelty for gardeners. Mr. D. H. Brown brought to The Ontario Intelligencer this morning a sample of blue raspberries which he had obtained from his garden at his home 98 Pinnacle Street today. The berries were large and well formed, some still red and others completely ripe. This is the first time Mr. Brown has encountered such a phenomenon in his gardening experience.

POLICE COURT

Robert H. Weymark, North Front St., appeared before Police Magistrate J. L. Lloyd today on a charge of assault. No plea was sought by the court, Weymark being remanded to the custody of the county jail without bail.

"I think I should ask to have this man mentally examined by Dr. McGregor, the Provincial psychiatrist," suggested Crown Attorney E. C. Donnan, K.C., and His Worship agreed.

Violations of city traffic regulations enriched the coffers of the court following several pleas of guilty to charges of infractions of the city parking bylaws. Percy Hazelton, Belleville, paid five dollars and costs on each charge of speeding and also of careless driving. Hazelton was implicated in a motor crash Sunday evening on West Bridge St. which led to the charges, Deputy Chief Harman revealed.

Several men appeared on charges of intoxication and those in default of the assessed fines were sent to jail. "There are some fine old names here," remarked Mr. Donnan as he observed some repeaters on the docket.

Need of Civilian Defence In Canada Stressed By Capt. McIntyre Hood at Meeting

Comprehensive View of Organization Setup is Given by Speaker

FIVE AUXILIARIES

Presenting a comprehensive view of the organizational set-up of the civilian defence organization across Canada, Captain McIntyre Hood, Secretary of the Ontario Civilian Defence Committee, spoke to an encouraging number of members of the local A.R.P. unit and other interested persons at the Collegiate auditorium on Monday evening.

As a prelude to his address on the organization of the civilian defence committee set-up, Captain Hood spoke briefly, but in outspoken terms, of why civilian defence is needed in Canada.

He claimed that it took intensive bombing raids to force the people of Britain into the realization of the need for civilian defence. There were many months of trial and error before today's well-knit A.R.P. organizations came into being, but people in Canada are fortunate that they can benefit by mistakes made in Britain.

Towns Saved by A.R.P.

"Britain," he said, "was saved from invasion by the heroic work of the Royal Air Force, but her cities and towns were saved from complete and awful destruction by the work of her civilian defence units."

He claimed that with the present range of aircraft it was not impossible for enemy planes to fly direct from Europe with loads of incendiary bombs and asserted that Southern Ontario was well within the range of aircraft taking off from aircraft carriers in Hudson Bay or the Atlantic coast.

Civilian defence work in Canada has three links of authority, it was stated by Captain Hood. These are Dominion, Provincial and local. All equipment is furnished by the federal authorities, this in turn being distributed by provincial authorities to the local committees who do the actual work. Headquarters staff is made up entirely of volunteers who work without remuneration.

Federal Govt. Assists

The federal civilian defence authorities will assist local committees to the extent of 50 per cent. of the cost of setting-up their defence organizations, it was pointed out by Captain Hood. There are two ways of doing this. A budget of the expected expenditure can be worked out and presented to federal authorities, or the organization can be set up and the bill submitted at the end of the year. Fifty per cent. of the cost will be paid in either event.

In thickly populated areas where there may be many municipalities within a radius of a comparatively few miles, there are sometimes set up regional or district officers, who have control over civilian defence work in interlocking or vulnerable areas.

Cities, in turn, are divided into zones, each headed by an air raid warden or group of wardens. The general plan is for no section of the city to be more than one-half miles from an air raid post. There are 26 posts in Belleville with six wardens needed for each post.

"The only reason for civilian defence," stated the speaker, "is to train additional personnel to assist existing services that the situation might be handled efficiently when an emergency arises."

Five Auxiliaries

The work of civilian defence is divided into five auxiliaries, according to the provincial secretary. These are auxiliary police, auxiliary firemen, medical services, public utilities and transportation. Each branch of the service must have trained personnel to cope with any emergency that might arise as the result of an air raid.

The operation of a closely-knit civilian defence organization begins to take place with the warning of an impending air raid. First there is the yellow warning, signifying that enemy planes have been sighted. This calls all air raid personnel in the district affected to their posts.

Captain Hood spoke in high tribute to the amazing courage shown by the people of Britain during the continuous air raids that razed almost entire cities in 1940 and 1941.

"But let me remind you," he concluded, "any amount of courage is useless during the emergency of an air raid unless those persons have the knowledge and are trained in what to do when bombs begin to fall."

Mayor Speaks Briefly

Captain Hood was introduced by Mr. Harold Seldon, Vice-Chairman of the Belleville Civilian Defence Committee, who briefly outlined the growth of the local organization. Mayor Glencoe Thompson spoke briefly prior to Captain Hood's address, thanking the people for attending, and at the close expressed appreciation and assured the speaker the Belleville Council were behind the civilian defence committee 100 per cent.

Two movie reels depicting the work of the A.R.P. units in Britain under action were shown through the courtesy of the Stewart Warner Company which loaned their projector for the occasion.

Speaker Criticizes Apathy of People With Respect to Defence

AT ROTARY CLUB

Sharp criticism of the complacent and apathetic attitude evident in the people of Ontario in general and Belleville in particular, in regard to the ability to protect their homes in the event of an air raid, was levelled here yesterday by Captain McIntyre Hood, secretary of the Ontario Civilian Defence Corps and newly appointed secretary to Premier G. D. Conant of Ontario.

Speaking to the Belleville Rotary Club, Captain Hood charged that at a recent meeting held here, the residents of Belleville showed no interest in the protection of their families, homes and properties.

"It is time everyone in Ontario woke up to the possibilities that exist. We have not begun to win the war yet and until we do the country is in peril for we do not know what desperate things Hitler and his hordes will do before they go down, as go down they will."

Canadians can stand up to whatever the war may bring, Captain Hood said, but all the courage and heroism in the world is useless if they are not prepared for a time of emergency. The Civilian Defence Corps is providing the opportunity to Belleville to prepare itself and guarantee self preservation. "The time to do it is now and not after the bombs begin to fall."

Not Far From Danger

"Bellevillians think they are thousands of miles from the sea and danger," he said. "But let me tell you, Belleville is only 400 miles from the New England seaboard and 600 miles from James Bay, a small hop for bombers. The enemy would sacrifice an aircraft carrier and planes if it could cripple Canada's war effort."

"We in Canada do not know whether we will be bombed," Captain Hood said, "but we do know the war is coming closer to us each day. Who would have believed two years ago that Canadian ships would be sunk in the St. Lawrence River?"

Sharp Contrast Drawn

He drew a sharp contrast between the people of Britain and Canada, "both of whom are fighting for the same cause." Previous to the Battle of Britain there was a marked apathy in the attitude of the British people but when the bombers came, and her cities began to fall in smoking ruins, there was a change. Today there are no slackers. Everyone has a job and everyone is prepared. They realize they are fighting for their very existence, and all are in the front line.

Captain Hood spent over two years in Britain and went through the Battle of Britain in September 1940. "Actual warfare taught Britain the necessity of civilian defence. Now they are truly air-raid conscious. Now their civilian defence forces have been conscripted."

He did not know if the Home Defence and Civilian Defence forces of Canada would be conscripted, but he did know that the Civilian defence forces of Ontario should be composed of 350,000 men and women. At present there are 75,000.

Portable Pumper For A.R.P. Work Demonstrated

Under the floodlights of the brilliantly lit collegiate campus, members of the Belleville Fire Department, assisted by a few members of the local detachment of the Ontario Volunteer Constabulary Monday night gave several demonstrations of the new auxiliary A. R. P. pumper which has been supplied to the local civilian defence committee.

The portable gasoline auxiliary pumper was received in the city several weeks ago but a working demonstration of the new equipment was held up pending the arrival of suitable hose and nozzles. The pumping unit is now complete and ready for operation in an emergency.

Pumping water from a temporary catch basin on the Collegiate campus the minute-sized pumper last night at several demonstrations proved to numbers of interested spectators the value of the auxiliary equipment. With three lines of one and one-half inch hose attached the pumper threw 150 gallons of water per minute a distance of approximately 45 to 50 feet into the air.

Officials of the local fire department expressed their appreciation of the work the pumper could do in an emergency fire providing city water pressure for some reason was not available. Invitations were extended by Fire Chief Lynch for residents to volunteer for the civilian defence fire-fighting force and become familiarized with city and auxiliary fire-fighting equipment.

Outlying Districts Speed Momentum In Loan Drive

Outlying districts of the county are gradually gathering momentum in the Victory Loan Campaign, according to official figures released today. Church Family Party is Held Large congregations at both morning and evening services on Sunday heard inspiring sermons preached by the Rev. Charles Geo. Smith B.D., of Montreal, on the occasion of the sixty-ninth anniversary of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church. Special music was rendered by the choir under the leadership of Miss Phyllis May, while Miss Laura Lavoie officiated at the organ. The junior choir also rendered a very pleasing anthem during the morning service, while Mr. Jas. Bankier was heard in a splendid tenor solo in the evening. The pastor, Rev. H. O. Eastman was in charge of both services. Flight Lieut. S. Inman, padre at Trenton R.C.A.F. assisted in the reading of the Scripture at the evening service.

On Monday evening a church family party was held in the Sunday School rooms, which provided further opportunity for the many friends of Rev. C. G. Smith to renew acquaintances. Rev. Mr. Smith, a beloved former pastor of the local church, has many friends in the city and a large gathering was in attendance to fellowship with him and with one another.

A splendid program of entertainment was provided, with Rev. H. O. Eastman in the chair. Mrs. Wellbanks was heard in a vocal solo while duets were sung by Miss Jessie Fox and Miss Bonnie Hetherington, also Mrs. B. Doolittle and Miss E. Forman. Mr. S. Alec Gordon delighted the audience with two piano selections while Mrs. Landin (Mildred Lloyd) gave two humorous readings that drew spontaneous merriment from all sides. Words of welcome were eloquently expressed by Mr. Fred Fox and Mr. Stanley May. A brief message, interspersed with rare wit, was given by Rev. Mr. Smith. Flight Lieut. S. Inman offered prayer during the devotional part of the meeting. After a dainty luncheon, provided by the B.Y.P.U. the pastor pronounced the benediction.

Short Session Of City Council Held Monday

One of the shortest sessions of the City Council in the present term was held on Monday evening, the members retiring immediately after the meeting to the Collegiate Auditorium, where a lecture was given on Civilian Defence. The meeting did not last a half hour and only routine business was transacted.

Any applications made for the erection of signs must in future be made direct to the City Council and if allowed an order will be issued by the City Clerk. Mr. J. A. Wood was requested to remove his sign at Evans Street, at once and if not removed the City Solicitor was instructed to take immediate action. The City Comptroller was instructed to write the Hydro Commission about the increase in cost of power. The former rate was 2.25 per hour. The City Engineer will attend a convention of sewage disposal at the Royal York Hotel in Toronto, on Thursday and Friday of this week. The City Treasurer was instructed to purchase bonds for the City employees and to deduct so much from the wages of each employee until paid for.

The use of the Thompson Barn by Westons for storage and horse stables will not be allowed according to a report submitted by Aldermen Potter and Rollins. The Aldermen gave as their reason that a special drive along the Moira River might be built in the future and the location for the Bread Company would be suitable. A lot was sold to a resident of Michigan on Dufferin Avenue on which a suitable house will be erected. Ald. Rollins was given permission to secure an option on the property on West Bridge Street leading out from the River Road and was also authorized to deal with another resident respecting property in that area. A number of bylaws were passed dealing with the transfer of property.

Flowers will be sent to Ald. Thomas Marshall, who is a patient in the hospital and the photograph of Lt.-Col. C. C. I. Merritt, V.C., given to the city by the Dominion Government will be suitably framed and hung in the Council Chambers.

KING DECORATES

them in the turmoil of battle on Dieppe's beaches.

Throughout the investiture the King seemed to enjoy every minute, and he said a few words to practically every soldier, sailor or airman. With several Canadians he asked about the Dieppe operation and the questions indicated he knew every detail of the plan and how the battle fared.

His Majesty stood in the centre of a red-carpeted ramp and the heroes lined up along the wall, then walked up and stood before him as the Lord Chamberlain, the Earl of Clarendon, called out their names.

Then there was a handshake — maybe a short conversation — and the soldier stepped back, bowed again, and walked down the other side of the ramp.

Standing by the King, Lord Louis Montbatten several times leaned over to tell His Majesty about some particular man.

When each man's name was read out, the Lord Chamberlain also read out his regiment or service.

Welsh Guards Band Plays

Men of two Highland regiments at Dieppe — the Essex Scottish and Winnipeg Camerons — all wore the McGregor or Cameron Kilt.

During the investiture the Welsh Guards band played softly. Six yeomen of the Guard in colorful uniforms stood at each side of the ramp.

Show Evidence of Wounds

Apart from Brig. Lett, several other Canadians still showed evidence of wounds. Capt. Pierre Loranger of Montreal, member of the Fusiliers Mont-Royal, was on crutches as he received the Military Cross. Capt. John Gartshore, of Ottawa, of the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry, had his right arm in a cast. He also received the M.C.

Three members of the Royal Canadian Air Force were among those decorated. Sqdn.-Ldr. Leslie Forbes of Halifax, received the Distinguished Flying Cross and Bar. He told the King the Bar was for Dieppe and the D.F.C. for attacking naval vessels in Hurribombers.

D.F.C.'s also went to Flt.-Lts. Don Smith of Toronto, and George Casey of Mitchell, Ont., for the Dieppe operation.

Brig. Churchill Mann, of Toronto, who served on Gen. Roberts' staff in the raid, said after receiving his D.S.O.: "I am one of the backroom boys and I feel my honor is on behalf of a lot of other men."

His Majesty Knows Details

Capt. Don McRae of Cornwall, Ont., attached to the Essex Scottish, said the King asked what beach McRae had landed on and how many men he took off in the small boat in which he evacuated. "His Majesty certainly knew details of the raid," Capt. McRae commented. He received the Military Cross.

Naval officers and men who took the Canadians to France were among those decorated as well as members of the three commando forces who crossed the Channel. Fliers of the bomber, fighter and army co-operation commands also were there and after the military decorations had been awarded a number of members of merchant navy and civilian war organization in Britain were decorated, among them three women.

Following the investiture the Canadians and others left the palace by the main entrance, walking into the courtyard where they received congratulations from friends as army and civilian photographers took pictures.

Several hundred people gathered at the iron gates in the fence around the palace grounds, and the Canadians received more congratulations there—often from total strangers.

Captain Porteous was nearly mobbed at the gate by people wanting to shake hands.

FAVORS RATIONING

in Owen Sound, Ont., a city in a so-called "dry" area, have a higher percentage of absenteeism than do industries in Chatham, Ont., "where alcoholic beverages are dispensed legitimately."

The brief asserted that Owen Sound's absenteeism record is 6.5 per cent of current labor lost, and attributed the figure to a study of labor records in plants with 1,175 employees.

In Chatham, whose population and industries are comparable to those of Owen Sound, records from plants employing 1,200 persons show that time lost from absenteeism is 1.0 per cent, the brief said.

Chatham and Owen Sound

"No other factors," the Hotel Association said, "exist to explain the higher performance of employees in Chatham as against Owen Sound than the conditions under which alcoholic beverages are sold. The peoples are alike, and industrial relations are otherwise comparable.

"There is still another distinguishing factor between the 'wet' and 'dry' areas. Sales of Victory Bonds, War Savings Certificates and Stamps, donations to Red Cross and Auxiliary War Services are higher in the 'wet' areas than in those where conditions of prohibition in the sale of alcoholic beverages exist."

SOLOMONS BATTLE

series of tank, artillery and aerial attacks on Guadalcanal, has not all been one-sided.

The Japanese have suffered damage to two carriers, two heavy cruisers and one light cruiser since Sunday. Seventeen of their fighter planes and five bombers were shot down during a raid on the American-held airfield. Damage was minor.

The Americans seemed to have the edge in the air but the matter of naval supremacy appeared yet to be decided.

A force of enemy cruisers and destroyers shelled American positions on Guadalcanal from the north Sunday while enemy land troops charged against the southern flank.

Five heavy tank and artillery assaults were made on the west flank Friday and Saturday but the enemy apparently found the going too tough there.

Marines Hold Ground

Although battered from land, sea and air, the soldiers and marines on the ground "held their positions," the navy announced.

It was while protecting the movement of supplies and reinforcements to these men that the Wasp was lost.

A prowling submarine fired a salvo of three torpedoes into the vicinity of the Wasp's powder magazine and gasoline storage tanks during the afternoon of Sept. 15. A series of heavy explosions tore through the ship, starting fires that raged out of control. The ship was abandoned about three hours after the attack.

All hope of saving her gone, a United States destroyer administered the coup de grace with torpedoes and she sank to join two other American carriers, the 33,000-ton Lexington and the 19,500-ton Yorktown, on the bottom of the Pacific. She was the 13th United States ship reported lost in the Solomons.

180 Lost on Wasp

The navy said all but about 10 per cent of the Wasp's personnel, normally 1,800 officers and men, were rescued.

The 739-foot Wasp was completed two years ago and had been used early this year to ferry planes to the Mediterranean island of Malta. Her usual aircraft capacity consisted of between 72 and 80 planes. News of her loss was withheld until last night in hope the Japanese did not know she had suffered a fatal blow.

But other carriers remained to fight on. Yesterday, the navy reported, a carrier task force exchanged air attacks with strong enemy forces northeast of Guadalcanal and it was in this engagement that the destroyer Porter was sunk and a United States carrier damaged.

The two enemy carriers listed as damaged in last night's communique were hit in this same action, details of which the navy said were still incomplete.

Jap Cruiser Hit

Twice during Sunday's heavy land fighting flights of dive-bombers from the Guadalcanal airfield attacked a force of enemy cruisers and destroyers north of nearby Florida Island.

One enemy heavy cruiser received a direct hit and was stopped during the first attack and another heavy cruiser was reported hit during the second. A few minutes later a group of army "Flying Fortresses" struck at this same force and scored two bomb hits on a light cruiser, which was left burning and "dead" in the water.

The navy did not say which of the four known remaining carriers was damaged in yesterday's duel northeast of Guadalcanal. It might have been the 19,900-ton Enterprise the 33,000-ton Saratoga, the 20,000-ton Hornet, or the 14,500-ton Ranger, or it might not have been any of these.

GREATER SECRECY

He added that while mistakes occurred sometimes, he felt current security measures were adequate and comprehensive.

Stillness shrouded the House when Lord Cork read a letter from the manager of a large engineering works. It said "My only son, an engineer in the Merchant Navy, told me he saw cases being loaded into his ship marked 'Malta'.

"He also told me that several of his fellow officers discussed the question of refusing to sail in the ship as an extreme protest against what they regarded as culpable carelessness or worse. My son's last words were:

"Well, Dad, Jerry will be waiting for us in full force and with our cargo we shall be trapped in the engine room if we are hit. It will be a miracle if we return from this suicide trip.

Lord Cork paused and then said in a low voice: "It was. The ship did not return. It was lost with 100 of her crew, including all officers".

Letters Read

He said he had other letters from persons who had seen cargoes marked Malta, Alexandria, Murmansk and Archangel and that copies had been sent to the Ministry of War Transport. One mentioned the Liverpool overhead railway as a vantage point on which nearly everything that happens on the docks could be seen.

"I have often wondered how the enemy could have concentration of forces ready the right moment to attack our convoys", interjected Lord Chatfield, another Admiral of the Fleet. 'But when one hears of this extraordinary carelessness one can be surprised at nothing".

Under the heading, "a case for strict investigation", The Daily Sketch said the public will demand that the proposed investigation "shall be ruthless and searching and that similar carelessness shall never be allowed to occur again".

PUBLIC RELATIONS STAFFS UNITED FOR 3 SERVICES

Jos. W. G. Clark is Named Chief of Information Armed Services

3 DIRECTORS

Ottawa, Oct. 27 — (CP) — Canada's three armed services Monday took the first step towards all-out co-ordination by placing public relations staffs under a unified command.

Joseph W. G. Clark who has served for some time as director of public relations for the army and the air force is appointed "Chief of information, Armed services."

Appointment of executives to serve under Mr. Clark in each of the three services was also announced. H. C. Howard of Montreal becomes "Director of Information for Naval Services," G. Herbert Sallans of Montreal, formerly of Toronto and Vancouver, becomes "Director of Information for the Army," and Gerald M. Brown of Toronto becomes "Director of Information for the R. C. A. F."

Experienced Newspapermen

The three new appointees, like Mr. Clark, are experienced newspapermen. Mr. Brown was city editor of the Toronto Daily Star, Mr. Sallans was general news manager of British United Press and Mr. Howard has a background of newspaper experience in Western Canada and has recently been in charge of advertising and public relations for the investment firm of Nesbitt, Thomson and Co., Ltd.

Mr. Clark has already taken over his enlarged duties and Mr. Brown has taken over his post with the air force. Mr. Sallans, who recently toured Britain with a party of Canadian editors, will report to Ottawa Nov. 1 for his duties with the army and Mr. Howard, who is on loan to the National War Finance Committee in connection with the Victory Loan campaign, will report Nov. 15.

The announcement was made jointly in the names of Defence Minister Ralston, Air Minister Power and Navy Minister Macdonald.

It is understood Walter Gilhooly, former sports editor of the Ottawa Journal, who has been director of information for the navy for the past two years, will go on active service as a naval officer.

Brant Liberals Want Convention To Select Leader

Brantford, Ont., Oct. 27 — (CP) —The executive of the Liberal Association in Brant riding, represented by Hon. Harry Nixon who was provincial secretary in the Ontario cabinet until his resignation last Thursday, unanimously approved Saturday a resolution calling for a convention of Ontario Liberals "at the earliest possible date to select a leader for the Liberay party in Ontario in a democratic way."

Mr. Nixon attended the meeting and expressed disapproval of the selection of Hon. Gordon Conant to succeed Mitchell F. Hepburn as Liberal premier. He said Mr. Conant's appointment was "a negation of democratic methods, as government should stem from the people."

Mr. Nixon also said he felt the Liberal government of Prime Minister Mackenzie King "had served Canada well and should be given the utmost co-operation by responsible ministers of provincial governments." (Both Mr. Hepburn and Mr. Conant have been critics of the King administration.)

The meeting passed a resolution endorsing Mr. Nixon's resignation and urging the former provincial secretary to continue his efforts to establish responsible government in Ontario. A resolution also was passed commending the King Government for its conduct of the war effort. The resolution said "We believe the striking achievements (of the King Government) warrant the loyal support of all liberty-loving Canadians."

Canadian Equipment Being Used in Egypt

Ottawa, Oct. 27 — (CP) — Canadian men and Canadian equipment are sharing in the battle now raging in the sands of Egypt between British and Axis forces.

Some 2,000 Canadian airmen are serving now in that theatre of war and the scale of the fighting there makes it a reasonable assumption that many of them are in action.

Canadian navy men may also be serving in that part of the world.

A number of them have been attached to the Royal Navy for service and it is possible some are with the Mediterranean fleet, now engaged in blasting Axis shore targets in that region and in the hunt for Axis convoys heading for Africa with reinforcements for Gen. Rommel.

Preserving Our Heritage

Women of the rural districts of Hastings, Prince Edward and Northumberland counties delegates to the annual meeting of the Women's Institutes of this area, gathered together a few days ago for deliberations that had a serious outlook, "the Women's Institutes working for Victory and the Women's Institutes planning for Peace." Taking this as the theme of their convention, these rural women who are conversant not only with the problems of their farm homes and communities, but have a keen grasp on affairs, national and international, proved beyond a doubt that they, and the fellow members they represented, will have a strong influence in Canada's plans for victory and for the new order that is the goal of victory's achievement.

"For Home and Country" the motto of the Women's Institutes since the organization's birth in a tiny Ontario community, today means not merely a well-known phrase, familiarity with which has obscured its significance; it is all that Canadian womanhood holds precious, all that Canadian manhood treasures in the spirit of sacrifice. "For Home and Country" today means everything.

In order to preserve the heritage of Canada's young nationhood for their children, the Women's Institute members are bending all their efforts, in the quiet, purposeful manner that characterized all their endeavours of the past. Reports showed just how they have been working towards this aim in the past year, their accomplishments in self-betterment by availing themselves of all opportunities offered by the Department of Agriculture and all other means of instruction which will make them more efficient home-makers; for the home is the point from which all Institute programs begin.

Their program takes them into the field of citizenship, by organizing for community good, by becoming familiar with the laws of the Dominion, the industries upon which Canadians depend. Under this too, comes their contribution in social welfare and child care, a field in which they take a keen and practical interest.

To this they have added their war work, the thousands of socks and sewn articles, especially quilts which are so prized by the people of Britain for the warmth and for the beauty that has been lovingly produced by color and stitchery by the W. I. members. These are only a few of their war activities.

And, in order to keep the perspective true, the Women's Institutes have a special and valuable department "Historical Research." They are, in each community, searching out the lore of that centre, the histories of each farm and village. This gathered together in the "Lady Tweedsmuir Village Histories," will be a rich source of information and inspiration to posterity.

Every energy of every branch is now centred on working for victory and planning for peace. This is not confined, as one may see, to "war activities." No, the part that the Women's Institutes take is deeper than this. It is preserving for Canadians the traditions which make Canada a proud nation, striving to overcome in home, community and national life features that are undesirable, and planning with clear eyes and confident hearts for the peace that is to come.

Winter Nears in Russia

Another winter is at hand. The Russians know it and are not afraid, but the Germans, who fared so ill last winter, dread the impending cold and snows. Hitler has said the Germans were not prepared for last winter but will be prepared this winter but the Germans do not relish another winter in the snows of Russia with all the coating Hitler is putting on the pill he will have them swallow.

As another winter comes the Russians are confident and have just right to be a proud people for the magnificence of their battle this year in holding back the Hun armies. At the close of the campaign Hitler has nothing to boast of. Russia has withheld from him the Caucasus and Stalingrad stays Russian, while Timoshenko's armies pound menacingly on the German flank.

Russia can look forward with confidence. Her effort has been the surprise and praise of the United Nations.

MR. BREEZY

When Uncle Sam just crooks his thumb
In my direction, I will come
And gladly do a soldier's part.
Sometimes I think I ought to start
Right now and then my thoughts will veer
To how ~~much~~ I am needed here.
The Boss remarked he didn't know
What he would do if I should go.
So many now have said good bye
That just Old Timer Jake and I
Are left from all of our old crew.
The other faces all are new.

I spend a lot of time, most days,
Showing new hands our special ways.
One man had quit so far back that
He never worked with no dry mat.
I showed each step—just how we do it.
He said, "Migod, there's nothing to it!
I can do this and not half try.
No wonder kids like you get by.
This was a MAN'S job, years ago."
Old Jake said, "Yeah, is that so?"
By afternoon, this Mr. Breezy
Decided it was not so easy
And when next morning rolled around
No trace of him could then be found.
—Melodious Mat.

RIGHT TONIGHT

The one who serves our country now
Receives a lot to eat;
Our nation clothes him very well,
Supplies are quite complete.
He gets fresh air and exercise,
And entertainment too;
But, loving him, you'd like to help.
What is there you could do?
Although our land does some things well,
There's one that you'd do better.
I've never known our government
To write a newsy letter.
And he would like to know the things
That only you could write;
So, if you'd really like to help,
Just write to him—tonight!

A FROSTY FRIDAY MORN

On a frosty Friday morning, when this bloody war is o'er,
When the last air raid has sounded from the siren's mighty roar,
When they've taken down the blackouts, and lit the old street lights,
When a man can see for certain what he's taking out at nights.

When there ain't no Air Force rations, and they issue T-bone steaks
And all the Sgt. Majors are stricken with the shakes,
When all the Cpls. and Sgts. lose their lusty power,
And the water's sometimes warm when you go to take a shower.
That will be the day, my lads, and you'll be glad that you were born,
They tell me that it's coming some frosty
Friday morn.

We'll toss away our uniforms and heavy issue shoes;
We'll watch the cooks all dining on their own mysterious stews;
We won't be there on church parades, no
guards and no fatigues,
No more blistering route march and those would-be blitzkriegs.
We'll hang our rusty rifle upon the C.O.'s wall,
And give him back his forty rounds he issued us last fall.
And when our webb equipment, some farmer's mules adorn,
We'll all be very happy; that frosty
Friday morn.
—By LAC. Morrow, in Mt. Viewpoint.

Mrs. Dumbly was waitig to be served in the boot shop. Presently a girl assistant approached her.

"What size shoe do you wear, madam?" she inquired.

"Well," said Mrs. Dumbly, "I bought size four last time."

The girl looked puzzled.

"Yes, madam, I remember," she replied; "but you're buying this pair for yourself, aren't you?"

NEED FOR ALL

On the love of freedom lies
Neither barrier nor bar,
Rule of age nor weight nor size.
All in service welcome are.

None too young and none too old
In its sacrifice to share,
All are challenged to be bold,
Here at home and everywhere

'Tis the youthful must be tried,
Must be physically fine,
Stout of arm and eagle-eyed.
They are for the fighting line.

But upon the love of right
Lies no law of age or strength,
Hardening veins or failing sight,
All may serve the struggle's length.

Every willing heart and mind
Bravely can some hardship bear,
And by sacrifice can find Ways in freedom's cause to share.

America Air Power Making Itself Felt

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Three days after the onset of the British offensive in Egypt, reports remain both too meagre and too general to trace its trends except in one respect.

The exception, nevertheless, is significant and clean-cut. It is all the more important because it follows a pattern that now characterizes every other front of the global war except in Russia.

In North Africa and the Mediterranean, in Western Europe, in the Pacific from the Aleutians to the Solomons, and in China from the Burma to the Manchurian Border, American air power is making itself felt. American-flown heavy bombers are striking telling blows at long range at Axis foes on all those fronts. American-made planes manned by British or other crews form another important segment of the ever widening Allied air attack.

There seems no doubt from first accounts of the Egyptian offensive and the parallel British trans-Continental bombing of Northern Italian targets that Allied air superiority is a major factor in the situation. It could prove the decisive factor not in North Africa alone, but also in shaping the course of the war in Russia.

Five-to-One Supremacy.

There is no other source than Russia from which the Axis could shift plane strength to the Egyptian front quickly enough to meet the crisis for Rommel indicated by the unofficial estimate of a five-to-one Allied air superiority in North Africa. Italian planes are too urgently needed at home against the sustained dark-and-daylight raiding by the R.A.F. in Northern Italy. That is an important by-product of those raids of which war industries and shipping destined to supply the Africa corps are the prime targets.

Any heavy withdrawal of German air strength from Russia inevitably must force a Nazi halt short of winter-line objectives. It might even come so close to shortening the air odds in the Stalingrad and Central Caucasus zones as to force a wide general German retreat from too-exposed positions.

Early front-line press reports passed by censors in Egypt show the British troops have driven, under an air umbrella, relatively narrow corridors through Rommel's mine-fields and gun defences to an undisclosed depth. Held open by following infantry, they have been used to pass heavy tank elements through to positions in rear of the Axis forward line deployed on the irregular El Alamein-Qattara Depression line. All accounts agree that Rommel's main armored strength is coming up, marred by British-American planes, for a crucial tank battle.

Tank Sweeps Impossible.

That represents a slow-moving frontal attack for the British forces. The narrowness of the Egyptian bottleneck, between the sea and depression, makes sweeping flanking operations by tank fleets all but impossible.

There was a curious note in the British announcement of the combined sea, air and land attack which initiated the offensive last Friday night. Naval bombardment of Matruh was one phase, American-built "light" surface craft being mentioned as having participated.

Terse Axis bulletins claim the repulse of the British attack, without details as to strictly land operations. They do note, however, that at Matruh an Allied attempt to land forces 100 miles in the rear of Rommel's front from what appeared to be commando power type landing barges. The effort was defeated and one such barge sunk by gunfire, Rome and Berlin said. The British reference to "light" American-built surface craft might be explained by that Axis claim.

Even if the Matruh action was only a bombardment to cripple Rommel's communications and supply lines, however, Allied air and sea control offers at least a chance for water-borne flank attacks along the coast. If successful at any point east of the Libyan border, it would cut the main Axis supply route far in rear of the front lines and probably force diversion of tank strength Rommel urgently needs to meet the frontal assault. Commando-type action of that sort seems a probable item on the British offensive schedule, if not already attempted, as Axis reports say.

FINED FOR PINCHING GIRLS

Chicago, Oct. 27 — (AP) — Gin Moy was in court, charged with pinching two show-girls as they passed him on the street. Fined $220 on two charges of disorderly conduct, he said he would work the fine off at $2 a day in the House of Correction. He then spied the two girls heading toward the courtroom door. Swiftly, he pinched each of them again and exited jailward, laughing.

ATOM SMASHERS

A 4,900-ton cyclotron is in process of construction at the University of California.

Cyclotron is the scientific name of what is popularly called an "atom smasher."

Many people refuse to take seriously those scientists who spend their time smashing atoms.

Even many scientists until recently pooh-poohed the whole idea of atom-smashing.

But the atom-smashers are in dead earnest and hope some day to make discoveries that will revolutionize not only science but the whole power system of the world.

With cyclotrons it is possible to transform certain ordinary elements into wholly different elements possessing radio-activity.

The atom-smashers are trying to unravel one of the greatest riddles of the universe and to unlock the energy in the atom.

Atom is the name given to the particle of matter which forms the basis of all material things.

But the atom itself is composed of still smaller electrical particles called protons, neutrons, deutrons, neutrinos, etc.

These particles whirl about within the atom very much as the earth, moon, planets, sun, stars and comets whirl about in the universe.

Last year Prof. Ernest O. Lawrance of the University of California whirled the nuclei of carbon atoms about in his 225-ton cyclotron until these "atomic bullets" attained a speed and striking power equivalent to 96 million electron volts.

The atom-smashing scientists have already discovered that all the physical particles of the universe are held together by a binding force or atomic cement.

Although atom-smashing is still in its infancy, the atom-smashers have made sufficient progress to prove that it is possible to unlock the energy of atoms.

When we consider the humble beginnings and slow progress of the discovery of electricity and other forces in the universe, it is startling to imagine what atom-smashing may ultimately lead to.

Marmora Couple Happily Wed For Fifty Years

Marmora (Special)—Their fiftieth wedding anniversary was quietly celebrated at their home, Victoria Avenue, on Saturday by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Burns. The ceremony took place at the residence of the late Canon C. M. Harris on October 24th, 1892. The attendants were George Logan and Josephine Burns (twin sister of Mr. Burns, who later became Mrs. Logan). Recalling the day, Mr. and Mrs. Burns remarked: "It was truly a day to remember for the ice and snow which lay upon the sidewalks. But a few months separate the day of birth of this respected couple. Mr. Burns was born at Marmora on Christmas Day, 1869, the son of John Burns who came to this country from Ireland and Jessie Carpentier whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Felix Carpentier, came from Quebec to reside in Marmora. Mrs. Burns, whose maiden name was Inez Billings, was born in Brighton on April 16th, 1870, the daughter of William Billings whose parents came to Canada from England. Mrs. Burns' parents had moved to Methuen Township at the time of her engagement to Mr. Burns. For the greater part of his life, Mr. Burns has followed the occupation of a stone mason. They have lived about thirty years in their present home. Their children are Mrs. Walter Young (Bertha), Peterboro; Mrs. Walden Lowery, (Ida) Peterboro; Mrs. Leo Mireault (Pearl), Montreal; Mrs. George Pressick, (May), Marmora and Fred, Marmora. Congratulations and best wishes from relatives and many friends marked the occasion.

Man Hit by Car

Alexander Robertson of Belmont Township sustained facial abrasions and shock when struck by a car about 8.20 p.m. on Sunday. Mr. Robertson was walking towards Marmora on No. 7 Highway and when about a mile and a half from the village stepped into the path of a car driven by Fred Varty of Belmont Township, who was accompanied by his wife, two young sons and Jack Graves.

Dr. H. Crawford was quickly summoned and the injured man was conveyed to Mrs. Lawlor's Nursing Home, Marmora, where his injuries were found to be not critical. Constable W. D. Lavender investigated and ascertained that the mishap was purely accidental.

Don't let Your telephone talk keep this "key-man" waiting

It was one of the privileges of peace to pick up the telephone whenever we felt like it, and to talk as long as we wanted to.

But we are at war now, and the shortage of telephone equipment is serious: there just isn't any copper, aluminum or rubber available to increase facilities for handling the heavy growth in both local and long distance traffic. We have come to the point where urgent war messages are threatened with delay.

Fortunately there is one way out. All essential calls can still be handled promptly, provided all of us use the telephone only when necessary, and keep conversations just as short as we can.

Your Flashlight is a war-time necessity!

Keep your Flashlight ALWAYS ready for service

NO ONE KNOWS when it will be a matter of urgent importance for you to have a flashlight right at your finger-tips. It is only commonsense in these days to make sure now that you have at least one flashlight in good working order.

DON'T use up your batteries carelessly!

THESE INSTRUCTIONS REVIEWED AND PASSED BY THE Metals Controller DEPARTMENT OF MUNITIONS AND SUPPLY and the Administrator, Electrical Equipment and Supplies THE WARTIME PRICES AND TRADE BOARD

HAVE YOUR FLASHLIGHT REPAIRED IF NECESSARY

Don't buy a new flashlight unless it is absolutely necessary. If your present flashlight is not working, it may need only minor repairs. Your dealer can supply a new lens or bulb—or fresh batteries.

KEEP YOUR FLASHLIGHT HANDY IN ONE PLACE

Always know where your flashlight is. After you have used it, put it back where it belongs.

DON'T USE YOUR FLASHLIGHT FOR LONG PERIODS

Continuous use provides a heavy drain on your flashlight batteries. They last longer when used for short periods — with a 'rest' between. Use your flashlight only when you actually need the light.

DON'T LET CHILDREN USE IT AS A TOY

Your flashlight is an important instrument which some day may be vital to your safety and security. It is not a toy—so do not let the children play with it. Keep it out of their reach.

DON'T STOCK UP ON BATTERIES

Dry batteries will not store indefinitely so buy only the batteries for which you have immediate need.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Awkward Hour

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My sister is to marry an army officer. Although the last details will have to be hastily planned, she is to have a church wedding and it is to be a formal wedding. Although her fiance lived here before he enlisted, his family live in another state. There will be either two or four ushers, civilians.

My sister and I are having a great argument about the hour she has chosen — five-thirty. I am sure this will mean a problem to his mother and father as to what type of clothes they will be expected to wear. Also, I maintain it will be a problem for the ushers, and for the guests. But I can't convince her about this. I wonder if you agree with me.

Jessica

I do agree with you. When a bride chooses five-thirty as her wedding hour for a formal wedding, she creates a problem for herself and for everyone else concerned. It is a "betwixt and between" hour that is difficult for everyone to plan for.

I wish you could persuade your sister to choose either five o'clock, and have, therefore, an afternoon wedding; or an hour after six o'clock, for an evening wedding.

Addressing Housekeeper

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I am a man of 75, and my wife died last month. I want to keep my home intact, and so I have had to engage a housekeeper, a widow of approximately 55 who is not of the servant type.

Should I call her by her first name, or as Mrs. ---?

T.H.E.

You should address her as, "Mrs. Smith". A housekeeper should not be addressed by her first name.

Movie Question

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Is it proper for a girl to hold her escort's hat in the movies?

Katherine

No.

No Postscript

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Is it considered good form to add a postscrip to a letter?

Jean.

It's better form to finish your letter where it should be finished, and not let it "spill over" into a postscript.

Signing Register

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I'm a private in the Army, and I'm going to be married to a girl back home when I get my next furlough.

How should I sign the hotel register when we arrive on our wedding trip. Should I write Mr. and Mrs. John Smith, or John Smith and wife.

John

You should sign Mr. and Mrs. John Smith.

Telephone Discourtesy

Rude and maddening is the person who calls on the telephone and begins, "Guess who this is" or, "I'll bet you don't know who this is" or, "This is a friend of yours ... I'll give you three guesses."

Soldier's Bride to Wear Satin Wedding Gown

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My fiance is a sergeant in the Army, and we plan to be married when he gets his next furlough. We are going to be married in the evening, since it is difficult for both of our fathers to get time off during the day.

1. I have always dreamed of being married in a white satin gown, but since the date is so uncertain and most of our plans will have to be made at the last minute (with the invitation given by telephone), do you think it would be better for me to wear a street-length dress? If you say you think I might wear a white satin dress, the dress would not have a train, and I would wear a finger-tip veil.

2. My fiance may have to ask his cousin, a civilian, to be the best man. In that case, what should the best man wear?

3. The church is very small. Since we are having only the family and a few friends, do you think it will be necessary to have ushers?

4. We will not be sure of the date until the last minute. Is it proper to invite friends and relatives by telephone or letter? If so, who does the telephoning or writing? I have never met some of his aunts and uncles, and I would like to have you tell me how to invite them.

5. When must we send out announcements?

6. Is the minister invited to the small dinner after the ceremony?

7. Would it be incorrect for my father and his father to drive their own cars to transport the wedding party?

Margaret

1. Don't give up your dream of wearing a white satin wedding dress. Even if your other plans must be made hastily and will necessarily be on the informal side, you, in your bridal dress, and your fiance in his uniform will make a lovely and dignified wedding.

2. The best man might properly wear a Tuxedo suit.

3. For so few guests it probably won't be really necessary to have ushers, but I do believe you will find it more convenient to have one or two men (perhaps relatives of your fiance or friends of either of your families) to assign seats to the guests. They would not need to take part in the procession.

4. It will be all right to invite the guests by telephone or letter (special delivery or air-mail), or by telegrams ... any of these is customary these days of furlough weddings. If there is time for letters, your mother might write them, or you might write them in her name. Either you or your mother might do the telephoning, and telegrams might be signed in her name. You see, your mother, is the hostess of your wedding, and so it is appropriate for all invitations to be sent by her, if possible.

5. Have your announcements mailed as soon as possible after the ceremony has been performed. Finish your list and ask your fiance and his mother for their lists of names now; then choose the stock for your announcements and ask for the envelopes to be sent you at once. These envelopes could be addressed and stamped, ready for the announcements when they arrive engraved.

6. If the minister is a family friend and you wish, therefore, to invite him to the dinner, this is gracious.

If you don't know him very well, he won't expect to be invited.

7. It would be quite all right for "the fathers" to drive the members of the wedding party in their cars.

Consumer Rationing Administrator Named

Ottawa, Oct. 27 — (CP) — Organization of an administration of consumer rationing, headed by L. B. Unwin of Montreal, vice-president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, was announced Mon. by Donald Gordon, prices board chairman.

The new administration will coordinate various consumer rationing activities of the board throughout the Dominion.

When coupon rationing was introduced for sugar last June, activities were centred in a division at the board's head office. Now, with increased importance being placed on consumer rationing, it has become necessary to establish a different form of organization.

The new administration will take full charge of all consumer rationing activities, including the existing head office organization headed by H. I. Ross as well as supervision and direction of the 500 rationing boards being formed across the country, the announcement said.

In announcing Mr. Unwin's appointment, Mr. Gordon said:

"I know that the people of Canada are ready and willing to accept the imposition of wartime controls, and only ask that such controls as are necessary will be applied fairly and without discrimination.

Electric control has been invented for rivet guns to permit only the number of taps required and make their work uniform.

FIND AMMUNITION MADE IN 1885

Probably for Use in Riel Rebellion, Bullets Tested and Still Make Bulls Eyes

London, Ont., Oct. 27 — (CP) — Hundreds of rounds of Martini-Henry ammunition, believed to have been destined for use in the Riel Rebellion of 1885, were discovered in a Middlesex county buildings vault over the week-end by Clerk W. A. Sutherland.

The bullets will likely be donated for salvage purposes in this war.

Officials believed a former county clerk, Capt. Tom Robson who was active in the militia, stored the ammunition in the vault.

A gun hobbyist, county engineer W. R. Smith, identified the bullets and obtained an ancient firearm to test them. He reported five bulls-eyes at 50 yards.

EARLY MAILING FOR OVERSEAS IN FULL SWING

Canadians Apparently Recognize Need of Mailing Early — Response Good

DATA FOR ADDRESSES

Ottawa, Oct. 27 (CP)—The Canadian post office Monday had a cautious but grateful word for the public which has heeded advice to get mail for the men overseas away early.

With the deadline for overseas mailings set at Nov. 10, officials said that in the week ending Oct. 18, 5,928 bags of mail for ocean shipment had been handled compared with 2,367 for the same week last year, indicating appeals to mail early had been observed.

The base post office at Ottawa, handling parcels and other mail for men overseas with the forces, said its Thanksgiving Day traffic had been the heaviest in history, with 2,200 bags passing through.

The post office can give no guarantee that parcels mailed after Nov. 10 will reach Canadians in the United Kingdom or at other points overseas in time for Christmas. Officials also warned that if the bulk of parcels were left until Nov. 10 for mailing the pressure on shipping facilities might be so great some would have to be left behind.

"But, at the moment, it appears that Canadians have recognized the necessity of mailing early and the response so far has been good," an official said.

Proper Addressing

Proper addressing of parcels facilitates their speedy delivery. Officials said addresses should give the number, rank, surname and initials of the man. The sailor's parcels should show whether he is in the Royal Canadian Navy, the Royal Canadian Naval Reserve or the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve, or attached to the Royal Navy. His mail should be sent in care of the Fleet Naval Officer at Halifax, Esquimalt, B.C., or, when no details are known, in charge of Naval Service Headquarters at Ottawa.

The soldier's parcel should give details of his unit, with the regiment or branch of the service, with the final line of the address, "Canadian Army Overseas."

If possible, the name of the airman's unit should be given, and where applicable, the address should say "attached R.A.F."

The final part of the address is "Royal Canadian Air Force Overseas."

AT Tip Top Tailors the word has long ago gone around: Clear production tracks for the most important customer any firm ever had—the Armed Forces of Canada!

More and more, an increasingly great part of our facilities and growing hundreds of our plant personnel are giving all their time, knowledge and skill to this vital work, bending every effort to see that uniforms in an increasing flow leave our plant for the Canadian Army, the Air Force and the Canadian Women's Army Corps. And these are uniforms as Tip Top Tailors knows how to make them—with all the quality, good fit and fine comfort which has distinguished every Tip Top garment—civilian or military.

The result of all this is that our civilian customers—the men and women behind the men behind the guns—have, at times, been forced to wait longer than usual for delivery of their Tip Top clothes. All of these people understand the reason—that the goods of war MUST have priority over all other production.

SERVING THE FINEST ARMED FORCES IN THE WORLD

Mort Cooper Picked as National Loop's Most Valuable Player In 1942 by Baseball Writers

Received 13 of Committee's 24 First-Place Votes in Balloting

SLAUGHTER SECOND

(By JUDSON BAILEY)
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, Oct. 27. (AP) —The National League's most valuable player in 1942 was Morton Cecil Cooper, the big righthanded pitching ace of the World Champion St. Louis Cardinals, a committee of the Baseball Writers' Association of America announced today.

The 28-year-old Missourian, who won 22 games to lead the Redbirds into the World Series, received 13 of the Committee's 24-first-place votes and 263 out of a possible 336 points in the balloting as well as being the only player whose name appeared on every ballot.

This gave him a big margin over his teammate, Enos (Country) Slaughter, the Cards' slugging rightfielder, who edged out Manager Mel Ott of New York Giants for second honors, 200 points to 190 and six first-place votes to four.

Marion Gets a Vote

The only other player to gain even one first-place nod was Martin (Slats) Marion, the elongated shortstop of the Cardinals, who rated enough recognition to finish seventh in the selections.

The annual award is based on the all-around value of a player to his club as well as on his individual performance and there was no doubt about Cooper by either yardstick.

He was beaten only seven times and his 22 victories were as many as any other pitcher in either major league produced. He pitched a complete game in every contest that he won and led the majors in shutouts with ten, the most a National League hurler has achieved since 1933.

World Series Did Not Count

Since the rating was determined solely on the basis of the regular season, Cooper's unfortunate experience in being knocked out of the box in the first inning of the all-star game and twice getting lambasted by New York Yankees in the World Series did not enter into consideration.

Twenty-one of the 24 committeemen three from each National League City, rated Cooper either first, second or third. Besides his 13 first-place votes, he was ranked second by five writers, third by three, and received one vote for fifth, seventh and ninth places.

Under the point system governing the selections a first-place vote was valued at 14 points, second at nine, third at eight, fourth at seven, etc.

Mickey Owen Fourth

Slaughter was ranked somewhere in the first ten selections by 21 of the committeemen and Ott by 22, but below them the writers showed a wide divergence of opinion.

Mickey Owen, the scrappy catcher of Brooklyn Dodgers, came in fourth with 103 points, Eight members of the committee picked him either for second or third. Johnny Mize of New York Giants was ranked fifth with 97 points and Pete Reiser of the Dodgers sixth with 91 points.

Then came Marion with 81 points, Dolph Camilli of the Dodgers (last year's most valuable player) with 42, Bob Elliott of Pittsburgh with 39 and Claude Passeau of Chicago Cubs ranked 10th with 33.

The American League's most valuable player will be announced November 4.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, Oct. 27—(AP) — So Bob Pastor is retiring, eh? . . That keeps his record clear — always after Joe Louis and never catching up. . . . Maybe the A.P.P.E.—Associatione Puglistica Del Professionaisti Europei—has the right idea at that. . . . From its headquarters in Rome comes word that Walter Neusel of Germany, Luigi Muina of Italy, Lazarri of Italy, Olle Tandesberg of Sweden and Karel Sys of Belgium will engage in a tournament for the European heavyweight championship. . . . If everyone else retires, one of those guys might put in a claim for the world championships.

Common ailment:

At a recent soccer match between Bath City and Seansea town in England, a squad of police was on hand with a bucket of disinfectant. . . . Every time the ball went out of bounds, the ball and the shoes of the men who retrieved it were washed in the liquid to prevent the spread of foot and mouth disease, which has struck many head of cattle in the district. . . . We know some football coaches who need protection from the same disease—every time they open their mouths they put their foot in it.

Service Dept.

Soldiers at Chanute Field, Ill., recently tried playing a basketball game with all players wearing their service gas masks. That might be a new alibi for coaches whose boys can't hit the basket.

LESTER PATRICK PICKS RANGERS TO FINISH FIFTH

Nine Players Left Club to Join Regular Army Since Last Season

TO USE ROOKIES

(By MARSHALL BATEMAN)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, Oct. 27. (CP)—Every club in the National Hockey League has lost players to the armed services but the biggest blow of all was suffered by New York Rangers. Nine players left Rangers, leaving the new team a doubtful quality for the 1942-43 season.

No other club has lost as many players, said Manager Lester Patrick in speculating on how the clubs will finish the season. "It will be a dogfight between ourselves and Chicago Black Hawks for fifth spot".

The maestro of hockey explained many of the players he has slated but not definitely cinched are "untried" in pro company and went on to explain reasons why Rangers who won the National League championship last season and the Stanley Cup in 1940 figure behind four other clubs at this stage.

"I believe Detroit Red Wings are the ones to stop this season", he said. "They will be tough to beat because they are least affected by wartime manpower demands. They still have Johnny Mowers in goal, three defence veterans, rearguard reserves and two forward lines intact".

Patrick favors Montreal Canadiens for second place. They have been rebuilding for three years and lost only three men from last season's team, he said.

Toronto Maple Leafs had eight absentees but they had 11 regulars report to camp while Boston still has Frankie Brimsek and a solid defence unit, Patrick said in selecting these squads to finish third and fourth, respectively.

KINGSTON EASY FOR CORNWALL

Frontenacs Downed in Exhibition Game by 11-2 Count

Kingston, Ont., Oct. 27—(CP)—Cornwall proved too fast and fancy for Kingston Frontenacs in an exhibition hockey game here last night, winning by an 11-2 score.

The Cornwall team of the Quebec senior league played a fast-breaking wide-passing game that had Kingston hemmed in its own end of the ice most of the time.

Cornwall held a cleancut edge on the play throughout. They took command in the first period, rattling in three goals without a reply, added four more in the second stanza, when Kingston counted their two, and banged home their four remaining tallies in the last frame.

Thibeault was outstanding for the winners, collecting three goals while Imlach was close behind with two counters and an assist.

Line up:

Kingston—Goal, Woods; defence, Blake, Maundrell; centre, Williamson; wings, Carr-Harris, Hood; subs, Callen, Patterson, Tisdale, Eason, Dowling, Nicholson, Bearance.

Cornwall — Goal, Bastien; defence, Drummond, Church; centre, Latoski; wings, Mario, Fassano; subs, Brown, Imlach, Conacher, Woodward, Thibeault, Riley.

Referee—W. Watts.

RANGERS SET DIZZY PACE

Winnipeg, Oct. 27 — (CP) —New York Rangers of the National Hockey League set a dizzy pace for Navy Chippawas in an exhibition hockey game here last night and skated off the ice with a one-sided 9-2 victory.

Bryan Hextall, flashy winger with Rangers led the scoring parade with three goals and a like number of assists.

Toronto, Oct. 27—(CP) — Wing Cmdr. Dave Harding, for nearly two decades one of the greatest halfbacks in Canadian football, is still a good athlete although he retired from major sport after he helped Winnipeg Blue Bombers win the National grid title in 1935. Now officer commanding the R.C.A.F. station at Hagersville, Ont., Dave played with the station lacrosse team last week as it defeated Hamilton seniors 11-10. . . . Greg Kabat, former Wisconsin University grid star and a teammate of Harding on Winnipeg's first Grey Cup team, is now in Vancouver after spending several months with a war services auxiliary at Prince George, B.C. . . . Another former Winnipeg Bomber, Carl Krisko, is coaching the Boeing's football team in Vancouver.

Puck patter:

Stu Smith, unable to play with Montreal Canadiens in the National Hockey League because the War Services Board refused to let him leave his war job in Ottawa, is expected to play with Hull Volants in the Ottawa City League. . . . Maurice (Butch) Marchant, former Winnipegger and a defenceman with Montreal Pats last year, is stationed with the R.C.A.F. at Saskatoon. . . Bill (Owen Sound Sun-Times) Dane says Benny Grant, goalkeeper bought by Chicago Black Hawks from the American Association, will not play hockey this year but will remain in Owen Sound where he has a steady job. "He doesn't know how long the N.H.L. season will last and he isn't going to take a chance on having it tumble around his ears."

The expert says:

Bill (Niagara Falls Review) Gaynon: "Already they are steaming up the ballyhoo for a Canadian football final. . . . This Grey Cup attraction has brought the gridiron sport into major categories and those plugging to keep the event are performing a service that will be appreciated by the country's sport loving clientele."

Incidentally:

The transportation problem is slowing activities of many sport leagues. Ontario schools in the Georgian Bay district abandoned inter-school football this year and instead of a basketball league it is likely the schools will hold a one-day tournament in February. . . . Tommy Burns, the Hanover, Ont., native who won the world heavyweight fight title from Marvin Hart in San Francisco in 1906, now lives at Bremerton, Wash. In a letter to Harry (Calgary, Albertan) Scott, Tommy, now 61, said, "My philosophy of life for health, wealth and happiness is to think constructively; never worry or become angry; feel kindly toward all, no matter what they say or do to you; simplicity is the keynote to success; weigh every word before you speak; eat slowly and chew your food properly."

N. H. L. Training Notes

(By The Canadian Press)

It happened all in one day at the New York Rangers training camp in Winnipeg: Goalie Steve Buzinski suffered a black eye, Babe Pratt had to have two stitches in his left hand after an exhibition game with Navy, and Ott Heller lost two front teeth when struck with a stick.

Boston Bruins lined up at the penalty shot line and fired rubber at Frank Brimsek from all angles. After a half-hour of unsuccessful sniping, Manager Art Ross paid Brimsek this tribute: "Brimsek is some goalie, I've seen them all come and go from a long way back and he is the tops."

George Mantha, former Canadiens star, is having difficulty obtaining players for his Washington Lions.

"I am supposed to draw six men from Canadiens," he said, "but they are having a tough job themselves. I may be able to make a deal with Bruins but we will have to wait for that."

Bruins have a new "kid" line composed of Bill Shill, 19, last year with Toronto Young Rangers juniors; 17-year-old Armand (Bep) Guidolin from Oshawa Generals; and 17-year-old Donny Gallenger, last year with St. Catharines junior B. entry.

Bill Cowley rejoined Bruins at Montreal yesterday, silencing reports he had crossed swords with Art Ross. Cowley said he had been in Ottawa visiting his parents, that Ross knew where he was and had given permission for the trip.

London, Oct. 27 — (CP) — This is embarrassing to the mere male as it concerns a certain group of Canadian Army anti-aircraft gunners who didn't get those red faces from looking into the sun for Nazi planes.

To pop right out with the truth, a bunch of English girls walloped the Canadian lads by the terrific score of 33-27 in a baseball game.

The gals were members of the W. R. N. S. and the game, at a small coast town, was arranged by the Canadian battery sports officer when arrangements for a tilt with a U. S. Army Air Force team was cancelled by enemy action.

The Canadians who are taking a resultant ribbing are: Gnrs. J. H. Wilson of Regina, D. J. Martin of Kingston, Ont.; L. W. Harris of North Bay, Ont.; Freddy Bates of Ottawa, "Elsie" Haley of Hamilton, Ont.; Bdrs. Cliff Walker of Powell River, B. C.; Jack Reed of Toronto, Pte. W. Patrick, R. C. O. C., Verdun, Que.; Cpl. G. Betts, R.C.O.C., Lachine, Que., and L. Bdr. Porky Thornton of St. Catharines, Ont.

The 1942 softball champions of the Canadian Army Overseas are a band of huskies from the C. B. O. W., representing the Canadian Reinforcement Units. They whipped a Canadian Division team, made up of a Western Canada artillery regiment, two straight games in the best-of-three finals. The scores were 3-0 and 4-2.

Ptes. C. G. Chapman, who played the game around his native city of Montreal, and M. V. Putman of Easton's Corners, Ont., hurled the winning tilts. Sgt. R. A. Jones of Moose Jaw, Sask., pitched both for the losers.

Individual placques were awarded both teams by Lt.-Col. P. C. Wilson, acting for Maj.-Gen. H. L. N. Salmon.

Flt. Lt. Ross C. Thompson, Peterboro, Ont., of the R. C. A. F., has his leave plans prepared for next summer — but wished he had discovered the Thames River earlier.

A swimming champion around University of Toronto 10 years ago and a standout paddler and yachtsman around Peterboro, Ross took a week-end canoe excursion up the Thames, including the famed Henley course.

"Wish I'd thought of it before," he said. "It would have made a swell summer."

ROSS HAS ELEVEN OF LAST YEAR'S TEAM ON HAND

Bruins Not Very Strong Up Forward but Have a Strong Defence

BRIMSEK A STAR

By OWEN CHANNON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Montreal, Oct. 27 — (CP) — Sport has been rated fairly low by the National Selective Service and there are few major hockey coaches who realize it more than Art Ross of the National Hockey League's Boston Bruins.

All of which is not a good pre-season sign as far as the hub-town pucksters are concerned. In fact Ross believes the needle of the Boston hockey barometer has swung lower, indicating the Bruins can expect some stormy weather in the coming N. H. L. season.

Just the same, Ross says he will have a team that will be in there playing hockey all the way, and he may come up with a few dark horses yet that will make all the difference in Bruin's prospects.

As it stands now, Bruins, in common with other N. H. L. clubs, are feeling the wartime manpower pinch, with many former members in the armed forces. Ross has 11 men left from last year's team, which ordinarily should be a good nucleus for a group of promising rookies.

It is unfortunate as far as Boston is concerned, that the amateurs training with the Bruins this year have not been particularly promising to date — unless Ross has contrived to keep his best prospects in the background.

Team Weak up Front

The main weakness in the team at present is in the forward area where players from last year are slow in picking up their stride.

Frankie Brimsek in goal has been spectacular in practice, although in an exhibition game with Montreal Canadiens he was beaten six times. Captain Dit Clapper appears to be the mainstay of the defence line and teams well with Flash Hollett who has been working efficiently.

Johnny Shewchuk and Johnny Crawford have been making a good showing of their power and weight, but do not appear as reliable a defencive screen as the Clapper-Hollett combination.

Up forward, Bruin's best chances so far lie in the Art Jackson, Dutch Hiller, Herb Cain combination; with the other forward line of Busher Jackson, Bill Cowley and Buzz Boll looking somewhat spotty. All are experienced campaigners, however, and may snap back into form any day.

Ross isn't saying much about the prospects of the youngsters in training camp, but there are seven youngsters who have made some headway. They include Ray Voll, 18, from Waterloo, Ont.

TWO QUESTIONS TO BE DISCUSSED

Home Games and Recent Ruling Respecting Pros. to Have Airing

Ottawa, Oct. 27 — (CP) — Two questions are likely to be raised by Commandos, Ottawa's entry in the Quebec Senior Hockey League at a league meeting in Montreal tonight, it was learned last night.

Commandos, an all-army team, are understood to be anxious to have more home games and Cornwall is believed to feel the same way. A tentative schedule received by Ottawa Area Hockey Club showed Commandos and Cornwall each will have fourteen home fixtures.

The Ottawa club also is expected to ask the league delegates to reconsider a previous ruling that no more than four former National Hockey League players may play with any one team in the league.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

THE LUCKY OLD SEVENTH—how often have you heard that time honored expression at a ball game. Twenty years ago, October 25, 1922, to be exact, the old Belleville Grand Trunks and a few faithful supporters from the Central Ontario zone saw that old baseball adage take its terrible toll. Belleville was engaged in one of the province's greatest diamond struggles in a third and final game at Guelph versus the Galt Terriers for the senior O.B.A. championship. Each had won their respective road games and Jack "Chief" Williams opposed Galt's ace righthander, Friendly Graham. The only score in the initial six frames came when J. K. "Crock" Williams, our hot corner artist, opened the second with a slashing triple and scored on Meagher's infield out. Hits were mighty scarce early in that game as Graham and Williams held upper sway. However, as the Terriers came to bat in the top half of the seventh the pent-up excitement of 7,000 Western Ontario fans broke loose.

AMID THE DIN AND THE roar the Terriers became inspired and before the dust of that hectic seventh frame had settled Galt had scored five runs. The Terriers only garnered three hits that fatal inning, but one of them was a mighty homer by Normie Hines with the bases loaded. Two Belleville errors had assisted in placing runners in scoring position as Hines poled out his base-cleaning circuit blow. After that the Grand Trunks just couldn't come back and Galt scored another run in the eighth, but Hines' homer was enough to win. "Friendly" Graham let Belleville down with four hits that day, "Crock" Williams getting two while "Chief" Williams and "Peeney" Mills collected singles. Wilbur Kress and the Hines brothers wielded the most potent bats for the 1922 Senior O.B.A. champions that day at Guelph. Up until the 7th Williams had limited the Terriers to two singles. The "Chiefs" struck out six to Graham's two, but that seventh inning rally took its awful toll.

FOR OVER TWO WEEKS George "Knotty" Lee, business manager of the Toronto Maple Leafs in the International League, had been tailing Williams offering him tempting offers to sign a Leaf contract. After the game in Guelph Lee was still on hand and again approached Williams. "Nice game you pitched today Chief, how about signing that contract here and now?" queried Lee and he raised the Leafian ante. Williams refrained from making the jump that year and teamed up with Jack Oulette, to form one of the strongest pitching staffs ever to grace the C.O.B.L. in 1923. Belleville again won the Central League pennant in 1923, but not until after a hectic struggle with Peterboro' and Al Heckman, that terminated in Cobourg. Williams signed a professional contract with the Rochester Red Wings in the winter of 1923 and went south with them in the spring of '24. The fall of 1922 was disastrous for Central Ontario teams, the Peterboro C.G.E. lost the intermediate finals to Lucan in a third game at London about the same time Galt won, and so endeth reminiscing of two decades ago.

REMEMBER WHEN JIMMY McLARNIN, Belfast-born boxer who came to Vancouver, became a naturalized United States citizen nine years ago tdoay? Hard-hitting welterweight, he won the title from Young Corbett in 1933 and lost it to Barney Ross in 1935. Jimmy is now retired in sunny California.

IT TOOK PROMOTER FRANK Tunney some verbal efforts before he could convince Pedro Martinez the return bout between "Whipper" Watson and "Big Earl" McCready had to come before his demands for a main bout in Belleville. True enough Martinez agreed to appear here Thursday in the semi-final bout versus that tough Hollander, Jan Gotch. Skipper Tunney is having trouble signing preliminary bouts, but Martinez agreed to cooperate this week, but only after being assured he would be given a main-bout billing versus the winner of Thursday night's McCready-Watson scrap. Actually the Mexican has a legitimate argument after winning eleven bouts at the Hume Arena, but now Skipper Tunney has pacified the pugnacious Mexican, local wrestling fans are the gainers, but Martinez is still rather independent.

THE LAST TWO SCHEDULED games in the local Interscholastic grid circles were postponed. On Friday the St. Mike's-Collegiate game was called off by mutual consent, while yesterday's St. Mike's-Albert game was postponed owing to wet grounds, the Albert field resembling a quadmire. Incidentally it is reliably reported that further pugnaciousness in senior school football circles may result in the discontinuance of the game. Belleville schools are more fortunate than others throughout the province in having a group where travelling in wartime isn't necessary. Those enjoying the fall classic privileges should take this into consideration and govern themselves according. PO Gord Farquharson who was forced to bail out over Malta recently was a star halfback at B/C.I. only two short years ago. All wexe glad Gord made a safe landing and was uninjured.

THIS AND THAT—It was with profound regret we learned of the sudden death of Group Captain W. D. Van Vliet in Ottawa. . . A lover of football and hockey, "Van" was directly interested in both games while stationed at the Trenton R.C.A.F. base in 1938-'39, going overseas in charge of the famed 110th Squadron late in '39. A football player of ability himself, "Van" loved the game for the game's sake and made a host of friends while stationed locally. . . Bob Shepherd wants to know why Belleville can't have a New Year's football bowl game of its own. . . "How about selecting two all-star teams from the five local interscholastic six-men teams and staging a New Year's Day game at the Exhibition Park with all receipts to go towards war charity?" suggested Bob and he ain't very far from wrong, even if he hasn't got spurs that jingle, jangle. . . . Branch Rickey says the St. Louis Cardinals could sell $100,000 worth of baseball players without hurting the club's pennant chances. . . . President Sam Breadon says Rickey is commonly "nuts." . . . The war may take its toll on class "C" and "D" baseball loops in 1943. . . Anything above a class "C" loop may function another year, however. . . . The frost is on the punkin'.

RUSSIANS BEAT

Isvestia said the Germans had been thrown back behind the low, rolling hills which rim the southern edge of Stalingrad, placing their front 150 yards from the city boundary, and chimneys of battle-scarred Soviet factories in that area continued to smoke.

One Red army division was credited with killing 4,000 Germans and Rumanians in six days, routing survivors from their positions and occupying new lines.

Pravda said that, because of heavy losses, the Germans were unable any longer to press attacks on all sectors.

Red air force storm planes and bombers attacked enemy defences south and northwest of Stalingrad, while German squadrons concentrated their attention on the city district.

More than 1,300 enemy flights were reported from one Stalingrad sector.

Six Tanks Knocked Out

The noon communique reported about a battalion of enemy infantry was wiped out and six tanks were destroyed in the northern section, where the Germans had been evicted from the defences of a factory area after a five-hour fight yesterday.

More than four companies of German riflemen were declared to have perished in the southern outskirts and these accounts were coupled with a report of the repulse of all Nazi attacks on the steppes northwest of the city.

"One Soviet infantry unit alone has killed about 300 Hitlerites and set six German tanks afire and destroyed four guns and seven machine-guns," the communique said.

80 Trucks Destroyed

Red Army airmen were credited with destroying about 80 German trucks, shooting down five German planes and disabling two others.

A Soviet flanking attack ousted the Germans from the area of the northside factory, the Russians announced at midnight.

"German prisoners of war stated that only 25 to 30 men are left in the companies of the German 35th infantry division, the remainder having been either killed or wounded in the recent fighting," it was declared.

The Red army of the western Caucasus repulsed attacks northeast of the port of Tuapse and struck against tactically important heights held by the invaders while east of Novorossisk "the men of one unit attacked the enemy, advanced and improved their positions," the war bulletin said.

Match Odessa's Defence

Stalingrad's garrison matched the 63-day defence of Odessa and went into the 64th. day with lines reported intact.

(The Berlin radio said last night the Russians had launched relief assaults both north and south of the Red October Arms Works, Red arms stronghold currently sought by the Germans.)

"Overwhelmed and forced to withdraw," the Germans lost 750 men and three tanks about the factory, the midnight communique said.

Northwest of Stalingrad hundreds of other invaders were declared added to German casualty lists which P. N. Pospelov, a central committeeman of the Communist party, has estimated total 10,000,000 killed, wounded or captured.

"Our troops wiped out three companies of German infantry, blew up four ammunition dumps and destroyed ten enemy dugouts and 15 machine-gun posts," the communique said. "Nine German aircraft were destroyed in air combat and by anti-aircraft fire and attacks on airdromes."

Defenders Send Message

(A BBC broadcast heard by CBS said the defenders of Stalingrad had sent a message to the people of Coventry, the target for the most concentrated aerial bombardment in the 1940 Battle of Britain, pledging they would withstand the offensive and expressing hope for "the brotherly aid of the British" in defeat of the common foe.)

Red army troops were reported to have wedged into German positions in the Voronezh region "on the western bank of the River" (which might be either the Voronezh or the Don) and driven off several counter-attacks.

"On the Leningrad front our units accounted for 400 enemy killed in two days of fighting," the communique said. "Three anti-tank guns and eight heavy machine-guns were destroyed."

Red navy fliers were credited with sinking two Axis transports, totalling 12,000 tons, in the Gulf of Finland.

EXTENDS ITS HOLD

Day and night the Allied aircraft roared over the desert battle ground, attacking enemy targets in the battle area and Axis landing grounds behind the lines, the communique said.

Fourteen of the Axis planes destroyed over the desert were shot down by Allied fighters. One Messerschmitt was sent diving to earth by a light bomber and another was brought down by ground fire.

Ten Allied planes were reported missing from these operations and the defence of Malta.

The ground forces necessarily were moving cautiously through the sea of intricately-placed mine fields which formed the major obstacle in the defence set up by Rommel.

Allies Still Masters

Rommel, as was expected, was awaiting the full force of the Allied offensive behind miles of interlaced minefields, barbedwire obstructions and machine-gun nests, placed so his artillery could be concentrated on the advancing Allied troops.

But on the fourth day of the offensive the Allies still were masters in the desert sky and their infantry was reported wedged into the Axis defences on a wide front.

The main blow of the 8th. Army was yet to fall.

The first 1,450 Axis prisoners, 600 of them said to be Germans, were moving to the British rear for internment. Much hard fighting still was in store for the Allied ground troops before the Axis lines could be ground down and made ready for the accustomed type of desert war of movement.

While the Axis was reported to have made several small-scale counter-attacks with tanks, all these were said to have been smashed. The main German tank forces had not yet been encountered.

Strong Air Support

The 8th. Army has been receiving and apparently can count on in the future, stronger air support than the Germans and Italians have given their troops, although the Axis put more planes aloft yesterday than in the first two days of the battle.

Allied aircraft were busy all over the desert and five Axis planes were shot down before noon yesterday.

Bombers were in the thick of the fight, attacking Axis concentrations of tanks, vehicles and planes and patrolling the coastal waters for Axis shipping.

Heavy German bombers were flown to the desert front from Crete in an effort to retaliate against these telling blows.

The advancing infantry bore the brunt of the preliminary battle, however, clearing the minefields, wiping out forward enemy strongpoints and punching out a gap through which the main forces may join the battle. They were being supported both from the air and by continuous Allied artillery action.

WILLKIE DEMANDS

ervoir of good-will every day by failing to define clearly our war aims", and continued:—

"Besides giving our Allies in Asia and Eastern Europe something to fight with, we have got to give them assurance of what we are fighting for. The 200,000,000 people of Russia and the 450,000,000 people of China—people like you and me—are bewildered and anxious.

Asking for World Charter

"They know what they are fighting for. They are not so sure of us. Many of them have read the Atlantic Charter. Rightly or wrongly, they are not satisfied. They ask: 'What about a Pacific Charter? What about a World Charter'?"

Willkie attacked what he termed a "half-ignorant, half-patronizing way in which we have grown accustomed to treating many of the peoples in Eastern Europe and Asia."

He said leaders of Britain's and America's Allies and potential Allies are proud, intelligent men who agreed substantially on a need of "abolishing imperialism, of liberating the peoples of the world, of making freedom a reality, instead of just a nice word."

He mentioned the Shah of Iran, the Prime Minister of Iraq; the Prime Minister of Turkey and the Generalissimo of China, and said the United States has failed consistently to send them representatives with authority to discuss problems "intelligently" and to take realistic steps toward their solution.

He declared that no man of cabinet rank has been sent to Russia on special mission "to talk to Mr. Stalin," adding that it was the British Prime Minister who spoke primarily for this country on the last such mission.

Must Wipe Out Distinction

"We must wipe out the distinction in our minds," he said, "between 'first class' and 'second class' Allies. We must send to represent us among all our Allies really distinguished men who are important enough in their own right to dare tell our President the truth."

Referring to the "Vital matter of our production of war materials," Willkie said:—

"Here we are, supposedly the biggest industrial nation on earth. But the flow of war materials out of this country to some of the nations I visited is not only small in itself, but as compared to the immensity of this global war we are engaged in it is tragically small . . .

"If I were to tell you how few bombers China has received from us you simply would not believe me. If I were to tell you how far Russia feels we are from fulfilling our commitments, you would agree with me that we have little reason to boast about our performance."

In reply to a question at the end of the broadcast, Willkie said his speech had not been censored.

Ideas Held in Common

"All around the world, there are some ideas which millions and millions of men hold in common, almost as much as if they lived in the same town," Willkie said in his address.

"One of these ideas, and one which I can report without hesitation, has tremendous significance for us in America; it is the mixture of respect and hope with which the world looks to this country . . .

"They, each and every one, turn to the United States with a friendliness which is often akin to genuine affection . . .

"People like our works, I found, not only because they help to make life easier and richer, but also because we have shown that American business enterprise, unlike that of most other industrial nations, does not necessarily lead to political control or imperialism. .

"I found this dread of imperialism everywhere. The fact that we are not associated with it in men's minds has caused people to go much farther in their approval of us than I had dared to imagine. I was amazed to discover how keenly the world is aware of the fact that we do not seek — anywhere, in any region — to impose our rule upon others or to exact special privileges. . . .

Reservoir Exists

"Now, as I see it, the existence of this reservoir is the biggest political fact of our time. No other western nation has such a reservoir. Ours must be used to unify the peoples of the earth in the human quest for freedom and justice. . . .

"I bring you the assurance that this reservoir exists. I also bring you the warning that it is leaking. It is leaking dangerously. . . . We have made great promises. . . .

"It is my reasoned judgment that we cannot win this war 40 per cent mobilized. There are a great many people listening to me tonight who would like to do more if they knew what more to do. It is up to us to make our leaders give us more to do.

"Five million Russians and five million Chinese have given their lives in this struggle. Each of these countries has lost as many men as we have in our entire army. We owe them more than boasts and broken promises."

Asked About India

He said many people had asked him "What about India?"

"Now I did not go to India. I do not propose to discuss that tangled question tonight. But it has one aspect, in the east, which I should report to you. From Cairo on, it confronted me at every turn. The wisest man in China said to me: 'When the aspiration of India for freedom was put aside to some future date, it was not Great Britain that suffered in public esteem in the Far East. It was the United States.'"

"He was telling me, and through me, you, that by our silence on India we have already drawn heavily on our reservoir of good-will in the East. People of the East who would like to count on us are doubtful. They cannot ascertain from our government's wishy-washy attitude towards the problem of India what we are likely to feel at the end of the war about all the other hundreds of millions of eastern peoples. They cannot tell from our vague and vacillating talk whether or not we really do stand for freedom, or what we mean by freedom.

"In Africa, in the Middle East, throughout the Arab world, as well as in China and the whole Far East, freedom means the orderly but scheduled abolition of the colonial system. I can assure you that this is true. I can assure you that the rule of people by other peoples is not freedom, and not what we must fight to preserve."

Talks of Colonial System

"Please understand — I am not talking about the commonwealth of free nations. I am talking about the colonial system wherever it exists, under whatever nation. We Americans are still too apt to think and speak of the British Empire. We must recognize the truth that in vast areas of the world there is no longer any British Empire but instead a proud commonwealth of free nations. British colonial possessions are but remnants of empire. We must remember that throughout the commonwealth place of the colonial system. This, ed in millions, who are working selflessly and with great skill towards reducing these remnants, extending the commonwealth in place of fthe colonial system. This, it seemed to me, was what General Smuts was talking about in his recent dramatic speech before the cheering British Parliament.

"As Americans we must also recognize that we share with these men and women of the British Commonwealth of free nations, the responsibility of making the whole world a commonwealth of free nations."

AT THE McCARTHY

"Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror"

Challenged by the most ruthless criminals in all history, Sherlock Holmes, master sleuth emerges from peaceful yesterdays to thwart today's masterful of frightfulness, the enemy saboteur. Sherlock is back with his reliable methods; but in a modern setting, an exciting motion picture that may well inaugurate a new cycle of timely detective thrillers. The film titled "Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror", opened yesterday at the McCarthy theatre.

Based on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's "His Last Bow," the screen play by Lynn Riggs matches the indomitable Sherlock against those audacious enemy agents who broadcast the announcement of a specified act of sabotage; then proceed with the actual destruction.

Reliable Pattern

Sherlock's methods of determining clues and bagging the culprits are patterned along the same lines employed in such classic cases as "A Study in Scarlet," "The Speckled Band," and other Conan Doyle stories. Set to the rhythm of modern war drums, the result is amazingly effective.

Basil Rathbone has the role of Sherlock and starred with him, as Doctor Watson, is Nigel Bruce. A noteworthy cast is enhanced by such names as Evelyn Ankers, Reginald Denny, Thomas Gomez, Montagu Love, and Henry Daniell.

Rathbone gives his usual notable performance. Rarely has the star been seen to better advantage than as the great sleuth, the shadowy, austere Holmes. The casting of Nigel Bruce as his constantly amazed colleague, was a happy example of good movie judgment.

New Screen Personality

Thomas Gomez, who appears as Meade, the saboteur, is a new screen personality coming to films after many successful seasons on the Broadway stage. Miss Ankers is particularly winsome in a picturesque characterization.

"Youth on Parade"

Blending fun and romance on the campus with delightful musical-comedy highlights "Youth on Parade" featuring John Hubbard, Ruth Terry, Tom Brown and a screenful of college cuties, adds an hour of exceptionally fine entertainment to the program in addition to "Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror" plus the added short subjects "Universal News Events" and the timely World in Action subject "Freighters Under Fire" in which actual submarine warfare on the high seas is vividly filmed.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Bombs Over Burma"

(First Belleville Showing)

Anna May Wong, starring in the timely new Producers Release Corporation thriller, "Bombs Over Burma" is now showing at the Capitol Theatre.

Taking place on the famed Burma Road, "Bombs Over Burma" is the saga of a fearless Chinese school teacher who avenges the death of her favorite pupil by braving Nipponese bullets and planes to save a key point in China's defences. Miss Wong is aided by an all-star cast.

Gary Cooper

Now showing as the special added attraction at the Capitol, Samuel Goldwyn brings you the most magnificent outdoor spectacle ever filmed.

One of Academy Award winners, Gary Cooper's biggest and most important pictures, unfolding a drama of feud and flame that swept the west like a prairie fire. A great story for Goldwyn, great entertainment for you! Gary Cooper as "The Westerner" with Walter Brenan, Fred Stone and Doris Davenport.

In the news reel, Victoria Cross for Lt. Col. C. C. I. Merritt.

AT THE BELLE

Japan paid dearly when they attacked "Wake Island." Grim and thrilling days of the siege are told in "Wake Island," Paramount's dramatization now at the Belle Theatre. Insert are Brian Donlevy, Walter Abel, Robert Preston and MacDonald Carey.

AT THE BELLE

"Wake Island"

A timely, inspiring and nerve-tingling film, translated into gripping drama from yesterday's headlines is now at the Belle Theatre where "Wake Island" is now showing.

Produced by Paramount and brilliantly acted by a first-rate cast, "Wake Island" immortalizes in celluloid the heroism of that small band of battling Marines who fought on against tremendous Jap odds. It was one of the most valiant stands in Marine Corps history. "Wake Island" itself must be set down as one of the most compelling pieces of film entertainment the screen has yet given us.

Among the large cast whose performances will long be remembered are Brian Donlevy, Robert Preston, MacDonald Carey, Albert Dekker, Walter Abel, Barbara Britton and William Bendix.

Four excellent varied short treats precede the feature attraction including The Belle Newsreel, a fun cartoon, a sportlight film and a smart musical revue.

"Panama Hattie" Hit Musical

Taking its place at the top with the season's best musicals, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Panama Hattie" starring Ann Sothern and Red Skelton is coming to the Belle Theatre.

Rich in elaborate numbers, tempered with a good, down-to-earth story revolving around the romance between Miss Sothern and Dan Dailey, Jr., and the many antics of Skelton, Rags Ragland and Ben Blue as the sailors, the film contains every conceivable element of entertainment.

Cole Porter Songs

The songs, including three Cole Porter numbers from the Broadway production, include tunes you'll be humming long after you've seen the show.

As Panama Hattie, a night club entertainer with a heart of gold, Miss Sothern has one of the best roles of her career., Red Skelton adds quite a few new laurels to his fame and Virginia O'Brien swings from her dead-pan singing to a role you'll enjoy. Dailey does an excellent job in his straight role.

The sequence where the three sailors search a haunted house in their determination to run down a spy is particularly rib-tickling.

Excellent Cast

Others who land strength to an excellent cast include Alan Mowbray as a butler, Jack Horner as Dailey's daughter, Marsha Hunt as Dailey's ex-fiancee, Carl Esmond, Lena Horne and the Berry Brothers.

REMEMBER WITHOUT WANTING

by MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

CHAPTER 30
Journey's End

"I've been very unfair to you in my thoughts," Judith said.

"Naturally. I wanted you to be."

"Then why today? Why—now?"

Max said simply, "To answer your questions. To explain myself. Because coming back it occurred to me that I owed you that and that if I didn't see you, all your life perhaps you would wonder. It would be as if you had stopped reading a mystery story in the middle." He shook his head. "I have not always been as fair."

Smiling, he took her hand and held it for a few moments before he spoke again. "You are not in love with me now. Your hand tells me. It's a lovely, sensitive hand, but it doesn't respond. Don't censor yourself for it, Judith. It's a perfectly natural state of affairs. We weren't mistakes. Nothing that gave us so much could have been a mistake."

"You haven't changed, Max."

"No. I knew the correct answer to us from the beginning. You had to find it—the hard way. You've been hurt, but you're wiser and nicer for it." He smiled again. "This is my last gesture where women are concerned. Fay and I are being married tonight." At her incredulous look he chuckled. "Yes. We are being married tonight at 7 in her living-room with all my antiquated uncles and aunts witnessing the ceremony with great relief and joy. They have always loved Fay. I love her, too, and I intend to be utterly faithful. We are leaving almost at once for Venezuela by plane. . . . So this is the end of the saga of Max Worthington, Judith. It will be a sort of twilight trail for Fay and me."

"I'm very glad for both of you."

"You were right. In the end it's the common, ordinary, little things that keep people close."

"You must have a great many things to do."

"My trunk is always ready for flight. And you?"

"I'm all right."

"I know you are. I didn't mean that. I meant rather that I want to inquire briefly about—about the young man who is to me no more than a boy in years."

"He's Stephen Larrabee and I've behaved very badly." She smiled. "He's the usual young man with a promising job, a set of golf sticks and a membership in the country club. He's the usual young man to a bystander, but he's someone special to me."

"You're very lucky. And now." He took her hand again and smiled at her. "We omitted the usual preliminaries so let's omit the usual goodbye. Shall we go?"

"Just one thing more. Suppose I had still loved you."

"That was the chance I took."

Walking beside his tall straight figure through the lobby, she thought, "This is the last time I shall ever see Max. It hurts because I like him. I never thought about liking him before. You never think about liking a man you're in love with. And I understand everything now. I understand him."

Presently they were standing on the sidewalk.

"Do you want a taxi, Judith?"

"No. I'm going to walk."

"I must get a taxi. He turned to her, looking up, she saw the fine wrinkles around his eyes and the fair hair that was thinning. She gave him her hand and smiled a sad little smile for a farewell without regret.

"Max—"

"Don't say it. We think we have had high moments, but of all of them—this is our best. We won't forget, Judith, but it will be a remembering without wanting."

He turned away, stepped quickly into a waiting taxi that turned the corner and vanished.

Judith walked down Park Avenue thinking of the quickening and dying of her pulse when Max had come toward her. It was not that she had never loved him. Nor had it been infatuation or romantic excitement. Love does not die, but people change.

Looking back, she could see every step in the change. Slowly rebellion had become contentment. And Stephen? Nothing wonderful or particularly stimulating had marked the times they had spent together. There had been just a series of little things. Slowly the roots of their lives had grown together by those series of seemingly unimportant meetings — until she needed him. She had not known that sitting beside him in a movie or facing him across a tennis court or dancing with him he had been making her need him. The dear, foolish little things remained the longest. Nor had he known. For from the beginning he had needed her. From the beginning she had been his "best". With Stephen it would not ever be a remembering without wanting because the want and the need would grow. The usual marriage with the usual man.

And on the same streets she had once walked in the month of March her heart crying for Max she walked now in July, all her questions of Max answered, her need of Stephen growing and all the simple, honest, direct things he had told her echoing in her mind.

In her room at last, she went directly to the telephone and called Stephen's boarding house.

Presently she heard Mrs. Bradford's "Hello."

Judith said, "Mrs. Bradford, this is Judith Barth. Is Mr. Larrabee there?"

"I'll see if you'll wait a minute."

Judith felt as though she were suspended in mid-air while she waited, hearing Mrs. Bradford's too large slippers clattering up the steps.

"Hello," Stephen said impatiently.

"Oh! This is Judith." Because she wanted to say so much she could say nothing.

He said, "Oh!" Then, "Well."

"I didn't expect to find you there. I thought you'd be driving up to Lake George today." She didn't want to say that. . . .

"Tomorrow morning first thing."

"I'm coming home tonight, Stephen. Will you meet my train?"

"Well, I don't know if I can. Very well. I'll meet you. What time?"

She told him.

He said, "Okay, see you then," in a cool voice.

A few moments later Judith was in a taxi on her way to the station.

The journey was endless. The look of contentment on the faces of other passengers increased her impatience. Seven o'clock came and went before she realized that Max and Fay were married.

After the train stopped at Clinton and Judith got off she saw Stephen coming toward her wearing a brown suit that deepened his sunburn. "The little things," she thought, her heart moving crazily.

His "Hello" was cordial but cool as he picked up her bag.

"Thanks for meeting me"

They walked through the station and out to his car.

"I haven't had any dinner, Stephen."

"Why didn't you get it on the train?" he said, trying to sound severe.

"I wasn't hungry."

"We'll stop some place. I've had mine."

"But you could eat ice cream. You always can."

They entered a small place that had yellow chintz curtains at the windows and maple chairs and tables and pretty waitresses in yellow uniforms. The dinner hour had long passed and only two older women were there.

Judith ordered a light dinner; Stephen ice cream.

"I've never been here before," she said.

"Home-cooked meals." He smiled slightly. "People who live at Mrs. Bradford's always know all the restaurants in town."

If anybody had been watching, he or she would probably thought it odd to see her unclasp the charm bracelet Max had given her, remove it from her wrist and leave it on the table.

Over it their eyes met. She nodded, her throat aching. "I wanted you to see me take it off. There it is, Stephen, and—and everything that went with it."

His eyes that once she had thought too beautiful for a man darkened.

"Do you mean it, Judith?"

"And so much more. I—I mean so much that it all rushes together and I can't say anything."

"You mean you'll—marry me?"

"Wouldn't you like to hear about—"

"Maybe some other time, but not now. Not now!" He leaned closer and he was terribly excited. "You mean you'll marry me?"

"I haven't had any training to be a wife, Stephen, but I know some of the things she shouldn't be, so that should leave some of the things se should be—"

"You'll be a wonderful wife. And you'll marry me even if I have to go to camp for a year?"

He had not said that he loved her—yet. He had not called her by any endearing names. He just sat opposite her, looking at her. His saying, "You'll be a wonderful wife," was the loveliest thing that anyone had ever said to her.

"Stephen, everything that you are is what I want."

He smiled. He couldn't stop smiling. "What will your mother and Dad say?"

"Shall we go and find out?"

"You haven't had your dinner."

"I don't want any."

"What shall we do with this?" Max's bracelet. "I don't care if you wear it now. Judith, we'll make it soon?"

"Very soon. Shall we go?"

"You were kidding. You weren't hungry."

"I had to see you alone."

"I want to see you alone. I want to kiss you."

He left money on the table and they arose and went toward the door. But a young man came in and spoke to Stephen.

"Your second dinner tonight, Dave?" Stephen asked him.

"Yes. I'm going to get out of that place. Mrs. Bradford's roasts appear in a different dress every night, but it's still the same old roast."

"I'm getting out too," Stephen looked at Judith before he said, "Dave, this is the Larrabee corporation."

Little Benny's Note Book

Mrs. Hews called me up on the telephone, and after about a half an hour ma hung up on account of both of them probably feeling exhausted of things to say, and pop said, What did she call you up about?

Oh, nothing in particular, ma said, and pop said, Yee gods nobody but 2 women could possibly talk that long over the telephone without having anything to say in the first place.

I bet 2 boys could pop, I said, I bet I can call up Puds Simkins and I bet we can talk even longer than 2 ladies without saying anything special, I said, and pop said, You're just bragging.

No sir, pop, I'll prove it, I said.

And I called Puds's number and Puds answered the phone and I said, High, Puds, I just called you up because I'm not doing anything special, what are you doing-

Nothing special, Puds said, and I said, Neither am I. What's new? Anything new? I said, and Puds said, No, and I said, Are you all through supper?

Yes, are you? Puds said, and I said, Yes, I bet I know what you had to eat, and Puds said, I bet you any amount of money you dont. Name any 3 things, he said, and I said, Bread and butter and potatoes.

That's right, I bet I know what you had, Puds said, and I said, Sure, the same 3, that's a cinch and Puds said, No I bet I can name 4 different ones. Water and salad and salt and pepper, he said, and I said, G, that's right, and Puds said, Hay, did you hear about Glasses Magee's monkey? He hasn't got one, he said, and I said, Well then I heard about it because you just told me, so that's one on you.

Which just then pop grabbed the telephone away from me, saying into it, You boys can see each other in the funny papers with the rest of your little friends.

And he quick hung up and ended the subject.

LOAN TOTAL AT $366,965,050 FOR SEVEN DAYS

Begins Eighth Day With Only 8 Millions Short of Half-way Mark

MONDAY'S PURCHASE

Ottawa, Oct. 27 — (CP) — Total subscription to Canada's Third Victory Loan up to Monday night totalled $366,965,050, only about $8,000,000 from the half-way mark in the drive for a minimum objective of $750,000,000, National Loan Headquarters announced today.

Subscriptions on Monday, seventh of the 18 working days in the campaign which is to end Nov. 7, were $54,554,150 compared with an average for the seven days of $52,423,564.

It had been anticipated adverse weather conditions in Ontario and Quebec might cut yesterday's subscription but today loan headquarters said the weather had "only a slightly dampening effect on the canvass."

Total subscriptions for the first seven days of the Second Victory Loan last February were not available but the current loan was believed to be considerably ahead of the February level. However, the objective in this loan in 25 per cent higher than the February objective of $600,000,000.

Large Subscriptions

Large subscriptions from Quebec province announced today were: — The Prudential Insurance Co. of America, from its Canadian head office in Montreal, $10,000,000; Imperial Tobacco Co. of Canada Ltd., $1,200,000; Aetna Life Insurance Co., $1,000,000; McColl-Frontenac Oil Co. Ltd., $1,250,000; Montreal Light, Heat and Power Consolidated, $2,500,000; Price Brothers and Co., Ltd., $650,000.

From Ontario were reported: — Proctor and Gamble Co. of Canada Ltd., $625,000; North America Companies of Philadelphia, $300,000.

From British Columbia came $1,000,000 from British Columbia Telephone Co., in Vancouver.

Northernmost Unit

The northernmost unit in the national war finance organization—the mining town of Sherridon, Man. — became the first town in Manitoba to go "over the top" of its Victory Loan quota. Sherridon, with a population of 2,000, has 502 workers, most of them employees of the Sherritt-Gordon mines. The town's quota was $55,000, and total subscriptions to date were listed at $57,000, the highest ratio per person of any.

No. 20 Elementary Flying School at Oshawa, Ont., was given an objective of $4,000. During the first three days of the canvass at the school, more than $9,500 was raised.

"Young Canadians have shown a keen sense of citizenship," said National Loan Headquarters.

Summer Earnings of Students

"At King Edward High School, Vancouver, 29 students bought $3,000 in bonds with money they had earned during the summer vacation. Many had worked in market gardens and fruit orchards all summer to buy victory bonds. At Kitsilano Junior High School, 44 students bought $2,500. A 12-year-old girl who couldn't quite raise enough for a $100 bond, took a $50 bond and $40 in war savings certificates.

"Patrick Blewett of Vancouver had worked at odd jobs all summer to buy two $25 engines for his model planes. When victory bond salesmen visited his home, 15-year-old Patrick listened to them talking to his parents. Finally he left the room to return with his long-saved money. As he poured the quarters and dimes on the table he said: 'This money will buy a heap of bullets, won't it, Mister?"

Loan officials in Montreal reported that Quebec Province had collected $76,454,150 or 38.2 per cent of its objective. Montreal Island's figure stood at $60,011,700 or 37.5 per cent of its quota.

The payroll savings canvass continued to make impressive progress, reports to Ottawa Loan Headquarters showed last night.

All 75 employees of the Running Trades' Section of the Canadian Pacific Railway at London, Ont., contributed to purchases of victory bonds.

HEAVY SNOWFALL IN BANCROFT

Winter struck with a vengeance in the northern sections of the county today.

According to reports from Bancroft early this afternoon a miniature blizzard has struck the village with the ground covered with one inch and snow falling so heavily that it was impossible to see across the street.

Picton also experienced a snowfall last night. Trucks and cars parked outside in the Prince Edward County town arrived in the city this morning with the tops covered with a white blanket of snow.

Except for a few flurries this afternoon, the city has thus far escaped the white heraldry of winter.

WALL ST.

New York, Oct. 27 — (AP) — Heightened tension over the Japanese offensive on Guadalcanal island weakened stock market support today and industrial leaders backed down fractions to around 2 points.

Retreats were widest in the industrial specialty and blue chip divisions. The steels, motors, aircrafts, rubbers and rails were fractionally lower near the fourth hour.

In the Canadian section Dome Mines eased 1-2 point. Canadian Pacific and Distillers Seagram 1-4. McIntyre Mines was the sole gainer, up 5-8.

Westinghouse and American Telephone were off around 2 points each at the worst. Other stocks carrying minus marks included Texas Co., American Smelting, International Nickel, American Can, Consolidated Edison and Standard Oil (NJ).

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Oct. 27 — (CP)—The stock market today turned heavy around noon.

Kerr-Addison, East Malartic, Macassa, Lake Shore and Hollinger weakened about 5 cents and McIntyre held a gain of 3-4. In the base metal group prices were down fractions for International Nickel, Hudson Bay, Noranda and Smelters, Sudbury Basin touched a new low for the year at 1.05 and minor losses were boarded by Steep Rock, Ontario Nickel and Sherritt.

The industrial share board spotted a majority of losses over gains but individual recessions were narrow. Bell Telephone, down a point, had the widest set-back. Penman's eased off 9 3-4 to 45 as the first sale since last May.

HOW TO RELIEVE PILE TORTURE QUICKLY AND EASILY

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results your druggist will gladly return your money.

DESERT TANK BATTLES DEVELOP ON LARGER SCALE

Army Goes Deeper Into Axis Desert Defence System

Eighteen Enemy Planes Knocked-out; Intercepted Before Reaching Targets

BRITISH LOSSES LIGHT

By STEPHEN BARBER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Cairo, Oct. 28—(AP)—The next phase of the new battle for North Africa was shaping up today in the widening gaps in the Axis desert defence line as Britain's army of the Nile and Field Marshal Rommel's invaders rolled an increasing weight of tanks into the first clashes of an expected crucial test of armored power.

A British communique which reported "further progress" Monday night and unabated attacks on the German - Italian line throughout yesterday said British tanks came out on top in the first main test of armor.

"Yesterday an armored clash on a larger scale than hitherto developed," it said. "After considerable fighting the enemy were driven off with a considerable loss. Our own losses in tanks were light. Fighting continues."

Axis Tank Losses Considerable

Dispatches from the front indicated that the Axis tank losses have been considerable, although it was clear that by far the main mass of Rommel's tanks still were poised back of the battlefront, where they have been under continued bombing and strafing by bomber and fighter-bomber squadrons.

Prisoners who streamed back along the British supply lines said they had been under a deadly battering by the Allied artillery barrage, which has been thundering since the outset of the British push now in its fifth day.

Kept on Defensive

The Allied air forces—British, United States and South African—kept Rommel's planes on the defensive yesterday, except for a single attempted dive-bomber attack and scored 18 to 6 over the Axis in planes shot down in combat.

(In London, Lord Croft, Parliamentary Under-Secretary for War, said the 8th Army had made "good progress in the north—the seaward flank of the El Alamein line—where three objectives allotted to them have been mostly gained and held."

The British command reported that the furious drive to open up a path for the heavier armored formations continued with no abatement throughout Monday night and Tuesday.

The superior Allied air strength was used night and day against enemy concentrations and forward landing grounds and light bombers and fighter-bombers raided the Matruh dock area. Night fighters shot down a Junkers 87 during the night, the communique said.

18 Axis Planes Downed

Allied planes shot down 18 Axis planes yesterday, 13 of them during a dive-bomber attack on British forward troops, the communique said. This attack was one of the few aggressive operations undertaken by the Axis, whose forces were "mainly on the defensive."

Allied fighters intercepted the German dive-bombers, escorted by fighters, apparently before they reached their objective, dispersing them. Most of the planes shot down were reported to be fighters.

Six Allied aircraft were lost in operations over North Africa and in the defence of Malta, where the Axis bombing continued with little damage reported, the communique said.

The slow, hard struggle across miles of strongly-held desert positions is expected to continue for some time before sufficient ground is cleared for an Allied tank blow at the armored backbone of Rommel's army.

Germans Admit Advance

(The German news agency DNB reported last night that British tanks already were attacking in waves on the northern flank of the Axis line, where, the agency said, the largest part of Allied tank forces were concentrated.)

Allied aircraft were constantly scouring the battle area and the desert reaches behind it and latest dispatches from the front told of a bitter air battle between Allied planes and a group of Axis dive-bombers escorted by fighters.

JAP ATTEMPTS TO DESTROY BASES APPEAR FUTILE

Ferry Service to China Will Not be Interrupted by Bombing

FIELDS PROTECTED

By PRESTON GROVER
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

New Delhi, India, Oct. 28 (AP)—The Japanese were disclosed today to have destroyed or damaged at least 10 fighters on the ground besides the previously-announced "several transports" in raids on American airfields in northeast India, but their attempts to smash these bases of the United States army bombers and ferry service to China were regarded here as futile.

The new figures were made known in a supplement to an earlier U.S. army communique and disclosed also that about 50 Japanese bombers and 45 fighters engaged in one attack Sunday while 27 enemy fighters escorted five reconnaissance planes in a second attack on the same fields Monday.

Lieut. Edward Nollmeyer of Everett, Wash., was cited for particular mention. Single-handed, he attacked the whole 27, the communique said, and shot one down without damage to himself.

Speaking of both attacks and A.A.F. raids as far away as that upon the Linsi mine north of Tientsin recently, United States army communique issued last night said "the lull in wide-range aerial warfare may be said to have ended with the monsoon."

Brave Father, Now Missing, Wrote Inspiring Letter to His Young Son

Arlington, Mass., Oct. 28 (AP).—Jackie Shea, five years old, had a letter he never will part with, a letter that said: "If I don't get back . . ."

It's from his dad, Commander John J. Shea, 43, last seen fighting flames aboard the United States aircraft carrier, Wasp, shortly before the vessel went down under a torpedo attack near the Solomons, Sept. 15. Shea is listed as "missing in action".

The letter, written June 29, reads in part:

"Dear Jackie:

"This is the first letter I have ever written directly to my little son and I am thrilled to know you can read it all by yourself. If you miss some of the words, I am sure it will be because I do not write plainly. Mother will help you in that case, I am sure.

"I was certainly glad to hear your voice over the long distance telephone. It sounded as though I were right there in the living room with you. You sounded as though you missed your daddy very much. I miss you, too, more than any one will ever know. It is too bad this war could not have been delayed a few more years so that I could grow up again with you and do all the things I planned to do when you were old enough to go to school.

"I thought how nice it would be for me to come home early in the afternoon and play ball with you and go mountain climbing and see the trees and brooks and learn all about woodcraft, hunting, fishing, swimming and other things like that. . . .

"When you are a little bigger you will know why your daddy is not home so much any more. You know we have a big country, and we have ideals as to how people should live and enjoy the riches of it, and how each is born with equal rights to life, freedom and the pursuit of happiness. Unfortunately, there are some countries in the world where they don't have these ideals, where a boy cannot grow up to be what he wants to be with no limits on his opportunities to be a great man, such as a great priest, statesman, doctor, soldier, business man, etc. . . .

"Fighting for the defence of our country, ideals, homes and honor is an honor and a duty which your daddy has to do before he can come home to settle down with you and mother. . . .

"Don't ever be a quitter, either in sports or in your business or profession when you grow up. Get all the education you can. Stay close to mother and follow her advice. Obey her in everything, no matter how much you may at times disagree. She knows what is best and will never let you down or lead you away from the right and honorable things of life.

"If I don't get back, you will have to be mother's protector, because you will be the only one she has. . . ."

Northeast of Taupse Nazis Invaders Sent Into Retreat By Counter-Attacks

HOLD AT STALINGRAD

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Oct. 28—(AP) — Red Army defenders of the cliff-sided mountain road to the Black Sea port of Tuapse have turned the tables on the Nazis in the western Caucasus with a smashing counter-assault which forced the Germans into a retreat that started several days ago, battlefront dispatches reported today.

In Stalingrad, a German onslaught renewed at deadly cost gained the invaders two more debris-littered streets, but the main Russian lines held, and northwest of the besieged city the Red Army's relief offensive bit menacingly deeper into the German flank across the sodden steppes.

Timed with the resurgent Russian thrust along the road approaching Tuapse through passes to the northeast, other Russian forces struck determinedly into German positions east of the port of Novorossisk, 80 miles farther up the coast.

R.C.A.F. Flying Officer Victim Of Indian Mob

Ottawa, Oct. 28—(CP)—Pilot Officer Joseph Henry Smith of the R.C.A.F. was killed last August when a "hostile mob" attacked a train in India, it was learned today at R.C.A.F. headquarters.

Details of the incident, believed to have occurred at a place under Futwak, were not available here.

A brief official report said PO. Smith was listed as "killed accidentally." The Kamloops pilot was "an officer on duty" when the mob attacked the train, spokesmen for the R.C.A.F. said. They added that this apparently meant Smith was aboard the train in charge of a group of airmen.

The incident occurred Aug. 13.

PO. Smith's mother, Mrs. J. J. Smith, lives in Kamloops.

Germans Are Forced To Back Down on Quota Before French Threat

London, Oct. 28 (CP).—The Germans backed down in the face of a threatened general strike by French workers during the recent crisis over German insistance on a quota of 150,000 workers for Nazi war industries, the Daily Mail said today, quoting fighting French circles.

Chiefs of underground organizations gave Vichy an ultimatum that a walkout would be called Oct. 17 unless plans for conscription of French labor were abandoned, the paper said.

Three days of negotiations in an attempt to avoid the strike failed. Fighting French circles said the Germans then withdrew their threat of force and extended the deadline for the quota to Dec. 31.

SWIFT MOSQUITOS THOROUGHLY RAKE NAZI TARGETS

Low-Level Attack Made Upon Shipbuilding Yards at Flensburg

MERCHANT SHIP HIT

London, Oct. 28 (CP)—Wooden-framed mosquito bombers raked Nazi targets from Belgium to the Baltic yesterday while Spitfires and R. C. A. F. squadron turned their guns upon German pill-boxes, warehouses and freight trains in occupied France.

The R.A.F. drove home a low-level attack upon shipbuilding yards at Flensburg, a German port and submarine construction base near the Danish border, and fired a medium-sized merchant ship, the Air Ministry announced yesterday.

Crews of the swift mosquitos also bombed objectives in Belgium and The Netherlands, it was reported without detail.

Fighters swept the area from Cap Griz Nez to Cap De La Hague, loosing cannon and machine-gun fire upon freight trains, fortifications and other targets. Two British fighters are missing from the various sweeps. All R.C.A.F. planes which made successful attacks against two freight trains and other targets in the Yvetot area, returned to their bases.

The Air Ministry News Service said that in one operation 12 Focke-Wulf 190s refused to fight and sped inland.

A coastal command Beaufighter was credited with destruction of a German JU 88 over the Bay of Biscay Monday.

London's defences were tested in a large-scale mock air-raid during the night, fighters, anti-aircraft batteries and searchlight crews teaming up in a noisy and spectacular show.

Residents of the capital heard a constant drone of motors and saw many planes caught in the beams of searchlights.

It was a quiet night otherwise, however. The Air and Home Security Ministeries' communique said "during darkness, there has been nothing to report."

Ban on Travel Limit For Commercial Vehicles Postponed for 30 Days

Ottawa, Oct. 28 — (CP) — James Stewart, administrator of services for the prices board, today announced a 30-day postmonement in the effective date of the order prohibiting the operation of private commercial vehicles more than 35 miles from their registered addresses.

A previous order limited the operations of private trucks to 35 miles from registered addresses on and after Nov. 1, 1942, except by special permit. This restriction now will not become effective until Nov. 30, and meantime there is no restriction upon the distance over which private trucks may operate.

Mr. Stewart said the amendment will enable the heavy movement of goods which normally takes place just before winter sets in to proceed without interruption, and will give private operators an opportunity to make adjustments to conform to the 35 mile limit, or to the requirements of any permit which may be issued to them on and after Nov. 30.

The administrator emphasized that no further extension of time will be granted.

WAGES, SALARIES FROZEN IN U. S. FOR DURATION

President Roosevelt Asks to Have His Pay Within Regulations

DEDUCTIONS

Washington, Oct. 28 — (AP) — That joyous cry, "I just got a raise," is out for the duration in the United States.

Regulations issued by economic director James F. Byrnes and approved by President Roosevelt, generally limit public and private salaries, except those fixed by statute, to $25,000 a year and freeze all salaries and wages up to that amount.

(Under Canada's regulations, in effect since Nov. 15, 1941, pay raises are permitted only where the individual assumes greater responsibilities or receives promotion. Payment of a cost-of-living bonus was made mandatory at that time — the bonus amount determined by the rise or fall in the cost-of-living index. The bonus applies to all industrial employees.

(Special approval of the Minister of National Revenue must be obtained for promotions where the total salary after promotion is more than $7,500.)

The purpose is to discourage wartime inflation and at the same time increase Federal tax revenues by causing corporations to retain amounts formerly paid in high salaries. The corporation thus will be required to pay taxes levied at a higher rate than on individual earned income.

25,000 Salary Limitation

While there is no regulation preventing a salary decrease, any increase with certain exceptions must have approval of the War Labor Board or treasury. The $25,000 salary limitation is not effective until Jan. 1, although increases are prohibited meantime.

The president, whose $75,000 salary is the only statutory federal increment exceeding $25,000, has asked the treasury, Byrnes said, that his pay be limited within the regulations. Whether he must turn back a portion of his salary depends on the amount of his deduction allowances.

Allowing for tax deductions and other allowances, treasury officials estimated that a person would have to make more than $67,000 a year to be affected by the $25,000 limitation.

Before reaching the $25,000 maximum, deductions are permitted for federal income taxes, "customary" charitable contributions, payments on life insurance policies and other fixed obligations in effect Oct. 3, 1942, and for past income taxes due.

The qualified freezing of salaries of $5,000 or less became effective yesterday and that of salaries of more than $5,000 is retroactive to Oct. 3.

Increases may be granted automatically in these classifications in cases of individual promotions or reclassifications; individual merit increases within established salary rate ranges; operation of an established system of salary increases based on service; increased productivity under an inventive plan, and in the operation of a trainee system.

ESCAPES FROM NAZI PRISON

Ottawa, Oct. 28—(CP) — Frank Pickersgill, 27, brother of J. W. Pickersgill, of Prime Minister Mackenzie King's secretarial staff, has reached England after escaping from a Nazi internment camp in France, according to word received here last night.

Frank Pickersgill, a native of Winnipeg, went to France in 1938 to complete his studies and was trapped in Paris when the Germans took the city in 1940.

He travelled through France and Spain to Portugal in making his escape, it was learned.

SIXTEEN PERSONS KILLED AS TRAIN HITS SCHOOL BUS

Bodies Strewn Along Tracks For Two Blocks With Many Badly Mangled

VEHICLE CUT IN HALF

Detroit, Oct. 28 (AP).—Sixteen persons, including several school pupils, were killed today as a passenger train sliced through a crowded Detroit Street Railways motorbus.

Bodies were strewn along the tracks for two blocks, and some were mangled against the front of the locomotive as the train, a Grand Trunk Western passenger train arriving from Chicago, pulled to a stop a quarter mile past the crossing.

The bus, driven by William F. Clos of Detroit, had stopped at the Caniff avenue crossing while a northbound freight train passed.

Flasher Operating.

Eye-witnesses said that electric flasher signals were operating, but that after the freight passed, the bus started across the tracks into the path of the southbound passenger train.

The front end of the bus cleared the tracks, but the locomotive smashed through the vehicle at its middle doors, cutting it in half. Most of the dead were passengers in the rear end of the bus.

School books of the younger passengers on the bus were scattered along the right-of-way. Many of the bodies, some decapitated and others with limbs severed, were impossible to identify immediately.

The front end of the bus, hurled aside as the train struck it, was left on its side close to the intersection. The rear end was smashed to fragments and scattered.

Fred A. Nolan, general manager of the municipally-owned Detroit Transportation System, said it was the worst accident in Detroit Street Railways history.

Tower Operater Tells Story.

Joseph Levinski, operator in a tower at the southeast corner of the intersection, told how he watched the bus start up after the freight passed.

"The red flasher lights were still working," he said. "The passenger train was coming fast, southbound, with the engine whistle screaming. I saw this bus start up. I knew it would do no good, but I leaned out of the tower and yelled. I yelled my head off. The bus went right in the path of the train, and there was an awful splintering crash, and then screams."

Mary Alla, 12, one of the bus passengers who escaped with slight injuries, said "I was in the front end of the bus and all I know is that there was a crash and then I fell down and then somebody cut through a piece of wood and picked me out."

Employees of a coal office, against which the front end of the bus was hurled, said two nuns were among the few passengers who were not injured.

Clos, 25, has been a regular coach operator for two years. He was taken to the police station in suburban Hamtramck for questioning. Nolan said Clos was unable to tell a coherent story of the accident.

The crash occurred at the Detroit-Hamtramck boundary, on the Hamtramck side. The front end of the bus was tossed into Detroit territory by the locomotive.

Officers worked for nearly an hour to extricate the bodies of several youths who apparently were en route to classes at a Detroit high school.

Says Germans Demand of Laval Large Tonnage French, Foreign Ships

London, Oct. 28 (CP).—The BBC said in a broadcast to the continent last night that the Germans in Paris had called upon Pierre Laval, Vichy chief of government, for the surrender of a large tonnage of both French and foreign shipping in French ports.

The BBC report said:

"Messages reaching London said the Germans in Paris have told Laval that he must surrender a large tonnage of both French and foreign shipping.

"Foreign shipping demanded includes 35 Norwegian, Greek and Danish ships totalling 117,000 tons.

"Italy has put in a claim for 13 of these ships totalling 36,000 tons.

"The pressure on Laval has increased because British submarines have hit 24 axis ships since the beginning of the month."

It was first reported that fighting French headquarters had supplied the information to the BBC but the fighting French disclaimed responsibility and no other source was given.

U.S., Jap Forces Battle for Control Of Remote Airfield

Japs Break Thru On North Shore But Thrown Back With Heavy Losses

ENEMY GIVES GROUND

Washington, Oct. 28—(AP)—American and Japanese warships churned through the Southwest Pacific for control of the bomb-scarred Guadalcanal airfield today while on the island itself land forces were locked in heavy fighting.

Latest reports from the battle zone showed action is continuing at a furious pace over a wide area and both President Roosevelt and Navy Secretary Frank Knox said the results are not yet clear.

Two Japanese destroyers have been sunk, last night's navy communique reported, one enemy battleship has been hit, a cruiser badly damaged and a destroyer hurt.

In the land battle on the north shore of Guadalcanal Japanese forces broke through the American south flank during the night of Oct. 25-26 but were thrown back by army troops who regained their temporarily-lost positions.

Eight thousand air raid wardens patrolled the streets, many of them wearing their new "tin hats." Street cars stopped, and the streets cleared of pedestrians, offered an unusually quiet daytime spectacle.

Main purpose of the test was to determine how quickly the streets could be cleared.

Mrs. Roosevelt Visits Clothing Depot Which Distributes Supplies

London, Oct 28—(CP) — Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, starting the fifth day of her tour of Britain's women at war work, today visited the London Clothing Depot of the Women's Voluntary Services. It is the agency which distributes supplies collected by the Red Cross, Bundles for Britain and the British War Relief Society in the United States.

"I have seen all these things at home," Mrs. Roosevelt said, "but to actually see them here on the way to the people who are going to get them is very nice."

The dowager Marchioness of Reading, head of the W.V.S., took her through the organization's workrooms in three converted Victorian mansions. With Mrs. Roosevelt were Mrs. Winston Churchill and Mrs. Robert W. Bingham, President of Bundles for Britain.

Lady Reading said one great need—"we can never get enough"—is for small boys' pants.

Kiwanis Club Names Directors

Election results for the board of directors from which choice of president for 1943 will be made were announced at the regular weekly luncheon meeting of the local Kiwanis Club held in the Quinte Hotel on Tuesday. Guest speaker for the luncheon was Captain McIntyre Hood, secretary of the Ontario Civilian Defence Committee.

Kiwanis directors as announced by the election committee at the meeting are Gordon Barclay, Ormonde Butler, Harold Carruthers, Clarence Jewell, Bruce Lattimer, Lorne McDougall, Jack McVeigh and Ross Stiver.

In his address to Kiwanians on the need for civilian defence in Canada, Captain Hood stressed the present unpreparedness of the populace in this country should there be a sudden air raid by enemy bombers. He claimed it the duty and responsibility of every citizen in Belleville to offer himself for training that he may know what to do and how to do it should the emergency arise.

At the close of his address, the text of which has been published from other meetings held this week in the city, Captain Hood pointed out that the Belleville Civilian Defence Committee were in need of eight key men, who would offer themselves as divisional air raid wardens and deputy divisional wardens to take responsibility in the four zones which have been set up in this city. He made a direct appeal to members of the Kiwanis Club to offer themselves in this capacity.

Captain Hood was introduced by Mr. Harold Seldon with Kiwanian appreciation being expressed by Norman Edwards. A new song booklet compiled by song leader Harold Carruthers and pianist Leo Riggs was used for the first time at the luncheon, the booklet containing many popular song hits, both new and old, which are applicable to present trends. Eddie Shapiro acted as Sergeant at Arms with Jim Barclay occupying the president's chair in the absence of President Jack Trudeau.

YOUNG GROUPS ARE PLANNING FOR CONVENTION

Young Conservatives to Meet at Time of Party Convention — Many Enlistments in the Armed Services

Ottawa, Oct. 28. (CP)— Young Conservative Associations across Canada today were preparing for the National Conservative Convention at Winnipeg on December 9, 10 and 11 under a war-created handicap.

Christie McDonald, secretary of the National Young Conservatives of Canada, said that the enlistments of officers and members of the Young Conservative Groups—both men and women—in the armed forces had created "a major problem in organization".

He cited the case of the Federation of Young Conservative Clubs of Ontario with an executive of about 20, of whom all but four had enlisted.

Young Conservatives will hold a general meeting during the Winnipeg convention, to elect officers and review their constitution. The national president is Benjamin R. Guss, of Saint John, N.B.

Reports of election of delegates reaching National Convention Committee headquarters indicated that the suggestion of having young people and women represented among the delegates from every riding was being accepted, officials said.

Some 900 voting delegates are expected to attend the convention which will review leadership and policy. The prospect was seen that almost half the delegates present would be women or representatives of Young Conservatives.

Selection of Delegates

The National Convention Committee recommended that in the selection of three delegates for each constituency, consideration be given having one a young person and one a woman.

In addition, a special classification for youth delegates was established, providing for nine representatives of Young Conservative Associations in both Ontario and three in each of the other provinces.

Conservative officials said they hoped some young people now in the Services and stationed in Canada would be able to obtain brief leaves to permit them to attend.

The Young People's Associations have been urged by their central organization to study the report of the Port Hope, Ont., Conservative Laymen's conference held in September. They are being asked to establish study groups and form resolutions to be sent to the National Committee's Resolutions group, which will bring them before the convention.

At the National Convention in 1938, it was decided by resolution that there should be no separate organization for Conservative women on a nation-wide scale, although this did not seek to prevent separate organizations in provinces where they were desired.

Active Women's Conservative Associations are found in several provinces and informed sources said it was probable that the need of a separate women's organization on a nation-wide basis would be considered at the convention.

Expedition Called Military Blunder By Col. G. A. Drew

Toronto, Oct. 28 — (CP) — A call for "free discussion, free investigation, free reporting and free speech," was issued last night by Lt.-Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, who declared in an address here "The handling of the Hong Kong expedition will become a classic of military blundering . . ." when the facts are known fully.

"There is no more effective co-ordination of the civil and military control at national defence headquarters now than there was a year ago," said Col. Drew, who spoke on the first anniversary of the sending of two battalions of Canadians from Vancouver to Hong Kong. He addressed the young men's section of the Toronto Board of Trade.

"A year has passed and the same system continues," he declared, comparing the handling of the expedition with "the first expedition to Crimea nearly 90 years ago."

"The same chairman of the war committee, the same minister of national defence and the same staff of officers who were in charge of that operation are still in charge of our military affairs," he continued.

Col. Drew, who faced charges last summer under the Defence of Canada Regulations because of statements he made regarding the Hong Kong expedition, said many Canadians have been prosecuted and may have gone to concentration camps without trial "under the loose provisions" of the regulations. The charges against Col. Drew were later withdrawn by the Department of Justice.

Wants Halt Called to Practice

"What more convenient device could there be for retaining embarrassing criticism than to have a charge laid under the Defence of Canada Regulations?" he asked.

He said "The time has come, nay it is long overdue, to call a halt to this dangerous process."

"First and foremost we are fighting to preserve the integrity of our own soil. But we are fighting for something more. We are fighting to keep our land free from tyranny, free from concentration camps, free from control of the press."

He coupled his appeal for freedom of speech with a declaration that the lessons of the Battle of Hong Kong "should be remembered and should be pressed home upon the consciousness of our people until an informed public opinion forces the change in military organization which will prevent a repitition of the same blunders on a larger scale in the near future."

City Public Schools Present Concerts Using 'Buy Victory Bonds' as Theme

Belleville public schools are linking themselves with the Victory Loan Campaign now underway throughout the Dominion by presenting concerts in keeping with the campaign's theme. The first of these was held on Monday at King George School and the second was given Tuesday afternoon in Queen Alexandra School. Miss Phyllis May, supervisor of music in the public schools, greatly assisted the success of the concerts by her training of the pupils in singing, while the teachers of the various grades were responsible for the excellent numbers given.

Mr. Clayton Burr, representing the Belleville Committee for the Victory Loan campaign was guest speaker on both occasions. He spoke of his pleasure at being present to speak to the children. At this time the country was asking co-operation from everyone. In seeking the assistance of citizens to help finance the war, the government's plan of compulsory saving was an excellent one, the speaker said. The purchase of Victory bonds was not necessarily a great sacrifice for the citizens since it promised a return on the money invested, as well as making it possible for the Canadian government to meet its obligations in Canada's share of the war effort.

"By lending to help our country we are helping ourselves," he said.

King George School

The Third Victory Loan program given by pupils of King George School was an interesting and very successful event held in the school auditorium on Monday afternoon. The greetings of the staff and scholars were extended the visitors by Mr. C. Brown who thanked Miss Phyllis May and the teachers of the various grades for their assistance in making the program possible.

The program was one of interesting variety, including choruses, singing games, choral readings, songs, vocal solos, piano numbers, and selections by the Rhythm Band. The reading of essays on "How Boys and Girls Can Help Win the War" and the presentation of the second prize in the Victory Loan Essay contest were special features of the afternoon. The program was highlighted by an inspiring address by Mr. C. Burr.

The numbers included:

O Canada; Chorus, Pupils of Grade 1, Out in the Cornfields, Hallowe'en Song; Singing Game, London Bridge is Falling Down — Grade 2; Song, The White Cliffs of Dover—Earla Wilson; Playlet, Victory Picture—Grade 8; Speaker, Mr. C. W. Burr; Choral Reading, The Gray Dove's Answer—Grade 4; Chorus, I Ring the Bells of Freedom—Grade 3; Singing Game, The Swing—Miss Helliwell's Class; Essay Reading, How Boys and Girls Can Help to Win the War—Betty Clare, Douglas Soule; Bluebells of Scotland; Two Part Song, Lullaby — Grade 6; Choral Reading, The Touch of the Master's Hand—Grade 7; Piano Solo, Minute in G—Dorothy Bone; Rhythm Band, A Number, The Dagger, Essay contest winner—Ruth Hicks $5.

Queen Alexandra School

At Queen Alexandra School Tuesday afternoon the large gathering of parents and friends was welcomed by the principal, Mr. W. G. Anderson. The program, the principal explained, exemplified the work that goes on daily in the classroom, where singing was taught by Miss Phyllis May and choral readings, drills and plays were under the direction of the teachers of the various classes.

The very fine program was greatly enjoyed by the audience, each number being given in a finished manner by the young performers. The program opened with a chorus sung by the whole school, "Canada We Pledge."

Choruses and drills were given by Grade One pupils, of which Misses Lockhart and Houston are teachers. This was followed by choruses by Grades 2 and 3, of which Misses Osborne and Sheffield are the teachers. This number was featured by a vocal trio composed of Carmelita Kleinsteuber, Jimmy Laughlin and Billy Cook. Barbara Arnott and Buddy Batchelor were leaders in the choral readings given by Mrs. Emery's and Miss Lashbrook's pupils of Grades 3 and 4.

The Rhythm Band of Miss MacPherson's class, Grade Four, with Diane Gibson as leader gave excellent numbers and looked very smart; the blue and silver colors of the band were represented in the pill box hats worn by the members and the cape of their leader. Following Mr. Burr's address, choruses were given by Grades 6 and 7 under the direction of Misses Reid and Wilson. Elspeth Wishart and Marilyn Seldon were leaders in this group. A play by Grade 7, of which Mr. Wallace is teacher, was a dramatization of the Victory Loan purpose, the leading parts being well taken by Brock Stackhouse as the artist, Ross White as Billy, Mary Lou Campbell as Alice and Fred Soule as the soldier. A choral reading, announced by Buddy Stratton in which Miss Young's class, Grade 5, took part completed the program and was followed by the singing of the National Anthem.

Pheasants Plentiful In South Marysburgh

Point Traverse, Oct. 27 — The sound of shotgun fire reverberated throughout the township of South Marysburgh on Friday and Saturday last, when the barriers were lifted to open another annual pheasant shoot in the regulated hunting areas.

In the South Marysburgh township, an area which only became a regulated hunting district some four years ago, hunters were out in force to test their skill in bagging their quotas of the elusive birds.

Clerk Iram Ellis sold many licences to enthusiastic hunters who reported an unusual abundance of birds in their respective districts.

One hunter bagged his quota of three cock birds and also was the lucky finder of a crisp one dollar bill.

Owing to wartime conditions, several townships in the province have postponed a third day of shooting, which has always taken place in former years. South Marysburgh township, however, has a three day shoot, which included last Friday, Saturday and tomorrow, Wednesday.

Many birds were distributed in the township by the Department of Game and Fisheries.

Hunters must attain a special permit to participate in tomorrow's hunt.

Tendered Shower

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Lobb, South Bay, was the scene of a happy event on Monday evening when Mr. and Mrs. Earl Lobb (nee Theda Frost) were tendered a shower given by their many friends and neighbours.

The Point Traverse Fishery presented the popular couple with a lovely Kenwood blanket. The newly-weds were also the recipients of many beautiful gifts from their host of friends.

The groom on behalf of himself and bride, expressed their appreciation to all. A dainty lunch was served at the close of an enjoyable evening.

Picton and District

Picton, Oct., 27—Commencing the first of November a campaign to collect steel and iron scrap in the rural areas of Prince Edward County will be commenced. This action was decided upon by County Council which was called into session here on authority of the Steel Controller. The drive will last for six weeks during which it is expected hundreds of tons of needed scrap will be secured from farms.

Warden S. J. Martin addressing council, told of the urgent need for such metals in the manufacture of tools of war. Reeves will act as supervisors in each township and committees will be appointed to take charge of the work. A set price has been promised by the government agency.

In discussion, councillors expressed their whole-hearted support of the plan. It was pointed out that investigation had shown these dealers handling scrap were able to handle such scrap where others were not.

Reeve H. S. Colliver stated there were hundreds of tons of tin cans lying about canning factories, and he, a canner himself, would donate a truck for collection if the government could make use of these cans.

Sale of Loan Bonds

Though practically all members of No. 31 Bombing and Gunnery School here are members of the Royal Air Force, they are determined to do their part toward the success of the Victory Loan campaign. They have set an objective of $5000. There are a small number of civilians, mostly veterans of the last war, employed on the station and they are expected to help reach the objective.

The R.C.A.F. station at Mountain View continues to boost the sale of bonds and they are nearing the $30,000 mark, which is twice their objective.

Mrs. Stuart Wilson accompanied her mother-in-law Mrs. Chas. Wilson to Toronto where she will receive treatment for a fractured hip.

Mr. Don Thomas was able to leave Prince Edward County Hospital this week and is at the home of his grandmother, Mrs. P. S. McLean, Main Street.

Harry Haden an elderly man living alone on Union Street, was found dead in his home early Saturday evening. Death was due to natural causes. Born in England he had spent a great part of his life in Picton where for a number of years he was in the carting business. His wife predeceased him many years ago. Funeral arrangements have not yet been made.

Relatives of Johnny Arthurs received word from Ottawa on Friday announcing that he was alive, and a prisoner of war at Hong Kong. This was the first word they had had of him since the fall of Hong Kong ten months ago.

ESCAPING GAS FATAL

Aylmer, Ont., Oct. 27 —(CP)— Everett Weaver, 27, a bridegroom of a month, is dead, and his wife, Bernice, 20, and his sister-in-law, Madge Rosell, 17, are under the doctor's care, as the result of gas escaping from a coal heater in their apartment here.

"How old will I be when the war is over, Dad?"

"Why, son, not even Mr. Churchill could answer that. But it looks like a long war to me. These bandits are hard to beat. But we're going to get through with it before you grow up, son, and we're going to see that you get a decent start in the world when it's all over.

"I learned a lesson the hard way about ten years ago, and I'll never forget it. We had a tough time there for a while, your mother and me. It's only just now that we're getting on our feet, and by George, we're going to stay on our feet from now on, and we're going to see that you get some of the things we missed.

"I'm earning more money now than I've made in years, but I'm salting away all I can. Mostly in bonds. Buying Victory Bonds helps to pay for the war, but that's only half of it. We're putting this money away for ourselves . . . for you . . . and for your mother and me when we're old.

"Your mother's a wonder, son. The way that woman works these days! . . . extra sewing, extra baking . . . always figuring how to make things last longer. She has her heart set on a future for you that none of her folks ever had. And the kick she gets every time we buy another bond! She's a wonder!

"I guess you hardly know what a Victory Bond is, but we've got a tidy bunch of them tucked away. And they're as good as gold. Just as good as cash, any day. We're mighty lucky, son, to be living in Canada. We can really plan a future that will come true."

Mrs. Roosevelt in Britain

One of the best observers of the British scene in time of war who will bring home a story of great value to the American people is Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President of the United States. She possesses the keenest interest in every phase of life and is one of the most prominent women of the world: She has been in the Royal Palace as the guest of Their Majesties, she has met a great cross-section of the throbbing life in the British Isles where she sees a militant Britain after more than three years of War, she has visited many scenes, seen many conditions and met many of the leaders of the British people. There, too, she has met many thousands of her fellow countrymen and countrywomen in the armed forces of the United States, now in Britain.

The visit of Mrs. Roosevelt creates another tie which will link the great democracies, for she brings the heart of the North American Republic to the British people in a very real sense and through her appeal the people of Britain can feel the throb of American life and spirit. To her the heart of the British people is revealed and of it she will be an apt interpreter when she returns to the United States.

Britain does not forget that time when the United States sent hundreds of thousands of weapons in 1940 when Britain stood alone to hold off the Nazis. Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden referred to this when he proposed a toast to Mrs. Roosevelt at a reception and luncheon, attended by leaders of London's civic and commercial life and when Mrs. Roosevelt was presented with a bouquet of flowers from the school children of the great city; "We shall never forget it and we shall never cease to be grateful for it."

Mrs. Roosevelt touched the heart of the matter of the deep associations binding Americans and the British people for she said, "I feel that growing understanding between us, will, perhaps, mean more in the future not only to us but also to the world than we now know."

Mrs. Roosevelt is seeing and understanding Britain and her people. With a woman's mind and intuition she can understanding the Britain that was left practically alone by the fall of France in 1940, except for the British Dominions and Colonies and the help of the United States. She is in the land of people of devotion and courage who were able to repulse the foe. She can realize that the people she meets are those who have gone about their duty and tasks for more than three years. She is in the land that turned back the Hun and she has met face to face these heroic people. She is in a land that is gratitude itself for what the American people have done.

Mrs. Roosevelt is in the heart of the British people for her own worth, for her country and also because of the President who defied the Hun, gave Britain aid and who has been a tireless and true friend of Britain and the United Nations.

Mrs. Roosevelt's visit has set a precedent in wartime, one which will mean so much to the English-speaking world and the United Nations.

Providence in Harvests

Nature which has blessed this country this year with the most bountiful crops in history, sees the season of harvesting coming to a close, and with the grain, the vegetables and everything that is food largely garnered.

It has been an amazing year in which Providince has been kindly. That the wheat crop of the West should reach nearly 600,000,000 bushels is almost incredible. Other crops are of large proportions.

The farmers by expanding acreage and by co-operating in the war effort in the raising of livestock have done an inestimable service, though there has been a shortage of help.

Canada is a fortunate land where her crops have been gathered in, even though hundreds of thousands of her young men are far away fighting the battle for world freedom, while in many parts of the earth races have not been so blessed for theirs has been no settled agriculture since the Axis tries to reap where the overrun peoples have sown, and tries to grab whatever food it can find while the peoples are left by the Axis to suffer.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

BY

FOR THE CAUSE

I stole, today, up my attic stairs
To a brown trunk, hidden away;
It contains old toys of a then small lad—
Who's a soldier Boy today.

My heart stood still as I raised the lid
And lifted them, one by one—
For there were his battered rubber blocks
A car, and a little drum.

His first little train was stored in there,
And his rubber soldiers true;
And I thought, as I stood, why shouldn't they
Be fighting in this war, too?

So I sorted them gently, one by one;
And the rubber toys took away.
I shall give them over to Uncle Sam
For the sake of Our Cause, today.

At first, I could not restrain my tears;
But soon I could smile with joy
At the thought that this treasured gift of mine
Might save some Soldier Boy.

PAGE SOMEBODY, QUICK

It happened. So help me, Ned. An amazing spectacle was seen on Front Street yesterday morning. People stared as the strange phenomonon passed by. It was unbelievable. Morning shoppers rubbed their eyes, and looked again. Then, shaking their heads, they resumed slowly, silently, their store-raiding expeditions. Down on the records of this fair city should go large markings in red ink. For it will not likely happen again. There was a sudden hush as the thing passed by. It seemed to the crowd that a sudden pall had fallen over the thoroughfare. It was uncanny, something that almost approached weirdness. The very action of the thing seemed to have a depressing, silencing effect on the activities of the street. Women stared. Men gaped. Children looked with questioning eyes at awe-struck parents. Slowly it passed down the street and out of sight. People heaved sighs of relief. The miracle had happened—for the day at least.

At last a wedding party had driven down the main thoroughfare in silence, minus the raucous blasting of horns and clatterbanging of tin cans.

Not a sound was heard, not a horn was blown.
As his bride to the vestry he hurried,
And nought but the "immediates" ever knew
That the guy and the gal got married.

"THE NAVY'S HERE"

Many brave hearts will guard the deep on Christmas Day. Many a sailor laddie will brave the cold Atlantic and its accompanying threat of undersea Nazi wolves. Many a sturdy convoy freighter will breast the seas taking vital foodstuffs and war material to Britain. Manning them will be Canada's gallant merchant marine. Not for these will be the cheery Yuletide log, the Christmas trees and the warmth and love of a family fireside. Muffled to the ears in heavy woolens, salt spray stinging their cheeks, at gun positions, on the bridge, on deck or down below tending the pulsing engines will be these heroic Canadians.

Christmas for some will be an ordinary day. Just another twenty-four hours in a gamble with death. But they will be carrying on. They will not falter at the job, nor ask for respite because it is Christmas. They will stand their watches whether the weather be fair or foul.

But they will not be forgotten. The Navy League of Canada is now getting ready ditty bags for the Christmas comfort of these heroes of corvette, destroyer, mine-sweeper, patrol boat and the merchant marine. It has pledged itself that not a single member of the Navy and Merchant Marine of Canada will go unforgotten at Christmas time.

The Belleville branch of the Navy League has pledged 900 ditty bags. Six hundred of them are ready, but three hundred more are needed, and needed immediately if the boys in blue are to get their Christmas reminder from the folks back home. Let's all turn in and help. Contact Mr. Arthur Wesley at the J. & J. Cash Company and he will give you all information. Do it now. Telephone 586.

"ME, TOO!"

Was ever so eager a child upon earth,
Reaching for all things, regardless of worth?
Wanting whatever she sees in the room—
Picture, or ash tray, or duster or broom;
Wanting to share in whatever we do,
Ellen Elizabeth's shouting, "Me, too!"

What is this curious feminine trait,
Grabbing for trinkets both early and late;
Grasping at sunbeams and reaching for stars,
Stopping at nothing — not even cigars—
Just let her gaze at an article new;
Ellen Elizabeth mutters, "Me too"

Wants to miss nothing she thinks may be had,
Bitter or sweet, be it pleasant or sad,
So often forgotten, so often left out,
She wants to be sure that we know she's about.
Whatever it may be we're planning to do,
Ellen Elizabeth mutters, "Me too!"

Mr. Willkie's Speech

New York, Oct. 28.—It can't go on like this. It really cannot.

The military situation of the so-called United Nations is better, at this writing, than any one could have hoped for a year ago. Our own production situation is better than one could have expected on the day after Pearl Harbor. Neither is as good as we could wish. Yet, one can say that both are reasonably satisfactory and encouraging.

Even more encouraging from our viewpoint is the situation of our enemy in the West—Nazi Germany. A series of miscalculations by Hitler are beginning to spell disaster. The time is, therefore, ripe for confidence, and energetic action.

But the political situation is getting entirely out of hand, and if matters deepen into more profound cleavages, we can lose this war and we will certainly lose the peace.

The first rift in the coalition—a political rift—arose over the question of a large-scale offensive this year. It is known that Russia demanded it, and that Britain, and finally the United States, believed that it was militarily impossible to fulfil. Although there is reason to believe that Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt were not entirely in agreement, the decision was left to the military staffs, where I believe there was substantial if not complete agreement.

This problem has not disappeared. There is a strong probability that we shall have this offensive in suitable season, but the issue is still pending.

Public Opinion Divided.

Public opinion is divided, and the articulate expressors of that opinion, on one side or the other, are taking their arguments wherever they can find them. And some of those who are criticizing the military policy are opening a political third front and introducing another source of cleavage; namely, the present and future of the British Empire.

I cannot see how this political third front is going to help solve the first issue. I can see how it can rock our coalition and lead us into the most serious crisis of the war.

It is in the light of this gathering crisis that one must consider Mr. Willkie's speech.

The first disappointing thing in the speech was that we all had expected a report on a journey—a report that would tell us factually of the situation on the various fronts, throw light on what is really happening in Russia and China; reveal something of how men like Stalin, Molotoff, and Chiang Kai-shek regard the present situation, the outlook of the war, and the future of their countries. The truth is that, after listening to Mr. Willkie, we know nothing more, on any matters of fact, than we knew before. We can, for instance, learn a great deal more about the military and morale situation in Russia by reading Mr. Leland Stowe.

What we heard from Mr. Willkie was that the nations of the East are against colonial imperialism. That is bout as much news as that Russia is a Socialist State and that Americans favor private enterprise

No Light on India Problem

So what we did hear was Mr. Willkie's oinion of the British Empire, and in particular his opinion of India one country which he did not visit,. We did not receive on India any comprehensive view. We learned that it is a problem, a fact with which we are also familiar. But not the slightest light was thrown upon how to solve the problem, beyond the statement—which is new—that India is more a United States problem than a British with the inference that we ought to step in and solve it.

Now that inference is one which will be passionately resented by any proud people. Furthermore, there is not the slightest reason to believe that the United States can solve a problem involving innumerable conflicting elements where Britain cannot.

Mr. Willkie himself called attention to the mediocre level of our diplomacy throughout the East. He mentioned the United States diplomatic representative to "a great power" who, in twenty years, had not taken the trouble to learn the language of the people among whom he has lived. I doubt whether there we have a single trained diplomat who speaks Hindustani or any of the various Moslem tongues. We have not a hundred Americans who speak Japanese. The same cannot be said of the British.

And the fact that United States motion-picture stars are dearly beloved throughout the world seems really beside the point. We have tried using a few of them as emissaries to South America, and the result has not been satisfactory.

A Political Speech

What is more disquieting in Mr. Willkie's speech is that it was plainly a political speech, one fears, with an eye on the 1944 elections, perhaps a manoeuvre to steer away from the President his chief following —the progressive workers and middle classes.

But if the British Empire is to become the chief issue in the forth-coming campaign for United States leadership, then God help the United Nations!

The position of our world is perilous. The whole power structure of the United Nations in the Far East is perilous. The position of Western civiliation is perilous.

And if ever there was need for care, for reticence on problems where no immediate constructive solution can be presented, for formulation in which every word is weighed for its exactitude, that time is now. We must not make statements that, after the trouble is done, require qualification and explanation.

Mr. Willkie's speech suggests nothing specific. But it opens the way for all sorts of speculation and distrust.

OATS AND HORSES

Oats have been a favorite feed for horses as far back as we have records of civilization.

They endure cold better than heat and appear to have been grown in northern Europe and the British Isles already in the bronze age, when horses were first used as draft animals.

Oats are one of the few staple crops that originated in northern Europe.

They were a recognized crop in the British Isles long before they were known to the peoples living on the Mediterranean.

Oats are not mentioned in the King James version of the Bible.

In his famous dictionary Dr. Samuel Johnson defined oats as "A grain which in England is generally given to horses, but in Scotland supports the people." To which Lord Elibank retorted: "Very true, and where will you find such horses, and such men?"

Oats are so identified with horses that a spirited horse is said to "feel its oats."

Haver is an old word for oat and a "haversack" was originally a bag in which cavalrymen carried oats for their horses.

In Scotland oatmeal is sometimes called "havermeal" and "oatcaks" is called "havercake."

But what we call oatmeal is the American version of what the Scotch call porridge.

To sow wild oats means to commit youthful excesses, to spend one's youth in dissipation, with subsequent reform applied. "He has sown his wild oats" is said of a person who has settled down to a steady and sober life. The expression is believed to have originated among the country people of England four or five hundred years ago. The wild oat—a tall grass resembling the cultivated oat and by some supposed to be its progenitor—is a common weed in England and it was only natural that a weed so common and noxious should become the subject of a moral comparison among English farmers. At first "sowing wild oats" meant sowing worthless seed, or seed that would produce a worthless crop.

Cultivated oats in the United States yield an average of about thirty bushels to the acre.

Generally the money return from oats is not so good as from other staple crops; but oats fit well into crop rotation and they are an advantageous crop for farmers in a position to feed the grain to horses and use the straw for livestock fodder and bedding.

PLAN BANQUET FOR NEW PREMIER

Citizens Committee Will Pay Tribute—Mr. Conant Expected to Make First Speech as Premier

Oshawa, Ont., Oct. 27—(CP)—A non-partisan citizens' committee is busy here today with arrangements for a banquet Friday night to honor Gordon Conant on his appointment as Premier of Ontario in succession to Mitchell F. Hepburn. Both Liberals and Conservatives are co-operating in arranging the banquet at which Mr. Conant is expected to make his first speech as premier.

Windsor, Ont., Oct. 27—(CP)—Acknowledging that he had been approached by a group of "younger Liberal leaders" regarding acceptance of leadership of the Ontario Liberal party, Paul Martin, Liberal M.P. for Essex East, today, declined to make any comment on the proposal.

A group of Liberals visited Mr. Martin here over the weekend and was understood to have urged him to accept leadership of a body of Liberals in the Ontario Legislature who were said to be dissatisfied at the manner in which Premier Gordon Conant succeeded Mitchell Hepburn on the latter's resignation from the premiership last week.

Mr. Martin gave no indication of the membership of the group that approached him.

There were reports that Hon. James H. Clarke, Liberal M.L.A. for Windsor-Sandwich and Speaker of the Ontario Legislature, had also been approached but Mr. Clark said today: "I don't think anybody has the right to offer the leadership of the party except a duly-called convention. I'd rather not say anthing."

Both Mr. Martin and Mr. Clark conferred last night with Hon. Norman McLarty, Federal Secretary of State, who came here to address a meeting of the Rose Masonic Lodge tonight. Mr. McLarty had no comment to make on the Ontario political situation.

Ottawa, Oct. 28 — (CP) — R. B. Inch, national secretary of the League of Nations Society in Canada, announced Monday that he had resigned office, effective immediately.

He said he expected to go into some other form of war work. He declined any other comment on his resignation.

150 Trades Affected By Call-up in U. K.

London, Oct. 28 — (CP Cable)—Britain, exploring every last nook and cranny for manpower for the fighting services, today withdrew the deferment of younger men engaged in trades which are a step removed from direct war work or which have become unessential.

Some 150 trades were affected by the announcement of the Ministry of Labor and National Service, headed by Ernest Bevin, that men of two age classes under 30 who were previously regarded as more valuable in civilian jobs will be given medical examinations and put into uniform.

Student Harvesting Success in West

Regina, Oct. 28 — (CP) — All reports received by the Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture indicate the student harvesting scheme has been a decided success, Hon. R. J. N. Parker, acting minister of agriculture, said here Tuesday.

Students from the East who had been in touch with Mr. Parker had expressed satisfaction over the way the plan had worked out. The majority expressed their readiness to remain in the West until harvesting had been completed.

Estimates of the amount of harvesting now completed placed it at a little better than 75 per cent of the crop.

Beware the Black Marketeers, They Are Traders in Treason!

By SIMPSON M. RITTER

Central Press Canadian Correspondent

New York, Oct. 28—Just as though they blew up defence plants or sent bullets winging into the hearts of our commanding generals the men and women of the Black Market are sabotaging national defence and offence. Greedy or short-sighted citizens who have helped create the demand that the Black Market supplies are equally guilty if not guiltier for without the demand there would be no organized supply.

The Black Market operates behind scenes, emulating the bootleggers of a decade ago furnishing priority materials that are not legitimately available. If you have the hih price and are that kind of a person you can get anything from gasoline to metals to sugar to cloth to drugs on the Black Market.

Every Black Market customer whether he realizes it or not is a friend of Adolf Hitler and every dealer a soldier in the new ranks of the merciless dictatorship we are trying to crush. Priority materials diverted for non-essential mean unnecessarily dead soldiers in future battles a longer war a harder earned peace and further hardships for everyone—including the Black Market merchants and customers.

Ration Racketeers

Like the old-time bootleggers — who at least weren't committing back-handed treason — the ration racketeers have their army of scouts who seek out customers where the goods can be had. There are waitresses, bartenders, cab drivers, elevator boys, clerks, who both scout and steer.

Prices are plenty high. Four new tires—if they really are new—will cost you $150. Black Market gasoline sells in New York and Boston for 35 cents per gallon; higher in smaller communities and exclusive suburbs. Some Manhattan shopkeepers are getting a higher price for extra ration sugar, and chopped beef.

Portable typewriters designed to sell for $70 before priorities now fetch on the Black Market anywhere from $100 to $120. Even a little thing like electrician's black tape can be had on the illegitimate counter for a mere 50 per cent. above the standard price. You can get a bicycle—if you'll pay $50 for one designed to sell at $35. Your little boy wants an electric locomotive toy-set? It can be had for just double the old price.

Non-essential Goods

Buyers of strategic metals and chemicals generally are not civilian manufacturers who require the stuff for the fulfilment of defence contracts but rather those who are manufacturing some unnecessary civilian object like juke-boxes or fancy office furniture.

Certainly everyone is entitled to a livelihood and priorities have made things tough but not so tough that one need commit treason to eat. Not as long as a toy manufacturer can turn to making bayonets or an automobile salesman switch to selling brick and wood homes for war workers, or the manufacturer of metal household furnishings convert his plant to make plastic furnishings and toys.

Principal buyers on the Black Market for metals and chemicals are not short-sighted business men, but long-sighted Nazi agents who ship the stuff to South America and from thence to Japan and Germany. The United States government's agents recently intercepted a shipment of 1,500 tons of black steel, cork packed in crates and labeled "motors," enolugh steel cable to put the French fleet back in fighting shape, wedding rings made of pure platinum needed for Hitler's T.N.T. plants.

Crime is often its own reward. Many Black Market clients have found that out to their sorrow. A fellow who felt he had to have a new car paid $1,075 spot cash shortly after car rationing for a vehicle probably worth $800. To keep the transaction from the local rationing board the dealer retained title and when the buyer needed new licence plates he couldn't get them. Naturally the O.P.A. wouldn't help him.

Gasoline buyers have found that the stuff for which they paid a higher price is of such low grade it ruins their motors. A woman who bought "retreated" tires at $20 per tire discovered the dealer had merely cut new grooves into old, paper-thin casings.

Under the U.S. Second War Powers Act the buyer is as guilty as the seller. Maximum penalty is a year in jail and a $10,000 fine which is pretty light considering two war nurses in Germany were decapitated for buying some extra ration bread. The lightest penalty is withdrawal of ration books.

Dealers with Black Market intentions report merchandise stolen or burnt or otherwise damaged. Other stuff is stolen outright from legitimate sources such as the hundreds of gallons of fuel that are being siphoned from tankers en route east. Metals are sometimes acquired through the co-operation of unscrupulous "junkies."

The confidence men are in on the racket, too. They will approach a reasonably large—not too large—manufacturer who needs metals and offer him a supply more than adequate at prices hardly higher than legitimate. Sometimes they even have a warehouse full of the goods and fake papers of ownership to show him. Sometimes the con man is satisfied to depart for parts unknown after getting a 10 per cent. deposit, often he fleeces the customer of more.

AIRMEN RECEIVE WINGS FROM PREMIER

For the first time since the war began, the colorful "wings parade," marking the graduation of airmen from the training schools, was held in the shadow of the Parliament Buildings. Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King, also for the first time, presented the wings to the new full-fledged pilots. The picture ABOVE shows the ceremony in front of the Parliament Buildings instead of the training station.

Outcome Far From Clear In Solomons

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

The delayed announcement of additional United States naval losses in the Solomons came at a moment when a battle crisis seemed at hand afloat and ashore to justify Navy Secretary Frank Knox's statement that "the issue has been joined" with Japan in those far seas, with the outcome far from clear.

Knox waved aside Tokyo claims of new heavy damage inflicted on American naval craft and air units yesterday as fishing for information. Perhaps the most significant item in the Tokyo claim was its inclusion of battleships sunk or damaged among claimed American losses.

That is the first mention of battleships in weeks of see-saw attrition sea-air fighting in the Solomons except for an American report some days ago of the bombing of a Japanese warship, which the navy identified as a battleship or heavy cruiser. The implication is that sections of the two main fleets may be in contact or soon to come to grips.

Major Sea Battle On.

The indicated scene of the clash tends to bear out the impression that a major sea battle is on, even if still in the manoeuvre stage, as Knox suggested. Santa Cruz Island lies some 500 miles southeast of Guadalcanal. Northwestward stretches a wide rectangular reach of open sea between the Solomons, to the west, and the Ellice and Gilbert Islands, to the east. The Carolinas enclose it on the north. Turk Island, Japan's main naval outpost in the Northwestern Pacific, lies in the Caroline group, perhaps 1,500 miles from Santa Cruz. Southward in the New Hebrides and elsewhere are American island bases, improvised to shelter the Australian supply lanes.

Within that sea rectangle north of Santa Cruz Island, virtually 1,000 miles wide and half again as long, there is ample sea-room for fleet manoeuvres. And somewhere within it even now heavy Japanese and American fighting ships may be clinching for the first time in an action that could change the whole aspect of the war in the Pacific.

Loss of the big plane carrier Wasp Sept. 15 seriously impaired American scouting and air attack preparation for the final clash. Presumably, however, she has been replaced by now. A second American carrier, not named, has been damaged since. Against that, two Japanese carriers are reported to have been crippled.

Both Lose Heavily.

Other relativities in the struggle are beyond reckoning on the basis of present information. Tokyo, for example, claims four American carriers sunk in the current action as well as one battleship sent down and another damaged.

Piecing together Washington and Tokyo accounts, however, it appears that both sides have suffered severe losses in carriers. That must mean reduction of the air-power element in the sea struggle. It could mean that a fleet action has been joined or is impending without benefit of carrier plane flotilla and that battleships must ultimately sing it out by gun power to a decision.

There is no certainty of that, however. Plane carrier strength retained still could prove the decisive factor. Nor is the indicated scene of action too remote from American island air bases, including Henderson Field on Guadalcanal for long range land-based bombers to be wholly excluded from participation.

He said the move was aimed to facilitate control in allocating newsprint tonnage among the various manufacturers. The order applies to export as well as domestic production.

BRIG. A. GIANELLI ASSUMES DUTIES

Ottawa, Oct. 28 — (CP) — Brig. Norman A. Gianelli of Toronto, former commander of an armored regiment overseas, has assumed new duties as commander of an army tank brigade now training at Camp Borden, Ont., it was announced by defence headquarters.

Trenton and District

Trenton, Oct. 28—Friends of Capt. C. K. Nicoll of the 48th Highlanders are pleased to learn of his safe arrival home after three years' service overseas.

Captain Nicoll was for six years minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Trenton, when he moved to Oakville where he was minister of Knox Presbyterian Church there until the outbreak of war. He is a veteran of the Great War where he was decorated with the M.C. He returns to Canada as a Major and Senior Chaplain of the 8th Division. Major Nicoll was met in Toronto by Mrs. Nicoll and their ten year old daughter Mary Margaret who have been residing in Oakville.

Loan Success

The first week of Canada's Third Victory Loan closed with Trenton well over the top, so come on folks let's keep the ball rolling and buy that bomber. $300,000 seems like a lot of money but "nothing matters now but victory."

All the industries where canvassing has finished have given remarkable co-operation to this loan. Benedict-Proctor have subscribed 176 percent of their quota, Downs-Coulter 133 percent., Canadian Doughnut 167 percent and Trent Cottons 102 percent. The week closed with $86,000 of the $300,000 to be subscribed already loaned.

The other evening theatre-goers were given an excellent address at both the Trent and Century theatres by LAC. D. Gainham of 6 A.R.D. Trenton Air Station. LAC. Gainham is a returned soldier from the last Great War having served then in the navy and later in the army. He is now serving in the air-force so was well qualified to give his listeners firsthand information as to the needs of the various branches of the service in order to keep the mechanism of war in perfect working condition. LAC. Gainham was introduced to Trentonians by Mr. W. H. Ireland at the theatres.

Mrs. Jack Richmond (nee Doris Little) of Toronto spent the weekend with her parents Mr. and Mrs. V. Little, York Road.

Mrs. H. D. Graham and son Peter spent the weekend with Mrs. Graham's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Lowe, Toronto.

The Durham heifer reported stolen at Trenton on Saturday by Marino Baldino, Byron Street, has been recovered in a nearby field. Apparently she had wandered away from the herd and was able to jump several fences and visit other cattle. Needless to say Mr. Baldino was delighted to find her as she was valued at about $90.00.

"I'M A WOMAN IN A MAN'S WORLD —BUT I'M STILL A WOMAN!"

I'm doing a man-sized job... and when I took to slacks, away went a lot of my girlish fancies. So what! There's a job to be done and I'm the girl to do it. But believe me, it doesn't leave much time for fussing over dates and complexion—it looked like they were both due to disappear.

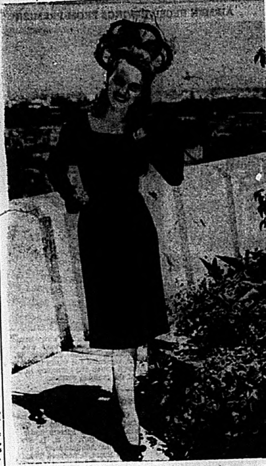
I said as much to the girl next to me and she laughed—"Don't be silly... get yourself a cake of grand Palmolive soap! Why waste two hours when two minutes is all you need to keep right up to standard... you'll never catch me bottlenecking my beauty for the want of time!"

It took me just two minutes to check and double check! Yes, two-minute Palmolive facials are all I need to keep my complexion smooth and lovely. That's because Palmolive is made with two of the finest natural beauty aids ever discovered—soothing Olive and Palm Oils. And Palmolive's lovely fragrance leaves me exquisitely dainty and fresh... which is something after coping with grease and machinery all day!

From now on it's Palmolive Beauty Baths and Facials for me.... 'cause Palmolive soap really saves a girl's time and complexion.

NOW MORE THAN EVER YOU NEED PALMOLIVE TO KEEP THAT SCHOOLGIRL COMPLEXION

Transition Dress



This New York creation with short skirt, and low, square neckline is of black crepe with a deep corselet waistline of sooty black velvet. Only trimming is a pale pink rose set in a chou of jet beadwork.

By PRUNELLA WOOD

Something new under the sun is called currently the "transition dress". . . meaning that it has characteristics of both day and evening styles, so that one may put it on for teatime and wear it on to dinner brilliantly.

The frock photographed above is of this genre, its street length and long sleeves being daylight devices, while its low cut, square neck, back and front, is of the evening.

Like all frocks of this type, the fabrics used for it are on the formal side; more elaborate models run to lame, sequins, jet, lace, et cetera. Your beau in uniform will appreciate dresses of this sort; they don't demand taxi service to and from the date, yet they blossom handsomely when the date is going on after your coat is removed.

Odor of Gasoline Leads to Find

While patrolling the early morning police beat along Front Street shortly before 5.30 o'clock Tuesday, P.O. Thomson observed the odor of gasoline while passing a parked motorcar. Subsequent investigations found a young man giving his name as Hugh Kerr, of Bancroft, sitting in the front seat. Constable Thomson questioned the youth regarding the strong odor of gasoline and continuing his observations found two milk cans in the rear seat of the sedan. Upon removing the tops it was disclosed both were filled with colored gasoline. As Kerr could not give what was deemed a satisfactory explanation of the presence of the gasoline he was detained at the police station while Bancroft police authorities were notified. The officer said he also found a length of garden hose on the rear seat.

HEALTH CHATS

DR. HERMAN N. BUNDESEN
President, Chicago Board of Health.

SOME HINTS FOR THE SLEEPLESS

I have some suggestions for the person who has a difficult time falling asleep. Perhaps the sleepless one is not getting enough out-of-door physical exercise. If not, he should try a good long walk to end about an hour before retiring and should see to it that the last hour before going to bed is spent in some restful pastime, doing nothing that is tiring or exciting.

If there is work to be done in the evening, particularly mental work, it should be done right after supper. After that time it is a good plan to relax, perhaps by doing some light reading, or merely by just sitting and talking quietly with the family. Arguments or discussions should not be entered into. They are emotionally upsetting. Some persons find it restful to listen to the radio, others may like to make something by hand.

Another plan which is often followed is for the person to go to bed an hour before planning to fall asleep, and then to read some light book or play solitaire. If the person becomes drowsy while he is up and about, then has to undress, brush his teeth, he may become wide awake before he gets to bed, and an hour or more may pass before he gets drowsy again.

The most critical time when trying to get to sleep is the first few minutes after the light is turned out. It is during this time that the person begins to worry and think about his problems and activities. Most of those who are troubled with sleeplessness begin to think, as soon as the light is turned out, about things they should have done that day, or about matters which will require their attention the next day. The sleepless persons may then try to drive away their worries by putting their thoughts on other things, but the worries soon creep back into their minds.

It has been suggested that it might help if the sleepless person would use enough will-power to fill his mind with thoughts that are not likely to produce tension, worry or emotional excitement. He must remember that he has gone to bed to sleep and not to think. In fact, if he finds that he is beginning to think about problems to such an extent that he cannot sleep, he might as well get up and do some sort of work.

One other helpful method of getting to sleep is to listen to someone reading an unexciting book. It is thought, too, that conscious effort to relax the muscles may be of some value. It is most important that there be no fear of sleeplessness, because this fear may make the muscles tense and do more than anything else to keep sleep away.

Fashion Flashes

IT WOULDN'T BE EASY to find a more beautiful suit that that town suit done in deep cream colored woolen, its jacket made with a deep hem of black Persian that mounts in two points on either side of the wide plastron of fur on the jacket front. Big bow of the fur finishes the cloth collar that is edged with the Persian lamb. Slim skirt.

TIME FLIES and to remind the wearer of this one shop shows a beautiful bird group in vari-colored enamel with tiny jewelled eyes and beaks that hold a tiny watch.

SHADES OF NIGHT include purple in all its wonderful tones, as well as the coppery browns. A dinner suit of purple woolen is worn with a blouse of big copper-colored sequins.

WINDY DAYS demand small, snug hats. A grand little suit hat is one somewhat on derby hat lines, fashioned of plaided woolen and anchored with a snug veil. Brownish-red feather trims the hat which is done in shades of red, gray and tan.

THE YOUNGSTERS ARE WILD about those big overcoats of white fleece or white tufted fabric. A grand number, fashioned of white fleece woven on cotton backing, is lined with Roman striped broadcloth in very bright colors. Striped fabric makes the collar, forms the facing down the coat and makes tight cuffs.

IT'S GRAND to get out of sturdy walking or uniform shoes and wear a dainty pair to go with an afternoon frock. For after-office doings, one house shows a black suede sandal with high ankle straps and big square buckles made of placques of mirror glass outlining a suede ornament.

BLACKOUT SANDWICHES

Emergency Food For Hungry Families

ALL the family will praise your sandwiches if you will just avoid "flat taste" by the addition of H. P. Sauce. This is the secret to appetizing sandwiches.

"Blackout" Sandwiches are the latest wartime "newey". To make them, whip together ½ lb. of cream cheese with 1 tablespoon of H. P. Sauce and ½ tablespoon of horseradish; then sauté a 3½ oz. can of chipped beef and a tablespoon of butter until frizzled. Break up fine and add to cheese mixture. Spread on buttered brown bread.

H. P. is a fine old English type, thick, fruity sauce. It is economical because it is concentrated. Try it on meat, fish, fowl, salads, soups, stews, etc. You'll be surprised at the wonderful flavour it gives foods.

NO TEMPORARY RELIEF FOR ME...I'M THROUGH WITH CONSTIPATION!

Yes, thousands of people suffering from constipation due to lack of the right kind of "bulk" in their diet have been able to say the same thing. For now there is a sensible way to correct this condition . . . far better than cathartics, which only give temporary relief.

If you suffer from this common trouble, try eating delicious KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN every morning. It contains the necessary "bulk" to help you become "regular" . . . naturally!

Why not do this: Get your KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN daily . . . drink plenty of water . . . and discover for yourself how easily your old "trouble" disappears. Get KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN! Available in two convenient sizes at all grocers'; in individual serving packages at restaurants. Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada.

Women Workers Less Foolhardy

By FOSTER BARCLAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, Oct. 28 (CP)—Women and young girls employed in Britain's busy and dangerous factories are safer workers than most men and boys.

Accidents to women showed a "startling" increase during 1941 but there was no evidence women were more prone to accidents than men according to a report issued by Sir Wilfred Garrett, Chief Inspector of factories.

"The general impression of inspectors is the reverse," said the report. "After a period of special liability to cuts and bruises in the breaking-in stages, women, are, for work within their strength, neater, tidier and therefore safer workers than most men. And girls are not so foolhardy as boys of similar age."

Factory Casualties

Fatal accidents during 1941 totalled 1,646, an increase of 20 per cent over 1940 while non-fatal accidents numbered 269,652, an increase of 17 per cent. These figures include 42,857 killed or injured women. Thus one in 20 men met with an accident, one woman in 56, one boy in 19 and one girl in 56.

The report urged that every factory should have a "safety committee" of workers and management to organize accident prevention and emphasized that if maximum production was to be obtained good conditions and reasonable working hours also were essential. "A good deal has to be spent in convincing even some other government departments that this is so," said the report, which also warned against reducing light and heat in factories to conserve fuel.

"Very serious pressure to reduce the heating in factories this winter can be expected," it continued. "This would mean a drop in production out of all proportion to the fuel saved, quite apart from the lowering of vitality of the workers. Women cannot handle small metal parts with skill and pace if their fingers are numb with cold."

Risky Hair-Dos

The modern style of hairdressing was cited as one reason for accidents among women. More than 175 were caused by hair becoming entangled in moving machinery. One girl, for instance, who suffered a minor scalp wound, refused to wear a cap because it would make her hair look like a "fright."

The report suggested that women adopt the severe coiffure of Russian women workers which keeps hair under the cap and thus reduces the risk from straying curls.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Good First Impression Makes An Important Social Asset

Most of us are meeting more new people these days than ever before in our lives. We've stepped forth from our customary activities and our lines have broadened into all kinds of war work—Red Cross, Civilian Defence, entertainment programs for men in uniform, Canteen work, and so forth.

New paths. New people. New names, New contacts.

What kind of first impression do you make when you bow your "How do you do" to these new people? Are you proud of their reaction to you, or are you depressed that they don't seem to take to you as you would like to have them?

It's fun to check up on certtain qualities that are tried-and-true ways to make a first impression click. These are such busy days that people don't have time to bother very much to get to know you. You must quickly do the right things to make the right first impression.

What is your rating?

How do you say your "How do you do?" Here's your grand chance to make a good first impression. People will like you if you make these words friendly, interested and pleasant. You won't get very far if you say them impersonally, automatically, brusquely, or dully. Make these words work for you, kindle them with personality.

How's your smile? There is no charm in the world so irresistible as a warm, radiant, ready smile. There is no charm easier to acquire. There is no charm that brings such rich rewards. The quality of your smile reveals at once the quality of your thinking. If you like people, if you want people to like you, if you want to show that you have a good time meeting people, let your smile register your enthusiasm and friendliness. You won't make a hit with a lifeless smile, a "dead pan" expression. Smile!

Do you remember names? A wonderful social asset, this. With a little trouble and a little time, you can train yourself to catch the name of the person to whom you are being introduced, and then add the name to your "How do you do". Everyone knows that people are enchanted to hear their own names.

Can you start a conversation after an introduction? Get interested immediately in the other person, forget yourself, and say something, no matter how casual or inconsequential. If you can't think of anything else, talk about the weather. . . .that's not to be scorned as a good starter! But best of all, try to sense something that will be of special interest to the other person. Try asking a question you think the other person will enjoy answering.

Are you a good listener? Here's where you can turn on your charm full tilt—listen with all your attention. Even if you aren't a good talker, you can easily cultivate the habit of being a good listener. Light up the expression on your face, in your eyes, and register eagerness and enthusiasm about what the other person is saying.

Do you express appreciation quickly, spontaneously, gracefully? You'll never make a good impression on a mannerly person if you hoard your "Thank you" or "Please". Let these words spring from your heart to your lips, and then watch them smooth the way for you, spread grace in your contacts.

What does your voice reveal about you? To that observant stranger whom you're trying to impress, your voice is a tell-tale sign of you; it reveals your breeding, your disposition, your manners. Did you ever listen to your own voice? What does it tell you . . . and other people?

Courtesy Tip

If your first inclination is to criticise, try a new trick . . .look around for something to praise. You'll be a nicer person to have around.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Fiance Unaware That Girl's Father Is Convict; Should She Tell Him?

How strong is the average man's love?

Would the boy you love continue to love you even though your family cupboard revealed a skeleton?

Think this over a little, before you consider the case of Cecile:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"During the past few months I have fallen in love and become engaged. We had planned to marry soon but my fiance has been inducted into the Army. We still intend to marry when he comes home on furlough.

"My mother says that I must tell my fiance our family secret before things go any further. It is this: When I say 'I lost my father,' it really means that he was sent to prison for misappropriating funds. My mother has never forgiven him. We moved to another city where no one knew us, and where the thing would never come out.

"I haven't committed a crime so why should I tell him? Must I risk losing the boy I love? You see, I love him dearly, and I'm sure he loves me as much. Of course, it may make no difference if he did know.

"But I lie awake every night wondering if it would change his love.

"Cecile".

This poor, fear-ridden girl writes as though she had a problem. Actually, of course, she has none. She knows, deep in her heart, that she mustn't begin any bridal preparations till she has taken the family skeleton out and aired it. There could be no greater folly than to marry on a basis of deceit.

Of course, this skeleton-airing may not result happily. That depends on the young man. He may love her more when he learns what she has suffered, or he may seize his hat and run. In the latter case, she may be fortunate in getting rid of him. But such knowledge is cold comfort, I admit.

I can say that I have never heard of a family skeleton that forced an attractive girl to remain permanently unmarried. Such things simply don't happen. The urge of love is too strong. If one lover is white-livered, another will be stout-hearted.

But here's another point for Cecile to remember: In her own strong, youthful desire for love and happiness, has she forgotten that her father is, after all, a human being and alive? He is paying bitterly for his lapse. Must he know, in addition, that his wife and daughter have forgotten him?

My dear Cecile, why not face the facts a little more clearly? Your mother, in her own bitterness, may have influenced you too much. Suppose you open your heart a little wider and let some of the warmth of daughterly compassion steal into it.

Cause and Treatment of Rheumatism of Tendons and Nerves

When we think of rheumatism, many of us think of a swollen joint,—ankle, knee, elbow, shoulder. What we fail to remember is that rheumatism may not be in a joint but may be affecting structures near or distant from the joint.

When rheumatism is not in the joint proper, it is called nonarticular rheumatism. Thus in the Glasgow Medical Journal, Dr. J. H. Hutchison, states that he encountered 78 cases of nonarticular rheumatism in a military hospital. "Such cases, whatever their nature, are curable and they do not require prolonged hospital treatment".

Fibrositis, the form of rheumatism in which the fibres of the muscles attached to the bones are inflamed or irritated, was present in 54 cases. Fibrositis is recognized by three signs—tenderness at the spot, spasm, and some little nodules which feel like little bony lumps. Two of the three signs are always present. All 54 cases were cured within twenty days.

There were 6 cases of sciatica, and the average length of stay in hospital was 39 days.

The fibrositis cases were caused by sudden strain, wear and tear, infection and sepsis (infection or poison), chilling, and emotional disturbances—fear, worry, excitement.

What about the treatment in fibrositis and sciatica? "Rest is always necessary in the treatment of fibrositis and sciatica". Heat is of great help in the relief of pain. Massage and heat from the most generally successful treatment for fibrositis.

In sciatica it was found (as has been found by most physicians) that massage must be used cautiously if at all, and then only in the later stages when the acute pain is gradually becominug less. In all cases of sciatica a quieting or pain relieving drug was used. These quieting drugs take away the tension of nerve and muscle and with the 'pull' gone, the pain is relieved.

"The relief of pain following the injection of a local anaesthetic was dramatic and rapid, and the power of movement returned. In chronic cases the pain and stiffness were lessened. The local anaesthetic will not relieve pain due to emotional disturbances".

After the injection of the local anaesthetic, physical therapy—heat massage, electicity— should follow.

BUFFALO BISONS OPEN SEASON WITH VICTORY

Defeat Indianapolis, Play-Off Winners Last Year, by 5-3 Count

HERSHEY BEARS WIN

(By The Associated Press)

Buffalo, Hershey and Cleveland lived up to pre-season predictions and moved off ahead of the rest of the field by winning their initial encounters last night as the American Hockey League opened its 1942-43 season.

Buffalo Bisons upset Indianapolis Capitals, playofff winners last season, 5-3; Hershey Bears crushed New Haven Eagles, 5-1; and Cleveland's Barons routed Pittsburgh Hornets, 7-2.

The Bisons, who have combined with the 1941-42 Springfield Club under the management of Eddie Shore, drew first blood on Max Bennett's goal, but Indianapolis took the lead a few minutes later on goals by Les Douglas and Joe Fisher. Fred Thurier then gave the 7,346 rooters something to cheer about as he slammed two shots into the net late in the period to put the Bisons in a lead they never relinquished.

Buffalo counted twice in the second period and the Caps scored their final goal in the last.

Two goals each by veterans Les Cunningham and Norm Locking and one each by rookies Tony Leswick and Ernest Trigg were the highlights of the Barons' victory over the Hornets. Cleveland led 5-0 before the Hornets scored late in the second session.

Hard-hitting veterans and a couple of breaks carried the Bears to an easy victory over the Eagles before a slim gathering of 3,000.

With two Bruins banished in the second stanza, the Eagles failed to score. But when two of the Birds were in the penalty box later in the same period the Bears drilled two goals home. New Haven's only score came in the last few minutes of play.

Connie Mack Given First Draft Choice

Philadelphia, Oct. 28 —(AP)— Connie Mack, manager of Philadelphia Athletics, has first choice in the Major League draft to be held in Chicago Monday, but he hasn't much hope of picking up a worthwhile man.

"All clubs have protected themselves," he said, "by calling in all available material. There's not much around to draft."

Philadelphia Phils have second choice and President Gerald Nugent said he would take "the best man available, whether he is an infielder, outfielder or pitcher."

Unsigned Rookies Look Good In Canadiens Camp

Bobby Carragher and Maurice Richards Are Youngsters Irvin is Proud Of

MAY NOT PLAY

By OWEN CHANNON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Montreal, Oct. 28—(CP)—Montreal Canadiens have two rookies in their National Hockey League training camp this year, and when it comes to making a selection of the most promising prospect — well, a toss of a coin could decide it.

Bobby Carragher and Maurice Richard, both of Montreal, are the youngsters and Dick Irvin is proud of both, but he refuses to comment on their relative ability.

"I still don't know if we will be signing them so how can I tell what their prospects are?" he says.

Carragher's hockey career has been temporarily stopped, however, due to an eye injury. It is doubtful if he will appear in any of the early-season games.

The ability of these rookies to compete in N. H. L. circles has shown up in practice and exhibition games, however. Both Carragher and Richard have plenty of power, speed and stickhandling skill.

Sport circles in Montreal believe that both youngsters will be taken up by Canadiens, as Carragher has been doing a swell job alongside Gordie Drillon, former Toronto Maple Leafs' star, and Buddy O'Connor, centreman of last year's razzle-dazzle line with the Canucks. Richard has been teamed with Elmer Lach and Tony Demers on Dick Irvin's ambulance line, which has been making good plays throughout the training season.

Carragher, 19, comes to the Canadiens' camp from the Montreal Royals of the Quebec Senior Hockey League. Richard, also 19, was with the amateur Canadiens in the Q. S. H. L.

Brunton of Commandos Disappointed About League's Decision

Montreal, Oct. 28 (CP) — Clare Brunton of the Commandos, Ottawa entry in the Quebec Senior Hockey League, is disappointed with the limit set on the number of National Hockey League players allowed to play on Q.S.H.L. teams.

Brunton, in Montreal last night at a Q.S.H.L. meeting, said he had several former N.H.L. players in his area and that the limitation was a blow to the club's prospects.

"I guess we will play Jim Henry in goal and the forward line of the Colvilles and Alex Shibicky, but they are about the only good players I can count on. We can't play hockey with a goaler and three forwards. It looks like we are going to have to fill in with a lot of new material."

The majority of the members of last year's Ottawa Senators, who played in the Q.S.H.L., are ineligible for the Commandos as they are not members of the Canadian army. Neil and Mac Colville, Shibicky and Henry were with New York Rangers last year, and this number would fill the quota set on N.H.L. players.

MONTREAL PATS WITHDRAW FROM QUEBEC LEAGUE

Loop Will Continue With Seven Teams Playing Triple Schedule

RULING STANDS

Montreal, Oct. 28 — (CP) — Montreal Pats withdrew from the Quebec Senior Hockey League last night, and other teams in the league decided to adopt a seven-team schedule.

The withdrawal came at the opening of a special meeting called to discuss the schedule for the forthcoming season, after Ottawa and Cornwall had objected to a draft schedule on the grounds that they were not given sufficient home games.

Harry Hyland of Pats made a motion that the club's franchise be suspended for one year. The motion was seconded by E. Hamilton of Montreal Royals and was adopted without discussion.

After the withdrawal of Pats, an application of Shawinigan Falls into the league was discussed but was rejected.

Shawinigan Falls played in the Montreal and District Senior B loop last season, a league that is not operating this year.

It was decided to adopt a seven-team triple schedule — with each team getting three home games with each of the other teams — to start in Montreal Nov. 1, Cornwall Nov. 6, Ottawa Nov. 7 and Quebec Nov. 8.

Ice at Quebec Nov. 8

As ice was not expected to be ready in Quebec by Nov. 8, it was thought likely that Quebec's opener would be played in Shawinigan Falls, where Quebec's Morton Aces are training at present.

It was decided Quebec Morton Aces would play the Montreal army team and Cornwall army would play the Montreal R. C. A. F. team in Montreal, Nov. 1. This was agreed upon in order that the season could get underway without waiting for the approval of the schedule.

The schedule will be submitted to the seven clubs for approval within the next few days.

Ottawa representatives again brought up the question of the limit set on the number of former National Hockey League players allowed on the Q. S. H. L. teams. At a meeting held in Montreal, Oct. 14, a ruling was passed limiting to four the number of N. H. L. players allowed on each team. At that time, an N. H. L. player was defined as one who had participated in any game during the 1941-42 National League season.

Lt.-Col. Arthur White representing the Montreal army entry suggested that the term "participated" be defined more clearly, and a motion was carried clarifying this as a man who "actually played in regulation time during the N. H. L. season."

OTTAWA LEAGUE WANTS PLAYOFF

Likely O.R.F.U. Will Consent to Series of Games for Ontario Title

Ottawa, Oct. 28—(CP)—Ottawa City Senior Football League officials are making every effort to arrange a post-season playoff with the champions of the Ontario Rugby Union.

The league last night sent the following telegram to R. W. (Bobby) Hewitson, Secretary-Treasurer of the Canadian Rugby Union, Toronto:

"Ottawa City Senior Football League, composed of Air Force, Civil Service and Rough Riders, desires opportunity of competing in any Eastern Canadian senior football playoffs, and is prepared to abide by any ruling and to pay fees set by C. R. U. Please treat this as our application for affiliation with C.R.U."

The wire was signed by President Jack Welch, Secretary George F. Perley and Treasurer D. Wesley Brown. Word from Dr. A. P. Davies, a Past President of the C. R.U., is that the two top teams in the O.R.F.U. will meet in a playoff game Saturday, Nov. 28, in Toronto.

(The C.R.U. is meeting in Toronto today and will deal then with Ottawa's application.)

It is not yet known whether the Ontario Union leaders will play a sudden-death or two-game series. It is possible that R.C.A.F. Hurricanes will be meeting the Navy in the O.R.F.U. finals and there are reports the service teams will not be allowed to compete in playoffs outside their own union.

At the same time there is an unofficial report that the Air Force is prepared to allow the Hurricanes to engage further playdowns if Lew Hayman's club captures the O.R.F.U. crown.

There will be no official Canadian playdowns this season, and the Grey Cup will not be up for competition.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By CHARLES EDWARDS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Oct. 28—(CP) — Annis Stukus, backfifeld coach and quarterback of Toronto Oakwood Indians in the Ontario Rugby Football Union and one of the gridiron's leading point-getters for years, complains he hasn't scored a touchdown in his six games so far this year. . . . Give yourself the ball, Stuke, give yourself the ball! . . . Bill (Ottawa Journal) Westwick quotes a letter from Tony McCarthy, former Ottawa Rough Rider football star now posted in England with the Canadian Fire Fighters, asking why the war caused the Eastern Football Union to suspend operations this year. "They are foolish, as soccer and other sports are still being played here," said Tony.

The expert says:

After Ken Charlton, Regina hockey and football star, enlisted in the R.C.A.F., in Winnipeg as an aircraftman, second class, and the same day helped R.C.A.F. Flyers beat Manitoba Varsity 27-16 in the Winnipeg Senior Football League, Dave (Regina Leader-Post) Dryburgh commented: "He hit town in the morning, joined up in the afternoon, ran 40 yards the first time he touched the pigskin that night and followed up with a touchdown and a forward pass toss that produced another major score. That is known as getting around on the double."

Puck patter:

Ken (Edmonton Journal) McConnell says it is fairly definite that Art Wiebe, former Chicago Black Hawks defence star, will not play hockey this winter because he is too busy with his bakery business in Vermilion, Alta. . . . N. H. L. clubs please note: Leroy Goldsworthy, who has played with every N.H.L. club except Toronto, is in Edmonton, a free agent and ready to play hockey. What's that? Shucks, he's only 36. . . . Al (Montreal Herald) Parsley passes on a tip to watch Paul Haynes' Canadiens in the Quebec Senior Hockey League. Alex Smart, Marcel Dheere, Jerry Walker, Smiley Meronek, Glen Harmon, Ross Ritchie, George Brown and Andy Anton are back again with some useful newcomers. . . . Take a look at three forward lines Joe Primeau has working for his Toronto R.C.A.F. team: Johnny McCreedy, Johnny Quilty and Norm McAtee; Don Willson, Kenny Mosdell and Bobby Kirk; Bus Wycherley, Pat McCreavy and Lloyd Gronsdale. And Primeau has such defencemen as Ernie Dickens, Eddie Bush, Frank Eddolls and Lou Labovich.

THREE SEASONED LINES TO PLAY FOR BLACK HAWKS

Chicago Team Should Make Good Showing in N.H.L. This Winter

A NEW GOALIE

Chicago, Oct. 28 —(CP)— Fortified by veteran minor league defencemen and a goalie purchased from Montreal Canadiens, Chicago Black Hawks expect to make a good showing in the National Hockey League this season.

The Hawk's debut, to be made without benefit of exhibition games, will be against Boston Bruins in Chicago Nov. 5.

For the opener, Manager Paul Thompson can call out three seasoned lines: Bill Carse, centre; Red Hamill, right wing; Bill Thoms, left wing — Max Bentley, centre; Mush March, right; Doug Bentley, left — Cully Dahlstrom, centre; Phil Hergesheimer, right; George Allen, left.

Three regular rear guardsmen—Art Wiebe, Joe Cooper and Johnny Mariucci — and Goalie Sam Lo Presti were lost. Wiebe is head of a Canadian lumber mill and could not find time to leave his work; Cooper has been in the Canadian army since July, and Mariucci and Lo Presti are in the United States Coast Guard.

Bert Gardiner, purchased from the Canadiens this week, will take Lo Presti's goal-tending job, greatly solving Manager Thompson's biggest problem. Doug Stevenson, a Western Canada amateur, will be in reserve.

Three Good Defencemen

For the defence line, the Hawks have Joe Matte, Red Mitchell and Aud Tuten, obtained from Kansas City Americans, and Leo Carbol of St. Louis Flyers, one of the leading defencemen in the American Association last season. The American Association disbanded this year.

"Even if these minor leaguers fail to come through," said Thompson, "I would just as soon put Hamill and Thoms in the rear guard spots. Then we would have speed and scoring threats all over the ice. Either can play defence better than two-thirds of the defencemen in the league.

"The coming hockey game is the one featuring five forwards and a goalie."

Mike Buckna, 29-year-old winger from Trail, B.C.; Fido Purpur, Kansas City performer, Reg Bentley, are extra men who must prove their right to starting jobs.

As a novelty, Thompson could start an all--brother line of Max, Doug and Reg Bentley.

"I can see where the idea of the three-Bentley line would be good news. But Reg has to make his own place."

Bill Tobin, Hawks' president, said advance business indicates hockey is in for a boom season.

"I know our sales are ahead of last year, which was a spectacular success," he observed.

CASUAL COMMENT

by K.J.C.

DOWN IN KINGSTON THEY used to have a tidy Interscholastic rugby football loop composed of Kingston Collegiate, Queens Juniors and Regiopolis College. However, feelings rose to such a pitch that pitched free-for-all fights were not only planned, but carefully executed with players and patrons taking sides. One frosty fall afternoon several of the belligerents were injured and quite seriously with the result that the league was discontinued and sports relations between the K.C.I. and Regiopolis severed. For over ten years this condition has prevailed with these schools having to depend on exhibition football games each autumn. Feelings between the Albert College and Belleville Collegiate grid squads have been strained for some time, but reached a peak where the feelings resulted in pugnaciousness last week. Neither of the head masters at either school will again tolerate such actions and unless the players and student bodies mark well their actions during rugby games in the future they may find themselves confronted with the same situation as prevails in Kingston. (It's merely a word to the wise.)

WITH BOYS OF 19 YEARS OF age eligible for military call today sport is leaning towards juveniles to provide its competition and the sooner the athletes in our schools realize this fact, the better it will be for all concerned. Interscholastic sports may become major attractions for war workers, men in the armed services and civilians alike. With restrictions of gasoline and travel in general, Belleville is comfortably situated, insofar as interscholastic sports are concerned. We have St. Michael's Academy, Albert College and the Belleville Collegiate to provide sports without the customary travelling confronting them. With winter in the offing a strong interscholastic hockey group could be formed among these schools that would demand public recognition. However, unless the respective students forget trivial, petty and personal grievances and play their sports like upright Canadian athletes they may find themselves on the outside looking in.

REMEMBER WHEN the Edmonton Grads, unconquerable girls' basketball team, lost their captain, Margaret McBurney, after ten years of leadership of the team? Miss McBurney retired seven years ago today after having played 158 games, scoring 2,064 points. The mighty Grads disbanded in 1939.

TRUST SKIPPER Frank Tunney to come up with some new wrestling wrinkle every once in a while. His latest ring brainchild is placing advertisements in Toronto newspapers requesting the rasslin' fans to select their own bouts. However, in Belleville this practice is not altogether necessary, that is as long as he can bring Whipper Watson and Earl McCready together as is the case at the Hume Arena Thursday night. Even the Watson-McCready scrap, over a 90-minute time limit, was the out-growth of public opinion following their decisionless hour bout last week here.

CHAIN STORE BASEBALL paid off like a cash register in the 1942 season and naturally the two winning organizations were St. Louis in the National and New York in the American League, comments Gene Kessler, sports editor of the Chicago Daily Times.

The Cardinal chain won in the National, Pacific Coast (with Sacramento) and captured the playoff title series in the American Association (with Columbus), points out Kessler. The Yankee combine captured flags in the American Association (with Kansas City) and the International League (with Newark).

That's sweeping the big ball circuits clean, showing what a few other baseball organizations are missing by not installing sound farm systems.

If you have any doubt about the wisdom of chain store baseball as a builder of champions just recall the line-ups of the Yankees and the Cardinals in the fall classic. Both the champion Cards and the American League champions were made up for the greater part of graduates from farm system teams. Actually the Redbirds copped their sixth pennant since 1925—or since Branch Rickey originated the farm plan.

TED HUGHES WILL HEAD the Belleville Golf Club for 1943. The Belleville Golf closed out its books the other night with the annual club banquet, distribution of prizes and election of officers. Tommy Carruthers was named club champion, while Mrs. C. E. Davis won the ladies club title. Although the club membership has been noticeably depleted owing to enlistments, the Belleville Golf Club officers intend to put more effort into their club another year to continue operations. The course is in splendid shape and play is continuing there.

NAZIS BAN HIGHER TECHNICAL TRAINING IN HOLLAND

London, Oct. 28 — (CP) — The Nazis are using a ban on higher technical education in the Netherlands for all save National Socialists in an attempt to recruit new members for their party, it was reported Monday. "Only those who have proved they understand the demands of the new times may receive academic education," said the Dutch Nazi publication Nationale Dagblad, commenting on the fact that only 400 students are enrolled in the Delft Technical High School.

REDS RECAPTURE

Sea fleet, a stubborn Red Army defence forced attacking Alpine troops to fan out into the wooded mountains in a flanking attempt.

When the main body of the attackers started to swing southward to follow up the original flanking penetrations, the Russian blow was struck, an important mountain position was wrested from the Germans, and the entire attack force was caught off balance and rolled back with heavy losses, the army newspaper reported.

Tanks Bogged Down

Izvestia, the government newspaper, said Autumn rains had turned the Don-Volga steppes northwest of Stalingrad into a quagmire where the enemy's mechanized forces bogged down.

There Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's attack on the Nazi flank was said to have scored steady gains. Pravda said the Germans were driven from a key defence position there three days ago, and had lost 7,000 men in a hail of mortar and rifle fire which beat off their attempts to recapture it.

In this salient alone the Germans were said to have lots 57 tanks destroyed and 150 damaged and captured.

Red Star said the Russians had recaptured an important hill in the active defence of the Caucasian Black Sea coast and continued to press the enemy.

Ambushed in a deep ravine, a regiment of Axis infantry escaped only with the loss of about two companies, it was announced. Soviet marines were credited with killing 500 Germans and capturing documents in an attack upon a Nazi-occupied community east of Novorossisk.

Northern Defences Hold

Stalingrad's northern defences held against attack after attack by numerically-superior infantry and tank forces, but "at a cost of heavy losses, the Germans succeeded in advancing along two streets," the noon communique said.

Vain assaults upon Soviet positions in a recently-recaptured community on the steppes northwest of the Volga River city cost the lives of about 850 Rumanians and Red army artillery blasted gaps in the Axis flank, it was announced.

Summing up the fight within the city on the 65th day of the siege, the communique said a battalion of enemy infantry was wiped out and five tanks, 23 blockhouses and dug-outs and 40 supply trucks were destroyed.

Turn Most Important

The turn of battle in the Caucasus, where the Germans have been pressing an offensive for several weeks, was the most important development reported in today's military dispatches.

Red Star gave details of the Caucasian campaign northwest of Tuapse, which was mentioned in a Soviet communique for the first time two days ago. The dispatch said the Germans hoped to break through the foothills to the Black Sea in the district of Tuapse, a provisional Red fleet base.

The Red army successfully defended an important highway in violent fighting and forced the Germans to undertake a flanking manoeuvre, the newspaper said.

Fir-clad slopes, lined with ravines and ditches, facilitated this manoeuvre, the dispatch said. Large forces of infantry, including specially-trained Alpine troops, penetrated Russian defences in depth with the assistance of massed planes and mortars, and occupied two villages and several important heights.

Retreat on for Days

The Red Army regrouped, and struck with pile-driver force when the Germans swung southwestward in an attempt to develop the break through, Red Star said. The retreat was declared to have started several days ago.

Illustrating, Red Star said the Russians attacked a hill frontally and on two flanks, threatening with encirclement the battalion assigned to guard it.

The newspaper reported the Russians broke through the front line by night, stormed the hill and wiped out automatic riflemen on the peak with hand grenades. Remnants of the garrison were defeated and the Russians continued the offensive, it said.

Accounts of the battle of Stalingrad emphasized losses which the Germans are suffering in assaults on the northern industrial quarter. Mass attacks had been resumed.

More than 900 Germans were killed and 11 tanks were destroyed in the area of Northside Factory as the garrison of Stalingrad turned back the renewed offensive, the midnight communique reported.

R.A.F. in Russia

The British Air Ministry's news service disclosed that R.A.F. coastal command pilots and aircraft have been stationed in Northern Russia since summer to help protect United Nation's convoys from Axis attacks on the Arctic sea lanes to Murmansk and Archangel. It is not known immediately whether any Canadians are with R.A.F. airmen in Russia.

The planes, including Catalina flying boats, are used for both bombing of German submarines and reconnaissance operations. Charting of the edge of the polar ice cap is one important task of the command, since the route of convoys depends upon its position. The planes were reported to have flown non-stop from the British Isles to their Russian bases, more than 1,200 miles to the northeast.

U.S., JAP FORCES

Forced to Give Ground

On the west flank, held by Marines against a series of attacks since last Friday, the Navy reported the enemy was forced to give ground in "heavy fighting."

At the Americans' backs was the prized airfield, built by the Japanese and captured by the Marines last August, from which United States bombers have been able to hammer at enemy shipping for miles around. In Japanese hands, the field could be used as a springboard for an offensive against Australia.

Last night's communique told of Navy and Marine Corps dive-bombers, apparently dispatched from this same field, flying to the aid of two United States mine-sweepers which were set upon by three enemy destroyers. Two of the destroyers were sunk.

Another enemy destroyer was attacked by fighters from the Guadalcanal field after it sank the United States fleet tug Seminole and a small harbor patrol boat near the island of Gulagi, about 13 miles north of the field.

Enemy Plane Carrier Hit

Appearing after shore batteries had slammed three shells into the destroyer, the planes strafed and, in the language of the communique "further damaged" it.

During the night of Oct. 26-27, navy aircraft renewed an attack on an enemy force 400 miles northeast of Guadalcanal. They scored a torpedo hit in an enemy plane carrier and two hits on a cruiser before heavy anti-aircraft fire, which damaged one of the attacking planes, drove them off.

"Further reports on the naval air battle which was fought to the eastward of the Stewart Islands on Oct. 26," the communique said, "reveal that:—

"(A) One enemy carrier was badly damaged.

"(B) A second enemy carrier was damaged.

"(C) One enemy cruiser was badly damaged.

"(D) One battleship was hit."

Both carriers had been reported damaged previously.

Recapitulation

The Navy announced the following recapitulation of American and Japanese losses in the Solomons campaign:

Ships sunk:

One American aircraft carrier; three American and one Japanese heavy cruisers; six American and eight Japanese destroyers; three Japanese and one American transports, three American auxiliary transports.

Ships probably sunk:

Two Japanese destroyers; one Japanese transport.

Ships damaged:

Four Japanese and one American aircraft carriers; two Japanese battleships; five Japanese heavy cruisers; 17 Japanese light cruisers; 10 Japanese and two American destroyers; 17 other Japanese vessels and "several other" American ships.

President Roosevelt, declining to predict the outcome of the struggle pointed to a headline in the Washington Evening Star at his press conference yesterday and indicated it told the story accurately. The headline was: "Battle Rages in Solomons," but the president added he did not know whether he would use the adjective "decisive."

Continuing to harass enemy supply bases and shipping on the fringe of the battle zone, Allied planes from Australia again attacked the Japanese base at Lae, New Guinea, yesterday, destroying three barges and silencing anti-aircraft positions. One Allied plane is missing.

AT THE BELLE

Hark, hark, the lark—Red Skelton lends an ear to the deadpan Virginia O'Brien as she sings a song in M.G.M.'s "Panama Hattie" now playing at the Belle. Ann Sothern plays the title role and co-stars with Skelton.

AT THE BELLE

"Panama Hattie"

One of the most diversified musicals to reach the screen in many months is Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Panama Hattie," now on the Belle Theatre screen. Starring Red Skelton and Ann Sothern, the film is fast-moving with an excellent human story, an exhilarating comedy routine, elaborate production and tunes you'll whistle on your way out.

Finest Role of Career

As Panama Hattie, a night club entertainer with a heart of gold, Miss Sothern has one of the finest roles of her career, in love with a soldier, Dan Dailey, Jr., the scenes in which she meets his daughter, Jackie Horner, and overcomes the child's dislike of her, are especially appealing.

In addition to the four Cole Porter songs, "Let's Be Buddies," "Fresh as a Daisy," "Just One of Those Things" and "I've Still Got My Health," are five other numbers, "Good Neighbors," "Panama Hattie," "The Son of a Gun Who Picks on Uncle Sam," "At the Savoy" and "The Sping."

Red Skelton continues his amazing stride in the cinema heavens. Here he is one of the sailors who have sworn to protect Hattie from one and all. The others are Rags Ragland and Ben Blue, as funny a combination of comedians as ever came out of Hollywood.

Singing Treat

Another treat is the singing of Virginia O'Brien who drops her dead-pan technique for the first time. The byplay between her and Alan Mowbray is excellent. Among others lending strength to an excellent cast are Marsha Hunt and Carl Esmond, Lena Horne and the Barry Brothers, known from coast to coast for their amazing dance routine.

"Panama Hattie" is lavish with music and big production numbers featuring dancers and singers of the Central American type.

Tell Tale Heart

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's screen masterpiece "Tell Tale Heart" a timely spotlight film Football Thrills, and a new John Nesbit Passing Parade Novelette, "We Do It because," complete the program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"You're in the Army Now"

A new comedy team which promises to make laugh history will be introduced to local film audiences when Warner Bros. newest comedy, "You're in the Army Now," starts next at the Capitol Theatre. Jimmy Durante, whose classic antics have kept movie, stage and radio audiences in the proverbial stitches for a decade or more, and Phil Silvers, straight-faced comedian of stage and recent movie fame, make up the new team. Completing the trio of stars is Jane Wyman.

The Navy Blues Sextette those glamorous Hollywood beauties, have deserted Uncle Sam's first line of defence, to join Durante and Silvers in whooping things up for the boys in camp. The lithesome lovelies are featured, appropriately, in the musical scenes of the film, with Matty Malneck and his orchestra providing the accompaniment.

"King of Dodge City"

Columbia's "King of Dodge City," which is opening next at the Capitol theatre, promises double action for local western fans with two top action stars featured in the hit. Both Bill Elliott and Tex Ritter are to be seen in the new outdoor drama which deals with the lawless town of Abilene during the brawling days of the wild and wooly west. Elliott again portrays Wild Bill Hickok, while Ritter is seen in the role of a two-fisted, hard-riding frontier sheriff. Other featured players include Judith Linden, Dub Taylor, Guy Usher, Rick Anderson, Pierce Lyden and Francis Walker. Lambert Hillyer directed for Columbia from an original screen play by Gerald Geraghty.

The last and final chapter of the thrilling serial "Spy Smasher" and a color cartoon complete a grand program for the entire family.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Treat 'Em Rough"

The excitement of the prize fight ring, and a murder plot to hijack a million dollars' worth of black gold, oil, combine to give "Treat 'Em Rough" which opens next at the McCarthy theatre 60 minutes of surefire action-drama.

Eddie Albert stars in a well-fashioned role. The two-fisted characterization is just the sort of thing that has made him a favorite with John Customer since Eddie made his first click in "Brother Rat."

The Universal script tells how Eddie as The Panama Kid, temporarily tosses his prizefight mitts into the attic and forgets his quarrel with The Old Man long enough to rush back to the old home town. Object of the idea is to help ease the latter off the suspect list for several thousand missing truckloads of his own company's oil.

Gives Competent Performance

Peggy Moran, who does The Girl, is not only decoratively an addition to the company, but gives a thoroughly competent performance. Lloyd Corrigan does alright by himself and the audience as The Old Man.

William Frawley has a typical role as the fast-talking trainer, and Mantan Moreland provides a lot of laughs on the darker side (pun intended) in a part labeled Snake-Eyes. Truman Bradley and Joseph Crehan round out the cast.

In addition to "Treat 'Em Rough" the latest Ellery Queen detective drama "Enemy Agents Meet Ellery Queen" a thrill-and-chill filled Nazi spy mystery, co-starring William Gargan as Ellery Queen and Margaret Lindsay as Nikki Porter, will be presented. The Foto-Nite offers this week at the McCarthy are first $175.00 and second $75.00. Do not miss Foto-Nite, your name may be selected.

JAP ATTEMPTS

Several transoprts on the ground were destroyed or damaged, an American was killed and five others were wounded in an attack by a strong force of Japanese fighters and bombers upon airfields in the Dibrugarh area of Assam Sunday. But a highly-informed military commentator who may not be named summed up the situation thus:-

"The blow was not hard enough to dislocate the ferry service.

"They can bomb all they want to and they won't wipe out the fields, from which we'll continue bombing them and supplying China."

Two Raiders Shot Down

The spokesman reported the number of transport planes on the ground when the Japanese hit was "not unusually large." The communique said two raiders were shot down, against a loss of one interceptor.

A Japanese fighter attack aimed against the Chinese air base at Kunming never reached its goal, from three to seven planes going down in the attempt.

To many observers one of the most pleasing sidelights of the Sunday bombing raid, which was followed with machine-gun attacks by Japanese fighters yesterday, was the disclosure that Indian workers, needed for upkeep of the fields and other essential services, did not run away.

"As soon as the raid was over they got back to work," a spokesman said.

At a U.S. air forces advance base in China it was disclosed yesterday that destruction of Hong Kong's main power plant Monday by American bombers deprived the Japanese of electricity for shipyards which had been used to repair vessels damaged in the South Pacific fighting.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop and I were taking a walk to celebrate the swell weather, and 2 big tough looking kids were in the middle of the street teasing some little kid by pulling his hat down over his face every time the little kid pulled it right again, and pop said, Now there's an example of the sort of thing that got the whole world in its present mess. Powerful bullies ganging up on unarmed neutrals, he said.

If some cop sees them he'll make them stop all right, I said, and pop said, That's the second big trouble with the world, the universal instinct to yell for the cops at the slightest provocation. These 2 boys are human beings and open to reason just like the rest of us. There's no need to arrest them and clap them into a reformatory to make them understand. I'll show you what I mean by reasoning with them right now, he said.

And he walked out in the street, saying, Listen, boys, this little fellow is only half your size and besides you're 2 to one. So do you think that's very brave or manly? he said and one of the tough kids said, G, that's right, mister, we wont do it any more, will we, Butch?

No, we didn't realize, mister, the other one said. Pull your hat up, kid we wont do it again he said.

And the little kid pulled his hat up right and they both quick reached at once and jammed it down over his face again, and pop said, Stop that, cut that out, you little devils. I'm the air raid warden around here and I can have you put in a concentration camp for this. Where's an officer, we'll see about this, he said.

The result being the 2 tough kids walked away looking scared, and pop said, Oh well, perhaps civilization still depends more or less on calling the cops.

Which maybe it does.

INDIVIDUAL PRIORITY RATINGS

Washington, Oct. 28—(AP)—The War Production Board yesterday authorized the director of its Canadian Priorities Review Division in Ottawa to issue individual priority ratings to Canadian firms without getting special consent from Washington where the amount of materials involved is less than $500 in United States currency.

The decision would save considerable time, W.P.B. said, in purchase by Canadian companies of small lots of materials from the United States.

Ratings may not be assigned by Canadian office to firms in the Dominion operating under the production requirements plan.

CHAPTER 1
The McCleods at Home

It was not a large party, but almost every one there had been proud to get an invitation. For the somewhat taciturn Hugh McLeod and his lovely kitten-faced wife, Alma, were high spots in New York society although they neither sought for nor cared about that accolade.

"Why do you build?" asked Ogden Murray. "There are hundreds of houses on Long Island, just right for you two."

"No," Alma said, with her usual decided air, "we don't want a ready-made house, it must be built according to our own plans. Hugh and I have talked it over and over—"

"Why does building require so much talking?" Van Dykes Haynes inquired in his drawling voice. "If you want a house, just say what you want and have it built. Why talk about it day and night? I am an architect and I know."

"You may know for yourself, Van," Murray checked him, "but for most people, building, if it is to be a success, must be talked about. It must be planned carefully and discussed with experts. It takes a lot of talk, look at the Tower of Babel!"

"Better look up your Scripture lessons," Alma laughed. "It was the chatter at the outset that prevented that tower being built."

"Well, it doesn't matter. I say, Alma, let me drive you out to look at a few houses, before you decide."

"Talk to Hugh about it. If he'll consent to buy a used house, I'll agree."

Alma smiled the subject away and opened another. But nobody cared; so long as she talked, and smiled, subjects were of little consequence.

The big Park Avenue apartment was duplex and the floors were connected by a graceful stairway of white marble. The appointments were modified modernistic, the modernism being by reason of Alma's insistence and the modification because of Hugh's Scotch doggedness.

The McCleods though apparently ill-matched, were happy enough.

Hugh was big and bold and sometimes boisterous; Alma was frail, morally and physically, but she was very lovely.

Their home was the Mecca of many social pilgrims, but it was reached only by those who were worth because of some attainment of merit or some charm of personality. Climbers seldom made the grade and mere wealth cut no ice whatever.

"Where is Brand Herrick?" Murray asked. "Oh, here he comes, with Nadine, as always."

"Is that true, Brand?" Alma said as Herrick reached her side. "Are you always with Nadine?"

"Not when I can be with you, darling."

"Take him off my hands, Alma, do. I'm awfully tired of him." This from Nadine Glenn, who thought herself a glamor girl, and with good reason.

She was the serpent type. She writhed, very slightly but effectively. She was a languid brunette with heavy-lidded eyes.

Alma, was that rare combination, a blonde with real mentality.

Brand Herrick admired them both, but he often realized to his amazement, that when he was with one, he invariably wished he might be with the other. Nadine was deeply in love with him, and Alma seemed to be. But Herrick shrewdly suspected that Alma's interest in him was more to annoy Nadine than because of her own sentiments.

He was a clever lawyer, and his gay good nature made him a general favorite.

There were rumors of a fabulously rich uncle in the western wilds, whose heir Brand might be some day.

Doris Day was an odd combination of a wilful child and a capable and helpful friend. She was 23, but looked about 17, until she found a chance to do something for somebody and then she seemed mature and very wise. Her lack of malice set her apart from most of her associates.

She came to Alma and said softly: "Who is that girl, over by the palm bush?"

"I've no idea," her hostess answered. "I never saw her before. She must have come with somebody.

The girl seemed alone, stranded, in fact, and kind-hearted Doris went to her.

"Come along to the bar," she invited. "Are you with the Laings?"

"No." When the girl smiled she looked attractive. But she was so evidently a stranger, and she seemed dubious about going with Doris.

Then she said, "You think I'm a fish out of water, don't you? Well I am. Miss Malcolm brought me and then she went to look at a picture. I'm waiting for her. I'd like a cocktail."

She seemed almost wistful, and Doris kissed her.

"Come along," she said. "What you need is some fun. What's your name?"

The girl laughed.

"You're like a St. Bernard," she said, "and I'm the lost traveler! My name is Una Deane—"

"Of course!" exclaimed Doris,"I should have known! It couldn't be anything else."

"Why couldn't it? What do you mean? I've never seen you before."

"No; but you are so perfectly a Una Deane, from top to toe!"

"Oh, I see. You mean I'm not—not smart, not glamorous."

Doris looked at her. "That's a true bill," she said, "but those things can be put right. And, if I had meant them, I should not have said them."

"No; I ought to have known that. Forgive me. Just what did you mean?"

"Only that your name suits you. You have that gentle look that a Una should have and your quiet, unafraid yet shy manner is of the Deanes."

"You are clever and you are very kind. Ought I to go with you? Miss Malcolm may expect me to be here when she comes back."

"Who is Miss Malcolm? What is she?"

"She is Miss Martha Malcolm—" she?"

"What! You don't mean Martha Malcolm, the painter?"

"Of course. I am a student in the Atterbury School of Design, she is often there, and she is my friend."

"You're a lucky girl! Martha Malcolm is a power. Come on, she will find you. But you'll be better for a cocktail."

They found a gay crowd at the bar and Doris introduced her new find as a protegee of Martha Malcolm. The effect of this and the effect of a well-selected cocktail gave Una a new confidence in herself. Ogden Murray looked at her twice and came to sit beside her. Van Dyke Haynes waxed chummy, whereupon Nadine looked offended and said: "Come on, Van; I want to dance." He went with her.

Martha Malcolm came to the bar.

"Oh, here you are, Una," she said smiling at the happy looking girl. "Wait a minute till I have me a drink, and then I want to take you to meet our hostess. She is a dear and will adore you. 'Fraid I forgot about you, but you seem to have landed on your feet."

"Yes, Miss Malcolm, I'm enjoying the party, as you prophesied."

"So I did. Now, let me see—where is Alma? Anybody know?"

"Let me take Miss Deane," offered Ogden Murray. "You stay here, Miss Malcolm. I'll hunt out Alma and present Miss Deane in your name."

"Yes, do, Ogden, and find Hugh too. I want Una to meet him."

"'Tis the same as done. Will you come, Miss Deane, and," he added as they walked away, "if you'll let me call you Una, I'll—"

He paused for the girl was laughing at him.

"Sorry," she said, "but you've got your lines wrong! Or have you? Miss Malcolm told me that the men here would be hilariously informal, and would call me Una at first sight and probably darling—"

"Yes, I meant to—I do mean to, but you see—"

"You mean, I am not in the know, and you're uncertain just how I'd take you."

"Exactly. Now you tell me how you want me. Ultra formal, just medium or a racketty pal."

Una laughed. "Medium, please," she said, "at first, anyhow, and then if I want to, I can adjust the gauge. Tell me a little more about Miss Malcolm, won't you? I've never seen her social side before. I've only known her in the classes."

"She's an important woman. Does work in many fields, in war, in peace and among her countrymen. But she's eccentric."

"Not in her manner?"

"Not exactly, though she is a little informal. We all are, but it seems odd in her. Then she makes queer friends."

"Like me?"

Murray looked at her reprovingly. "Don't be silly," he said. "It doesn't suit you. You are—"

She interrupted him. "Never mind about me, tell me something about the McCleods. Quick, before we reach them."

"No orders. Just keep your gentleness and simplicity and don't try to be smart."

"As if I would!"

"Oh, yes, you would. And I'm afraid you will. But don't. I want you to be friends with Alma. She can do a lot for you."

"I don't choose friends because of what they can do for me."

"Well, you ought to. Anyway, do in this case. Alma McCleod can give you far more pleasure than Martha Malcolm."

"They're both Scotch, aren't they?"

"Oh, no, Miss Malcolm is of Scotch stock, but Alma is Hugh's wife, you know. He's Scotch, of course. Oh, here we are."

Alma, having come through a doorway, stood in front of them, and Murray made the introduction.

"How delightful," Alma said, and her tone was sincere. "Miss Malcolm told me of you and I was about to look you up. Tell me, do you live in the city?"

"Yes, I am in the classes with Miss Malcolm. She made me very happy, bringing me here tonight."

"I hope you will come again—often. And here is my husband, Hugh, this is Miss Deane, a friend of Martha's and now a friend of ours."

"How do you do, Miss Deane? Good of you to come. You looking after her, Murray? Yes, yes. Sorry, Miss Deane, but I have a most important matter to attend to. I must go. See you when I come back, soon, yes, yes, soon, I'm sure."

He grasped Una's hand a moment and then went quickly away.

She looked up at Murray and found him watching her. Alma had disappeared.

DEATHS

BARNUM—Suddenly at 174 James Street, Belleville, on Wednesday, Oct. 28th, Elizabeth Jane Thrasher, beloved wife of Samuel Barnum, in her 73rd year.
Resting at Martin Funeral Home until this (Wednesday) evening. Then at her late residence, whence the funeral will take place on Friday afternoon, Oct. 30th. Service at the house at 2.30 o'clock. Interment Belleville Cemetery. O28.

IN MEMORIAM

KELLAR — In loving memory of Winnifred Jean Kellar, who died October 28th., 1938.

We little thought when leaving home,
She would no more return,
That she so soon in death would sleep
And leave us here to mourn.

Her gentle face and patient smile
With sadness we recall.
She had a kindly word for all,
And died beloved by all.

Her voice is mute and stilled her heart,
That loved us well and true.
Oh, bitter was the trial to part
With one so good and true.

When shades of night are falling
And we are all alone;
There often comes a longing
If she could just come home.
—Sadly missed by Father, Mother. Brothers and Sisters. O28

The locale of the Dairy Show and Cheese Exhibition, formerly in the Market Rooms of the City Hall, has been changed this year. The show is scheduled for the first week in December.

HEAVY SNOWFALL IN NORTH HASTINGS

One of the heaviest pre-winter snowstorms in years swept the northern sections of the county Tuesday afternoon with travellers reporting a depth of about four inches covering the ground in the Bancroft area and as far south as Eldorado.

The snow fell in heavy white sheets, in some parts obliterating objects a few yards away. In Bancroft residents were unable to see across the street while the storm was at its height.

Motoring was made hazardous due to the wet condition of the snow and trucks and automobiles were forced to reduce their speed while navigating the hills in the northern section.

Two inches of snow fell in parts of Prince Edward County, it was learned today with Picton being the centre of the storm. This city saw but a few flakes fall in a lone flurry about two o'clock.

CHIMNEY FIRE CAUSE OF RUN

VICTORY LOAN PASSES BEYOND $400,000,000

Total for Tuesday Was $47,618,850 — the Third Lowest Day of Campaign

AHEAD OF LAST LOAN

Ottawa, Oct. 28 (CP).—Canada's third Victory Loan campaign passed the $400,000,000-mark yesterday when subscriptions of $47,618,850 raised the cumulative total for the first eight working days of the 18-day campaign to $414,583,900, National Loan headquarters announced today.

Tuesday's sales as reported to headquarters made the third lowest day's total yet received but the figure still was well above the daily average of about $41,700,000 needed to attain the $750,000,000 minimum objective by the end of the campaign period, Nov. 7.

The lowest one-day total so far reported was $40,019,800 scored on the second day of the drive.

At the end of its eighth day the second Victory Loan last February stood at $361,969,850—about $50,000,000 behind the third Victory Loan total—but the objective in the previous loan was only $600,000,000.

National loan headquarters said yesterday's returns indicated "a continuing favorable response from the employees' canvass and a falling off in general canvass as contrasted with the day before."

Good Average Day.

"While the general canvass was low in point of dollars, it was well abreast of last loan in point of numbers," today's statement said.

Among large subscriptions reported to national headquarters yesterday were Manufacturers' Life Insurance Co., Toronto, $7,500,000; Canadian Car and Foundry Co. Ltd., Montreal, $2,000,000; Province of Quebec Workmen's Compensation Board, $500,000; and Link Manufacturing Co. Ltd., Gananoque, $500,000.

Another large subscription received yesterday was $1,000,000 from the Howe Sound Co. for the Britannia Mining and Smelting Co. Ltd., of Britannia, B.C.

Average of $98.

With two-thirds of the Windsor, Ont., plant canvassed, employees of the Ford Motor Co., of Canada passed the $1,000,000-mark in Victory Loan subscriptions. Average subscription of more than 10,000 employees canvassed so far is $98, with another 5,000 workers still to be canvassed.

Troops quartered at St. Luke Road Barracks in Windsor, Ont., set $7,500 as their goal and rolled up $9,000 in the first day. One soldier Pte. Aurel Lebert, bought $500 out of his savings.

The city of Cornwall, Ont., has reached its official objective of $600,000 but has set itself an honor objective of $750,000. Grimsby and Beamsville, Ont., have inaugurated a "victory window" in a main street store in each community. Citizens have been asked to bring in photographs of husbands, sons and daughters who have enlisted and are overseas. Already several hundred pictures are in the windows. The windows are "proving very effective since the stores are close to the Victory Loan offices," the headquarters statement said.

Station Clock Fails to Function After 30 Years

There is little use of citizens telephoning to the city police station seeking the correct time for the next few days at least. The clock that has supplied the time of day to the law enforcement agencies, as well as citizens seeking the correct time of day, failed to function yesterday despite all the efforts of willing police hands. It is now in the hands of a local watch repairer.

For over 30 years the clock at the police station has faithfully tolled off the time of day and for the past 22 years has been under the care of Acting Sergt. Wm. T. Evans, whose duty it has been to wind and keep in repair the venerable timepiece. It stopped suddenly Tuesday.

According to Deputy Chief Arthur Harman the police station clock decorated the walls of the old police station at the south west corner of the City Hall over 30 years ago. "It was there when I joined the police department in 1907 and has kept perfect time all of those years," remarked Deputy Chief Harman.

ONTARIO CABINET STREAMLINED TO TWELVE MEMBERS

Hon. Farquhar Oliver, Minister of Public Welfare, Resigns Office

CONANT PREMIER

Toronto, Oct. 28 — (CP) — Streamlined to 12 members from a normal 14, Premier Gordon D. Conant's new Ontario Liberal Cabinet prepared today to carry on the business of the province while awaiting the effect on the province's political situation of the recent cabinet changes.

Resignation of Hon. Farquhar Oliver yesterday as Minister of Public Welfare and of Public Works, followed quickly by Premier Conant's reorganization of his administration, gave Ontario its smallest ministry in many years.

Ministers for all departments are not expected to be appointed until the premier, designated by Mitchell F. Hepburn, now Provincial Treasurer, as his successor last Wednesday, has obtained the advice of either a caucus of Liberal Legislature members or a Provincial party convention.

Both Mr. Oliver and Harry C. Nixon, former Provincial Secretary who resigned last Thursday, disagreed with the procedure which was followed in Mr. Conant's accession to the premiership on Mr. Hepburn's resignation.

Extended One Year

The life of the present government was to have expired this fall but was extended for one year at the last legislature session and Mr. Oliver in his letter of resignation said he found himself "completely out of harmony with the apparent lack of concern as we drift across the line that brings the completion of the government's elected term of office."

He said he could have continued his cabinet post for only a restricted period "beyond the expiration of our mandate and then only under one who had been approved as leader by the people."

In his letter of resignation, Mr. Nixon said the premiership was "too sacred a trust and too vitally important to be so casually given and received. "maintaining the voters, the Liberal party, Liberal members of the legislature and members of the cabinet should have been consulted.

The first meeting of the new cabinet yesterday was fully attended, with the exception of Lt.-Col. Colin Campbell, Minister without portfolio, now overseas with the Canadian Army.

WALL ST.

New York, Oct. 28 — (AP) — Persistent heaviness of the steel shares blocked early recovery efforts in the stock market today.

The list had a good sprinkling of plus signs through the first hour, with some of the gains running to a point or so. Most of these had been eliminated by mid-day on an increase in offerings and near the fourth hour fractional losses predominated. Several pivotals had fairly steep declines.

Better support at the outset was based in part on brighter reports from the navy department on the progress of the action in the Solomons and encouraging news from other fighting areas.

U. S. Steel slipped off more than a point and equally wide dips were traced by Allied Chemical, Eastman Kodak, Chrysler, and U. S. Gypsum. Down fractions were Bethlehem Steel, General Motors, American Telephone, Dupont, Texas Co., Santa Fe, Southern Railway and Southern Pacific.

Canadian stocks were easy. Canadian Pacific. McIntyre Mines, Hiram Walker and Distillers Seagram lost fractions.

STEADY TACTICS GAIN GROUND FOR BRITISH ARMY

Crete Included In Air Attacks On Supply Bases

Rommel's Army Subjected to Ceaseless Aerial and Artillery Bombardment

LARGE TANKER SUNK

Cairo, Oct. 29 — (AP) — British headquarters announced today that the 8th Army had beaten off an Axis counter-attack in the Egyptian desert and reported continuing air attacks on enemy supply lines and bases, including Crete.

Further losses were reported inflicted on Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's forces in a series of minor tank engagements yesterday.

"Fighting continues," the bulletin added tersely, but gave no further details.

The Axis air force was said to have remained on the defensive throughout, yesterday as Allied planes smashed at enemy landing fields and forward positions.

Allied night fighters also carried out protective patrols over the front and shot down one Junkers 88, headquarters said.

Nine Enemy Fighters Downed

Nine enemy fighters in all were reported destroyed during the day in the Mediterranean theatre.

The attack on Crete, carried out by night, was said to have set fires at an enemy airdrome.

Small Retailers Win Battle For Survival

(By FOSTER BARCLAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 29 (CP) — A battle for survival by the little fellows — the haberdasher, hardware merchant and chemist—has been won in Britain.

For a long time things looked black for small retail traders. Big business, decreasing supplies and a growing trend toward concentration of industry threatened to force many to padlock the doors of their little shops. Now the shoe is on the other foot as result of a scheme to give the best possible shopping facilities wartime difficulties will permit.

Members of parliament cheered when Hugh Dalton, President of the Board of Trade, announced that a voluntary plan to be applied as a starter to the clothing, pottery and hollow-ware trade, had been devised to ensure that small retailers will receive their share of available non-food commodities he hinted it might later be extended to cover other household necessities.

Plight of Larger Stores

Following this development officials indicated some of the large general stores in the main cities and towns might have to close as their premises are needed for various purposes connected with military and supply administration. Their employees too are wanted for the armed forces and munition work.

Under the proposed plan available stocks will be dispersed among shops to reduce air-raid risk and to cut down labor and transport required for distributing goods and taking rural buyers on journeys to distant cities.

Establishments will get their share according to population needs and not merely as the operation of commercial competition allows. This heralds the end of competition as the number of customers using various shops would be stabilized for the rest of the war.

Western Turkey Shaken By Quakes, No Damage Reported

London, Oct. 29 (CP)—Istanbul, Smyrna, and other places in western Turkey were shaken by earthquakes early today, Reuters reported. It said no damage was reported.

NIXON COMMENTS ON STATEMENT

Says Mr. Hepburn Said Nothing About Friction When He Spoke of His Decision

St. George, Ont., Oct. 29—(CP)—Harry C. Nixon, former Ontario Provincial Secretary, said here today that a statement issued last night by Mitchell F. Hepburn explaining his resignation as Ontario premier last Wednesday "is quite different than it was a week ago when he resigned."

Mr. Nixon, who resigned as Provincial Secretary a week ago today, added: "At that time he (Premier Hepburn) discussed his resignation with me and he said his decision was based entirely on domestic reasons. He said nothing about any friction in the cabinet."

The former Provincial Secretary who represents Brant riding in the Ontario Legislature, said that he had "highly recommended" Farquhar Oliver, who resigned Tuesday as Minister of Public Works and Public Welfare, to Mr. Hepburn.

(In his statement at Toronto last night Mr. Hepburn said that some months ago Mr. Nixon had suggested Mr. Oliver as his successor as premier and added that "had I appointed Mr. Nixon's nominee, I am sure he would not have challenged the constitutional aspect of the matter nor sought to embarrass Mr. Oliver by the kind of vicious attack he made on Premier Conant."

Reference to Mr. Oliver

"Mr. Oliver has good judgment on the proprieties of these matters and I cannot imagine him taking it that way," said Mr. Nixon, stating that he "would have no hesitation in recommending Mr. Oliver to any convention as premier."

Asked if he would seek the nomination as Ontario Liberal leader if a Provincial convention were called, Mr. Nixon said:

"If a convention offers me the leadership I would be glad to accept. I have insisted that there is an absolute necessity for a convention to be held. In my opinion, a man who intends to give up the leadership that a convention had given him, should call that convention and resign to it."

(Mr. Oliver, at his home at Priceville in Grey County, declined comment.)

Rickey Named Pres. of Dodgers

New York, Oct. 29 (AP)—Branch Rickey today was named President and General Manager of Brooklyn Dodgers.

Rickey was signed to a five-year contract, effective Nov. 1. He succeeds Larry MacPhail, who resigned the position to take a commission in the army.

The Board of Directors declined to name the salary terms, but as Vice President and General Manager of the St. Louis Cards, Rickey's salary and commissions were believed to have run as high as $75,000 annually.

Weakness of Italian Raid Precautions Indicated by Milan Press Report

Berne, Switzerland, Oct. 29—(AP) — Last Saturday's daylight R.A.F. attack on Milan, northern Italy's industrial capital, demonstrated a failure of the Italian precautions.

Although the planes crossed France and at least 70 miles of Italian territory to deliver the blow, Milan was caught flat-footed.

This was disclosed in a current edition of the Milan newspaper, Il Corriere Della Sera which told of bombs falling on Saturday afternoon shoppers, persons gathered for the 20th anniversary week of the birth of Fascism and "numerous cyclists."

The fact that bicycle riders were still in the streets when the bombers appeared indicated a shortcoming either in the warning system or regulation of civilians.

School buildings in various sections of the city were used to house the homeless, estimated at 5,000. Milan, with a population of about 962,000, is the second largest city of Italy.

Il Corriere Della Serra said that fires started by the attackers numbered 700—400 more than acknowledged in yesterday's Italian reports—and 30 of the number, the newspaper said, could be considered "very serious."

Tricolor Palace was destroyed, it was said, and 11 persons were killed in its underground shelters. The newspaper also reported that three hospitals, six schools and four churches were hit, the Puccini theatre was badly damaged and the Umbria theatre destroyed.

A dozen other buildings, among them the Italo-German Association building, were destroyed or damaged, it was said.

Half the university, near the main railway station, was said to have been destroyed, suggesting that the station, a prime objective, also was hit.

ENTIRE ALASKAN HIGHWAY OPEN SAYS STIMSON

Thousands of Trucks Carrying Supplies Will Operate Over Road This Winter

CEREMONIES PLANNED

Washington, Oct. 29 —(AP)— The entire Alaskan highway now is open to traffic, War Secretary Henry Stimson announced today, weeks ahead of schedule.

Motor trucks started this week moving supplies and equipment to the garrisons in the North Pacific outposts, using the entire 1,671 miles of the roadway, the secretary told his press conference.

"Thousands of trucks will operate over the route all winter, carrying soldiers and supplies to Alaska," Stimson said. "Plans are under way to bring loads of strategic materials on their return."

The formal opening has been advanced tentatively to Nov. 15, instead of Dec. 1. Ceremonies are planned for a point on the Alaskan-Canadian border.

Sharks Constantly Menaced Group Forced on Raft

Toronto, Oct. 29. (CP)— Mrs. Ethel Roffe Bell, missionary for the Christian and Missionary Alliance in West Africa, told in an interview here today of her experiences aboard a life raft on which she and her two children drifted in the Atlantic for 19 days.

Arriving here today from New York Mrs. Bell said the ship was torpedoed en route to the West Indies. She and her two children, May, 14 and Robert, 11, scrambled onto a life raft after they were thrown into the water when the ship began to list.

With them on the raft were 14 seamen and two other children who lost their mother in the sinking.

"The sailors were wonderful", Mrs. Bell said. "With my children I sang hymns and conducted little services and the sailors often asked us to pray for them".

One of the horrors of the ordeal was the presence of sharks which constantly menaced the little group on the raft. When the company was picked up by a United States destroyer, 14 sharks followed the raft to the rescue ship and the crew machine-gunned them from the deck.

HELSINKI RAID REPORTED

Helsinki, (From Finnish Broadcasts), Oct. 29 (CP)—The Finnish High Command said today that three persons were killed and nine wounded last night by bombs dropped in an air raid on the capital.

It said "only a couple of planes succeeded in breaking through the anti-aircraft barrage and dropping a few high explosive bombs".

(The planes were not identified in the broadcast but other dispatches from Finland said they were Russian.)

Must Bend Every Effort To Attain Loan Quota Says Committee Chairman Spinney

Ottawa, Oct. 29 —(CP)— Wednesday subscriptions to Canada's Third Victory Loan totalled $43,674,400, raising the cumulative total for the drive's first nine days to $458,258,300, National Loan Headquarters announced today.

Minimum objective for the 18-day campaign is $750,000,000. During the first half of the campaign bond subscriptions were $83,258,300 ahead of the minimum average pace required if that objective is to be met.

Wants Oversubscription

But the aim of the National War Finance Committee is to obtain a sizeable oversubscription of the Loan and today G. W. Spinney, committee chairman, said: "To attain first the objective and then the large oversubscription that is hoped for, every effort must be doubled and redoubled."

"I should like to point out that it was after this date in the last loan that $113,000,000 of conversions came in to swell the total," Mr. Spinney said in his statement. "This time there are no conversions. We must get cash.

"The task is not easy and there is a long distance to go."

Payroll Subscriptions Good

Analyzing the returns so far in the current campaign, the Finance Committee chairman said payroll savings subscriptions are "encouragingly increased in number, when compared with the last loan's parallel figures," and corporate subscriptions have "quite substantially increased."

Then he turned to the "general canvass," which embraces persons not included in the payroll or corporate groups.

"Our current figures show that, in point of numbers, subscribers in this category are about one per cent fewer than in the last loan," Mr. Spinney said. "The dollar-total and the average subscription in the general canvass is slightly down also.

"The fact that Canadians in this category, who have borne large increases in taxes as well as sharing heavily in Victory Loans, are again subscribing in substantial numbers, indicates a willingness to shoulder patriotic loads that is almost phenomenal.

Calls for Better Showing

He called for an even better showing in this "general canvass" category.

"There are many in the general canvass who can subscribe if they will dip into their accumulated savings in the bank, buy bonds, and thus turn their money into what after all is another and more lucrative form of savings," he said.

"I appeal strongly for this kind of subscription. The war job of Canada is the job of the millions of citizens. I ask earnestly for renewed impetus behind our general canvass."

Wednesday's subscriptions of $43,674,400 were about $2,000,000 above the required daily average of some $41,700,000 to attain the bare loan objective.

Many Large Purchases

Two large insurance subscriptions featured the day's returns. New York Life Insurance Co., at its Canadian head offices in Montreal, invested $5,500,000; and Imperial Life Assurance Co., of Canada, head office in Toronto, subscribed $5,250,000.

Other substantial corporate subscriptions reported to headquarters, which were included earlier in the cumulative total, were: Canadian Industries Ltd, Montreal, $2,000,000; Northern Electric Co. Ltd., Montreal, $2,000,000; Royal Trust Co., Montreal, $1,000,000; Canada Steamship Lines Ltd., Montreal, $775,000.

From Ontario came the official reports of the following subscriptions: The T. Eaton Co. Ltd. and subsidiaries, Toronto, $4,500,000; Upper Lakes and St. Lawrence Transportation Co. Ltd., $1,000,000; The Toronto Star $650,000; Supertest Petroleum Ltd. London Ont., $500,000; Ontario-Minnesota Pulp and Paper Co., Ltd., Fort Frances and Kenora, $800,0.0.

Figures up to last night showed that 401,492 individual subscriptions had been received up to close of business Tuesday. Average daily intake during the first eight business days of the campaign was $51,822,987.

GEN. MACARTHUR'S ONLY AMBITION IS FOR VICTORY

U. S. Leader Disavows Any Political Ambitions Whatever

PACIFIC COMMAND

By JOHN H. WIGGINS
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Washington, Oct. 29 (AP)—Mounting protests against a divided command in the South Pacific appeared today for climactic action by what was regarded in some quarters as an appeal from Gen. Douglas MacArthur for unified direction over the entire area.

Answering a newspaper report attributing the two separate commands in the Pacific chiefly to "political Washington" and a "MacArthur-for-President campaign" the 61-year-old leader of United Nations forces in the southwest Pacific area disavowed any "political ambitions whatsoever."

From his headquarters last night (Washington time), Gen. MacArthur declared that any contrary suggestion "must be regarded as merely amiable gestures of goodwill dictated by friendship".

"I started as a soldier and I shall finish as one," he said. "The only hope and ambition I have in the world is for victory for our cause in the war."

This was interpreted by some sources here as at least an indirect appeal to eliminate any political considerations that might be hampering his direction of the war effort in that part of the world.

Congressional protests became more vocal this week after Vice-Admiral Robert H. Ghormley was replaced as commander of the southern Pacific area embracing the Solomon Islands by Vice-Admiral William H. Halsey.

There was no explanation for the change but it was recalled that United States naval operations in that area had cost three cruisers, the aircraft carrier Wasp, five destroyers and four other ships.

'PUT MY COUNTRY FIRST' HEPBURN GIVES AS REASON

Not Willing to Follow Blind Adhesion to Party Welfare

STATEMENT GIVEN

Toronto, Oct. 29—(CP) — Hon. Mitchell F. Hepburn last night in a prepared statement on his reasons for resigning last Wednesday as premier of Ontario said: "My lack of blind adhesion to party welfare as against national interests annoyed the purely partisan section of the Liberal party and as a consequence my position as leader became untenable."

"A serious division gradually developed within the government and the party, which became intensified even as the war came closer to our shores," he said.

"In short, the intensification of partisan pressure interfered with my administrative duties to a point where I was forced to choose between the party and the well-being of the nation," continued Mr. Hepburn. "I have put my country first."

The issues of "complete subservience to the Ottawa political machine" and "the calling of a snap election whenever the time appeared to be opportune" stood out above all others.

"The main cause must now be apparent to the public as a result of the resignations from the cabinet and the loud voices being heard from partisan politicians, who are already organizing for a convention, an election or both."

Mr. Hepburn said he would remain, at the request of Premier Gordon Conant, as provincial treasurer but made no reference to the length of time he would hold that office.

Long before the war "I endeavored to warn the people of the impending catastrophe" and since then "I have consistently urged that no halfway measures in the preparation for or the prosecution of the war," he said.

GERMANS SHIFT PRESSURE IN MID-CAUCASUS

Attack Red Defences Across the Nalchik Plateau With Strong Forces

COLD IN MOUNTAINS

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Oct. 29—(AP) — Soviet military dispatches said today the Germans were gaining ground with a large-scale offensive in a new sector of the central Caucasus, attacking the deep Red Army defences across the Nalchik plateau with troops, tanks, artillery and planes.

This shift in invasion pressure southwestward from the Mozdok area was noted as Stalingrad's garrison held on in the 66th day of siege against German attempts to capitalize on a 200-yard gain in fighting yesterday.

Blizzards have been raging in the Caucasus mountains and bitter cold has now set in. Russian dispatches said many German soldiers had been frozen to death in caves.

The Nazi command struck against Nalchik, on a round-about route toward the Georgian military highway terminal at Ordzonikidze, after being blocked in the Mozdok sector and thrown back in the area off Tuapse, far to the northwest.

Match Blamed For Igniting 'Gas' Leaking From Pipeline

Windsor, Ont., Oct. 29 — (CP) — Believed ignited by a dock fisherman who innocently struck a match to light his cigarette, a large quantity of gasoline which had leaked from the dock pipeline of the McColl-Frontenac Oil Company, Limited, in the rear of 2429 Sandwich Street West, burst into flames last night and endangered a dock area stretching for more than 100 feet.

Firemen, led by Assistant Fire Chief George Guenot, were aided by a U. S. coast guard vessel in their three-hour fight with the flames. The city firemen were unable to train lines of hose on the heavy timber supports beneath the dock, and here is where the hose lines from the coast guard vessel come into play. No estimate was made of the damage.

Battle of Pacific Surging Toward New Hebrides

Superior Number Of Enemy Ships, Planes And Men Mobilized In That Area

RAID RABAUL HARBOR

Washington, Oct. 29 — (AP) — American and Japanese forces squared off today for another round in the spreading fight for the Solomons after a series of land battles bled the enemy heavily of men and equipment.

While United States air and ground forces fought to hold the Guadalcanal airbase, the battle of the Southwest Pacific appeared to be surging outward, 400 miles northeast of the turbulent islands.

Superior numbers of enemy ships, planes and men were reported mobilizing at the approaches to American bases in the New Hebrides and Fiji Islands, whence they could strike at Allied communication lines to Australia.

The navy reported no new details of warship activities in the Pacific last night, but Allied bombers from Australia raided the enemy again, damaging two Japanese ships in the Rabaul harbor of New Britain and splashing the Japanese base at Buka in the Northern Solomons with explosives.

Warship Hit at Rabaul

One of the bomb hits at Rabaul, more than 800 miles northwest of Guadalcanal, caused an explosion on a warship, an Allied communique said today (Australian time), and another set an unidentified vessel afire. The assault on Buka's airdrome and buildings destroyed an enemy bomber on the ground and started fires visible 80 miles away.

Few Fires at Malta, Houses Mainly of Stone

London, Oct. 29 (CP)—Casualties at Malta are averaging about one person killed for every 13 tons of Axis bombs dropped on the Mediterranean island the Daily Mail said today in a Cairo dispatch.

It quoted a British officer recently arrived from Valetta as saying that despite intense bombing there were never any fires of any consequence on the island, because the houses are all built of stone and there is little to burn.

Salvage Drive in Southern Ontario To Give Counties Scrap Metal Outlet

Ottawa, Oct. 29—(CP)—A scrap-metal salvage campaign will be conducted in about 40 southern Ontario counties starting Nov. 1, with a view to gathering all available scrap iron and steel in the smaller communities and rural areas south of Muskoka and Nipissing, Salvage Director Charles LaFerle announced today.

The aim is to end the drive about Dec. 15.

"The plan will afford people in country districts an outlet for their scrap metal," said Mr. LaFerle's statement. "At the same time it will allow them to make a valuable contribution to the war effort and fulfil another obligation—the accumulation of funds for war services in their community."

Wartime Salvage Ltd., government-owned salvage agency, will pay $7 a net ton for all scrap at the collection point, the price fixed by the Department of Munitions for all forms of scrap iron and steel excluding tin cans and sheet tin of any kind, automobile bodies and fenders, and stovepipe. Wooden attachments should be removed, Mr. LaFerle said.

To encourage the loading of scrap in cars, an additional $1.50 will be paid, and a further $1.50 where cars are loaded with 25 tons or more.

"Thus the price per net ton will be $7 for scrap on ground at collection point, $8.50 loaded on cars of less than 25 tons and $10 loaded on cars containing more than 25 tons," said the salvage director. "Groups may pool their accumulations and load jointly, thereby taking advantage of higher prices.

"When the scrap has been collected by a group they may donate the metal to the voluntary salvage committee functioning in their community, sell the scrap to the government agency and turn all or part of the proceeds over to the local salvage committee, or divide the proceeds of such sale between members of the group."

Arrangements have been made with Wartime Salvage Ltd., in conjunction with Steel Controller F. B. Kilbourn, by which wardens of the counties included in the program are to act as representatives of wartime salvage to organize townships within their counties and stimulate collection of scrap metal.

Meeting will be held in each county and township involved, at which various reeves will explain the plan and advise as to disposition of scrap. Mr. LaFerle said this will remove the possibility of penalties which might be incurred under the steel controller's order making it an offence for any person to retain more than 500 pounds of scrap iron and steel.

Reeves will arrange for the formation of groups, each headed by a captain, charged with the responsibility of seeing that all scrap steel owned by the individual members is delivered to a central point.

GOV'T-OWNED CO. TO OPERATE MINE

Molybdenum Mine Near Renfrew Taken Over—Quebec Deposit Operated by Private Co.

Ottawa, Oct. 29 (CP)—Wartime Metals Corp., government owned company, has taken over the Zenite Molybdenite Mine near Renfrew, Ont., and will put it in operation shortly, Munitions Department spokesmen said today.

The property has not been worked since the First Great War but has gained new importance because of the increased need for molybdenite, used in hardening steel. New buildings are being erected and a custom mill will be operated, processing ores from other properties as well as from the immediate vicinity.

Announcement was made last week by the Canada-U.S. materials committee of a large scale molybdenite development in Abitibi county, northern Quebec, where one of the largest deposits in Canada is believed to be located. This development is being undertaken by a private company which has received an order from the Munitions Department for 2,000,000 pounds of molybdenum. A mill is being erected on the property.

POLICE COURT

"This lad stole gasoline to get to Montreal where he hoped to join the Merchant Marine, I believe", testified Provincial Constable Palmateer, of Bancroft, when 19-year-old Hugh Kerr, also of Bancroft, appeared before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in police court here on Thursday charged with the theft of 15 gallons of gasoline from his employer. Kerr was apprehended by Belleville police early Tuesday morning when found in possession of two milk cans filled with gasoline.

In court today the accused youth pleaded guilty to the theft of the gasoline, valued at $5.55 and also of misusing milk cans, namely utilizing them for the storage of gasoline, contrary to the Wartime Measures Act. Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., informed the court that restoration had been made of the gasoline and milk cans found in Kerr's possession. His Worship fined Kerr $10 and costs on the violation of the W.M.A. count while the conviction on the theft charge was discharged. Kerr assured the court he would continue to Montreal, where he hoped to join the Canadian Merchant Marine Service.

Archie Helm of Gunter, appeared on four charges in the form of breaking, entering and theft. Helm pleaded guilty on all counts and before judgment was arrived at Constable Palmateer, who preferred the charges, informed the court the accused man had a wife and seven children who are in destitute circumstances. "Helm wants to join the army and maybe that would solve the family situation", suggested Constable Palmateer. Sentence was postponed for one week during which time Crown Attorney Donnan will have Helm appear before a military board. Helm pleaded guilty to the theft of a gasoline ration book, belonging to Raymond Moore of a gold watch valued at $25.00 taken from the home of Mrs. C. J. Reid, of entering the home of Arthur Dionne and stealing foodstuffs, and breaking into the garage of Charles Drinkwater and taking ten gallons of gasoline. All of the offences were committed in Cashel Township, the court learned.

Several traffic cases brought pleas of guilty when Robert Hunter, Oshawa, and Carl Ray, Belleville, paid $17.50 including costs, upon being convicted of speeding under the War Measures Act. Charles Osborne, Napanee, and John C. Tilton, Lansdowne, paid the minimum fines for failing to bring their motor vehicles to a stop before entering a through highway. A charge of careless driving was dismissed by His Worship against Albert Hagley of this city.

Six children were made wards of the Children's Aid Society upon application of Inspector T. D. Ruston of the C.A.S.

Says Nazis Fortifying Coast of Greece, Black Sea Coasts

London, Oct. 29 — (CP) — Jules Blondel, former Vichy Minister to Bulgaria, said today the Germans are building extensive fortifications along the coast of Greece and the Black Sea coasts of Bulgaria and Rumania.

He said a Nazi naval mission had been sent to Sofia with orders to expedite the work.

Blondel, who was called home by the Vichy government but instead went to Cairo and then to London to join Gen. Charles De Gaulle, leader of the fighting French, said of the Bulgars:

"They are solidly pro-Russian and no longer believe in the possibility of an Axis victory . . .

"But Germany has a firm grip and the Bulgarian government can take no administrative step without reference to Berlin."

RAIDERS MET BY U.S. FIGHTERS

New Delhi, India, Oct. 29—(CP)—Japanese air forces continued their assaults on Allied air bases in northeastern India yesterday, but were met by United States fighters which shot down two of the enemy and damaged several others, it was announced today.

"Daw" Whalen Dies Suddenly

In the sudden death of George Douglas "Daw" Whalen, 221 Coleman Street, after a brief illness in the Belleville General Hospital early this Thursday morning, the city has lost one of its best known athletes and sportsmen. He was born in this city, grew up and was educated in its schools, did his bit overseas and came back to star in hockey for nearly a decade after the close of hostilities. His death will be sincerely regretted by a wide circle of friends in this city and by a large number of sportsmen in this Bay of Quinte district.

"Daw" Whalen was born in Belleville 46 years ago, being the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Whalen and has resided in this city all his life. He was educated in St. Michal's Academy and Belleville High School and secured employment as a moulder with the Belleville Hardware Company, now the Belleville-Sargent Hardware Company, a position he held for many years and by whom he was held in high esteem. When the war broke out in 1914, "Daw" enlisted in Depot Battery at Kingston and went overseas to serve with the 33rd Battery in France, being in France when the Armistice was signed. Coming back to Belleville, he started a hockey career with the Belleville Intermediates that was to lead him to stardom in this district. Previous to enlistment he played with the Belleville Juniors, which won signal honors in Ontario hockey. He was also proficient in baseball. He was an ardent angler and his spare hours were spent on the Bay of Quinte.

He was a member of St. Michael's Church and is survived by four brothers, William, Edmund "Ted", Harry and Arthur of this city and two sisters, Mrs. Harold Bone and Miss Evelyn Whalen, also of this city.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Fire Chief Lynch Issues Warning

Fire Chief William Lynch this morning issued a warning to Belleville residents to exercise care when burning leaves on their property in order that the fire may not get out of control and cause destruction of property.

On Wednesday afternoon during the height of a stiff wind, an Ann Street resident lighted a pile of leaves in his yard and on going away from the fire for some time was later surprised to find the flames eating away at his neighbor's wooden fence and lumber pile. Fifteen feet of fence was destroyed by the fire before it could be extinguished by members of the local fire department who were called to the scene, as well as 400 to 500 feet of lumber.

"In instances like this where the resident lights a fire and then allows it to get out of hand through negligence, he will be held responsible for the resultant damage," warned Chief Lynch. Considerable damage might have been caused by yesterday's blaze had not the fire been discovered when it was, it was reported by firemen.

Firemen received a second alarm on Wednesday when a motorcycle motor backfired at the corner of Front and Campbell Streets at eight o'clock last evening. The cycle was considerably scorched by the resultant blaze which was extinguished by firemen with the use of chemicals.

Hastings Must Get Over $1,000,000 to Reach Quota In Victory Loan Campaign

The County of Hastings moved up into the select circle of counties which have reached the fifty per cent mark of the quota allotted them in the Third Victory Loan Campaign.

According to official figures released today at General Campaign Headquarters, the grand total subscribed up to Wednesday night, the half-way mark of the three-week drive, amounts to $1,057,300. The quota for the county is $2,100,000.

The city of Belleville has passed the fifty per cent mark of its quota subscribing $354,450 of a quota of $675,000, officials stated.

While the county has responded fairly generously during the first half of the campaign, the hardest part of the Victory Loan road is yet to be travelled. Industry and business have come through in a fine style as has the man on the street, but there is a long row to hoe yet before the ultimate objective is finally reached.

Outlying sections of the county report satisfactory progress, with Trenton's subscription amounting to $496,730. Air stations are setting a fast pace and the boys in the air force blue have definitely proven that their service to their country is not confined to their job in the force.

The Belleville Public Utilities Commission today received permission from the Ontario Hydro Commission to invest $10,000 of its funds in the Loan and the order was received by Campaign headquarters this morning.

While canvassers have been doing a yeoman job throughout the county, officials today stated that the fact that the Loan here has reached the half-way mark should not mean the relaxing of efforts should occur. The last million will be the hardest and all efforts should be extended to not only reach the objective, but to oversubscribe it to a generous amount.

Rinso Review Features Many Fine Acts in Varied Program at B.C.I.

Before a packed auditorium at the Collegiate Institute Wednesday evening the Rinso Review which opened on Tuesday and continues until Friday received the unanimous acclaim of the delighted audience. The varied and highly entertaining program was planned to appeal to everyone, and young and old were enthusiastic with the performers and their acts.

Opening with a colored movie, "Canada's Answer," a picture of Canada's war effort as displayed at the Canadian National Exhibition, the revue changed to a lighter note with a fur cartoon, "Snowtime."

Miss Mary Martin, a very charming stage and radio personality known to many Canadians by her work and an equally talented young actress, acted as Mistress of Ceremonies and the review continued at a brisk entertainment pace. One of the featured acts of the evening was Ted Rust, brilliant ventriloquist, and his assistant "Pat," whom he manipulated in such a way that the audience began almost to believe in the individuality of Ted's dummy friend. Pat proved anything but polite and retiring and the audience was kept in an uproar with his biting wit. Pat could not only talk but he had other talents as well, he sang "Little Sir Echo" being, of course, his favorite, and he whistled. A two-voice duet concluded the offering and the entire performance placed Ted Rust at the top in ventriloquism.

Good Magician Act

Following intermission and the presentation of prizes to all, the review continued with the other feature act, Bob Cook, sleight-of-hand, artist. The audience, already dazzled by the deceptive Pat, was quite fascinated and bewildered with the artistry of Bob Cook's manipulations. Amazing tricks were performed with ease, articles disappeared to return in strange places and throughout the act the humor of the star added to the audience's fun.

A demonstration of the uses and methods of use of the Lever Brothers product was made most interesting by Miss Kay McVicar, whose charm and success on stage and radio are well known to Canadian audiences, assisted by Miss Martin. A completely equipped kitchen was arranged on the stage, and the young ladies made of wash day an almost enjoyable event, if homemakers could believe that wash day would be a pleasure.

Following today's and tomorrow's performances at the Collegiate the Rinso Review moves east to Napanee.

Paris Radio Says Hull to Go to Moscow

London, Oct. 29 —(CP)— The German-controlled Paris radio predicted today that Cordell Hull would be sent to Moscow soon as United States ambassador and that Sumner Welles would succeed him as secretary of state.

"This change," the broadcast asserted, "is a result of Wendell Willkie's recent statement that the United States is not adequately represented in Moscow.'

The Paris broadcast apparently was referring to Willkie's radio address from New York Monday night in which he remarked that no man of United States cabinet rank had been sent to Soviet Russia on a special mission to "talk to Mr. Stalin."

Guilbert, Cerennes, Que., and one to J. L. Chandler, Hudson Heights, Que.

Cost of Dieppe Raid More Than Matched By Saving to Result

Edmonton, Oct. 29 —(CP)— The cost of the Dieppe raid in men, materials and suffering, will be more than matched by the saving of life that will result from the information and experience gained, H. Napier Moore, Toronto, editor of McLeans Magazine and editorial director of the MacLean Publishing Company, told members attending the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce's annual meeting last night.

13-Year-Old Belleville Girl Graduates From Dancing School

Madeline June Walden, Specialized in Ballet and Tap Dancing — Now Qualified to Teach

WILL GO TO N. Y.

MADELINE JUNE WALDEN

To be the recipient of a highly prized certificate significant of proficiency in ballet and tap dancing from the Spiers-Miller School of Dancing at 13 years of age is the happy achievement of Miss Madeline June Walden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Walden, 339 Foster Avenue.

Gifted with a natural dancing talent, Madeline has been taking dancing lessons since she was five years old, according to her mother. For the past eight years she has been under the tutorship of Miss Mary Forster, local dancing teacher, the excellent groundwork received in Belleville equipping her well for the more intensive training taken from recognized masters of the dancing profession.

Included in the tutorship received by Madeline has been one year's training with the Russian dancing master, Boris Volkoff, Toronto, and the two years she completed with the Spiers-Miller School. The certificate received from the latter school signifies Madeline has passed all tests pertaining to ability, precision and style, and is qualified to teach the Spiers-Miller method of ballet and tap dancing to junior pupils.

Madeline will go to New York next year for further study to attain her second certificate qualifying her to teach senior grades. Madeline is still in public school, her progress in elementary educational training being slightly retarded by her intensive dancing studies. She attends Queen Victoria School. She has one sister, Miss Florence Walden of the local C. W. S. F. and one brother, Ronald, of the R. C. A. F.

THE WAR TODAY

(By DeWITT MacKENZIE)
(Associated Press War Analyst)

London, Oct. 29 (AP) — The fiercely-contested British offensive in the Egyptian desert has reached the point where one would expect it to develop into a battle of tanks.

Lt.-Gen. B. L. Montgomery's tactics against the Axis indicate this is the position which he is trying to bring about. The wedges he has driven into Field Marshal Rommel's strongly fortified line are calculated to manoeuvre the German into flinging his armored forces into the melee to prevent a complete break-through.

The development would bring Axis tanks up against destructive British artillery and anti-tank gun fire.

Actually that is what happened Tuesday but Rommel withdrew his armored units after they had suffered considerable losses.

Thus far the 8th. Army has been up against the necessity of cracking Rommel's line with frontal assaults by infantry, airplane and artillery. It would be courting disaster for the British tank corps to send them against such fortified positions at the outset.

Such frontal attack is one of the most difficult operations in war.

It also is likely to be one of the bloodiest and I believe we must be prepared to learn the present offensive has been no exception to the rule. The attacking forces indeed would be fortunate if casualties were moderate.

The Allied road to victory thru' the Axis fortified positions and minefields is a tough one. The fact that advance has been slow does not necessarily mean it has not been successful. Certainly, it has been moving forward steadily through traps which Rommel has laid among the ridges and dunes of this desolate region.

In trying to gauge the progress of such an advance it must be borne in mind the drive is laid out in stages and worked on a railway schedule.

There are many times when one part of the attacking force could surge forward, but must be held back because another has been stalled.

For one section to race ahead while a neighboring section remained behind would break the line and lay it open to flank attack by the enemy.

Montgomery's ultimate aim is to manoeuvre the enemy into such a position that he can make a flank attack. Both of Rommel's flanks are protected—the northern by the Mediterranean and the southern by the Qattara Depression.

Thus Montgomery is endeavouring to widen the wedges which he has driven in the enemy line, first to draw out Rommel's tanks where they can be blasted by artillery and then to send British tank units swirling through gaps in the Axis defences.

If and when he reaches the point where British armored units are able to execute a flank movement we shall get what is likely to be one of the biggest tank battles of the war.

It seems certain Hitler will try to send air reinforcements to his desert army. Undoubtedly supplies and troops also are being moved across the Mediterranean both by air transport and by boat.

British and Allied air forces and the royal navy are constantly destroying Axis transports, but it would be foolish to believe that the Axis isn't getting considerable reinforcement across.

POLICE BLOTTER

E. H. Potter, Trent Road, reported the theft of a bicycle carrier and two gallons of cider from his cellar sometime Tuesday.

John Lewis, 236 Dundas St. E., complained to police the fender of his parked motor car had been damaged when struck by another vehicle, the driver of which failed to stop and report the collision. The car was parked in front of Mr. Lewis' home.

Success has attended experiments in Eire in the manufacture of boards suitable for many commercial purposes from the residue of seaweed after the extraction of salts.

Trenton Air Station Reaches $80,750 Mark in Contributions To Canada's Third Victory Loan

Staff and Personnel Have Contributed 269 Per Cent of Quota of $30,000

HONOR FLAGS

Royal Canadian Air Force stations and schools in this district are setting a fine example in contributions to the Third Victory Loan campaign. All stations in the district have exceeded their quota and Campaign Headquarters today stated that figures already reported will be increased by the end of the campaign.

Doing a magnificent job is the Trenton Air Station the personnel of which under Air Commodore Frank S. McGill, have already bought bonds to the amount of $80,750, or 269 per cent of the original quota of $30,000.

The Victory Loan work being done efficiently by Flight Lieutenant Paul Jones, is in full stride and this amount will be exceeded by the end of the week. Honor flags and special pennants denoting five-thousand dollar increases in the Loan are now fluttering from the Trenton pennant staff.

Air Commodore McGill and his staff and personnel are also contributing to the Loan in other ways. The commanding officer has already spoke at several meetings and it was intimated today by Loan officials that a concert supporting the Loan will be staged in the city shortly by an all-star cast of Trenton R.C.A.F. personnel. It was also stated that the popular C. O. of the Trenton Station will make a brief address at the concert.

No. 5 Initial Training School also proudly floats several honor flags. To date this R.C.A.F. station has contributed nearly fifteen thousand dollars, one thousand per cent of its quota of $1,500.

In the meantime the city and county campaign is moving steadily towards the quota goal. Returns coming in from the far-flung sections of the county denote a fine response from people in all walks of life as well as business and industry.

One lady entered the Victory Loan Headquarters at 311 Front Street this morning and deposited 75c in coppers, 25c in small change and fortf-nine one dollar bills. "I want to buy a bond," was her simple statement.

Salesman Gerald Vance, deputy fire-chief here, stated that one of his sales of a $100 bond was made to a man who has eight children all of whom are going to school or are underschool age. He is working for a moderate salary.

DOUGHNUTS FROM DOUGHBOYS

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is offered some doughnuts by an American soldier as she visited the Washington Club, the American Red Cross' biggest service men's centre in London, England. The American doughboys greeted the wife of the President with typical American wit—"Hello, Eleanor," when she arrived.

'PUT MY COUNTRY

Because of the seriousness of the war situation by unanimous consent the life of the legislature was extended for one year at the last session.

"According to political precedent, governments which hold to office are usually defeated.

Resisted Pressure

"I realized that, but nevertheless I resisted the growing pressure for a snap election to a point where ardent party men challenged my position, pointing out that it was my first duty to get the party back in power regardless of the war. In this respect I was in an anomalous and yet vulnerable position. I was elected leader of a political party at a properly constituted convention. I accepted the responsibility.

"True, the Liberal party was the vehicle by which the government was elected to office, but on all great issues, and particularly in time of war, it is not the political party but the welfare of all the people which must be of paramount consideration. It is regrettable and a national disaster that this fact has been entirely overlooked by the Federal government. For the blind partisanship displayed there, historians will undoubtedly record that when the supreme test for our survival came on the second front our politics first— politics first—country second-policy cost us dearly in terms of human lives and crippled bodies."

Election Not in Best Interests

The statement added "The Hong Kong affair may be but a small incident."

An immediate election "in my judgment is not in the best interest of the province" and a recent Gallup poll of public opinion indicated 79 per cent of the people were against holding a general election in the province. An election would cost not less than $1,250,000 and be sufficient "to jeopardize the chance of a balanced budget."

"I followed the ordinary practice," said Mr. Hepburn, referring to the change in the Ontario Liberal party leadership. He said he had discussed the premiership with Harry C. Nixon, who resigned last Thursday as provincial secretary, some months ago and Mr. Nixon suggested Farquhar Oliver as Mr. Hepburn's successor. (Mr. Oliver resigned Tuesday as Minister of Public Works and Public Welfare.)

"Had I appointed Mr. Nixon's nominee, I am sure he would not have challenged the constitutional aspect of the matter nor sought to embarrass Mr. Oliver by the kind of vicious attack he made on Premier Conant."

Discussed Matter With Oliver

Mr. Hepburn said he had discussed the premiership with Mr. Oliver, but not in the way of a formal offer, and the former Cabinet minister gave a reason for not being able to consider the matter "not one mentioned in his letter of resignation".

In a review of his term of office he said every co-operation had been extended Ottawa by every department of the Provincial government.

"In urging a greater war effort from Ottawa, I have no apology to offer. Today after three years of war, we still have no proper placement policy for man and woman power in our vital key industries and many are operating at part-time production at a time when the life of our nation is hanging in the balance".

The Ontario Government today ing more electrical power for "our economic life and war effort" and assuring labor peace and maximum production. Bills covering both problems now are being drafted by Premier Conant in his capacity as Attorney-General who "should not be harassed by political partisans or be forced to devote a minute of his time in preparation for a party convention".

Caucus to Be Called

It was said at Queen's Park yesterday that liberal members of the Ontario legislature have been assured by Premier Conant a caucus will be called shortly and next Thursday was suggested as a likely date.

Full discussion on matters relating to leadership will be demanded, it was said, and the premier will be asked to declare his policy in regard to the Mackenzie King government's war effort. It was believed certain some members would bring instructions that plans be drafted for holding a convention.

Premier Conant yesterday denied a report he would make a speaking tour of the province.

"There's absolutely nothing in it," he said, adding he had no speaking engagement other than an address at Oshawa Friday night.

Cecil L. Snyder, Deputy Attorney-General, said yesterday he had been asked to become liberal candidate in the provincial riding of Elgin if Mr. Hepburn resigns the seat. There was a report Mr. Hepburn might resign to return to the House of Commons if Wilson H. Mills, M. P. for Elgin resigned his seat.

Mark 86th Anniversary Of Montreal-Toronto Rail Run This Week

Montreal, Oct. 29—The eighty-sixth anniversary of the inauguration of through passenger train service between Montreal and Toronto was celebrated this week. On October 27, 1856, a passenger train set out from Montreal to what was then looked upon as far-away Toronto. The departure time was 7.30 in the morning and fourteen hours later, at 9.30 p.m., the train arrived at Toronto. The opening of the through line was set down as a great advance in the construction program of the former Grand Trunk Railway, now part of the Canadian National System.

The schedule of the first run in 1856 has been cut in less than half, the "International Limited," a train several times the weight and capacity of the first train, hauled by Canadian National locomotives, now does the daily run between the two cities in six and one-half hours.

In those early days, few people travelled the whole distance. The consist of the first train in 1856 boasted no sleeping, parlor or dining cars. Today, an average of five thousand passengers are handled between Montreal and Toronto daily in Canadian National trains.

When railway service was established between the two Quebec and Ontario metropolitan cities in 1856, standard time was something in the future and the schedule was operated on "Montreal Time." This was faster by 8 1-2 minutes than Brockville time, 12 minutes better than Kingston, 14 1-2 ahead of Belleville and a full 23 minutes faster than that recorded by Toronto clocks.

FRONTENAC CO. JAIL PRISONERS MAKE TILE, PROFIT IS $902.46

Kingston, Ont., Oct. 29—(CP)—An operating profit of $902.46 in the manufacture of tile by prisoners at the county jail was revealed in the report of J. T. Hawkey, jailer, presented to members of the municipal council of the county of Frontenac yesterday.

The report covered the period from Nov. 24, 1941 to Oct. 26, 1942. Cost of materials during the period was $860.99 while tile manufactured was valued at $1,763.45.

Fewer Christmas Trees

Christmas 1942 will wear somewhat a slightly different dress in many homes because there will be fewer Christmas trees.

The reason is the scarcity of labor, the shortage of gasoline and rubber and the paramount need of utilizing the railway facilities to the fullest extent for war purposes. Restrictions as to delivery as well as lack of labor for cutting will put a huge dent in the Christmas tree trade and delivery by truck and by rail will be greatly curtailed. So declare the Prices Board, the Industries Control Board and the Transport Department of the Dominion.

But some trees are now being cut in some sections of the country. Under the regulations, providing the trees are felled before midnight, Saturday, Oct. 31st., they may be delivered before Nov. 15th., but after that date shipments will require a written permit from the Timber Controller or from a regional representative.

War is demanding too much of the attention of labor to spare men to go out and cut down spruce trees. Delivery of them by railways and trucks will be out of the question because railway flatcars and boxcars are too much needed for the transportation of war production and the expenditure of gasoline and rubber for haulage by truck stands in the way. If the business of Christmas tree trade held to the normal proportions of other years it would add to the strain of the overtaxed resources of motor equipment, and rubber and gasoline supplies. In respect to the ban on hauling by truck it is made clear that there will be no inequalities and that the order will affect all truck owners, even the owners of private trucks who would normally haul trees from their own property.

For whatever trees later for sale there must be found some other means of reaching their destination, the homes, after the job of felling them is done. An Ottawa story is that it may be that if a man has a car, gasoline, and ambition, he may have to take a trip out to the bush and bring in a tree to satisfy the children.

The parts of Canada that will be chiefly affected from a business angle are those that depend upon transportation for long distance.

Now children have long memories of past Christmas seasons when it comes to the decorations of the home. Still other children have had to accommodate themselves to the conditions in other seasons when metal toys were turned to wood and plastic toys. When there was no snow at Christmas they had to do without sleighs. The children may be trusted to piece out with their imagination any shortage of spruce or Christmas trees and use other means of decoration.

Christmas trees have long been associated with festivals, having been known even in the old Roman saturnalia. Since the early days of Queen Victoria's reign they have been one of the settings for the Yuletide and Christmas festival in Britain and in the New World they still hold sway.

How far the shortage will extend remains to be seen but that there will be a smaller number of trees is clear. In the State of Maine, which does a ten million dollar business annually, it is said that there will be one third less trees for distribution.

French Threat Works on Nazis

Even the Nazis have backed down before the French when French labor threatened a strike if the edict was carried out of sending 150,000 Frenchmen to work in the war factories of Germany. The Nazi threat of force did not work but the French threat did.

It is true that the Germans only extended the deadline for the quota of 150,000 to the last day of the year, but all that Laval will do, caught between the resolute French and the iniquitous Hitler whom he has so slavishly tried to please, will not force the French to yield.

So tough had the situation for Laval developed that it was thought he was due for removal because he did not have success in coercing the French for Hitler's sake and that possibly unoccupied Frence might therefore be occupied by the enemy.

A DAILY PRAYER

Oh, Lord. Help me to keep my big mouth shut until I KNOW what I am talking about, says a contributor. Well, that should beat a lot of folks to the punch.

—V—

YOU NEVER KNOW in these days of war and uncertainty just how far a carelessly spoken remark may take you. For instance, there was the wedding party driving along a street in an American town recently. On the back of the car which bore the bride and groom was a large sign, "The Result of Careless Talk."

THE TEST OF SUCCESS

Money most important to the triumphant conclusion of the Third Victory Loan is money from two million or more average Canadian citizens. Without a wide-spread purchase of bonds the big over-subscription for which this country is working is not likely to materialize. If two millions of Canadian citizens do not buy to the limit of their resources we shall find it difficult to equal the record set in the Second Victory Loan.

The response by large corporations has been good thus far in this campaign. If the pace is kept up, the expectation of half a billion dollars from this group of special names will be realized. Employees in industrial plants are showing an excellent spirit. But while money from these sources constitutes a necessary solid foundation for the objective set, upwards of two million individual subscriptions from the general canvass are needed to make the Loan a success. From this general canvass must come the difference between roughly $500,000,000 and the big over-subscription of $750,000,000—the minimum objective of this campaign.

The man who shrugs his shoulders and says, "They will never miss my little $100 or $200 purchase," is the big worry in the minds of those who have the Third Victory Loan closest to their hearts.

THE SAFE AND SNUG SNAIL

Most people overlook the snail
Because he's small and rather frail,
He's inoffensive, slow, and meek,
And goes two inches in a week;
But to give credit where it's due,
He did accomplish something new
When he invented, just for fun,
An overcoat and house in one,
So he can travel, shell and all,
Immune to things that might befall:
And he's the one we ought to thank
For inspiration for the tank!

Attention Conservatives And Property Owners

The Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ontario.

Dear Sir:—

There are two coming events advertised in your valuable paper that I would like to draw attention to.

The meeting of Conservatives scheduled for Friday night should be attended by all those interested in the welfare of their country. And particularly by those like myself who feel violently opposed to our present vacillating, highly partisan Government. Unless the Conservative Party can produce a constructive united front, unless they can really face the very important issues confronting all of us today and unless the "hurrah boys hocus-pocus" ceases, we are all washed up as a party.

In Toronto Nov. 10th., there is the annual convention—"conference" this year—of the Ontario Property Owners. Belleville Property Owners should put in an appearance because we are living in a country where the Property Owner is being liquidated. Your members of Parliament urge us to provide space for tenants, but absolutely deny us (in many instances) ANY return at all on our investment. Those who buy Victory Bonds at 3%, those who build houses have no rights at law—as has been demonstrated time and again. I think those M.P.'s should be in an asylum, but many people do not agree with me — yet. Anyway you can take my word for it that here in Canada we are still fighting prosperity and post-war reconstruction, tooth and nail, and you, the people, will be the ones to suffer.

Yours very truly,
Jamieson Bone.

MASON JARS

The old-fashioned mason jar became a near war casualty when the War Production Board issued an order recently prohibiting the use of zinc in making closures for glass containers.

This type of glass jar and top received its name from John L. Mason, of New York City.

Mason invented the prototype of the Mason jar in 1858 and obtained a patent on it during the same year.

The original Mason jar was a rather crude device. The main part of the jar had a flat, horizontal surface where it joined the neck and the top was made to seal directly on the jar itself.

After John Mason's patent expired several companies began to make home-canning jars of this type.

Ball Brothers improved on the original invention and manufactured a glass jar with a "sealing shoulder" separate from the rest of the jar.

This new improved type of home-canning jar was stronger in the neck than the original Mason jar.

The name "Mason" had become so closely identified in the public mind with jars of this general type that it was thought commercially advantageous to retain that word in the name. So Ball Brothers called theirs the "Ball Perfect Mason Jar."

In process of time "Mason jar" found its way into the common language and ultimately into English dictionaries as the generic name of glass canning jars with porcelain-lined metal screw tops and sealed with rubber "washers."

The Mason jar was the answer to the housewife's prayer and it has enjoyed an immense popularity for more than eighty years.

It played an important part in providing the pioneers with wholesome canned fruits and vegetables in their march from the East to the West across the American continent.

Fortunately the Mason jar, somewhat altered, will continue to perform its function in the American home.

The War Production Board, in issuing its order against the use of zinc in Mason jar tops, sounded this optimistic note:

"But housewives can convert to war standards in this case with relatively little difficulty, for excellent substitute for the zinc jar tops is available in the porcelain closure with a steel rim. Every one of the millions of housewives who does home canning will be directly aiding the war effort by doing without zinc jar tops, for the zinc that will be saved can be used to make over 35,000 tons of brass badly needed for ammunition and other war uses."

HIGH SCHOOL GIVES SPLENDID LOAN PROGRAM

Mayor Cory Makes Strong Plea for All-out Support of Loan

Trenton, Oct. 28 — Trenton High School students are to be highly congratulated on the splendid concert which they gave on Monday evening in connection with Canada's Third Victory Loan. The auditorium was crowded with parents and friends with Mr. W. G. Spencer, principal of the school, acting as chairman.

The program was opened with "O Canada" by the school orchestra, under the direction of Don Mawson, who also played several other selections during the evening. Three readings were given by Dolores Levi, Roma Austin and Dorothy Donnelly and these, all of a patriotic nature, were much enjoyed by the audience. A duet "Men of Yore," by the Misses Alice Wilkins and Catherine Miller, accompanied by Mrs. C. V. Wilkins, and a solo "This is Worth Fighting For," by Marion Bell, gave evidence of the splendid talent which is at Trenton High School.

A most interesting play was portrayed by several students each representing a different branch of the various war industries as well as the army, navy, air force and merchant marine.

The popular Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment film was then screened and once again those present were able to see Trenton lads with their regiment overseas, under the command of Brig.-Gen. H. D. Graham, who is himself a former pupil of Trenton High School.

Mayor Cory Speaks

On behalf of the Victory Loan Mayor Cory delivered a very strong plea for subscriptions and pointed out to his listeners the dire necessity of this loan if we are to give our fighting forces all the best possible equipment. He warned his audience of the atrocities in the different occupied countries and of the rapid stride which we must make for victory. "Nothing matters now but Victory," said His Worship, "and if we lose this war, money, homes, freedom and all that we hold dear, will be gone. We are only asked to loan our money, and that a good rate of interest. In Germany the people are not asked, it is taken from them."

"After making your own subscription," said the speaker, "talk to your friends, roll up your sleeves and don't lower them again until our objective of $300,000 is reached, to send Hitler a bomber with our compliments."

At the close of the Mayor's address a silver collection was taken on behalf of Trenton's Good Cheer Fund for the Boys Overseas, and the sum of $9.35 was collected.

Trenton police received a call from a resident on Flindall Street Tuesday afternoon that a boat with two men was seen to be in distress in the Bay of Quinte some distance out from the old stone building known as the Brewery. The Marine Division of the R.C.A.F. was immediately contacted and a rescue boat was put out, however, when it arrived at the boat thought to be in distress it was found that the objects which appeared to be two men were nothing but two bundles which had been left in the boat by duck hunters when they had anchored the boat in the bay.

Two Bowmanville girls were picked up by local police at 6 a.m. on Tuesday morning and after questioning were detained at police headquarters to await the arrival of their parents. The parents arrived during the afternoon accompanied by Chief Constable Sidney Venton of Bowmanville and the girls were released after being given a severe lecture.

Police Force Very Busy

A rush of police work has caused the local force to solicit outside aid during the past couple of days. Two policemen had to be on hand in Montreal to give evidence in a case against three men who were charged with stealing a car from Montreal and were attempting to enter a house on the York Road recently. Another policeman was attending High Court in Cobourg giving evidence in connection with an assault case which happened in the vicinity of Trenton.

Red Cross workers had a busy afternoon on Tuesday with much work being accomplished in the line of sewing, quilting and making of hospital supplies. A good deal of knitting is still to be done before the fulfilment of quotas and it is hoped that anyone having unfinished knitting will endeavor to get same in as quickly as possible.

During the afternoon a basket of delicious apples donated by Mrs. Gordon Flynn was raffled and was won by Mrs. Rea Black, Miss F. Nelson drawing the lucky number. $2.25 was realized from the raffle. Another very lovely donation was a painting done by Mr. Arnold Meyers, a former Trenton High School student, and this is to be raffled immediately and all the proceeds donated to Red Cross. Pupils of College Street School sent in $100 from Miss Walker's class and $3.00 from Miss Stauffeur's class.

Canadian Airmen Playing Big Part In Desert Battle

Cairo, Oct. 29 (CP) — Canadian airmen are playing a part in the R.A.F.'s stirring fight in aid of the 8th Army in the Western desert, it was disclosed Wednesday when the names of two Canadians who took part in Monday's slashing attack on supply ships off Tobruk were released.

One pilot in the operation was PO. R. V. Manning of Vancouver, who launched a torpedo against a tanker, blowing off its stern. The entire ship with its vital cargo blazed up.

The air gunner of another torpedo-carrying plane was Sgt. K. B. Taylor of Preeceville, Sask., who forced Italian fighters to break off an attack.

Pictures taken by reconnaissance aircraft showed that of the three supply ships under attack by the R.A.F. torpedo bombers and medium bombers of the South African Air Force, two were sunk and the other which remained afloat was a smouldering wreck.

Sighted in Morning

The three ships were sighted in the morning. Despite heavy fire from escorting destroyers and opposition from enemy fighters, the attacks were pressed home by wave after wave of Allied aircraft until nightfall.

The tanker which Manning's torpedo struck was also hit hard on bow and stern by bombs from South African medium bombers which were under strong fighter protection by the R.A.F.

The fighter craft attacked Axis destroyers. One destroyer had its deck guns completely silenced by aerial cannon and machine-gun fire.

When Taylor saw three Italian Macchi-202s coming at the aircraft he let them have it with his spare machine-gun, his own turret having gone out of action. Despite this he was able to make the Italians break off the fight.

30 Large Fires, 300 Smaller Ones In Milan Raid

Berne, Oct. 29 (AP) — A Swiss telegraphic agency dispatch said the R.A.F. raid upon Milan Saturday night damaged all quarters of the Italian industrial centre, started 30 large fires and 300 smaller ones and left 5,000 persons homeless.

The dispatch said Milan's fire companies made more than 700 runs during the bombing in response to calls for aid.

Reciprocal Agreement for Training Of Parachute Troops Announced

Ottawa, Oct. 29 — (CP)—Under a reciprocal agreement now nearing completion, Canadian parachute troops will continue to train in the United States during the winter while Canadian parachute training facilities at Camp Shilo, Man., will be used by the United States Army to give cold weather tests to certain articles of equipment.

The announcement was made by the defence department.

The nucleus of Canada's first parachute battalion was sent to the United States Army's parachute training school at Fort Benning, Ga., several months ago and has since returned to Canada to start organizing the battalion at Shilo, where a Canadian school is being created.

Difficulties in getting certain items of equipment delayed the complete installation of facilities at Shilo and arrangements were made for further contingents of parachute volunteers to receive their training at Fort Benning.

The agreement now nearing completion will continue these arrangements through the winter.

The statement from the Defence Department said:

"Canadian paratroop training facilities at Camp Shilo, Man., have been somewhat delayed because of unexpected difficulties in obtaining certain training equipment and therefore it is planned that the accommodation which has been constructed for the 1st Canadian parachute battalion will be made available to the United States during the winter months to carry out winter tests.

"These winter tests will be conducted in co-operation with the Canadian army and Department of Munitions. All information obtained by both armies will be made available to each other.

"On one hand, the United States army will train the equivalent number of Canadian paratroops in the United States would be trained at Camp Shilo in the winter months; while on the other hand, approximately the same number of American troops will move to Canada to join Canadian experts in testing American and Canadian equipment."

The Canadian army, it is understood, will have both instructors and trainees at Fort Benning during the winter. Some of the officers and non-commissioned officers who were in the first Canadian group to go there will serve as instructors and so will some Canadians from the army overseas who received parachute training at the British army's parachute training school.

Picton and District

Picton, Oct. 28—Victory Loan headquarters for Prince Edward County announced last night that subscriptions amount to 38 percent of the minimum objective of $675,000. As yet there has been only one large donation, one of $20,000, and while there are more applications they are for smaller amounts. A special appeal is being made to farmers who are responding well.

Hallowell township and Bloomfield have 35 percent of their objective; South Marysburgh has 36 percent; Hillier and Wellington 35 percent; Athol township, 35 percent; Sophiasburg, 28 percent; Picton, 27 percent; North Marysburgh township, 20 percent.

Winners is an essay contest will receive their awards at a rally in the theatre Sunday night when Dr. Bergin, R.A.F., will be the speaker and Victory Loan films will be shown.

Conservatives of Prince Edward-Lennox will meet in Picton on November 4th to elect officers and select delegates to the convention at Winnipeg.

William Hepburn, son of James deC. Hepburn, M.L.A. for Prince Edward-Lennox, has been promoted from the rank of Captain to that of Major, according to word received yesterday.

Picton Home and School Association held a largely attended afternoon tea this afternoon to raise funds to provide milk for underprivileged children.

Picton and district was visited by a severe snowstorm with a heavy fall of hail in the late afternoon.

Auction sales in Prince Edward County are attracting record crowds with excellent prices being realized. Auctioneers are hard put to fill all engagements.

BABY'S HOT LITTLE HEAD IS A DANGER SIGNAL

WHEN your Baby's head feels hot to your hand you must do something. And do it quickly. Read what Mrs. B—— of Enterprise does and what results she gets: "My baby's cheeks and hands were so hot I was frightened. I gave him a Baby's Own Tablet at noon and by after supper he was all better."

And Mrs. Francis Carroll, of Midland, has this to say: "My little girl was so feverish I was really alarmed. Then I thought of Baby's Own Tablets, so I gave her three every two hours and by night she was up and around."

Baby's Own Tablets are sweet-tasting, easy to take, absolutely safe. Analyst's certificate on every box. Quickly reduce simple fevers. Equally good for teething fevers, diarrhoea, upset stomach, colds and other minor ailments of baby. Get a box today. Sickness so often strikes in the night. 25 cents. Money back if you are not satisfied.

Miss Winnifred McCabe and Miss Estella Burkett entertained at a delightfully arranged miscellaneous shower last evening, at the former's home, 188 East Dundas Street, in honor of Miss Kathryn Gallagher, bride-to-be. Bridge and euchre were played during the evening, the prizes for bridge being won by Miss Mary Doran and Miss Anna Lafferty and for euchre, Mrs. P. Burkett and Miss Teresa Donoghue. Miss Agnes Gallagher won the bingo prize. The many lovely gifts were presented to the guest of honor in a gaily decorated basket. Refreshments were served at the close of the evening. The tea table was most attractive with its centrepiece of white and rose 'mums and was presided over by Mrs. P. Burkett and Mrs. C. Funnell.

Under the auspices of the St. Thomas' Church Guild, a very successful social event was held yesterday afternoon at the residence of Mr. S. R. Burrows, East Bridge St. The guests were received by Mrs. R. A. Pringle, Mrs. Hubert Jones and Miss Sheila Burrows. The tea table was centred with huge bouquet of red salvia and the rooms were very beautiful in candlelight, from the many silver canledabra. Mrs. E. A. Geen, Mrs. F. Potter, Mrs. S. Morton and Mrs. A. E MacColl poured tea and the members of the Guild assisted throughout the afternoon Mrs. H. Alford was in charge of the dining room and Mrs. C. Lyall looked after the sale of aprons and useful articles while Mrs. J. Howard was treasurer for the occasion. A novel draw, in which the prize was a completely prepared chicken dinner, with scalloped potatoes, pumpkin pie, rolls and all the appetizing accessories. Mrs. Hinton took charge of the sale of tickets and Mrs. A. Beauchamp Payne was the lucky winner. A very satisfactory sum was realized for the work of the Guild.

WEDDINGS

EMBURY—CONWAY

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Michael's Church on Tuesday morning by Rt. Rev. Monsignor Nicholson, V.G., when Margaret Elizabeth Conway and John Cassel Embury were united in marriage.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Daniel Culhane and wore a suit of gallant lady blue trimmed with silver fox. Her bouquet was white gardenias. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Mary Conway, wearing dusty rose wool with black accessories and wore yellow roses. Mr. Frank Culhane was groomsman and Mr. Leo Culhane and Mr. Jack Culhane were ushers.

A reception for the immediate relatives was held at the home of the bride's mother, who wore a suit of light blue with black accessories and corsage of pink roses. The table was decorated with snapdragons and 'mums and a large wedding cake centred the table. The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a gold locket; to the groomsman, a Ronson lighter; to the ushers, billfolds and to Mr. Culhane, uncle of the bride, a smoking set.

The bride and groom left for Toronto, and points west, the bride travelling in a sand dress and coat with brown accessories. The happy couple will reside in Toronto.

Celebrate 25th Anniversary Of Their Wedding

2nd Thurlow, (Special.)—Mr. and Mrs. A. Greatrix entertained about twenty-four friends and neighbors to a social time on the occasion of their 25th wedding anniversary on Saturday evening, October 24.

The bride and groom of 25 years were asked to be seated and an address was read from the 2nd Line friends and they were presented with a lovely silver bread tray. Both sincerely thanked all for the lovely gift.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Clazie and Mr. and Mrs. N. Brown, Front Road, each presented them with lovely silver dishes. The "groom's" gift to the "bride" was a lovely silver tea service and silver casserole. The "bride's" mother, Mrs. Snider, presented them with a beautiful hand-painted portrait of their two sons. The evening was spent in music, songs and social chat. Ice cream, cake and sandwiches were served.

THE EXPERTS SAY

By ISABEL ALLAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Ottawa, Oct. 29 (CP)—More wartime hints for the housewife stationed on the home front.

RAISINS—Raisins are back on the shelves again in most parts of the country...Marion Harlow, assistant director of Nutrition Services, has a suggestion for substituting them for sugar that should prove popular with junior. Use them on his cereal in the morning. It not only saves your sugar ration but steps up his iron intake.

IRONS — Some women have been wondering how to take the best care of their irons...Byrne Hope Sanders, Mrs. Consumer of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, has the following suggestions to make. Never let your iron fall. Remove the starch from the sole plate by wiping with a damp cloth. Make a habit of rubbing the bottom with beeswax or paraffin now and then and polishing with a soft cloth... Don't jerk the cord. See that all the screws are tight as they will be increasingly harder to replace as time goes on.

CHEESE DAINTIES — Have you got a pair of scissors handy? Clip this out for your recipe folder as a sugar saver...It comes from Laura Pepper, chief of the Consumer Section of the Department of Agriculture. Take 1 1-2 cups sifted cake flour, one-quarter of a pound of cream cheese, one-quarter of a cup of sugar and one tablespoon caraway seeds (optional). Sift flour and salt together. Cream shortening and cheese and blend in sugar. Gradually stir in flour. Shape in two-inch rolls, wrap in wax paper and chill thoroughly in refrigerator. Slice thinly. Sprinkle lightly with caraway seeds and bake at 400 degrees Fahrenheit for about six minutes.

LAUNDERING — Here are a few hints for the busy wife who wants to save her family's clothes and her linen by washing them herself. Bring your clothes in immediately they are dry. Experiment has shown that sunlight can be injurious to them...If you live in a manufacturing centre hang your clothes indoors during the cold season. The sulphur dioxide in the smoky air combines with the cold air to form sulphuric acid when absorbed by the wet clothes. This is harmful to the fabric when it is ironed.

GLOVES—Like everything else these days, you need to select your gloves carefully. You may have to wear them a long time. Remember these tips from those who know when you buy your next pair. Make sure they fit, small gloves are a poor buy. Your right hand is usually larger than your left...Never rely on being fitted to a former glove size. Glove sizes like shoes vary according to the company that makes them. The finger ends of cloth gloves won't wear out so quickly if you place a small piece of tissue paper in the very end to protect the fabric from your finger nails.

STOCKINGS — New Zealand girls suffered a stocking shortage before Canadians did and here is one method they use to conserve theirs...They rub a candle over the inside of the heel of a new pair of silk stockings. It won't interfere with the washing of your stockings and it will put off the day when a hole appears.

HEALTH CHATS

President, Chicago Board of Health.

Heart Attack Often Mistaken For Digestive Disturbance

Quite often, when a person has had a heart attack, he states that "it began with a heartburn", or, "I had a pain that seemed like some digestive disturbance". Heart attacks often begin with such symptoms. Angina pectoris and coronary thrombosis are two serious heart diseases which are often revealed by symptoms appearing as digestive disturbances.

Angina pectoris is a condition in which attacks of pain occur around the heart. This pain often passes upward to the shoulder and down the left arm. The attacks rarely last fifteen minutes and practically never more than thirty minutes.

In coronary thrombosis the attacks last much longer. In this condition there is actual blocking of the blood vessels which carry blood to the heart muscle. It is thought that in angina pectoris there is a spasm of these blood vessels. Thus the pain in both these conditions is due to cutting down of the blood supply to the heart muscle.

The attack of angina pectoris is usually brought on by muscular exercise, overeating or worry, and the pain can be relieved by giving a preparation such as nitroglycerine, which relaxes the spasm.

All too often the disagreeable sensation which occurs both in angina pectoris and coronary thrombosis is thought to be due to gas and indigestion. In many cases of these heart diseases the pain may not be severe, and there may be very little shock. In some cases there may be no actual pain but just a disagreeable feeling, such as heartburn, often associated with belching, the belching sometimes relieving the sensation. There may also be a feeling of tiredness in the .ver part of the chest and upper part of the abdomen, a burning sensation as if his clothes were too tight.

While, as a rule, the pain does pass upward into the shoulder and down the left arm, in other instances it does not do this. The pain may seem to be limited entirely to the abdomen or at times may be present only in the chest, shoulders, arms or wrists.

When a person past forty years of age particularly complains of a digestive disturbance, there is need for a careful study of his condition. It does not do to pass off the trouble as upset digestion due to eating some spoiled food or to overeating. Rather, the person should be taken, the blood pressure determined, and an electrical tracing of the heartbeat, known as an electrocardiogram made. These tests will help to determine whether the trouble is due to a digestive disturbance or to some serious condition affecting the heart.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Faces Lonely Life, Says Homely Girl; Asks Advice

Must a girl be beautiful to be loved? Certainly not. We all know better than that. And yet we must admit that without some trace of charm, some feminine lure, however slight, the chance of achieving a normal happy destiny is rather slim.

"I am just 18", writes "Unhappy", "and can truthfully say I am hopelessly ugly. No boy has ever looked at me for a minute. I suppose the girls whose lives are filled with dances, dates and telephone calls simply can't imagine what that means. Well, I know it's just plain torture.

"I'm so homely people hate to look at me; I know that to be true. And when they do look I can tell how sorry they are for me.

"I know I'm intelligent and my mother says I'm easy to live with. We are well off—have no money worries. But what shall I do with myself?

"I long for marriage and babies. I know that I have the gift of loving. I want to hold my own baby in my arms. Must I tear all this out of my heart? Tell me, Miss Fairfax".

Even if my correspondent is as plain-looking as she believes, it's not at all impossible that her real qualities should sooner or later bring her the love she longs for. Such things happen.

She may be debarred from playing the game of life as other young people play it, and marriage may be a delayed affair. My advice to her is to make a desperate resolve to think no more about it for the present.

She is capable, and she loves children. I suggest she prepares herself to be a teacher, or take up one of the many forms of social service. There's a need for her in the world, especially in these trying war times. She can do so much that a pretty but brainless girl could never do.

She's still young and there's plenty of time for her real destiny to overtake her. She has an advantage over other girls—there are no money worries in her family. This gives her a free hand to make her home a delightful social centre. And besides, among all her acquaintances, there might be a man who would come to admire her for the things she does and the way she does them.

Unhappy people can forget their loneliness in helping others. For instance, taking care of children of a mother who is holding down a war job and has no place to leave her children. Red Cross work is urgently needed right now.

The names of plain women who have made history are legion.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Invitation to Friend of Late Father

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My mother and I live together, my father having died three years ago. My father was a colonel, and one of his friends, a captain, is now stationed at a camp near our home. We would like very much to invite him to dine with us, and we want to have the invitation worded exactly right.

My mother is not very well, and it is not easy for her to write. Would it be inappropriate for me to write the invitation?

Roberta.

It would be quite proper for you to write the invitation— but in your mother's name. Like this:

Dear Captain Strong,

Mother wishes me to say that she would be very happy if you will dine with us on Tuesday evening, November seventeenth, at eight o'clock. We are both looking forward with special pleasure to seeing you again, and we hope this date will be a convenient one for you.

Sincerely yours,
Roberta Smith.

The captain will probably address his reply to your mother, since the invitation is worded in her name. Army officers are punctilious about these formalities.

Two Gifts?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

A dear friend of mine has a birthday the latter part of this month, and about a week afterward she is leaving for New York to be married. She is going to live in a furnished apartment for the duration.

Do you think that I should give her two gifts, a birthday gift and a wedding gift?

Charlotte.

You are the only one who can possibly answer this question. Naturally, it depends entirely on your own inclination. However, if it's a question of budget, you might give her a thoughtful, inexpensive gift for her birthday and then concentrate on the wedding present.

When the bride and groom are going to live in a furnished apartment, your wedding present may be either (1) some accessory that can be used in this apartment and later in their own home, or (2) some gift which we know they will find most welcome and useful later and which can be stored until they are ready to use it in their own home.

Tip on Hostess Courtesy

I like the hostess who warmheartedly greets a guest with, "I'm so glad to see you, Sallie". And who, to the departing guest, says, "I'm so glad you came". A gracious prologue and epilogue to hospitality!

Fashion Flashes

Never nicer is the verdict on the new coats. Nice for general wear is a coat of rough woollen in bluish gray with fabric collar and tapering, waist-length notched revers of nutria. Tucked detail through the bodice.

Very high hats are included in every millinery presentation. A favorite design is one of velvet with a fantasy of coq feathers at the side, sweeping to the shoulder.

There is nothing like a touch of white on deep black. A new black suit has revers of smooth white woollens banded with black Persian lamb. White satin blouse.

Young people will always dance. A delightful new dance frock has a very wide, full skirt of burgundy and white checked taffeta, and a burgundy velvet basque bodice with collar and round yoke edged with self ruffle and cuff ruffles all of the checked taffeta.

It is difficult to give up prints if one is attached to them. One designer does an after-five frock of pale blue crepe printed with an all-over design of black scrolls and arabesques, the design picked out with sequins.

Crown Brand Syrup in addition to its other uses, is being so generally used to supplement sugar, that the demand has increased tremendously — so that sometimes your grocer may not be able to supply you. But you'll understand why.

A great deal more "Crown Brand" is being produced this year but it cannot be expected to meet a demand resulting from a war shortage of millions of pounds of sugar.

The supply of Crown Brand Syrup, like other things, must be shared. Don't hoard — buy normally. With the help of your grocer, every effort is being made to keep you supplied with this delicious syrup.

Quiet Leader of R.C.A.F. "Demons" Won D. F. C. Before Dunkirk

Editors—Note—This is the latest in the series of biographical sketches on commanding officers of R. C. A. F. squadrons overseas.

When a young civil engineer left Canada in 1934, to follow his profession in England, he little thought that eight years later he would find himself commander of a Coastal Command Squadron of the Royal Canadian Air Force, holder of the Distinguished Flying Cross, and a veteran of action over Germany, the Low Countries, and France.

Such is the record of Wing Commander A. Coatsworth Brown, D.F.C., commanding officer of the famous Canadian "Demon" Squadron. A calm, quiet-spoken man, W/C. Brown is the fearless leader of a dare-devil squadron which has sunk a tremendous amount of enemy tonnage since beginning operations about a year ago.

A Wizard Pilot

It is extremely difficult to get this quiet ace pilot to talk about himself, although his boys go overboard in praise of their "wingco." Not a man in the squadron hesitates to inform all and sundry that their commander is "a wizard pilot," "absolutely fearless," and, even more significant, "a damn good man to work for—and with."

Wing Commander A. Coatsworth D. F. C., of Winnipeg, Commander of R. C. A. F. Coastal Command "Demon" Squadron.

R. C. A. F. Photo

Born in Winnipeg, son of the late E. C. Brown, of Richmond, Yorkshire, and the former Mary Coatsworth, of Barnard Castle, Durham, W.C. Brown studied at Kelvin Technical High School in his home town before attending the University of Manitoba, Graduating in 1934 with the degree of B.Sc., the young civil engineer sailed almost immediately for England where he expected to begin his life work.

But, within a few months young Brown put all thoughts of engineering behind him and accepted an acting pilot officer's commission in the Royal Air Force and began his flying career.

Completing his training, confirmed in his rank a year later, Brown served on several stations and then was posted to a course at the School of Army Co-operation in 1936. Upon completion of the course, he became a flight-commander at the school and was promoted to Flying Officer's rank.

Commands "Co-op" Squad

In late 1937, the young Canadian was named adjutant of a newly-formed army co-operation squadron and the following year became a flight commander with the rank of flight-lieutenant.

With the outbreak of war, Brown went to France with his Blenheim Bomber squadron and saw action throughout the entire evacuation period, leaving that country on May 19, 1940. His first jobs were daylight reconnaissance flights over Germany followed by action over the Low Countries when the Nazis treacherously invaded that area.

One daylight reconnaisance down the Albert Canal brought him the Distinguished Flying Cross — and almost disaster. Heavy anti-aircraft fire from Bofors guns shot up his aircraft and completely disabled one engine, but Brown brought his "kite" safely back to its base. He recalls that on that flight his rear gunner, who was wounded, was a fellow-Canadian, then ACL, now F/S Cavett, of Vancouver.

Was At Dunkirk

During the actual evacuation of Dunkirk, Brown, with the rest of his squadron, was lending aerial support to the ground and naval forces when he ran into a heavy barrage of "flak." Dodging and twisting to avoid the concentrated fire, he was obliged to make a forced landing on the Goodwin Sands, a large sand bank in the English Channel. Luckily for him and his crew, the action took place at low tide— the only time his improvised landing field was not submerged. However, none of the crew was hurt and they were later picked up by one of the evacuation boats returning from Dunkirk.

During the remainder of 1940, Brown took part in raids on refineries and oil installations in Belgium and Holland, and attacks on shipping at Brest, becoming a squadron-leader in August.

Early in 1941, the young veteran became controller of an R. A. F. Group with the rank of wing commander and after eight months was given command of a Canadian squadron then in process of formation. That squadron is now the famous Demon of Coastal Command.

The wingco has so imbued his squadron with the dash and elan displayed by him throughout his service in this war, that the Demons are known far and wide for their exploits. Seldom do they go out on a "strike" without some member coming back with a victory over an enemy vessel. The spirit of the squadron is further exemplified by the recent exploit of S.L. W. B. Cooper, a Demon flight commander, in sinking two ships in one attack, a feat unheard of previously in Coastal Command history.

In 1936, he married Miss Ena May Storey, a Scotch girl, and they had planned a trip to Canada when the outbreak of war intervened. They are still looking forward to the trip, for Mrs. Brown has never seen her husband's native land. W/C Brown and his wife have travelled on the continent and Mrs. Brown lived for some years in New Zealand.

Parents At Winnipeg

The wing commander's mother, Mrs. E. C. Brown, lives on Sherbuhn street, Winnipeg, with his sister, Betty, and another sister, Mrs. H. H. Moore, also lived in that city.

It is only after meeting this blonde, quiet C. O., that one realizes his strength and determination to do a good job—a determination shared by every member of the squadron. Officers and N.C.O.'s alike, each man tries to live up to the wingco's standard, which is a very good explanation of the tremendous success of the R. C. A. F. Demon Squadron.

Saint John, N.B., Oct. 29—(CP)—Most Rev. Derwyn T. Owen, Anglican Archbishop of Toronto and Primate of all Canada, arrived here Tuesday to attend centenary celebrations of St. Paul's Church. He will return to Toronto Friday.

AIRMAN DIES

Group Capt. W. D. Van Vliet, director of air organization at Royal Canadian Air Force headquarters, Ottawa, died in Victoria B.C., after a brief illness. A veteran flier, he commanded the first R.C.A.F. group sent overseas in this war, returning to Canada in 1940, when he became commanding officer of No. 4 Bombing and Gunnery School at Fingal, Ont. Widely known as a sportsman across Canada, Group Capt. Van Vliet was also one of the men who helped open up the northern country by means of the airplane.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was starting to take his 2nd cup of coffee this morning with an expression as if he was thinking of his 3rd, and ma said, William, you're a living practical example of somebody who got up on the wrong side of the bed. Dr. Emery Pratt wrote a very interesting article in one of his health talks recently. It seems that some mornings we wake up for no apparent reason in the mist of a dark depression and go through the whole day without shaking it off, while other mornings we open both eyes feeling as cheerful as a new penny and spend the rest of the day in a rose colored glow of causeless good nature, and according to Dr. Emery Pratt that's the way we all should wake up every morning in these war times when even our best efforts are none too good in the common cause, ma said.

So prates Pratt, pop said. The man who invents a recipee for waking up with a cherful grin will be the world's greatest benefactor and deserves a life size statue made of gleefully shaking jelly, he said, and ma said, Supposing I buy you a garanteed singing canary so its joyful morning song will start every day just right for you?

Supposing you dont, pop said. The shrieking insect would probably have a dream of sunrise and wake me up with its howling in the middle of the night, he said, and ma said, Now William, the bird would need its sleep just as much as you.

I tell you what, pop, I said, Supposing I set my alarm clock and come in and wake you up every morning singing, Happy morning to you, Happy morning to you, Happy morning dear pop-pop, Happy morning to you.

The contest is over and you both win, pop said. I'm going to wake myself up every morning with a hearty laugh at the thought of what a lucky man I am to have a family of pixies, goblins and elfin screwballs, he said.

And he shook our hands to congratulate us and left for his office.

Why SOME ITEMS are OCCASIONALLY MISSING from the LOBLAW SHELVES

TAPIOCA
• Because Tapioca and its allied products are often on the "missing" list these days. The main source of the world supply has been Java and the Malay Peninsula now under Japanese control. Rice, from which many tempting dishes can be created, and now largely produced in the Southern States, is suggested as a replacement.

SOVEREIGN BRAND SOCKEYE SALMON
• Because The entire 1942 season pack of Salmon has been purchased by the British Government for their civilian and Armed Force needs "over there." Loblaw shelves do not look the same without "Sovereign," but just as soon as conditions permit, "Sovereign" again will take its rightful place on Loblaw shelves.

CANNED CORN BEEF
• Because The entire output of Canned Corned Beef has been "COMMANDEERED" by the Department of Munitions and Supply for use by the Armed Forces, and other essential War Services such as the Red Cross, etc. The absence of Canned Corned Beef should not cause much inconvenience with the large assortment of Cooked Meats available at our Meat Counters.

LOBLAW'S "ARROW BRAND" BACON
• Because Canada has contracted to supply the British Isles with 600 MILLION pounds of bacon during the 1941-1942 season for Britain's Civilian and Armed Force needs (approximately in excess of 11 MILLION pounds per week). This is an increase of 120 MILLION pounds over the 1940-1941 season, which naturally cuts down considerably the bacon available for Canada's domestic consumption, and the mornings we sit down to Bacon and Eggs "without the bacon" we are reminded that even this small sacrifice is another step on the road to Victory.

60th Anniversary is Marked By Springbrook United Church

Stirling, Oct. 29 — Springbrook United Church was crowded to the doors for both morning and evening services on Sunday last as they marked their 60th anniversary. Special music was provided for both services by a large choir and the guest minister for the occasion was Rev. P. F. Gardiner, B.A., B.D., former pastor of the charge who is now located at Canton. He was the first resident minister to the Springbrook charge when it severed connections with Marmora and became associated with Ryleston and Stanwood churches to other appointments that complete the present circuit. His two brilliant messages coupled with his return to the district was welcomed by a large number of friends.

Historic Review

At both services a well prepared summary of the progress made in the history of the church during the past 60 years based on information garnered and compiled during the past few weeks by prominent members of the congregation was read to the large gathering by Mr. Geo. Williams. The choir directed and led by Mrs. J. McKeown, organist, offered three splendid anthems, a vocal duet in the evening by Mrs. Kenneth Thompson and Mrs. Geo. Williams was particularly fitting to the occasion and Arthur Duncan, who assisted the choir at both services sang a baritone solo in the evening. Church officials were grateful to members and friends for the response in the annual thank-offering which exceeded four hundred dollars. The Scripture lesson of both services were read from an old Bible presented to the church by a Mr. Thompson, one of the oldest and most faithful workers in the building of the church and descendants of the family are still active in the work.

Supper and Entertainment

On Monday evening the celebration was continued as a record breaking crowd of more than five hundred gathered in the Springbrook Orange Hall for the chicken dinner and entertainment that followed. Rev. Holden, minister of the congregation, acted as chairman for the evening and introduced the various numbers provided on a splendid program with local talent assisted by Mrs. Townsend and Mr. Art Duncan, Stirling. The last mentioned offering several groups of comic song impersonations and humorous readings. Mrs. Townsend displayed unusual versatility in her selections of vocal solos and dramatic readings.

A two-act comedy by the children of the Springbrook school provided many a good laugh and each of the young actors taking part did so very creditably. The cast of characters included Norma Mason, Evelyn Narton, Ruth Knox, Josie Jackson, Doris Mumby, Ralph Thompson, J. Solmes, Billie McKeown. The play, entitled, Madame's Beauty Salon, was a continued riot of laughter. Two splendid vocal solos were contributed by Mrs. Geo. Williams and Mrs. Townsend with Mrs. Lorne Johnston playing the accompaniment. The junior pupils of the school offered a fine chorus and Mrs. Ingram of Burnbrae offered a recitation. Greetings from Rawdon United Church circuit and Stirling United Church, Stirling, were extended to those present by Rev. Townsend and Rev. D. D. Gray respectively. The event will continue throughout the week with special re-dedication services and congregational rally on Thursday evening when Rev. Dr. Fletcher is to be guest of honour.

Dionne Quints Return Home

Toronto, Oct. 29 (CP) — The Dionne Quintuplets left Toronto today for their Callander, Ont., home.

The eight-year-old sisters arrived here last Saturday night to take part in a Victory Loan show at the Maple Leaf Gardens. The children donated their services free to the Third Victory Loan Committee and gave two performances daily for three days.

In between shows, the five sisters found time to visit the Zoo, play in Toronto's public parks and meet officers and men of the Royal Norwegian air force training centre here. Highlight of the stay in Toronto was the thrill of receiving their first permanent wave.

The little girls proved themselves good saleswomen during their visit when they sold a Victory Bond to Premier Gordon Conant.

But the quints were glad to go home. They could not understand why crowds stared at them and soon became bored with photographers and interviewers.

"I can't understand it," said Yvonne. "We're just five little girls from Callander."

The girls were accompanied by their mother and father, two sisters and a brother, their parish priest and two teachers. When they left, the quints were laden with "beautiful presents" purchased here for their brothers and sisters in Callander.

TRUCK DRIVER KILLED

Milton, Ont., Oct. 29 (CP) — William H. McEwan, 34, a Toronto truck driver, was instantly killed at a level crossing crash two miles east of Milton last night.

Police stated McEwan was driving a truck owned by the A. B. Ormsley Company, Toronto, in a northerly direction on the fourth line Trafalgar Township when he was hit by the "Royal York" Toronto-Detroit passenger train about 6.40 p.m. Parts of the truck were scattered along the right of way for half a mile. He was alone at the time.

Yarmouth, N. S., Oct. 29—(CP)—Leaping from their marriage just before a bolting horse threw it into the side of an approaching train at Milton crossing here yesterday, Mr. and Mrs. Adolphe Davies of nearby Deerfield escaped with severe bruises and abrasions. The carriage was completely demolished, but the horse escaped when it swerved aside.

Japs Must Risk Fleet to Take Guadalcanal

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

The crux of the clash in the Solomons lies in continuing naval action far at sea, but the "unsinkable plane carrier" on Guadalcanal is justifying the tactical and strategic conception that dictated its seizure from the enemy.

American planes from that Japanese-invested airfield are still striking heavy blows, not only in the close waters between Guadalcanal and Florida Islands, but half a thousand miles to the northeast in the open sea between the Solomons and the Gilberts. And it is there, eastward of Stewart Island and north of Santa Cruz, that the pattern of war in the Pacific may be undergoing a drastic change in what the navy calls a "naval air battle."

Substitute for Carrier.

Aside from the successful defence of Guadalcanal air base from first formidable Japanese land attacks, the most significant line in a navy recapitulation of the fighting in the Solomons area on Oct. 25, 26, and 27 was its statement that bombers and fighters "from Guadalcanal" had repeatedly ranged "400 miles northeast" of that island to strike telling blows. They chalked up one Japanese carrier and a heavy cruiser "badly damaged" and another carrier and a battleship hit.

Navy planes figure in the accounting, although marine corps fighters participated in closer action against enemy light craft, and a fight between an army Flying Fortress "on a search mission" and six enemy Zero fighters is also mentioned.

It seems certain that the Guadalcanal airfield is to some extent serving as a substitute for lost or damaged American plane carriers. Continued American possession of that pivotal air base appears to be a strong compensating factor for American losses incurred in taking it and holding it.

Only Curtain-Raiser.

There can be small doubt, however, that the commander of Japanese landing forces has been grimly instructed to disregard losses in the effort to retake it. The first attacks beaten off by Army and Marine Corps men can be only curtain-raisers for what must follow.

That air base it too important to the Japanese from every point of view not to warrant risks short of exposing the main fleet to disaster in narrow waters. If it cannot be retaken relatively soon and a Japanese fleet retirement should be forced, the fate of survivors of the enemy force on Guadalcanal must be sealed.

Few of them could hope for evacuation by sea. The alternative would be withdrawal into the mountainous jungles of the island, cut off from all supply. That realization must be goading the attackers to desperate efforts to crack the American defence lines.

Jubilation in the Japanese press over unconfirmed Tokyo versions of the sea-air action east of Stewart Island is reported. It implies the apprehension with which the test of strength in the Solomons has been awaited. Not even previous experience with Tokyo's exaggerated or fraudulent accounts of the Coral Sea and Midway battles induced caution. The consequence must be marked disappointment on Japan's home front if these claims prove equally spurious.

SENATOR MAKES CHARGE

Washington Oct. 29. (AP)—Senator George Aiken (Rep.-Vt.) charged today the United States Maritime Commission had "rashly dissipated and misused" public funds, and urged a Congressional investigation.

Declaring that some of the Commission's transactions "appear to go beyond the realm of dissipation", Aiken said:—

"They smell to high heaven of rank incompetence and collusion with private interests, for which the Maritime Commission and its Chairman (Rear Admiral Emory S. Land) should be held accountable"

Chemical Shortage Due To Diversion of Raw Materials to War Needs

Toronto Oct. 29 (CP) — Chlorine and phenol soon may be placed under the ollocation of the Chemical Controller due to wartime shortages C. C. White, president of the Canadian Pharmaceutical Association, today told a wartime conference of the Ontario Medical Association.

He said plans had been made to apportion all firms with "a definite percentage of their 1941 purchases."

Chemical shortages were due to the diversion of raw materials to war needs, he said.

"In the case of medicinal chemicals we are better off than we were in the last war. In the 24 years of peace that intervened, a great chemical industry has arisen on this side of the Atlantic."

Mr. White said cheap sources of narcotics had been Axis-controlled Bulgaria and neutral Turkey. In Britain there were two narcotic factories.

Outlook Not Good

He said the outlook on surgical instruments and supplies was not good and that it was the duty of citizens to conserve supplies wherever possible.

Dr. Harvey Agnew, secretary of the Hospital Service Department of the Canadian Medical Association, spoke of the personnel shortage in Canadian hospitals.

He said due to the shortage of nurses the Ontario Health Department will sponsor instruction of selected trainees and has asked three medical schools in Ontario to provide short courses for them. The Toronto course of three weeks would start January 4th.

The three Ontario schools involved are the University of Western Ontario, London; the University of Toronto, and Queen's University, Kingston.

Today Radimeyer was sitting up in bed and talking cheerfully between occasional spells of heavy breathing.

GERMANS SHIFT

Special ski and sled detachments were moved up by the Germans to engage the Russians in the fight for mountain slopes and passes deep in snow.

Forced to Withdraw

The noon communique summarized the action thus:

"In the area of Nalchik our troops fought defensive battles. In the area of a height enemy automatic riflemen succeeded in driving a wedge into our positions. They were dispersed, but when German reinforcements arrived our troops were forced to withdraw to new positions. Two enemy tanks and about one company of the enemy were destroyed."

Izvestia said the Red Army was employing a mobile defence against the armor-supported enemy infantry.

Two or three Nazi battalions were declared hurled against Nalchik, a town of 13,000 population known as a health resort, 50 miles southwest of Mosdok and 60 miles northwest of Ordzhonikidze.

(A Berlin broadcast recorded in London claimed the invaders had captured Nalchik.)

Repulsed After Gain

Germans who sought to follow up a slight gain in the battle of Stalingrad yesterday were declared repulsed, more than 100 falling fatally wounded by Russian fire.

Although the main Nazi line was recently reported driven from south Stalingrad to the steppes outside the city, the communique spoke of a trench raid "in the southern part of Stalingrad" in which Red Army troops destroyed seven blockhouses and several dugouts.

"Altogether," it said, "16 enemy planes were destroyed during the day."

Soviet shock troops were credited with the destruction of two German blockhouses and annihilation of two companies of infantry during an attack in the region of a height northwest of Stalingrad while "on another sector enemy attacks were checked."

66th Day of Stalingrad

This was the 66th day of the siege of Stalingrad.

Red army bulletins indicated that Russian counter-attacks in the western Caucasus were again limited. Defensive fighting northeast of the port of Tuapse was emphasized.

"Considerable forces of the enemy attacked in the area of a height," the noon communique said. "All the enemy attacks were repulsed and several hundred of the enemy were killed."

More than 2,000 men were declared sacrificed by the Nazi high command yesterday for a limited extension of hard-won-holdings within Stalingrad's northside factory area.

(After a 60 day breathing spell, Helsinki was raided twice by Russian bombers last night, a dispatch from the Finnish capital reported. The size of the attacking forces was not indicated, but about 60 planes participated in the last previous thrust against Helsinki, Aug. 29.)

Beat Off Repeated Attacks

Stalingrad strong points beat off repeated attacks by German infantry and tanks, supported by aircraft, but "in one sector the enemy succeeded in advancing some 200 yards," the midnight bulletin said.

Soviet artillery, mortars and aerial squadrons were declared to have annihilated 12 infantry companies, silenced 35 siege batteries, shot down 15 planes and destroyed 30 tanks and 90 trucks.

Nalchik is a highland health resort of 13,000 population before the north slopes of the Caucasus chain. It is 50 miles southwest of Mozdok, the centre of a strategic area in which German attacks and Russian counter-attacks had finally dwindled Monday to artillery duelling.

BATTLE OF PACIFIC

The navy gave no indication that a decision was near in the Solomons struggle. The assault which started Oct. 23 had tapered by Tuesday to what the navy communique termed "small-scale thrusts" at the American positions on Guadalcanal.

Land Fighting Described

These attacks were thrown back and the navy, describing the results of the land fighting, observed:

"Enemy losses in men and equipment in troop actions on the island since Oct. 23 have been very heavy as compared to our own."

While both sides appeared to be getting their second wind in the Solomons, naval observers kept a concerned eye on the waters north of the Santa Cruz islands where American planes torpedoed a Japanese plane carrier Monday night and bombed a cruiser.

The enemy naval concentrations in the entire area were regarded as heavy and United States navy quarters voiced expectation that another major sea battle might flare up at any hour.

By OLEN CLEMENTS

(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

An Advanced U.S. Base in the Pacific, Oct. 29 (Delayed)—(AP)—A fierce battle for control of Guadalcanal is raging today on land and sea and in the air as the Japanese move in heavy reinforcements on the 2,000-square-mile island.

Marines, reinforced by soldiers, are holding the original airfield captured from the Japanese and are keeping at bay the enemy in the hills and along the beaches.

The Japanese managed to get heavy artillery in the mountain ranges and are pouring a deadly fire on the field.

Sea forces, which include capital ships, are shelling the American positions from offshore.

Flying Fortresses attacked five enemy transports and a dozen more warships yesterday. An enemy battleship and at least one transport were hit. Communications on Guadalcanal said today three Japanese transports are beached and burning furiously.

Enemy warships still are shelling the island but American dive-bombers have silenced some mountain artillery.

Bomber pilots say their crews shot down six of 12 Jap Zero planes attacking them yesterday.

Navy Communique Issued

(A Washington Navy communique Oct. 17 said that "our land, sea and air forces of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps are engaged in meeting a serious enemy assault, the outcome of which is still undecided." Enemy surface vessels during the night of Oct. 15-16 bombarded positions on Guadalcanal for about an hour. Naval aircraft, the communique said, made a night torpedo attack on a group of enemy vessels to the eastward of the Solomons, hitting a cruiser. During the morning of Oct. 16 our aircraft from Guadalcanal attacked enemy troop positions. During the afternoon Navy and Marine Corps dive-bombers attacked two enemy transports and destroyers west of New Georgia Island, hitting two transports.)

Observers think the Japanese are making a supreme effort to regain Guadalcanal and control the Solomon Islands before the rainy season starts a few weeks hence. It is estimated they are trying to land 20,000 to 30,000 troops on the island to attack the American forces. The Marines and soldiers have been subjected to merciless shelling and bombings since Oct. 13 when a Jap battleship opened up with big guns. Casualties and damage in the three hours shelling were light.

Raided Three Times

Next day four-engined enemy bombers raided the island three times. At almost the same time, transports began to disgorge troops on the beaches 10 miles from the sector held by the Marines.

Last night and the night before Japanese warships kept an almost incessant shelling of the island and bomber pilots returning to this base said the Japs apparently had air superiority over Guadalcanal.

Three air-raid alarms have been sounded at this base in the last 12 hours but no enemy ships have been sighted. Wednesday night a Jap submarine shelled this base but none of the shells caused damage.

GEN. MACARTHUR'S

Recent Discussion

Recently, Representative James Wadsworth (Rep.-N.Y.) observed "there is an inevitable lack of teamwork when matters common both to the army and navy are handled separately,' and joined Representatives Melvin Maas (Rep.-Minn.) and Everett Dirksen (Rep.-Ill.) in suggesting creation of a congressional "high command" to co-ordinate military legislation.

Representative John Costello, (Dem. Calif.) has contended the Solomons battle "is crying out for redress" and deplored the arrangement under which Gen. MacArthur was given command over Australia, New Guinea and islands to the north of Australia, while Admiral Chester W. Nimitz is in general command of much of the rest of the Pacific.

Maas, ranking member of the House of Representatives naval committee who returned recently from a four-month tour of duty in the Pacific as a Flying Colonel of Marines, said "There is an imperative need for unity and co-operative action between all branches of the armed forces." He proposes consolidation of all fighting services into a single unit.

Stimson's Consent

Just a week ago, however, War Secretary Henry Stimson said closest co-operation existed between the Australian and American commands and added that Gen. MacArthur is giving valuable aid in combating the Japanese offensive in the Solomons.

The newspaper comment that drew Gen. MacArthur's statement was written by the Christian Science Monitor's Washington correspondent, Joseph S. Harsch, who remarked that "So great has been the dissatisfaction with progress in the Solomons that Washington opinion has veered somewhat away from its strong anti-MacArthur bias."

"Political Washington," he wrote, "was largely responsible for setting up two separate American commands in the far Pacific, and it did this partly because of jealousy of MacArthur's great public popularity and partly because the conservative opposition press launched a 'MacArthur-for-President' campaign without any encouragement from the General himself."

MacArthur's Statement

In his statement Gen. MacArthur denied reports published in the United States that the Australian war effort was not being pushed as it should be.

He said:—

"No nation in the world is making a more supreme war effort than Australia . . .

"It has unanimously and completely supported me in my military command and the harmony and co-operation between Australians and Americans in this area are inspirational."

B.C.I. Gridders Eliminated From Taking Cossa Honors As Albert Wins by 17-6 Count

Collegiate Fumbles and Aerial Attack by Albert the Stumbling Blocks

A SMART CONTEST

Belleville Collegiate student-gridders can return to their text books and resume studies, that is insofar as the championship of the Bay of Quinte Interscholastic C.O.S.S.A. football group is concerned. Yesterday saw any chances the "collegians" had of getting a play-off berth dashed on the rocks of despair as the Albert College kids downed the Church Street sextette 17 to 6 on the latter's campus. Coach Paul Goyette's Alberts remained in the championship race by trouncing the Collegians, who went down gamely and battling to the last ditch. The Alberts cinched second place in the group standing and are now trailing the group-leading St. Mikes by one game. Albert led 7 to 5 at the halfway mark.

Collegiate fumbles and Albert aerial attack led by Freddie Aboud proved stumbling blocks for Skipper Harold Mott's vanquished Collegians while the winners drove hard through the Collegiate line to break up their plays before they could get under motion.

Intercepts For Score

A B.C.I. fumbled snapback gave Albert the pigskin on the Collegiate 30 early in the game and on a second down Bruce Orr, kicking half for Albert, booted a 40-yard punt for a single point. Following an exchange of punts, in which Ralph Bateman gained slightly for B.C.I. Bateman intercepted an Albert forward and galloped 40 yards for the Collegians' only touchdown of the season. Bateman's attempt to convert resulted in the ball hitting the goal post putting B.C.I. 5 to 1 leaders. Orr booted another point and B.C.I. gained possession again. The advantage was short-lived as McCullough intercepted a B.C.I. forward, Aboud made yards and on a fake kick formation Aboud pitched to Bruce Benner, who went over standing up and the half ended 7 to 5 for Albert.

On the second play in the third stanza MacRae recovered a Collegiate fumble and romped 29 yards for an unconverted touchdown. As a matter of fact none of the four major scores were converted. In possession Bateman booted a beautiful 50-yard punt into the coffin corner for a B.C.I. point, but Albert came back headed by Jeff Waite's dash for yards, but Bishop speared a forward pass in mid-air to relieve the pressure. The Collegiate fumbled a third time and Albert took full advantage as the Aboud-Menner combination repeated its fake formation and Benner took the flat over-scrimmage pass standing up to make the final count 17 to 6.

Went Down Fighting

Coach Mott's Collegians battled courageously, but could not cope with the speed of Waite and Benner and the driving force of Freddie Aboud. Ralph Bateman as safety man and Bruce Bishop battled valiantly, with Bush, Clarke and York doing some tall tackling, but generally speaking the Collegians just could not stem the yellow-green and black tide poured in by Coach Paul Goyette's reserves. "Wait 'till basketball and hockey rolls around, we'll get our revenge then," prophesied the defeated, but not discouraged men-ofBMott after the defeat, that pushes them into the cold picture of oblivion for the 1942 football season.

The lineups:

Belleville Collegiate: Snap, Clarke; wings, Dawson and Haggerty; quarter, Bishop; halves, Bateman and Philp; subs, Bush, York, Potter and Dodson.

Albert College: Snap, MacRae; wings, B. Benner and McCullough; quarter, Waite; halves Aboud and Orr; subs: D. Benner, MacDonald, Bolton and McLeod.

Referee: Red Townsend. Linesman, Jack Doran.

CONN AND PASTOR TOP CONTENDERS FOR JOE'S CROWN

In December N. B. A. Will List Champions of Classes for Duration

CALLURA NAMED

Washington, Oct. 29 — (AP) — Cp. Billy Conn and Bob Pastor are the "logical contenders" for Sgt. Joe Louis, heavyweight championship crown, the National Boxing Association reported today in announcing that top-ranking fighters now in the armed services shortly will be placed in a special "honorary class."

Abe. J. Greene, N. B. A. president, said that in December the Association will announce plans for listing "duration champions and contenders."

These ratings, Greene said, will be based on a policy of "freezing" for the duration the titles of men in the service. He added that such a system would prevent "injustice" to champions now in uniform and would prevent appropriation of boxing crowns by self-declared champions or by dictum of any individual athletic organization.

The only Canadian in the N.B.A. list this year, Jackie Callura of Hamilton, Ont., was named an "outstanding boxer" in the featherweight class.

In again listing Conn as the No. 2 heavyweight, the N. B. A. made no reference to the scheduled Louis-Conn scrap of three weeks ago, which War Secretary Henry Stimson cancelled.

The N. B. A. ranked Pastor as the leading "out-of-the-service" heavyweight, ignoring both his recent defeat at the hands of Jimmy Bivins of Cleveland and Pastor's announcement three days ago that he was retiring from the ring and planned to enter some branch of the armed forces.

Bivins Listed as No. 2

The N. B. A. explained that Bivins' victory over Pastor was registered after the Oct. 19 deadline for contests to figure in the rankings. Bivins was listed as the No. 2 light heavyweight.

Melio Bettina was placed at the top of a group of five "outstanding boxers" in the heavyweight class, but the N. B. A. noted that his army service probably would prevent any ring activity on his part "which leaves competition principally in the hands of Lee Savold and Tami Mauriello," who are booked to meet tomorrow night.

Manuel Ortiz, whose victory over Lou Salica has been recognized by the N. B. A., was ranked the No. 1 bantamweight for the only change in title classification in the new ratings.

Henry Armstrong, the old "perpetual motion" specialist, came back to gain the fourth slot among the N. B. A.-ranked welterweights, coming behind Freddie Cochrane, Ray Robinson and Fritzie Zivic. Armstrong whipped Zivic in San Francisco Monday night in the most significant step of an amazing comeback campaign.

Top Ratings:—

Heavyweights: champion, Louis, army. Logical contenders, Conn, army; Pastor, New York. Outstanding boxers, Bettina, army; Savold, Des Moines, Ia.; Mauriello, New York; Roscoe Toles, Michigan; Pat Valentino, Coast Guard.

Light heavyweights: champion, Gus Lesnevich, coast guard. Logical contenders, Bivins and Ezzard Charles, Ohio.

Welterweights: champion, Cochrane, navy. Logical contenders, Robinson, New York; Zivic, Pennsylvania; Armstrong, California; Marty Servo, navy; Jackie Wilson, army.

Featherweights: champion, Pittsburgh Jackie Wilson, Pennsylvania. Logical contenders, Chalky Wright, California; Willie Pep, Connecticut; Charles Constantino, New York; Mike Raffa, army.

Toronto, Oct. 29 (CP)—Bill (Ottawa Journal) Westwick tells a humorous yarn about Len Pinke star goalkeeper of Ottawa's 1941-42 Allan Cup Champions ,the R.C.A.F. Flyers, who announced his retirement from hockey because of weak eyes. Let Westwick tell it: "It wasn't entirely a secret that his (Pinke's) eyes bothered him considerably last year. He wore glasses off the ice and on one occasion decided to try wearing them with a guard while in the nets. . . Before the game was over Pinke skated over and handed the glasses back to Manager Jim Campbell. 'Take these things away', he said. 'This is the first game I've seen in two years—and I don't like it'."

Good Pals?

A year ago Les Lear and Cliff Roseborough, regular inside wings, helped Winnipeg Blue Bombers beat Ottawa Rough Riders for the Canadian Football Championship. Last Tuesday night, before a crowd of 2,000, this partnership was divided. Protesting a decision of Referee Roseborough Coach Lear removed his Kelvin High School team from the field in the third quarter of a Winnipeg Schools League Rugby game with Daniel McInture and Roseborough forfeited the game to the Macs. The score was tied 6-6 when the blow-off came.

Arthur Morrison ,one of Canada's best-known sportsmen, has started his 31st year as official timekeeper at Winnipeg's amphitheatre rink. . . N. H. L. Training Notes

By The Canadian Press

Coach Dick Irvin, posing as quiz kid, fired a $5 question at his Montreal Canadiens: "How many players are there on a National Hockey League team?" Answers ranged around 15 and 16.

Sounding the gong, Dick snorted: "There are only six men on any team."

Art Ross, hockey's foremost man of ideas, has a new brainwave. The Boston manager would alter the rules to allow a defending team to make a legal pass from as far back as its own backboards to the opposing blue line. Art says this change would prevent any team from sending all its players in on a gang attack.

Coach Happy Day is still intrigued by the play of speedy Tommy Cooper, former Saskatoon Quaker now patrolling right ring with St. Catharines Saints. "Put him on a line with Gaye Stewart and we have the fastest pair of wings in hockey," said Day after watching Cooper sparkle as Maple Leafs bounced Saints 6-4 in an exhibition game last night. But Cooper so far has refused all professional offers.

Aubrey (Dit) Clapper, the colorful veteran from Hastings, Ont., now entering his 16th N. H. L. season, says rookies learn little from big-time coaches. "Before a player gets to the spot where he merits a try-out with a major league team he must have a lot on the ball—plenty of native hockey brains. He should come with 90 per cent of the finished product. Coaching, plus actual experience, puts on the other 10 per cent. Little things — such as not to do flat passing near the opposing defence — must be taught."

Draw your own moral from this one. Jim Hendy, editor of the hockey guide, says concession men at Madison Square Gardens in New York have received only one lead quarter in 16 years of National Hockey League play. "Hockey draws mostly the better people," he says. Wonder what they get at prize fights?

Des Smith, former Boston Bruin, fired a verbal broadside at the referee in an exhibition game at Montreal recently. Told the referee had just been given an N. H. L. appointment, Smith said: "Well, then I'm glad I'm in the army, not the N. H. L."

Lester Patrick declares Ott Heller of Rangers is the most underrated player in hockey. "He is not colorful," Patrick admits, "but over the entire season you won't find a more useful defence player."

Manager Jack Adams of Detroit Red Wings, as you have probably noted, picks Montreal Canadiens to win the league championship. In the course of an enthusiastic interview in which he singled out almost every Montreal player, Adams disclosed that he was prepared to trade four players for Terry Reardon—if Reardon had been on the market.

Reports are the Bill Shill, 19-year-old member of Boston's so-called junior Kraut line, has entered the army and will play his hockey with a service team in the snior O. H. A. this season.

Coach Dick Irvin is accenting French-Canadian defencemen for added crowd appeal at the Montreal forum. His latest find is Leo Lamoureux, who has been playing alongside Jack Portland. Lamoureux is reviving memories of other French-Canadian rearguards—chiefy Battleship Leduc.

Maurice Richard and Canadiens have come to terms. It is expected the sensational young rookie will sign his contract today.

CORNWALL TEAM BEATS CANADIENS

Gordie Drillon Scores Three But Not Enough to Win

Cornwall, Ont., Oct. 29—(CP)—Cornwall's army entry in the Quebec Senior Hockey League handed Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League their first exhibition game defeat of the season last night when they walked off with a 5-4 decision.

A penalty shot late in the third frame resulted in the goal that gave Cornwall their margin, after Canadiens had come from behind to tie the count. Jim Conacher beat Bibeault cleanly with the winner after he had been pulled down by Jack Portland when he was in the clear in front of the goal.

Leading light of the evening was Canadiens' Gordie Drillon who rattled home three of his team's four goals. The other went to Tony Demers. Steve Latoski with two goals, was Cornwall's high man, while other Cornwall marksmen in addition to Conacher were Larry Thibeault and Jimmy Drummond.

Cornwall took a 1-0 edge in the first frame on Latoski's late goal, outscored the N. H. L. 'ers 3-1 in the middle session, and then weakened to let Canadiens tie the count in the third.

Lineups

Canadiens-goal, Bibeault; defence, Portland, Lamoureux; centre, Reardon; wings, Blake, Benoit; alternates, Coupille, Bouchard, Lach, Demers, Richard, O'Connor, Drillon, Getliffe, Sands.

Cornwall-goal, Dion; defence, Church, Drummond; centre, Imlach; wings Riley, Woodward; alternates, Knott, Latoski, Mario Fascano, Brown, Conacher, Thibeault, Bastien.

Referees-Contant and Denneny.

Guest Star

William Mcg. Keefe, New Orleans Times-Picayune: "Chancellor O. C. Carmichael of Vanderbilt said that the students attending the university 'without a serious purpose' should enlist in the armed forces 'before sundown.' He probably was referring to those students who make up the football squad, because we notice his suggestion came right on the heels of that 33-0 pasting Mississippi State dished out."

N.Y. RANGERS HIT HARD BY WARTIME REGULATIONS

Patrick Has Only Eight of ast Season's Regulars Left

ROOKIE GOALIE

(By MARSHALL BATEMAN)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, Oct. 29. (CP)— New York Rangers headed for Toronto today with enough players to make two teams but when they meet the World Champion Maple Leafs in the National Hockey League opener Saturday they probably will have only eleven signed regulars.

Wartime manpower problems have cut into every League Club but struck Lester Patrick's blueshirts hard. There are only eight of last season's regulars left. Three others signed from Simon Pure ranks and Patrick is hopeful another four or five will be on the roster by November 5.

Gambling this year with many "untried" players, Patrick's charges may surprise and move to the top of the league but at this stage the manager is expecting no better than fifth place.

Biggest question marks are personnel of a third line and whether the amateur goalkeeper, Steve Buzinski, 25, of Swift Current, Sask., will survive blasts of National League sharp-shooters.

Has Tough Job

Buzinski, second amateur to move into Ranger nets in two years, replaces Sugar Jim Henry. But Henry had all experienced men in front of him.

The big blue line of Lynn Patrick, Phil Watson and Bryan Hextall remains intact, these three accounted for 40 per cent of Ranger goal scoring last season.

The line is Patrick's chief bright spot in a Ranger picture clouded by absence of defencemen Art Coulter and Bill Juzda and forwards Mac and Neil Colville, Alex Shibicky, Norm Tustin, Alan Kuntz and Normie Burns. These, with Henry, have joined active forces.

Converted From Forward

Defence pairs for the coming campaign are Ott Heller, the team's veteran, and Alf Pike, Babe Pratt and Gordon Davidson. Pike was converted from a forward and Davidson came up from Rangers amateur farm team, New York Rovers of the Eastern United States Amateur League.

A second line is built around Clint Smith at centre, with Bob Kirkpatrick at left wing and Grant Warwick at right. Kirkpatrick was the scoring ace of Rovers last season. Warwick won the Calder Cup as the N.H.L.'s outstanding rookie.

Permission for these three to play in the United States is pending, he added. Gooden, who suffers impaired hearing, is not likely to be accepted for military services. Bend and Bell are "border-line" cases.

Adams to Carry Fourteen Players

Detroit, Oct. 29 (AP)—Manager Jack Adams has named a Detroit Red Wing squad of 14 to start the National Hockey League season here Sunday against Boston Bruins, but he still has the job of signing half the number of contracts. He has ordered the unsigned seven to come to terms today.

There are three newcomers on the Detroit squad as named by Adams yesterday. Left wing Harry Watson was purchased from the disbanded Brooklin Americans for $10,000, and Defenceman Bill Quackenbush is an amateur up from Brantford, Ont. Centre Connie Brown saw some service with the Wings last year but spent more of the season at a farm club.

Unsigned are Orlando, Howe, Grosso, Wares, Abel, Watson and Liscombe.

13 Live 'Ghosts' Return to Ice For Charity Game

Toronto, Oct 29—(CP) — Thirteen hockey "ghosts" return to the ice tonight in a war charity exhibition game that may draw 15,000 fans to Maple Leaf Gardens — and tears to the eyes of Coach Clarence (Happy) Day.

The contest matches 13 members of Canada's armed forces and 14 players from the 1942-43 edition of Toronto Maple Leafs in the annual Blues vs. Whites game, traditional pre-season fixture sponsored by a Toronto service club, (Kiwanis). This year it has the added backing of Victory Loan officials and all proceeds will be donated to war charities.

All 13 servicemen—six from the army, six from the air force and one from the navy — are former members of the Leaf hockey family. Most of them were on hand when the Leafs ousted Detroit Red Wings in the Stanley Cup finals last spring.

Nick Metz, an engineer at Port Alberni, B.C., arrived yesterday to captain the Whites—nine servicemen and five from this year's team. Captain Sylvanus Apps will lead eight team-mates and four players from the armed forces into action for the Blues.

The armed forces representatives are Baz Bastien, Bingo Kampman, Nick and Don Metz, Nick Knott and Vic Gregg, army; Wally Stanowski, Frankie Eddolls, Pete Langelle, Johnny McCreedy, Buddy Hellyer and Ernie Dickens, air force; and Bob Goldham, navy.

STARRY R.C.A.F. FLIERS BEAT 6-4 BY BOSTON BRUINS

Dutch Hillier Leads Winners by Scoring Three Goals

BOSTON HOLDS EDGE

Montreal, Oct. 29—,CP)—Boston Bruins, settling into their National Hockey League stride, whipped R.C.A.F. Flyers of the Quebec Senior League 6-4 in an exhibition game here last night.

The Bruins were full value for their win, holding a slight but definite edge throughout over the starry Air Force team.

Dutch Hiller found his shooting eye to lead the Boston attack with three goals, and Herbie Cain drew assists on all three. Buzz Boll bagged two Bruin counters and Flash Hollett got the other, the first goal of the game.

Norman Burns, former New York Rangers, was the R.C.A.F. star with three goals, while Herb Gruhn bagged the other.

Hollett didn't wait long to get the first marker, teaming up with Schmidt and Gallinger at the 3:56 mark. Gruhn tied it up two minutes later, but Boston went ahead to stay on two goals by Hiller before the period ended.

Burns bagged the only goal of the second period to put R.C.A.F. only one goal down, but Boll came right back with a counter to start the third, and Bruins sandwiched two goals between the final two R.C.A.F. counters to maintain their margin.

Line-ups:

Boston—Goal, Brimsek; defence, Clapper, Hollett; centre, A. Jackson; wings, Cain, Hiller; alternates Boll, H. Jackson, Shewchuk, Crawford, Cowley, Gallinger, Shill, Schmidt.

R.C.A.F.—Goal Bourque; defence, Eddolls, Brennan; centre, Burns; wings, Haggarty, Adams; alternates, Croghan, Emberg, Desbiens, Morin, Planche, Gruhn, Gracey, Mullins.

Referees — Archie Wilcox and Ken Mullins.

BRANCH RICKEY NOW IN NEW YORK

Likely Will Sign as President of Brooklyn Dodgers

New York, Oct. 29 (AP)—Branch Rickey is back in town today for the second time within a week and may sign as the new president of Brooklyn Dodgers before he darts away again. The latest visit of the vice president of St. Louis Cardinals was surrounded in as much secrecy as was the case last week.

However, there is reason to believe he is here to conclude negotiations which have been going on since the World Series, when the Board of Directors of the Dodgers set out to find a successor to Larry MacPhail, who resigned to accept a lieutenant-colonelcy in the army.

BUFFALO BISONS DEFEAT EAGLES BY 6 TO 1 SCORE

In Fistic Affair on Ice Team Got No Better Than Draw

WASHINGTON WINS

(By The Associated Press)

Buffalo Bisons are starting their American League hockey campaign as if it were a stampede.

After treating home fans to a 5-3 victory over Indianapolis Tuesday night, the Bisons moved to New Haven last night and overwhelmed the Eagles 6-1 in a contest that was more of a brawl than a hockey match.

The Eagles, crushed 5-1 at Hershey the previous night, arrived home only an hour before the scheduled start of the game. They managed to punch over the first score of the contest—a goal by Joe Shack midway in the first period.

But from that point on the Bisons swept everything before them in a hockey way, although they got no better than a draw in the frequent fist fighting.

One melee in the third period was so long and furious that police finally went onto the ice to break it up and major penalties were handed to Bob Dill and Fred Hunt of the Bisons and "Winkie" Smith and Max Labovitch of the Eagles.

Fans at Pittsburgh saw a third period that was just as wild, but all hockey, as the Hornets came surging from behind to beat Washington 5-3 and make up in some measure for a loss the previous night to Cleveland.

Washington scored twice in the first period before the Hornets got going and then each team tallied a goal in the second period. But the final chapter belonged entirely to the Hornets, who rammed home three goals to win. Two of Pittsburgh's markers, by Normie Mann and Chuck Corrigan, came in the final two minutes of play.

Tonight Buffalo, led by Eddie Shore and reinforced with members of last year's Springfield club, will undertake to run its string to three straight while helping the Providence Reds open their season.

The other clubs will be idle till Saturday.

CASUAL COMMENT

by K.J.C.

The news of the sudden death of Douglas G. "Daw" Whalen early today came as a profound shock not only to this department, but more especially to the hockey fraternity of this area. A native of Belleville, "Daw" Whalen first came into hockey prominence in 1916, when he played rover for the late Richard Arnott's Belleville juniors, who beat such great hockey teams as St. Andrew's College and the old Frontenacs before being eliminated by Aura Lee, 1916 champions. Perhaps the greatest hockey effort ever accomplished by "Daw" was in Kingston one cold February night in 1920. Belleville and Kingston were engaged in a mighty ice conflict in the Intermediate playdowns and going into the final period Kingston led 4 to 1. "Daw" was checking Bill Cook that night, the same Bill Cook who rose to heights with the New York Rangers. Whalen took care of Cook in such fine manner that the Kingston winger failed to register even an assist that night, while Whalen went out and scored three goals single-handed in the last five minutes to tie the score at 4-4. 'Daw' Whalen rose to dizzy hockey heights in the roarin' 20's and was without question one of the best left wing players of his day. One could reminisce for hours on end regarding the feats of Douglas Whalen along the ice lanes of Ontario and when he teamed with Gunner Arnott to make the most prolific scoring combination of its era. His untimely death brings back memories of great hockey series with Toronto Varsity, Niagara Falls, Collingwood, Cornwall and especially Kingston. Only a few short months ago in an article in Liberty magazine, Bill Cook admitted the most thrilling hockey series he ever engaged in was when he played for the Frontenacs against Belleville in 1920. That series saw the late "Daw" Whalen check Cook. He was a veteran of the last war and will be missed by all who knew him. To the bereaved family we can only extend the heart-felt sympathy of the sporting fraternity of Belleville.

IT'S CURTAINS FOR THE Collegiate gridders, that is insofar as 1942 Bay of Quinte Interscholastic circles are concerned. Yesterday the Church Street "Collegians" absorbed their third defeat of the season, losing 17 to 6 to Albert College. Regardless as to the result of future games Skipper Harold Mott's sextette just can't get into the picture this year. Such is not the case with Paul Goyette's kids, however, as the Alberts can head St. Mikes if both they and B.C.I. beat the "Irish." This is hardly possible, however, but the big game will be when Albert and St. Mikes tangle next Monday on the former's gridiron. The Collegians went down battling courageously, but they just couldn't cope with the speed of Bruce Benner and Jeff Waite, nor the power of Freddie Aboud. Fumbles were costly to the Church Street aggregation all season and yesterday was no exception, as two of Albert's three touchdowns were the direct result of opposition miscues. Ralph Bateman scored all of his team's six points, while Benner's two tries were enough for Albert.

WHEN THE KINGSTON FRONTENACS absorbed an 11 to 2 shellacking at the hands of the Cornwall "soldiers" the other night four players who learned their hockey in the Limestone City and advanced to professional ranks, returned home to play. The quartette was composed of Nick Knott, appearing in Cornwall livery, and Pat Patterson, Mickey Blake and Joey Catlin wearing the Frontenac tri-colors. The only player left of the old Kingston Combines of three seasons ago is Mel (Lone Ranger) Williamson, brother of Claire Williamson, Reliance defenceman. Len Lane and George Hood are in Kingston attending Queen's University, but do not intend playing hockey as this is their final school term. Even the veteran Yip Radley found old father time had caught up to him and yesterday handed Coach Wally Elmer his uniform. Radley may try his hand at refereeing this winter. After the Cornwall trouncing, Kingston Scribe Walshe found out that the Frontenacs need more than names on paper to round out a good hockey club.

CREDIT PETERBORO'S FRED Craig with the best sports wisecrack of the week. In referring to rasslin' the other day, Scribe Craig said—"Never in the history of sport was so much paid by so many to so few for so little."

Professional wrestling never did seem to appeal to the good people of Peterborough, although Jack Corcoran played some of his ace ring performers into the Liftlock Town. Perhaps they don't know what good clean (?) fun they're missing out along the Otonabee River. Take for instance tonight at the Hume Arena when Earl McCready and Billie Watson square off. It's safe betting Pedro Martinez, the villainous Mexican winner of eleven straight bouts here, will be into the ring shaking fists and taunts at both Watson and McCready. The crowd will roar and Martinez will receive little satisfaction, except to irritate the fans, for his efforts. But the fans love it.

REMEMBER WHEN SPORT FANS raised $15,000 at the Babe Siebert memorial benefit hockey game between the Canadians and an N.H.L. All-star aggregation at Montreal three years ago? The popular defenceman of the Canadiens was drowned at Zurich, Ont., in the summer of 1939.

EVER HEAR OF ONE SAM Narron?....Well he is the bullpen catcher of the world champion St. Louis Cardinals and although he only appeared in ten games for the Cards all last summer he drew a full share world series check just like the regulars....Manager Billy Southworth claims Narron is the best bullpen catcher in baseball and that he never has to tell him to warm up a pitcher....In Fact Southworth says that Narron is the reason the Cards got such good relieving this past season—the bullpen professor always had the hurlers ready when they were needed.

THIS AND THAT—PICK HINES who headed the Port Colborne Sailors into the Hume Arena versus the Trenton Air Force back in 1937, has been appointed coach of Navy hockey team in the Senior O.H.A. series. . . .The Canadian Rugby Union reserved judgment in the matter of an east-west Dominion final series for 1942 football honors. . . .There were sixty-nine horses racing at Pimlico track yesterday, but the 70th horse won all the glory. . . . It was Whirlaway winning the $10,000 stakes without opposition that took the patrons fancy; no other horse entered. . .It raised Mister Big Tail's winnings to an all-time record of $538,336, or $100,606, more than the winnings of his nearest rival, Seabiscuit. . . Heaven forbid—

AT THE BELLE

"Panama Hattie"

"Panama Hattie" and company, which opened yesterday at the Belle Theatre, are on their merry musical way through Panama and not a spy is safe. Nor a grouch!

Starring Ann Sothern and Red Skelton, this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer version of the Broadway production is fast-moving at all times, offers new and hummable tunes and is funny enough to entertain the worst grouch you know.

Elaborate Stage Numbers

Rich in elaborate stage numbers and tempered with a good down-to-earth story revolving around the romance of Miss Sothern and Dan Dailey, Jr., plus the zany antics of Skelton, Rags Ragland and Ben Blue, the film contains every conceivable element of entertainment.

Miss Sothern, as Panama Hattie, has one of the most brilliant roles of her career. She portrays a night club singer who is loved by everyone who meets her.

Red Skelton continues his amazing strides along the star path, ably abetted by Ragland and Blue. Virginia O'Brien switches from her dead-pan technique of singing and does an excellent job of deciding that Alan Mowbray, playing the butler again, is "her man" and then proceeding to snag him. Dailey turns in his usual outstanding performance.

Lena Horne, noted colored chanteuse, renders a wonderful interpretation of Cole Porter's "Just One of Those Things," and the Berry Brothers amaze with their extraordinary dance routines.

New Songs Added

In addition to the Cole Porter numbers from the Broadway show, "Just One of Those Things," "Let's Be Buddies," "Fresh as a Daisy" and "I've Still Got My Health," there are five other numbers, "Good Neighbors," "Hattie from Panama," "The Son of a Gun Who Picks on Uncle Sam," "The the Savoy" and "The Sping." You'll be whistling them on the way out.

Others who lend strength to the excellent cast are little Jack Horner, Marsha Hunt and Carol Esmond.

"Tell Tale Heart", Outstanding

An M-G-M. masterpiece "Tell Tale Heart," a timely sportlight, film, "Football Thrills of 1941" and a John Nesbit Parade Novelette "We Do It Because," precede the feature attraction.

Two feature attractions will also be presented, Eddie Albert, Peggy Moran, William Frawley and Lloyd Corrigan in the thrill-a-minute action drama, "Treat 'Em Rough," also William Gargan and Margaret Lindsay in the thrill-and-chill-filled Nazi spy mystery, "Enemy Agents Meet Ellery Queen."

"The Talk of the Town"

Co-starring Cary Grant, Jean Arthur and Ronald Coleman, "The Talk of the Town" comes to the McCarthy Theatre screen this weekend. This production is rated to be one of the year's outstanding hits and is now in its second week at the Uptown Theatre, Toronto.

AT THE CAPITOL

"You're in the Army Now"

Jimmy Durante dictates a letter to Phil Silvers in their new co-starring comedy, "You're in the Army Now," which is now playing at the Capitol.

"To the President of dese United States, White House, Washington, D.C. period," exclaims Jimmy. "Mark it poisonal otherwise, he's liable to send it to the House of Representatives.

He continues: "You said in de press dat every soldier should be consigned to de kind of work to which he is suited. Well, I'm a salesman, one of the best dere is, and ever since I've got in dis army ev'ry ting I had to do is clear outside my domain."

Silvers interrupts and asks,

"How do you spell domain?"

"A-B-D-O-M-A-N," says Jimmy as he goes on, "My talent has been wasted mending roads, washing underwear, bathing dishes and so on."

"And so on what?" asks Phil.

"And sewing on buttons!" retorts Durante.

"King of Dodge City"

A double dose of hard fighting, hard-riding excitement is indicated by the Capitol theatre's added attraction, Columbia's "King of Dodge City," in which outdoor action stars Bill Elliott and Tex Ritter appear together. The film marks a new departure in Western dramas, and is slated to be the first of a projected series from the Columbia lot.

A colored cartoon and the final chapter of "Spy Smasher" make a very entertaining program for all to see.

Allied torpedo-carrying aircraft were credited with sinking a large enemy tanker bound for North Africa last night.

"Enemy activity over Malta was ineffective and reduced in scale," the bulletin said.

From the tone of the communique it seemed evident the Army of the Nile, bent on inflicting the maximum possible damage to the enemy at a minimum cost, was maintaining the cautious but determined pace of its land offensive while subjecting Rommel's forces to a ceaseless aerial and artillery bombardment.

Latest advices from the front indicated that Lt.-Gen. B. L. Montgomery's desert-wise troops were going methodically about the task of widening gaps in the Axis defences and whittling down the enemy's strength in preparation for the main test to come.

While no spectacular advances were reported there were indications that Gen. Montgomery's systematic tactics were achieving results.

Try to Destroy Enemy

These tactics obviously were an exemplification of the thesis which British authorities have set forth repeatedly in the past—that the conquest of territory means little in the desert and that the prime objective is not to push the enemy back but to destroy him.

From the cautious nature of the 8th Army's movements it appeared, too, that Gen. Montgomery was determined not to repeat the mistake which British forces made last June when they forged ahead too rapidly and ran into a trap.

Observers recalled how the 8th Army, then under command of Lt.-Gen. Neil M. Ritchie, apparently was administering a lacing to Rommel southwest of Tobruk when its advancing armored forces plunged headlong into an ambush of anti-tank guns prepared by the Axis chieftain. A large percentage of the Allied armored strength was knocked out in a single day, paving the way for a quick counter-thrust by Rommel which was halted only after the Axis forces had come within 65 miles of Alexandria.

Used Tank Strength Sparingly

Thus far both Gen. Montgomery and Rommel apparently have been using their tank strength sparingly, although yesterday's British communique said an armored clash of fairly sizeable proportions had developed Tuesday.

In this action, in which German tanks made their appearance for the first time since the British forces launched their drive last Friday night, the enemy was said to have withdrawn after suffering considerable losses. Previously Italian tanks had been used by Rommel exclusively in localized encounters.

Military authorities emphasized that Tuesday's battle did not represent a clash between the main armored strength of the two opposing armies, but it appeared such a test could not be delayed overlong.

As British troops widened the gaps in the Axis minefields, the area available for tank operations is being increased steadily and it is only a matter of time before the emphasis shifts suddenly from infantry to armor.

Meanwhile Allied airmen, in virtual control of the skies, are doing their best to cripple Rommel's tank formations and prevent them from massing for action.

AT THE BELLE

The navy to the rescue—Red Skelton, Ben Blue and Rags Ragland come to the rescue of Ann Sothern in M.G.M.'s musical comedy, "Panama Hattie" now playing at the Belle Theatre. Red Skelton and Ann Sothern are starred with Dan Dailey, Jr., Virginia O'Brien and Marsha Hunt in supporting roles.

CHAPTER 2

"He's very much in earnest," she said, thoughtfully.

"Think so? Why?"

"Oh, his manner and his haste."

"He's always like that; it's just his way."

"It isn't a Scotch way."

"That doesn't matter. It's Hugh's way. I say, I thought you took things as they came."

"I do. And I'm glad you checked up on me. But you see things are coming strangely tonight. I mean they're strange to me. You are used to all this touch and go, this off and on, this—"

"Hit or miss."

"Yes, that's it! It all seems hit or miss to me, but I know it does not to you who are used to it."

"Aren't you going to get used to it?"

"If I can, yes."

"Good for you! I was afraid you would be above it."

"Me! Above it? Why, I'm not above anything!"

"Tut tut, don't put on airs. You are a many-sided polygon, and one or two of your sides I don't like."

"If I knew which they were I should cultivate them and emphasize them. I don't want to be a many-sided paragon!"

"I didn't say—"

"I know what you said. And there wasn't much sense to it. Now, I think you're tired of me and I know I'm tired of you, so if you'll take me back to the dressing room, I think I'll go home, and you can tell Miss Malcolm I've gone, for I don't want to hurry her off so early."

"Early? It's well after two, nearly three. A nice time for a girl to go home alone."

"Rubbish! I shall take a taxi. I am not afraid."

"Oh, very well! Then, since you are leaving me and are making no plans for a future meeting, I am going to kiss you."

"No, you are not going to kiss me. Men kiss me only when I want them to, and I do not want you to. Do I have to say good night to Mrs. McCleod?"

"As you like. She's over there. It would be a graceful gesture."

"She looks beautiful, doesn't she? She's so white, svelte, swaying—but secretly alert."

"My dear child, you are not old enough to read character in that mad fashion! Has Martha been telling you of Mrs. McCleod?"

"Oh, no. I've done it all my life. Most people carry their characters in plain sight on their faces."

"Do I?"

"Not so much as most. But, as I said, you are tired of me, and yet you hang on, thinking I may yet prove interesting."

"You witch! That would have been true ten minutes ago, but since then I found a new interest in you!"

"What is it?"

"Don't tell me you have anything so commonplace as curiosity in that pretty little head of yours!"

"No, and you wouldn't gratify it if I had. Tell me, is Alma in love with that granite statue?"

"Meaning Hugh McCleod? He's no statue, he's a bending willow. He's a mush of concession; he's ready to do anything anybody asks of him."

"Yes, but that's only his honest liking to do things for other people out of the kindness of his heart. If he has a grievance or is asked to do anything against his will, he is adamant in his refusal."

"You're making up now, trying to interest me."

"Have you ever had occasion to see Mr. McCleod in such case?"

Murray looked thoughtful and remained silent.

"I am answered," Una Deane said. "And now I want to go home. Take me to the bar, please and give me a drink and I daresay Miss Malcolm will be glad to go home too."

"I will obey, if you will just tell me I may see you again, if only to learn if my first impressions need correction."

"I hope they will, for I'm quite sure your thoughts of me are not complimentary."

"You think that! Oh, how mistaken you are!"

"Very well, then I think we shall meet again."

"When? Where?"

"That must depend on chance. Don't you dare arrange a meeting! That would spoil the whole game."

And then they were in the presence of Miss Malcolm, and she was quite ready to go home, and Una Deane went with her.

The party was picturesque.

Those on the upper floor could look down on the gay scene in the rotunda and those below could look up and see their friends smiling at them over the circular railing.

Lights, flowers and music made the atmosphere pleasurable and most of the guests were enjoying themselves.

Foo Chow, the Chinese butler came near McCleod and made a slight movement of his eyebrows. Hugh stepped toward him and waited for his message.

Foo Chow had been with the McCleods all their married life, four years, and his work and his attitudes were nothing short of perfection. In a low voice he told his master that Miss Emmy wished to see him.

"My father?" said Hugh, quickly.

"Yes, sir, I think that is it."

Hugh was on his way. Foo Chow had found him in the upper hall, and had at once left the group he was with, went through his own bedroom and into a tiny hall from which a spiral stair led upward.

Hugh's father, Angus McLeod and Miss Emily, Hugh's sister, lived in a smaller apartment just above his own. The old man was an invalid and subject to sinking spells, any one of which might be his last. He had been fairly well of late, but Hugh realized the seriousness of the occasion. He had his own key, and in a moment he was in his sister's presence.

"A bad attack?" he asked.

"Yes," Emily told him. "Is Doctor Larkin downstairs?"

"No, he has gone home. It's half-past two."

"Yes, I know. And I think we needn't send for him. Dunn has given father his drops, and unless he gets worse, I shall not feel alarmed."

"I'll dismiss the crowd, Emmy, if you think there's danger of—"

"No, he won't die tonight—unless there's a sudden change. It would be awful to send the people away! Alma—"

"Alma will do as I tell her. Let me take a look at father. Is he asleep?".

They went to the bedroom and as Hugh approached, Angus opened his eyes.

"Amaist gane," he whispered. "Awell, 'tis a' recht. Whaur's Dunn?"

"Here, sir," and the man servant, who was also nurse, stepped to the bedside.

He too was a Scotchman and an old retainer. But he used no Scotch lingo and indeed, Angus McLeod did not, when he was feeling well. They often judged the extant of his attack by the broadness of his dialect.

Dunn turned to Hugh. "He'll come out of this," he said. "Often he's been a deal worse, and all right again in the morning. Leave him to me, sir, I'll guarantee him a night's rest that'll last till tomorrow noon, I'm thinkin'"

"It looks like it," Hugh agreed. "But he talked very Scotchy."

"He does that more of late," Emily said. "He won't last very long, Hugh."

"I know, Emmy dear, and I'll do just as you say about the party."

"Let it go on. I'm sure many of them will soon go; it's only Alma's particular crowd who stay on and on—and on! Now, you go back, Hugh, and say nothing to any one, not even to Alma, or the servants. You can come back once in a while and then I'll know whether we ought to send for the doctor."

Emmy was the older and Hugh had always obeyed her. And too, he thought her view of it all was sensible and her advice wise.

He went down the steep little steps into his own bedroom. When he came to live in this spacious home, he took an apartment above his for his father and sister and had the communicating stairway built in. He loved his people and though Alma was not affectionate with them, she was always kindly and ready to do anything she could for their pleasure.

Emmy tried honestly to establish and Hugh's wife was 26, too great sisterly relations, but she was 47, a gulf of time to be successfully bridged.

But, though having little in common, the two women were clever enough to invent a sort of make-believe, friendship which passed for the real thing, even among those most interested. There never was any friction; they deferred to each other's tastes and wishes and none but themselves knew what a trifle it would take to demolish the air castle of affection they had built so cautiously.

Even Hugh, who realized their incompatibility, assumed that they were as friendly as most sisters-in-law and he felt satisfied.

Hugh sat for a time in his room, thinking what must happen when his father died. He could see no plan but to have his sister live in his home. But he had a lively recollection of one time when he had mentioned this to Alma. It was not a pleasant memory and he did not dwell on it. He sighed and then he rose from his easy chair and went to rejoin his guests.

Half way down the marble staircase he saw that a number of people had left. Those still there had seemed to gather into groups, and one of the groups centered about his wife.

Alma was surrounded by her intimates and she was at her very best. Hugh stared at her as if he had never seen her before. Indeed, as he often told her, he fell in love with her afresh every time he laid eyes on her.

And always she laughed and told him how happy it made her to hear it.

Van Dyke Haynes was nearest her, but he was not too near. Alma would take care of that. Ogden Murray was hovering. Hugh had never seen him so attentive before. Doctor Lloyd was telling a story. Brand Herrick was walking away.

Hugh was glad to see the doctor there still. He was Alma's doctor, but if the old man should grow worse suddenly, he could be of first-aid.

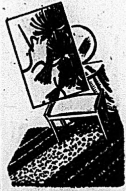
Soft Fluffy Rug to Make Yourself



Of Tufts Of Candlewick Yarn

You may be "all thumbs" but we insist you can make THIS rug—a fluffy tufted boudoir beauty that sets off your dressing table and you! The hardest thing you do is tie knots!

Your materials, for a striped design, are three soft shades of candlewick yarn—perhaps white, rose and blue—and a muslin base!

Pencil the stripes evenly along diagonal creases in the muslin and, parallel to the creases, rule lines an inch apart over the whole surface. Make dots an inch apart on the lines.

Now, passing a needle threaded with candlewick through a dot (see our sketch), take an ¼-inch stitch and lay a tuft of sixteen 2½-inch lengths of yarn across it. Then tie ends of stitch around tuft, in a tight knot.

Soon the whole rug's tufted and you're ready to sew rug to backing!

For complete directions see our 32-page booklet. Describes and diagrams exactly how to make the tufted rug; tells how to make hooked, woven, braided, crocheted rugs, in many beautiful designs.

General Apple Crop Shows 11 P.C. Decrease

While early varieties showed no change in volume of production from last year, the general apple crop of Eastern Ontario was eleven per cent decrease from that of 1941 Senior Fruit Inspector C. T. Stevenson stated here today.

Western Ontario districts reported a twelve per cent decrease in all varieties, he added.

Of the late varieties in this district, Spys show an 18 per cent decrease; McIntosh, 12 per cent and Snows, 5 per cent. There was considerable loss sustained through what is known in apple circles as "bitter pit," but there was little damage done by wind and none from frost. Bartlett pears showed an 18 per cent increase in yield but all other varieties were down.

All vegetables, Inspector Stevenson said, had better weather than the average excepting on Sept. 29 when a heavy frost caused damage to tomatoes and corn.

Tomato Pack Late

The tomato pack in the district was generally disappointing with the weather generally not fair resulting in a season that was ten days later than 1941. During the first two weeks in Sepember the quality was good but hot weather between Sept. 15-19 brought on deliveries so heavy that canning factories could not handle them. Consequently thousands of bushels were lost in the fields and at the plants.

The heavy frost of Sept. 29 damaged from 50 to 75 per cent of the crop on the vines. The average yield is approximately 175 bushels to the acre. A normal yield in this district is said to be in the vicinity of 300-400 bushels to the acre.

Potato Blight Serious

The blight that struck potato crops in early September was more serious than was at first anticipated, the Inspector stated.

Tomato vines and some carrots were affected by the blight in some sections of the district. There were few potato fields free from the blight and a number were hardly worth digging. The late crop suffered the heaviest.

Corn was also a disappointing crop chiefly due to weather not conducive to good yields. The average production in the district was 1¼ tons to the acre, roughly a fifty per cent normal yield.

Low-Grade Apples Are Being Processed Into Applesauce

Carloads of low-grade apples are leaving this district and other parts of Eastern and Central Ontario for Montreal where they are being processed by quick-freezing methods into apple-sauce and pie filler, Senior Fruit Inspector, C. T. Stevenson said today.

Cold storage plants of the area were filled to capacity with early varieties of apples, the only normal fruit yield of the current year, and these are being rapidly moved to the eastern markets. Five carloads are scheduled to leave this district this week.

Scarcity of tin containers ordinarily used in the preserving of this food is said to be the main reason for the new process, which is said to be meeting with a great deal of success. Small fruits, such as cherries, are also being shipped and processed in the same manner.

Vichy Presents Little Resemblance To the Small Town of Happier Days

(By TAYLOR HENRY)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Vichy, Oct. 28 (AP) — Tourists who in happier days visted this central French Spa scarcely would believe their eyes today at the changes in the quiet little town where the "Hotel Room" government makes the decisions affecting unoccupied France.

For one thing Vichy's population has grown, in the 2½ years since the armistice was signed, from 25,000 to 100,000. For another, there is the ever present government.

The heart of the government is in the Hotel Du Parc, formerly one of the swankiest of Vichy's hotels, facing the famous park where three mineral springs provide waters for the seasonal curists.

At the Parc Hotel, old Marshal Petain and chief of government Pierre Laval have offices. The ministry of foreign affairs and the ministry of information also are there.

Laval usually receives the press in what was formerly an ordinary furnished drawing room of a deluxe suite. Now it's a cabinet room.

Frequently, though, Laval goes one block down the street to the neighboring Hotel De La Paix where he sees the press in the main salon, now devoted to the official French information agency and the French and foreign press.

Laval Commutes to Castle

Although he has a suite reserved for him in Vichy, Laval almost never spends the night in the provisional capital. Usually in the evening he goes directly to his restored castle at Chateldon, some 25 miles from Vichy overlooking the village where he was born. Recently he has been spending a large part of his time in Paris.

Daily at noon and before dinner, Vichy's personages may be found either at the Cintra Bar, the Majestic bar or the bar of the Ambassadeurs Hotel where most of the diplomats foregather. It is at the Majestic or the Cintra that most Vichy officials can be found.

The cocktail hour at Vichy lasts until 1 p.m. or 8 p.m. after which diplomats, government officials and foreign correspondents break up into groups to dine either at local hotels or restaurants in the suburbs.

Apart from that there is little social life in Vichy except the afternoon bridge games of the wives of diplomats who play in special rooms at the Hotel Majestic or in the grand salon of the Hotel Des Ambassadeurs.

Sponsor "Arabian Nights"

Trenton (Special)—One of the gayest events of the season gets under way tonight, Thursday, at the Trenton arena with something doing every minute.

"Arabian Nights" which is being sponsored by the Lions Club promised to top anything in the line of amusement which has been held in Trenton for some time.

The entire proceeds of this venture are to be turned over to community and war work, therefore it is hoped and expected that all citizens and their friends from outside points will give their utmost support to help this one of Trenton's most outstanding events.

Prisoner-of-War Writes

Miss Hazel Parley of the Trenton High School Staff received a short letter this week from Taylor Beale a former T.H.S. student who was forced down over Germany early in June of this year. He informed her that he was well and though disappointed at his predicament, was fairly well treated.

Taylor who is an observer in the R.C.A.F. worked for a time, prior to his enlistment in Shurie's drug store, and lived with his parents on MacLellan Avenue. He has two sisters school teachers in Trenton, Miss Mary and Miss Marjorie Beale.

Former Editor Guest

Mr. Sam McMaster, former editor of the Quinte Sun, was guest of honor at a farewell party at the Gilbert Hotel on Tuesday evening given by a number of his Trenton friends.

Deep regret was voiced by all present at Mr. McMaster's departure from Trenton for his new position in Montreal and on behalf of the gathering he was presented with a beautiful travelling case and pen and pencil set.

Rotarians at their regular weekly meeting on Monday evening in the Gilbert Hotel were given first hand information as to the progress of the Victory Loan campaign in Trenton by several members of the Loan Committee, Mr. W. H. Ireland, Mr. S. Martin, Mr. C. Saylor and others. Moving pictures in connection with the campaign were also shown.

Four airmen from 6 A.R.D. Trenton Air Station were guests of Rotary for the evening and it is understood further hospitality is to be extended to the boys at various meetings by Rotarians.

At a farewell party held on Tuesday evening for one of Trenton's local citizens, who is leaving town, the Victory Loan was brought up and one prominent citizen said he would equal the total raised by the rest of the party. From that the campaign has been assisted by $1400 to date.

Found Guilty of Offence

Everett "Duke" Terry was found guilty by jury at Cobourg before Chief Justice Green, on Wednesday, of carnal knowledge of a 14-year-old girl, but not guilty of rape. The offence took place on July 11th, 1942, and Terry was arrested by the Trenton police. It was learned after his arrest that the offence was committed oiutside the boundaries of Trenton in the township of Murray, hence the case was transferred to Cobourg. Terry will be sentenced at the end of the court.

Chief Constable Probert of Belleville and Sergeant Taylor of Trenton were among the witnesses who testified against Terry.

Percy Yarrow, Telephone Road, reported to Trenton police on Wednesday that while attending the funeral of his late father, William Yarrow, on Tuesday some person or persons stole his black and tan fox hound. The dog is three and one half years old and answers to the name of "Spike." Mr. Yarrow stated that this dog is a very valuable one as a deer and fox hunter, and he is most anxious for information leading to its recovery.

The sightless man was holding on to a rail fence. His clothing torn to shreds, his hands and face blood-covered from scratches and one leg was badly burned. In addition he was suffering from exposure. At the local hospital where he is under care it was stated this morning his condition is "fairly good".

Showdown in South Pacific Battle Appears To Be at Hand

By WALTER CLAUSEN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, Oct. 29—(AP)—A showdown in the Southwestern Pacific between United States and Japanese forces appears to be at hand.

The magnitude of the Japanese push, with a superiority of sky, sea and land forces mobilized for months and stemming from their power house on Truk Island, places the security of the main Allied positions between the Hawaiian Islands and Australia in peril.

On Guadalcanal Island in the Solomons, Marines and Army troops are hemmed in on a small strip of land six miles long and three miles deep, with Japanese forces in overwhelming numbers on three sides and the enemy having the advantages of heavy artillery, tanks and supplies.

Whether there will be a re-enactment of the historic stand on Bataan peninsula in the early stages of the war hinges on getting planes, heavy weapons, supplies and reinforcements quickly to Guadalcanal. The American forces there are confident they can hold out if such supplies and reinforcements reach them.

The Japanese have control of the air in the Southern Solomons area and mass landings of troops indicate control of the sea in the Guadalcanal zone. In addition, a force of enemy carriers, battleships, heavy cruisers, destroyers and submarines is moving eastward to menace other positions in the Southwest Pacific. That force may be of sufficient superiority to give the Japanese widespread control of the sea. Attacks, from the sea and air, already have been made on American bases in the New Hebrides.

This is the first time since conquest of the Philippines that the Nipponese have put in motion such superiority in power against American positions in the Pacific. There is no doubt that it is an all-out effort to destroy these American footholds in the South Pacific.

NEW YORK

General Motors 40¼
U.S. Steel 48½

WALL STREET

New York, Oct. 29 (AP)—Irregular tendencies continued to obscure the stock market's direction today although few leaders developed any real strength or weakness.

Scattered issues then managed to tack on fractions. Minor variations either way ruled near the fourth hour.

In the Canadian section, Dome Mines gained ½ and Lake Shore eased ½.

Low-priced stocks such as Continental Motors came out in sizable trades. This issue opened on a 10,000-share block at 4 and eventually edged into new high ground for the year. In the resistant class were U.S. Steel, American Telephone, Kennecott, U.S. Rubber, Goodrich, Fajardo Sugar, South Porto Rico Sugar, Pullman and Goodyear. Laggards included General Motors, Santa Fe, N.Y. Central, Montgomery Ward, Texas Co., Westinghouse, U.S. Gypsum, and Douglas Aircraft.

Supported in slothful curb were Sherwin Williams, American Cyanamid "B", Brewster Aero, American Gas and Aluminum Ltd. Gulf Oil dipped along with N.J. Zinc and Pennroad.

Hunted Killer of Germans Now Fashioning War Tools

"This is "Rudy" at his bench where he works eagerly and carefully to fashion all-important machine tools.

Once a hunted killer of Germans, now a maker of machine tools to keep producing guns and ammunition to slay more Huns—that is the story of this Hitler-hating Czechoslovakian who, because his mother, a brother, and a sister are still held under the Nazi yoke, prefers to be known only as "Rudy".

Four years ago, because of his activities as leader of a Sudetenland border guard company which in a crossfire of machine gun bullets once shot and killed 600 Germans in a single hour, the Reich placed a price of 5,000 marks on his head. When Czechoslovakia was occupied, therefore, discretion dictated that he move on to a Polish refugee camp. Here his wife joined him and together they started the perilous back-breaking, four-month trek by foot through Denmark, Sweden, and Norway to Great Britain.

Months later, Rudy and his wife arrived in Canada and settled in a farm in northern Saskatchewan. But when the war started, his need to engage in direct war work became an obsession and he made his way directly to the heart of the industrial war effort—the machine tools trade.

Today one of thousands of skilled artisans who are turning out the precision machine tools required in the mass production of munitions, Rudy has attained a new goal. He is helping to provide younger men with weapons to finish a job he nows well from personal experience.

SWEAT OUT POISON BY HARD EXERCISE

London, Oct. 29—(CP)— Violent physical exercises will sweat the poison of a bee sting out of a person's system, said a contributor to the British Medical Journal. As proof, he told how, after being stung 10 times, he dragged a bicycle through dense heather for a mile. At the end of this haul his only complaint was an itch.

Tells How Syntona Ended Sour, Acid Stomach Pains

Relieved Awful Distress That Followed Every Meal. — Nerves Calmed Down. Free from Headaches; Appetite Better, Says This Grateful Man.

When the stomach is out of order and food fails to digest properly, but ferments causing sourness, gas, and a full, bloated sensation; when poor kidney action causes backache, night rising or rheumatic aches and pains; when bowels are constipated and you have headaches, dizzy spells and nerves are on edge, take a treatment of Syntona Herbal Compound and you, too, may find this medicine to be just what you need to put you on the road to better health again.

Here, for example, is the experience of Mr. G. L. Sarson, 289 Wentworth Street North, Hamilton, Ontario, who says:

"In the last eighteen months I suffered with stomach troubles, splitting headaches, rheumatic pains and dizzy spells. I tried everything I knew of, but could get no relief. My appetite was poor, and the little food I did eat just seemed to sour in my stomach, causing gas, nausea and pains. The gas pressed up in my chest, giving me a bloated, smothering feeling. I'd belch up hot, sour-tasting liquids after every meal. I got so bad I couldn't sleep nights and so I felt constantly tired out and nervous.

"But there has been a remarkable improvement in the short time that I've been taking Syntona. It seemed to go right to work in helping my stomach and already I can eat and enjoy many things that used to give me trouble. I don't have all that gas and sour acid risings like I used to. I am free of headaches and dizzy spells and my nerves have calmed down. As a result I am enjoying more restful sleep at night than I have for many months. This is the best results I ever go from any medicine and I want to recommend it to others suffering as I did."

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

With the R. C. A. F. Somewhere in England, Oct. 29—(CP)—Great Britain wasn't a strange land to Sgt. George Schellenberg when the young Winnipeg observer reached this country although he had never been here before, and on his first leave in London he asked for directions only once.

He was with Sgt. Observer Jim Russell of Toronto and was stymied when he wanted to get into Westminster Abbey and didn't know which door to use.

His secret was explained in a short item in The London Star. He told the editor of The Star Man's Diary gossip column: I used to study pictures of London in newspapers and magazines. It was the next best thing, then, to seeing London for myself. Now I am here I find I know it almost as if I had lived here all my life."

Russell added that Schellenberg had a remarkable memory. "He seemed to know every landmark," he said. "Once, when we were flying he suddenly pointed downwards and said 'There's Carnarvon Castle.' He was right. Yet he had only seen the castle once, in a photograph taken from the ground."

Malta newspapers have announced the engagement of Flt. Lt. W. D. Ferguson Stoddart of the R. C. A. F., son of the late Dr. T. W. Stoddart and Mrs. Stoddart of Winnipeg, and Simone, young widow of Dr. Tabone Gozo and daughter of Chevalier R. Vadala and the late Mrs. Vadala of Malta, prominent in Malta society. The wedding will take place shortly.

There have been countless descriptions of air fighting but the best yet is that of Flt. Lt. C. R. Caldwell, an Australian fighter pilot who has gone back home to fight against the Japanese.

"Single-seat air fighting," he says, "is like drink or drugs, it grows on you. Sometimes in a tight spot you think 'I'll never get out of this,' and your tongue sticks to the roof of your mouth. But after getting out of it the itch begins again and you can hardly wait to get into the air for another go.

"When you see the enemy, there it is, either you or he, so you do your best to make sure that it is he. There are thrills in ground strafing, too, but you can't make many mistakes for at the bottom of your dive young travelling like a comet with plenty to do."

BRITISH DRIVE DEEPER INTO ROMMEL'S LINES

Ceaseless Allied Air Attacks Take Steady Heavy Toll

Neither Side Ready To Throw Main Armored Strength Into Struggle

PRISONERS TAKEN

By DON WHITEHEAD
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Cairo, Oct. 30—(AP)—Britain's 8th Army has driven deeper into the Axis' El Alamein line defences in conjunction with a ceaseless Allied air offensive taking steadily heavier toll in the enemy's rear, official reports from the front announced today.

At the end of the first week of the offensive to decide the fate of the Mediterranean, however, neither side apparently was ready to throw its main armored forces into the struggle—neither the British to exploit their gains nor the Germans to plug the menacing gaps in their lines.

Infantry was emphasized in a British communique which dealt mostly with the damaging blows on the Axis from the air and reported the land action in these four sentences:

"During the night of Oct. 28-29 our infantry extended gains in ground formerly held by the enemy. A further number of German prisoners was taken.

"There were minor engagements with enemy armored troops yesterday on whom casualties were inflicted.

"Fighting continues."

Number of Prisoners Taken

A communique announcing the new advances by the land forces also reported that a number of German prisoners had been taken.

Opposing armored troops engaged in minor clashes yesterday in which casualties were inflicted on the enemy, the bulletin said.

The announcement indicated that British authorities were following the tactics to which they have adhered for the most part in the present campaign, attacking at night and consolidating their gains during the daylight hours.

The communique did not specify the extent of the advances or the sectors in which they occurred, merely reporting that "during the night of Oct. 28-29 our infantry extended gains in ground formerly held by the enemy."

The wording of the communique made it plain that infantry still was playing a major role in the slowly-developing battle and that the main tank forces were not yet engaged.

The bulletin told of ceaseless aerial attacks by day and night on Axis airfields and advanced positions.

3 Aircraft Destroyed

"A fighter raid on a landing ground in the Matruh area was particularly successful and at least three large grounded aircraft were destroyed and three others damaged," headquarters said. "There was a slight increase in enemy air activity and at least four enemy fighters were destroyed in combat."

British air losses in the entire Mediterranean theatre were listed as one plane.

Headquarters said it had been learned that during a successful attack on an Axis tanker in the central Mediterranean the night of Oct. 28-29, a direct hit also was scored on an enemy merchant vessel.

Cairo, Oct. 30 — (AP) — The desert battle, now in its seventh day, is still in its initial phase.

Dispatches from the front last night indicated British forces gradually were getting into position to strike at the enemy's main force, but it may be a week before a crucial test of armored strength develops.

The race to feed American-made implements of war into the Middle East remains, meanwhile, one of the little-known phases of the struggle.

When this correspondent was en route to Cairo less than a month ago the question often was heard: "When are American troops going into action in the desert?"

The answer is that American ground troops are not in combat in the Middle East. This show belongs principally to Britain's refreshed and re-equipped 8th Army, aided in the air by the R. A. F. and Allied air forces.

Eight months ago there was comparatively little American activity in this part of the world. Today there is a different picture. A United States military mission headed by Maj.-Gen. Russell L. Maxwell, arrived in Cairo last November and since the engineers and technicians have completed large supply installations, constructed port facilities, carved bases in the jungle and desert, built roads, outfitted machine shops and opened new supply routes.

Maxwell's command extends over an area encompassing Egypt, part of the Sudan, Eritrea, the Red Sea, Palestine, Arabia, the Persian Gulf, Iran and Iraq.

Eritrea, one of Mussolini's springboards in the conquest of Ethiopia, now is well developed as an arsenal for the United Nations.

Pte. S. Kornblum Sentenced for Fraud

Bracebridge, Ont., Oct. 30 (CP)—Pte. Samuel Kornblum, 25 year old soldier from No. 10 Basic Training Centre, Kitchener, Ont., was sentenced yesterday to six months definite and one year indefinite when he pleaded guilty to six charges of false pretences. Kornblum was said absent without leave from the Kitchener camp.

Charges followed complaints by mothers of soldiers overseas who had been approached by Kornblum claiming their sons now had returned from England and were in hospital without funds in London, Ont.

Magistrate Redmond Thomas, in sentencing Kornblum, said: "Although the sums are not large, I believe you are one of the meanest criminals to come before this court."

Kornblum was not represented by counsel nor did the army appear on his behalf.

Mortality Rate of Plane Carriers May Bring Battleships to the Fore

(By ALEX. H. SINGLETON)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Oct. 30 (AP)—War's high mortality rate of aircraft carriers raised today the possibility the heavily-armed battleship would regain temporarily its place as monarch of the seas.

Land-based bombers, toting heavy loads of destruction and ranging thousands of miles in search of the enemy, appear destined to supersede both the battleship and the carrier as the No. 1 weapon of attack.

But, until mass production of such craft reaches a steady stream and until a network of bases for their operation can be developed, the destructive drain upon the carriers of both the United States and Japan has focused new attention on the battleship assets of each.

The navy has announced sinking and crippling a substantial part of Japan's carrier complement. At the same time it has reported heavy blows to United States carrier forces, announcing the loss of the Lexington, the Yorkton and the Wasp, and severe damage to another, as yet unidentified.

May be Stricken from the Sea.

Possibility that carries eventually might be "stricken from tse sea," and that the big battlewagons might engage in an oldfashioned slugging match was raised in June by Chairman Carl Vinson of the House of Representatives Naval committee during consideration of a measure to expand the navy's floating aerial striking strength.

"The carrier has replaced the battleship as the backbone of the fleet," he said. But, simultaneously, he advised: "Let no member think for one moment that battleships, under certain conditions, would not play a dominant role. It may so happen that the enemy's aircraft carriers may be stricken from the sea.

"It may so happen that ours will be stricken from the sea . . . if that happens, and neither side has aircraft carriers to any great extent, then the battleships will come back into the role they were designed to play before aviation reached its high point of development."

This year's ship-expansion bill calls for 500,000 tons built into carriers, 500,000 tons of light and heavy cruisers, and 900,000 tons of destroyers and sub-chasers, and Vinson said the last keel in the program would be laid down by the end of 1944 and the last vessel completed in 1946.

LIBERIA OCCUPIED BY U.S. TROOPS SINCE LAST JULY

Force Includes Negro Units and Two Airports Have Been Constructed

800 MILES FROM DAKAR

London, Oct. 30 — (CP) — A Reuters news agency dispatch from Monrovia said today it was announced that American troops, including negro units, had been in Liberia since July. It said two airports had been constructed.

Parliament had approved legislation providing for Liberia's co-operation with the United States, it said.

Liberia is on the west coast of Africa at the southwest edge of the great hump of the dark continent.

The dispatch said that Lt.-Col. Harry A. McBride of the United States Army who discussed the legislation with President Barclay of the African Republic has returned after reporting to President Roosevelt.

Monrovia is the capital of Liberia.

Constituted in 1847

Liberia, which originated in the efforts of several American philanthropic societies to provide for freed American slaves, was constituted as a republic in 1847. Its constitution was modelled after that of the United States.

The republic, which has an area of about 43,000 square miles and s

Saves 10 Wounded, Brings to Safety Three Ambulances

Cairo, Oct. 30 (AP) — The bravery of John Dun, 50, Tucson, Ariz., former editor of the Toledo (O.) Times, was the talk of the western desert today.

Dun, American field service ambulance driver, saved ten wounded men under intense enemy fire and alone brought three ambulances to safety on the night of October 23-24—the night the Allied offensive began.

When Dun lifted one patient an explosive bullet hit the injured man in the stomach and killed him instantly.

Dun got the others to a sandbag shelter and lay there three hours with an Italian prisoner who crawled to the shelter and acted as Dun's orderly.

Tanks arrived and towed the ambulances out one by one with Dun steering each one and getting his patients to the hospital.

He said that Britain has air command over the northern coast of France and has proved that her planes can attack Italy by day and night.

AMERICAN TROOPS HOLDING AIRFIELD IN THE SOLOMONS

Allied Airpower Lashes Out Against Enemy Over Wide Front

JAPS TREACHEROUS

Washington, Oct. 30 — (AP) — The Navy announced today that American troops on Guadalcanal had destroyed 12 Japanese light tanks in the last week and that in the last two days torpedo boats had scored a torpedo hit on a Japanese destroyer engaged in reinforcing enemy troops on the island.

A communique said land fighting on Guadalcanal Island the last two days had been confined to small skirmishes, but American aircraft were continuing to bomb and strafe enemy positions west of the airfield. In the late afternoon of Oct. 28 (Solomons time) American fighter planes destroyed two enemy seaplanes at Rekata Bay. On the morning of Oct. 29, enemy bombers attacked the American positions on Guadalcanal, but all their bombs dropped in the water, the Navy said, and no damage resulted.

Washington, Oct. 30. (AP)—A Nipponese naval onslaught in the Solomons area is expected to break shortly against admittedly-inferior numbers of United States warships but, meanwhile, Allied airpower lashed out at enemy vessels, planes, troops and installations over the wide battle front.

The navy reported yesterday that Marines and Army troops on Guadalcanal broke up three additional Japanese assaults on Oct. 27 (Solomons Islands Time). They were thrown back by one heavy attack but countered quickly and regained their positions.

Importance of the airfield, captured by marines early in August, has been evidenced by the almost daily aerial attacks on nearby enemy bases.

The latest air bombardment announced by the navy struck Japanese gun emplacements on Western Guadalcanal, destroying an anti-aircraft battery and an ammunition dump.

THE HALF-BILLION DOLLAR MARK REACHED BY LOAN

Thursday's Subscriptions Total $51,721,700—Mutual Life Takes $15,000,000

Ottawa, Oct. 30 (CP) — Subscriptions to Canada's Third Victory Loan passed the half-billion mark by close of business Thursday, with total bond sales amounting to $509,980,000, National Loan headquarters announced today.

Thursday was the 10th. working day of the 18-day campaign, which ends November 7th. The comparative total of the tenth day of the Second Victory Loan last February was $468,131,850. However, the comparison is not exact because a few conversion subscriptions were included in last year's early totals.

Subscriptions on Thursday came to $51,721,700 or $10,723,700 above the average sales of the first ten days of the drive.

Ontario headquarters at Toronto notified the National Loan office here of a $15,000,000 subscription received from Mutual Life Assurance Co., Waterloo, and this was the largest individual subscription reported today.

During the first half of the 18-day loan period, 36,438 employees of the Canadian National Railways and subsidiaries subscribed $3,097,250, said today's statement from headquarters. This was divided as follows: employees of the railway $2,960,700; munitions employees $80,900; Trans-Canada Air Lines employees $55,650. Yesterday's returns included a purchase of Victory Loan bonds for $10,052,700 by the Canadian National Railways system.

"The general canvass showed a slight increase," the statement said.

Major subscriptions reported from Ontario included: Anaconda American Brass Ltd., New Toronto, Ont. $250,000 (this, added to an earlier application, brings the company's total investment to $750,000); Swift Canadian Co. Ltd., Toronto, $2,500,000; Dominion Foundries and Steel Ltd., Hamilton, $1,250,000 (the company's employees' savings and profit-sharing fund subscribed $250,000.)

RED ARMY TANKS WIN BATTLE OF ARMORED FORCES

Regain Height In West Caucasus But Forced to Retreat In Nalchik Sector

HOLD AT STALINGRAD

By HENRY C. CASSIDY

Moscow, Oct. 30 (AP)—Red army tanks won a battle of armored forces to maintain Stalingrad's defence lines and Soviet troops regained another height in the west Caucasus, but numerically-superior invaders compelled a retreat in the Nalchik sector for the second successive day, the Russians said today.

Sixteen tanks of a German assault force were declared destroyed by tread-tracked Soviet machines barring their way in a Stalingrad factory area and the others withdrew, the noon communique said.

Although a German detachment drove up 50 to 100 yards to the edge of a factory ground during a costly assault by a tank-supported infantry division yesterday and fierce fighting continued in this 67th day of the siege, it was announced that "all attacks were repulsed and Soviet troops are firmly holding their positions."

Hand-to-Hand Fighting

"Northwest of Stalingrad," the communique said, "a Soviet unit broke through the enemy defences. Engaging the enemy with hand grenades and in hand-to-hand fighting, they killed 130 of the enemy and captured an ammunition dump, as well as other booty."

Capture of a height in the counter-attacks northeast of Tuapse, a key Black Sea port menaced by a Nazi pincers, was announced without detail.

Navy to Use Residence For Naval Training

Toronto, Oct. 30. (CP)—Dr. H. J. Cody, president, of the University of Toronto, announced today officials of the Royal Canadian Navy and the University had made a "mutual agreement" early this month to convert the residence of the late Sir Joseph Flavelle into a training centre for the Women's Royal Canadian Naval Service.

The three-storey building was built by Sir Joseph on property rented from the University on a 40-year lease. At the time of his death three years ago, the lease expired and the property reverted to the University. Sir Joseph left the building to the Board of Governors in his will. The residence is situated on Queen's Park Drive in the University grounds.

New Nazi Drive in Caucasus Displays Anxiety Over Fate of Rommel's Army

By JOHN H. MARTIN
Associated Press Staff Writer

The new German offensive in the Russian Caucasus displays an urgency dictated by Axis anxiety over the ultimate fate of Marshal Rommel's African troops.

British troops now are attacking Rommel frontally in Egypt, but Berlin has shown its concern over reported developments in the rear of the Axis troops, particularly an Allied Southern salient pointed at Libya from the South and based in the fighting French Lake Chad region.

After being blocked by the Red Army at Mozdok, 150 miles short of the Caspian Sea, the Germans turned Southwestward and last night claimed the capture of Nalchik on the approaches to the Dariel and Mamison passes which cut through the ice-capped Caucasian mountains toward Tiflis in the South.

A German thrust through these mountains would give the Axis its own "second front" and expose the Allies to these dangerous possibilities:

A slackening if not abandonment of the British westward drive in Egypt; encirclement of Turkey; capture of Russia's prize oil fields at Baku; severance of Allied supply routes to Russia; and capture or removal of Soviet naval forces in the Black Sea.

Winter Lulls Won't Help

Attainment of the latter Nazi objective would free the Black Sea for the dispatch of huge Axis armies directly across that sea for an invasion of the entire Middle East. No winter lulls would bless the Allied war effort in such an event.

Nalchik, where the Germans now are, is only 60 miles from Orzhonikidze, terminal of the Georgian military highway that winds through Dariel Pass to Tiflis, a winter-sheltered city and key railway junction south of the mountains.

Once at Tiflis the invaders could fan out to the east toward Baku on the Caspian, and to the west toward Batum, the last major base for the Soviet Black Sea fleet. To the south lie the oil riches of Iran and Iraq.

Gauged by the progress of the German advance thus far the Nazis are not likely to penetrate the central range for some time if ever. The mountains provide the Russians with ideal natural defences. Even fighting on the open Caucasian steppes leading to the mountains the Russian soldier has exhibited a formidable staying power against the Germans.

These reasons no doubt were partly responsible for a statement two nights ago by Admiral William H. Standley, United States Ambassador to Moscow, that the Germans never would reach Baku this winter.

27 Killed, 200 Injured When Tornado Strikes

More Than Half Of Ozark Mountain Town Levelled

Two Hundred Homes And Most of The Business District Are Destroyed

ESCAPES AMAZING

Berryville, Ark., Oct. 30—(AP)—At least 27 persons were killed and more than 200 injured, many critically when a tornado levelled more than half of this Ozark mountain town late last night.

Several of the injured were so badly hurt that physicians advised against transporting to hospitals.

More than 200 homes and most of the business district were destroyed.

Without hospital facilities, the town of 1,485 was handicapped further by destruction of the only drug store and consequent loss of the only drugs and medical supplies within 30 miles.

Several fires broke out but all were controlled before getting a headway in the splintered wreckage.

Work Under Difficulties

The electric light and power plant was destroyed, forcing rescue squads to work under improvised lighting systems, and with flares and electric torches.

Twenty-two bodies were taken to one undertaking parlor alone.

Doctors and nurses went to the town from Harrison and Eureka Springs, about 30 miles distant. Only three physicians were available here.

Belgian Gov't. Protests Deporting of Belgians

London, Oct. 30 (CP) — The Belgian government in London protested today against deportation of Belgian workers to Germany, saying it had been confirmed that men between 20 and 40 years old in the Liege region were conscripted for labor within the Reich.

The German decree also provided that women may be deported for forced labor, but it is not known whether this has yet been enforced, the government said.

EIGHT AUSTRIANS EXECUTED

New York, Oct. 30—(AP)—The BBC reported today that eight more Austrians have been executed by the Germans at Graz, where it said there has been an average of one execution a day since mid-September.

The BBC, heard here by CBS, reported the victims were accused of preparation for high treason and communist activity.

Says Nazis Refused To Allow Food, Beer Given to Prisoners

London, Oct. 30 —(CP Cable)— The Belgian Ministry of Information said today the Germans refused to allow food and beer to be given to 900 Canadian and British prisoners captured at Dieppe when their train passed through Marchienne-au-Pont, Belgium, Aug. 29.

The Ministry said that news spread through the town the train would stop for 30 minutes a brewery truck loaded with beer drove up and more than 200 persons assembled on the platform with food. But distribution was not allowed.

The Ministry said the German officer in charge forbade the giving of beer, declaring water was good enough "for those pigs of Englishmen" although the stationmaster pointed out there was insufficient water pressure.

The prisoners gave the "V" and "thumbs up" sign as they travelled through Belgium, the Ministry added.

'A Lot of Punishment' Dealt Nazi Barges

London, Oct. 30 — (CP) — The pilots who led the United States low-level fighter plane attack yesterday on tugboats and canal barges in Nazi-occupied Belgium declared today they dealt out "a lot of punishment" although the action was too fast for an accurate tally of the score.

The two flight leaders were Canadians, Lieuts. R. L. Alexander of Aylmer, Ont., and James A. Goodson of Ontario, who transferred from the R. A. F. to the United States Army Air Forces last month.

Alexander said he "spotted five sets of six or eight barges each" and got in two bursts of cannon and machinegun fire on two tugboats while Goodson pounced on the barges behind.

WINDOWS SHATTERED WHEN HIT BY TRUCK

Three large plate glass windows in the front of the Maher Shoe store, 242 Front St., were shattered when a truck collided with the north side of the building early Friday. City police investigated.

Chief Probert Warns Pranksters Against Property Damage

The novelty of Hallowe'en will be no excuse for any deliberate breaking of the law and there will be no laxity on the part of the city police force in enforcing it on Saturday (Hallowe'en) night, Chief of Police Walter Probert stated today.

The city force will be augmented by extra officers and the city will be patrolled unceasingly to curb any efforts of those who may feel inclined to let their feelings and those of the season, stretch to the point where damage to property may be caused.

"I realize that small boys, young men and others usually feel that Hallowe'en is their night to 'howl' so to speak," remarked the chief, "but I warn them that no overt acts of damage to property or other performances leading to inconveniences to the people of this city will be tolerated."

"We are not putting any damper on Hallowe'en enthusiasm as long as it is kept within the realm of reason and obedience of the law," he added.

"When I apprehended this man early Wednesday morning he was driving his motor car in a zig-zag manner on Front Street. Later at the police station we discovered 21 chickens in two bags, five of which were suffocated," testified Acting Sergeant Evans, who apprehended the accused. Rogers' driver's licence was suspended for three months and his motor car, which Acting Sergeant Evans referred to as "something of an antique on wheels," was impounded for the same period.

Five inebriates appeared on charges of intoxication, including two women. One of the women admitted she was unable to pay the assessed fine and was sentenced to 14 days in default. A truck driver appeared on a charge of driving a motor vehicle while his individual chauffeur's licence was under suspension, and was fined $25.00 and costs, which was paid.

No Hunting Licences Sold to Americans By Local Office

There will be few Canadian venison steaks eaten in the U.S.A. this coming winter, according to George Finch, local issuer of deer hunting licences.

For not a single American hunter has applied for a licence as yet, and in all probability not a "Yankee" cartridge will be fired in the Canadian north woods, in this section at least.

The local demand for licences is about on a par with that of former years, Mr. Finch stated. Many hunters are leaving the securing of licences to the last minute and tomorrow will see a busy day in the Finch office.

Hunters won't waste many shots this season firing at trees and imaginery deer garbed in a fellow hunter's hat. Rifle cartridges are anything but plentiful while shotgun shells are being sold carefully and in anything but large quantities.

According to reports from the northern sections of the district, deer are quite plentiful and many good bags should result.

Snow now covers the north woods, providing a perfect setting for the nimrods who officially open the season on Monday, Nov. 2.

In normal times, British, India and China each produce one-third of the world's annual crop of 10,000,000 short tons of unshelled peanuts, Africa one-sixth and the United States one-twelfth.

Senator Vojta Benes Tells of Czechs' Fight for Independence in Address On Anniversary Day at Batawa

Frankford (Special) — Mingled crowds of Czechs and Canadians filled the cafeteria of the Bata plant at Batawa to capacity on Wednesday night to hear Senator Vojta Benes member of the Czech Senate in exile who is from London, England and is working to find a way to free his people once more. Gay decorations of red, white and blue bunting, Union Jacks and Victory Loan posters set the stage for the impressive ceremony in commemoration of the anniversary of the Czechoslovak Independence on Oct. 28, the fifth celebration of its kind since these people left their home land. At the back of the stage was a map of Czechoslovakia with the slogan 'Free Czechoslovakia for a free world'.

Address of Welcome

Rev. H. C. Vaclavik as master of ceremonies, spoke a few words of welcome and expressed his thankfulness for being in Canada, a free land, and the hope that the two peoples might be more closely associated. He then introduced Mr. W. W. Parry K.C., of Toronto who spoke of the importance of this day. He said Oct. 28th to the Czech people was the same as many similar days in Canada's national life are important to Canadians. He said. "We are fighting for the right to live our own lives, for new mode of life not a 'new order'. It was the duty of every Czech to learn and try to understand Canadian history, its background and problems." He spoke of how Czechoslovakia had had to fight oppression from the first and how under Thos. Maseric the conspiracy was formed to make it a free country. He spoke of Vojta Benes, the guest speaker, and how he laid the foundation and built the Czech Alliance.

Musical Program

Miss Marie Patak recited in Czech "A Message From Home" Two young girls Miss Dana Kunicek and Miss Nada Marek played a piano duet "Bright as a Button." A number of young boys and girls, some dressed in the red and white costume of the Sokol Gymnastic Association and some National costumes, sang the "Maple Leaf Forever" in English and two songs, "The Czech Song" and "In Far-Off Lands I Remember Home" in the Czech language. Mr. O. Hejtmanek gave a violin solo "From the Homeland" accompanied by Miss G. Blashko. The Batawa male choir of about twenty-five voices sang "The Heritage". Mr. Vaclavik then called upon Mr. Thos. Bata to introduce the guest speaker Mr. Vojta Benes.

Airmen Speak

In his talk Mr. Bata said this day was important too, because his fellow workers in the factory had subscribed over and above their objective in this Victory Loan campaign. Before introducing Mr. Benes, Mr. Bata called on two members of the Czechoslovakian air force to speak to the audience. The two men Mr. Charles Stojan and Mr. J. Hubeny were both employees of the Bata factory prior to joining the armed forces. They have both been serving in England and have now been transferred to Canada for further training. Mr. Hubeny spoke to his own people in their language. They brought greetings from the Czech forces and the Canadian boys in Britain. They said that in a short time they would be back to join the Canadian and British fliers in England again. The hope was expressed that by the next Oct. 28th they would all be back in their home land.

In introducing the speaker—Mr. Bata said that he had achieved greatness in his own right as an experienced and veteran warrior for liberty and freedom. He helped to organize education and true democracy and was one of the leading organizers of education in Czechoslovakia.

The Guest Speaker

Mr. Benes in beginning his address said, "I doubt that I am a great man. I am proud to be with you because I belong to a free people, to a nation to which you were born. I am proud to bow my head to the King and Queen, the symbol of great British people throughout the world.

"I will speak first in English, which is no good. I am sorry for that", he said, "for misery made me learn English, that is why my English is so miserable". But for a man who must be in his late sixties and who never spoke English until three years ago, it must be admitted that he spoke very fluently. He asked the question who are the Czechoslovakians? They are Czecks and Slovaks. Who are the Czecks? They are Slovaks who speak Czeck. Who are the Slovaks? They are the Czecks who speak Slovak. He said they are one nation who have been divided from the beginning by their enemies. They were a country long before Canada was discovered.

In the First Century people were coming to this small country in Central Europe. In the Seventh Century an independent Slovak state was established. Christianity was brought to their country as early as the ninth century. The reason he gave for their people becoming Christianized so far ahead some of the other countries was that they were a very small country, that they wanted to be strong, they wanted to be strong both spiritually and physically in order to oppose the German oppressor. He said from the Fifth Century up to now they have been oppressed and beaten down by their Hun neighbors. They needed the strength of spirit and Christian ideals in order to be a match for their pagan neighbors.

First University Built at Prague

In 1246 the first university in Central Europe was built at Prague, 150 years before Canada was discovered. In the 15th Century Pope Pius II said, "that every Czeck woman knows the Bible better than many priests in Italy". At this time they tried to establish the first League of Nations, and in the 17th Century they were destroyed by German armies. For 300 years they lived in subjugation until the First Great War when their boys fought under Thomas Maseric along with Canadian boys in France, Italy, Siberia and Russia, not only for Canada but for democracy of the whole world. When the armistice was signed they had won their independence and spent 20 years of happy life, working and building a democracy in Central Europe. There were several thousand Germans living in their country and they enjoyed the same privileges of education, the same reforms in every line as did the Czechoslovakian people.

Many Poor People Helped

There were many poor people in their county, many even in beggary. Their government, of which he himself was a member bought land that had previously belonged to them but had been wrested from them by their oppressors and gave some of it to each of these needy people setting them up as independent people giving each man and woman something to live for, helping them build character. These people were proud because they were independent. They would have no more beggary in their country. They built 200,000 new houses for these people. They were given forty years in which to repay their country for the homes that had been created for them. That is the reason he said that in 1938 when the oppressor struck again that they were prepared to die for their country. That is why the boys who escaped to England joined the armed forces to fight for their country's freedom, and he said "we are only one country, for the same reason the people of Norway, Greece and Poland are prepared to fight.

Mr. Benes said, "there is a spark of godliness in every human soul but not so the Germans. As long as a hundred years ago they were teaching that it was the state not the man that counts. In Czechoslovakia there were many people who were true democrats but they were in the minority and the remainder of the Czech Germans betrayed their country to the Nazis".

Many people in his country have been murdered solely because they were Czechs or Slovaks and because they believed in the rights of man. Many have died from hunger, torture and oppression in German concentration camps. He said before the war they had three universities and that they along with other higher educational institutions were either closed or destroyed.

Terrible Conditions

More than 3000 students have been sent to Germany to die for their country. The speaker said he had not the time to tell all the terrible conditions in his country. Every person in his country, even the babies born tomorrow are guilty of treason, because their country is guilty of treason and they are citizens of that country.

He said that "As we have seen the Germans oppress first one country and then another as has been done in Europe, that perhaps the Canadians and Americans will now believe that the Germans are enemies of the world."

He expressed the hope that all soldiers and all home fronts of democratic people would launch one terrible attack against the beast from Germany.

In his closing statement he said: "We bow our heads before the majesty of my people, before our God. Everybody who will serve our God must not be afraid of the devil. My nation is not afraid. They are fighting for a better future for mankind and with the help of the Canadian people we shall win this battle for our God."

The balance of the program consisted of musical numbers. Mrs. M. Zurek sang a solo in Czech, "Songs My Mother Taught Me," with Miss I. Ostrom as accompanist. Another violin solo, "Kdyz Zdenek Muj" by Mr. O. Hejtmanek was very much enjoyed. Mrs. Zurek sang in English, "Going Home, Going Home." The male choir sang "Tovacov." The evening's performance was brought to a fitting close by the singing of the three national anthems, Czech, Slovak and God Save the King.

Splendid Work Canadian Women's Services are Performing in War Work Described by Nancy Pyper

Members of the Women's Canadian Club were honored to have as their guest speaker Thursday evening Nancy Pyper, brilliant writer, actress and speaker who has just been chosen by the Wartime Information Board to go to the United States on a lecture tour to tell the Americans what Canadian women are doing in this war. This was the subject of her address and when Mrs. Pyper came to the end of her inspiring and entertaining address her audience could not help but share her pride and enthusiasm in what the women of the Dominion were contributing to the war effort. Her genuine admiration and enthusiasm for the women and girls of the services, workers in war industries, the nursing sisters, the Red Cross, the homemakers who form the background of the Canadian war picture in maintaining the home front resulted from her contacts with thousands of women in Canada as she collected material for her addresses to their American sisters.

This war is different from any others for it has brought women into the exacting and perilous enterprises of wartime. The "Lotta" girls of Finland, known and almost reverenced throughout their country for their determination to assume all the sacrifices and hardships of their brothers-in-arms are outstanding examples of what women are doing in this war.

In Danger Zones

The women of Britain who have taken their place in the danger zones, who man guns, and boats on harbor patrol, who form the A. T. S. and the auxiliaries of the fighting forces have won the acclaim of the world for their magnificent achievements and constant courage. With British women as their inspiration, the women and girls in Canada are showing that they, too, can take their places in the war effort in a manner which will make their country proud of its womanhood.

Mrs. Pyper had caught the spirit of Canadian women at war, their determination to help their men overseas and their happiness in serving their country. Her words glowing with pride in what her travels throughout Canada had shown her of women's wartime accomplishments could not but inspire her hearers. First she spoke of the women's services and their leaders to whom she paid tribute for the qualities which made them so eminently fitted for their high positions. She had visited headquarters of the Canadian Women's Army Corps, the R. C. A. F., Women's Division; the Wrens as the women in the navy are affectionately called. Girls and women in Canada had given up their good jobs, their comfortable homes, their immediate circle of friends to join these services. Why? Mrs. Pyper found the answer from the girls themselves. It was not the spirit of adventure or desire for a change that motivated them. It was their earnest conviction that they must do something for their country at war, something in keeping with the sacrifice of their brothers, fathers, husbands, sweethearts overseas that impelled them to join the services.

Doing Magnificent Work

"The girls in the services are doing a magnificent job" said Mrs. Pyper. "They undertake every manner of duty which will release men in uniform for combat work. In the C. W. A. C., for instance, where they learn trades after basic training, they do specialized work, work for which each girl is found best fitted. They take pride in becoming tops in whatever they are chosen to do. They are determined to serve their country in the best possible way they can".

Mrs. Pyper referred to the excellent leadership of Colonel Joan Kennedy, of Squadron Officer Kathleen Walker, of the officers of the Wrens, and described the set-up of each service. She had visited training centres of each. The eagerness of the girls, their devotion to their work, the comradeship that existed between them and their brothers in service were described by the speaker.

These girls stand high not only in the eyes of their officers but with officers of the fighting forces. The marching, for instance of the W. D.'s at Jarvis on graduation day was magnificent. The W. D.'s have earned the sincere admiration of officers at air stations too for the change they brought into life at camp, their humanizing touch in their fine comradeship with airmen and the way in which they perform their tasks.

Brave Spirit

Mrs. Pyper told the story of a Norwegian girl who worked in the propeller department in the R.C.A.F. shop. She was engaged to a Norwegian pilot and each night, after her exacting day's work, she wrote him. Word came to her officers, one day, that the girl's fiance had been killed in action. She was called to the office, and told of her bereavement. Her officer said to her gently, "You have been working so hard. Take today and rest. Don't work today as you have been working," and the Norwegian girl answered softly, "I will not work as I have been working. I will now work twice as hard."

This spirit of keeping faith with their fighting men is typical of the women in services.

Work of Wrens Described

Typical of Nancy Pyper's wit and her happy faculty of keeping her audience entertained was her description of her visit to Galt, the training centre of the Wrens, the newest service. Here the girls who will take their places on shore service in the Navy begin' their training. Here they learn all about ships and the tradition of the British navy, as well as undertaking their studies for the particular duty which will be assigned to them. The devotion of the Wrens in England is known and honored by every Briton and a British woman, Chief Officer Dorothy Isherwood, has come to Canada to inaugurate the service.

At the training centre the buildings are regarded as ships and nautical terms prevail. Mrs. Pyper made a few slips she admitted. She referred to the kitchen instead of the galley, the hospital instead of the sick-bay and perhaps the worst blunder of all was when she watched the girls in uniform running across the parade grounds.

"That is not the parade ground," she was told. "That's the quarter-deck and ratings must cross the quarter-deck on the double." They do this because Nelson ran across the quarter-deck and one tired little rating confided to Mrs. Pyper that she wished he'd walked instead. Throughout her visit Mrs. Pyper was impressed with the great work that is being done and by the ideals of the Wrens. Her last experience with nautical language was when a rating came to announce that the car was ready to take back Mrs. Pyper and Captain Brock.

"The rating saluted smartly and said, in the best traditions of the British navy, 'Sir, the tender is alongside.'"

Tribute to Munition Workers

Turning to women aiding their country in wartime other than those in the services, Mrs. Pyper paid tribute to the munition workers who work tirelessly in arduous tasks, in dangerous circumstances with an efficiency that has astonished men in industry. The distinguishing marks of various groups of war workers is interesting. It is noted in the bandanas they wear. The novices wear mauve, the experienced, blue, the headwomen, red, and the government examiners, yellow.

"There are countless other agencies in which women are serving their country in wartime, as nurses, as Red Cross workers, knitting, sewing, doing housework in a way that will keep homes in readiness for the return of their loved ones. Time does not permit me to elaborate on them. But I would like to say something about the Victory Loan."

Mrs. Pyper referred to the courage of Britain, of the women who had courage to laugh in the face of air raids, and the hardships of war.

"Think of the German women. They are slaves. We are free. What if we go shabby. We will all be shabby together. We all speak our own language. We are with our own people. Think how tremendously important it is for us to help in the campaign. Then let us behave so the little people of Britain aren't ashamed of us."

Mrs. E. A. Geen, who introduced the speaker, expressed the appreciation of the audience for Mrs. Pyper's wonderful address.

Cat Beats Hasty Retreat Before Hungry Mouse

When the cat's away the mice might play, but it's a rare occasion when a daring young mouselet glares defiance at one of its ancient enemies, and not only forces it to retreat but helps itself to the kitty's breakfast as well.

That is what happened the other day in a house on the East Hill. The good lady was outside in the yard and had opened the kitchen door when the family tabby came out under a full head of steam.

Curious as to the reason, the housewife entered the kitchen, and could scarcely believe her eyes when she saw a mouse placidly helping itself to the cat's breakfast in a saucer in a corner.

Whether the lady followed the cat's example has not been ascertained.

"THEY DON'T WANT SWAMPS AND JUNGLES"

THEY WANT YOUR HOME!

"Do not be confused by this war, Canada. When the Nazi chiefs howl of 'lebensraum' (living room) do you think they are talking of Britain? No! There's no living room in Britain—that tiny island now overcrowded by its forty-four million people! When the paranoiacs of Berlin scream about colonies, do you think they are talking about some strip of banana land, or some unholy spot in a malaria-ridden jungle?

"Let us not be idiotic . . . Germany and Japan don't want swamps and jungles. They want you—great, rich, sprawling Canada, rich with her endless wheat-bearing acres where a 'Herrenvolk' could lord it over a slave population; Canada with its great and untold wealth of unexploited raw material. Those are the goals of Nazi war—Canada, Brazil, Russia, the United States—the vast lands that lie amid untold resources, the lands with 'living room' for the 'super-race' that will allow YOU to become a new sort of white native to carry out their orders.

"Do you not see that wealth is not money . . . but a way of living?"

Writing to the Troops

Mrs. Roosevelt in her visit in Britain has discovered what others have found, that the soldier, sailor and airman are anxious for letters from home. This is true of Americans as well as Canadians and is one of the most natural instincts.

At this season of the year, when early sending of parcels for Christmas is urged, members of the armed forces will like besides as many letters as possible with all the news and as often as they can be proud. They are proud of the letters they receive and if sometimes answers do not arrive as soon as might be expected those at home will realize that the members of the forces are very busy at the greatest job of this time, either preparing for action or in action in some theatre of war against the common enemy. It may not be as easy for them to write as it is for those at home surrounded by every convenience, but though they are busy the troops overseas have maintained at the top level their writing of letters and kept alive the ties with home.

Rapidity of the carriage and delivery of letters today should encourage the closest contact in writing between those who are at home and those who are abroad. So news from home and from the camps and bases can be quite recent and up to the minute. This should increase the use of mails.

'Day of Vengeance Not Far Off'

Two years ago Mussolini began his treacherous attack on Greece. Two years after the aggressor had sent his legions against the Greeks, Prime Minister Churchill is able to say in an address to the Greek people who are absolutely confident that victory is ahead for the United Nations, that "the day of vengeance is not far off."

Greeks who are outside their country, are in the field, and plan for the time when they will join with the suffering Greeks in the homeland which their ancestors made glorious and where they built a civilization which has been one of the great lights of the world.

To look at the people in Greece is to admire their supreme courage and steadfastness and to find an inspiration for the world.

The Greeks who were the first to become the great flower of European civilization and who gained freedom for the intellect, the body and the spirit, will not remain in suffering at the cruel hands of the Nazis and the Fascists of Italy. They, who first saw the full light of freedom in Europe and have spread its influence forward for twenty-five centuries and more, will be free.

'Spirit of People at Home'

"It is the spirit of the people at home that wins wars" was the striking sentence of an Essex Scot who had been in the Dieppe raid where his brother and also his chum were taken prisoner by the enemy. These words the Windsor Star used to head the story of his letter.

Sergeant W. R. Graham, the writer also said, "Those of us over here must have something to fight for and it is the spirit you people are showing that proves we are fighting on the right side."

This soldier also praised the city of Windsor and its people. "I have read the Star's account of the raid and read that the people of Windsor are proud of their regiment. Well, we are proud of the people of our city. So many homes were struck by the Dieppe business but there is no sign of whining. Just the quiet grief and courage of a strong and understanding people. If only I could put my feelings and thoughts on paper, not only my feelings but also those of all the fellows that came back! We are really proud of all the Mrs. Murphys, and Mrs. O'Connors and Mrs. Percys. Their sons were our friends. You can be sure we will avenge them."

It is an eloquent tribute to the home folk and it is the tribute that the soldiers, sailors and airmen anywhere are all pleased to pay. It is well that the people at home appreciate how great a part they have to play in inspiring those who go into the dangers of war for their homes and firesides, the national ideals of right and justice, and in all for the heritage which is Canada's.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

A MAN'S A MAN

The difference in pay between British and American troops is well known, and the personal problems caused by the discrepancy are no doubt being anxiously considered. — Daily Telegraph, Aug. 1.
(From the New Statesman and Nation).

What though the doughboy has mair dough
To fling about an' a' that?
We canna go by outward show
A man's a man for a' that.
For a' that an' a' that
His braw turn-out an' a' that,
What though our lassies love him weel?
We'll ne'er fall out a' that.

What though on hamelier fare we dine,
On blankets lie, an' a' that?
We'll no begrudge his linen fine,
His sarks an' sheets an' a' that.

Lives there in honest affluence
That lifts his head an' a' that
Are whit the less of worth an' sense?
The man's nae gowk for a' that.

We mauna hate our enemy,
As gospel learns an' a' that,
There's reason mair we should agree
To love our friens' than a' that.
We twa anenst the bar will meet,
Tak' glass for glass an' a' that;
Though ye down stoups of whisky neat
While I drink beer an' a' that.

Then here's a toast, my trusty frien'
An' gie's a hand for a' that,
Ye hae five times as much to spend,
You're nane the waur for a' that.
For a' that an' a' that,
Our lousy pay an' a' that,
Each willie-waught inspires the thought
We'll buddies be for a' that.

BUT HE RECOVERED

There is the story of the demure young airwoman whose daily job at the Trenton Air Station is connected with the staff of the Senior Equipment Officer, Squadron Leader Norman A. Nunn.

Approached by a station officer with regard to purchasing Victory Bonds, the young Airwoman 2 smilingly said she would invest in the Loan.

"How much?" smilingly enquired the S.O., expecting perhaps fifty or one hundred dollars payroll plan.

"Oh, let me see," replied the AW 2. "I'll take bonds to the amount of $3,000." And she forthwith signed a cheque for that amount and handed it to the officer, who at that moment was looking at the world through a misty haze of surprise.

However, there was no "catch" to the story. After handing over the cheque the AW 2 resumed her work as if nothing had happened.

A REMARKABLE WOMAN

In 1750, says an English exchange, one Hannah Snell, born at Worcester, England, who had served several years as a marine in Fraser's regiment by the name of James Gray, and had gone to the East-Indies in Admiral Boscawen's squadron, and was at the siege of Pondicherry, presented a petition to the Duke of Cumberland, praying that some provision be made for her on her discharge from service. His Royal Highness referred her petition to General Fraser, to report to him the truth of it; which report being made, His Royal Highness was pleased to order her to be put upon the King's list, by which she obtained a pension of 30 pounds a year for her life. It seems, her sweetheart being impressed into the marine service, she put on men's clothes, and entered into the same regiment, went in the same ship with him to the East Indies, and was his mess-mate while he lived (he dying on the voyage), and was a servant to one of the lieutenants. She behaved with great intrepidity as a sailor and soldier; and her sex was never discovered, either by her sweetheart, or any of her comrades, till she made the discovery herself by the above-mentioned petition. What was further remarkable in this heroine, was that in the battle of Pondicherry she received 12 wounds, six in her right leg, five in her left, and the other in the groin; from the last of which she extracted the ball, and herself performed the cure, to prevent her sex being discovered.

LOVE OF FREEDOM

No matter what, by evil men
Of Hitler's kind, may yet be wrought,
While still the sun shall rise again
And minds are open still to thought,
In every land will heroes be
Teaching the doctrines of the free.

However strong the tyrant grows,
Or seems to grow, by night and day
In places which he never knows
Will liberty's defenders stay.
For sword and gunfire, lash and chain,
The love of freedom can't restrain.

No tyrant yet has held his friends
Or kept his followers for long.
When power on power alone depends,
It dives, but seldom leads the throng.
The writing's plain upon the wall:
Who rules by force to force shall fall.

Man's love of freedom never dies.
The humblest slave, whoe'er he be,
Believes that some day he will rise
To fight again for liberty.
And be it soon or be it late
For that day he will work and wait.

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

Let's Concentrate on Fighting the Enemy

New York, Oct. 30 — In my last column I remarked that the quarrels now raging inside the Anglo-American world, particularly over the question of the ultimate picture of the British Empire, are the more unfortunate and irresponsible because the German situation is by no means good—politically or militarily. If we would concentrate our political energies upon psychological warfare against our enemy in the West—Adolf Hitler and his Nazis — we would find a situation to exploit. Instead, we are creating political situations for that enemy to exploit.

Here are a few facts which I have received, through various channels, from Germany, and which I believe to be authentic:

Hans Frank, the Governor-General of Poland, has been removed for the following reasons:

1. He spoke at a lawyer's conference in Vienna on the limited sovereignty of Hitler's Allies, the candid inference being that Hungary and Rumania and Italy are now permanently and forever in a Germanic sphere of influence as second-class partners.

2. The German Reichswehr, dissatisfied with his political tactics in Poland, urged him to attempt a reconciliation, through the former German Ambassador to Poland, von Moltke, and the former Polish Ambassador to Berlin, Wysocki, looking toward a detente. The Polish Ambassador refused. The move was started because of apprehension in German military circles regarding the Polish situation in their rear, in case of further setbacks in Russia.

3. The Gestapo circles claim Frank was too weak, and want an outright dictatorship of the Gestapo in Poland. This is very unsatisfactory to the army, which wanted exactly the opposite, namely a reconciliation.

Shake-Up Shows Unrest.

The shake-up in Poland only illustrates unrest in party and military leadership. The fantastic fact is that no one knows who is in command of the German Army at the moment or for months past. The Commander-in-Chief is Hitler but only as Mr. Roosevelt is Commander-in-Chief of the United States Forces.

There are three general staffs in Germany. There is, first, the High Command of the Wehrmacht, presided over by General Field Marshal Keitel. He has the function of co-ordinating the functions of army, navy and air force. In reality, Keitel is nothing—a bureaucrat, not a planner of grand strategy. He has served, in turn, under von Schleicher, Blomberg and Hitler.

Hitler has a private general staff of his own, headed by General Jodl, the man most susceptible to Hitler's imaginative, intuitive and adventurous ideals of war.

In the military hierarchy this staff always has had merely an advisory capacity — although in reality this advice often has been decisive.

But General Jodl has no responsibility for the execution of the wa plan. That depends upon a third general staff — the general staff of the army.

And who is now in charge of this general staff is a complete secret. It was von Brauschitsch. But he is out. It has been assumed that General Halder has the position. But it now seems that he has been out for weeks.

And for a German war to be waged under anonymous leadership is, truly something remarkable in German history.

And who is in charge of the three sectors of the Russian front?

In the Northern sector, before Leningrad, the leader was General Field Marshal Wilhelm Ritter von Leeb, considered by international military experts to have been the master mind of German military science, a man comparable to the elder von Moltke, or von Schlieffen. But von Leeb is out.

In the Central sector, before Moscow, it was until last December, Field Marshal Von Bock, also a general of immense distinction and intellect. He was transferred to the southern sector — from which he has since been removed—and his successor is unknown.

In the Southern sector, the commander-in-chief was first von Rundstedt, then von Bock, and is now—unknown.

Traditions Violated

There are speculations about the successorship. Before Leningrad it may be von Kuechler; before Moscow von Kluge, and in the South Hoth. All three are mediocrities.

A roster of those who have disappeared in this war, by resignation or dismissal, reads like a who's who of German military science. It includes Blaskowitz, conqueror of Warsaw. He protested against the mistreatment of the Polish population, and was removed. Also von Witzleben (he may have a small command in the Balkans) and Guderian (one of the great tacticians of the war and a tank expert).

The Russian war and the manner in which it was waged went against all the principles laid down in the German War College for twenty years. Opposition to the Austrian and Czecho-Slovak program, which was bound in their minds to precipitate an Eastern and Russian war, lay behind the early dismissal of Beck and von Fritsch. The war Hitler is fighting in Russia was the one warned against, as an axiom, by the late General von Seeckt, the builder of the modern German Army. And the outcome of the Russian war to date is the one foreseen by the leading military scientists of Germany.

There is, therefore, trouble in Germany, and we shall be concentrating on it every moment and in every speech, fighting our enemies with deeds and words, playing upon their difficulties—instead of carrying on a political campaign against our allies.

SINGLE OR MARRIED?

The great number of questionnaires that must be filled out by individuals because of the war program calls attention to the fact that there is no satisfactory word in the English language to denote a woman of marriageable age who is single and who has never been married.

"Unmarried" may apply to persons of either sex, but it indicates only his or her present status without revealing marital history.

"Single" is open to the same objection. Many men and women refer to themselves as "unmarried" or "single" when they have been married but are not now married.

These terms apply alike to widows, widowers, divorced persons and to persons who have never been married.

Of a man who has never been married we may say he is a "bachelor," a term generally acceptable to bachelors.

But for some reason or other women of marriageable age who have never been married shy away from the use of such terms as "spinster," "maiden lady," "old maid," "bachelor girl," etc.

Slang has supplied substitutes, such as "bachelorette," "bachelette," "lady in waiting," "lost hope," "quail," "spin," and many others; but these terms do not fill the bill, are in bad taste and for obvious reasons are not acceptable to those to whom they are applied.

The genius of the English language has yet to provide a satisfactory and unambiguous term to denote a person of unspecified sex who is single and who has never been married.

Perhaps some of my readers can coin a satisfactory word that will answer the purpose and help all bachelors and spinsters who must fill out questionnaires.

The French word "divorcee" has been accepted into English as meaning either a man or a woman who has been divorced.

Formerly "grass widow" was applied to a woman who was divorced or separated from her husband, but now it means a woman who is temporarily away from her husband.

Original Play, Poem Feature School Concert

Queen Mary School Students Present Victory Loan Program

Featured by an original poem and play, the composition of the students taking part, the Victory Loan Concert of Queen Mary School held Thursday afternoon in the school auditorium was a fine success. The visitors were warmly welcomed to the program by the Principal Mr. C. I. Frederick and an inspiring address by Mr. Clayton Burr, later in the program, stressed the purpose of the concert, to promote interest in the Victory Loan campaign.

A chorus by Miss Elson's class "Bells are Ringing" opened the program followed by a piano duet by Jean Scott and Betty Gibson. An original choral reading by Miss Leslie's class "Buy Victory Bonds" was very well done. A chorus by Miss Hart's class "There's a Purple Tint" was followed by a choral reading by Miss Moorcroft's class.

The audience had an opportunity of hearing read by Donna Ferguson, her essay which won first prize for elementary schools in the Victory Loan essay contest. The essay entitled "How boys and girls can help in the war effort?" was very clever winning in competition with four thousand essayists in Hastings County. A chorus was given by Miss Mangold's class.

An original play "Buy Victory Bonds" by Miss Laurel Arkil's class won high praise from the audience. Those taking part were Joan Hiles as Mrs. Jones, David Kane as her nephew, Leo Marcus and Murray Lennox as Victory Loan salesmen and June Archer as Mrs. Johnson.

Mr. Clayton Burr addressed the audience on the importance of supporting the Victory Loan campaign now in progress. He urged his hearers to do everything in their power to help their country do its part in the war. Working individually perhaps little can be accomplished but by all coming together in one great effort, the result will be a force to make its influence felt. It is not only a duty but a privilege to invest in bonds for Victory, and nothing matters now but victory.

A tap dance was given by Betty Vesterfelt and the playlet "The Victory Picture in which pupils of Grade Eight took part was a most interesting number on the program. The principal characters were that of the artist—Bruce Neal, Billy—Bruce Doolittle; Alice—Jean White and the soldier—Don Kleinsteuber. A song by Mr. Bates' class "Venice" and a poem read by Illene Palmer concluded the numbers on the program.

Mr. Frederick invited all parents to visit the school and classrooms informally during education week which begins on November 9. become acquainted with their children's teachers and with the aims of the school.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

17, AND IN LOVE WITH SOLDIER.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm terribly in love with a young man of whom my father disapproves because he is of a different nationality. We went together for a year and intended to be married, when he was drafted into the Army. Now he's on the other side of the States, and goodness only knows when I'll see him again.

Do you think I should keep on corresponding with him while he's in the Army? I know he loves me as much as I love him, and although I'm only 18 years old I'm willing to wait until he returns. My mother thinks now that he's far away I'll forget about him. But I know I won't.

— SENIOR.

"The course of true love never runs smooth." If you and this young soldier care enough about each other, you won't mind proving it by waiting a year or two. In the meantime, keep on writing to him, make your letters cheerful and friendly. Perhaps by the time he comes back, your mother will have changed her mind.

Widower Wants to Marry

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My wife died six months ago, leaving me with an infant baby and two children of six and nine. My mother-in-law has been looking after them but I don't feel like imposing on her any longer because she's not so young.

My friends tell me I ought to marry again, and I have two very nice ladies in mind. One is an older sister of my wife, who lives in another city and is employed in an office. The other girl is a girl of 19 who lives in the same apartment, and helps my mother-in-law to look after things.

However, my sister says it would be disgraceful for me to marry before the year is out. What do you think about it and which of these two ladies would make the best choice? I'm 34 years old and there's some chance of my being drafted, and I want to be sure my children are in good hands.

—CONFUSED.

Waiting for the year to be up, as a gesture to public opinion, has always seemed hypocritical to me, when there is any definite reason for people to marry sooner.

It's almost too much to exppect of human nature that you will be guided by any suggestion I offer. But it seems to me that the older lady would make a better stepmother for your children. She is your deceased wife's sister, and would naturally be fond of the children from the start.

A 19-year-old girl acting as a stepmother to three children would terribly risk happiness, not to mention your own. Do give this younger girl a chance with someone nearer her age..

Unexpected Callers

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

When unexpected callers arrive at a time when we are planning to go out, should we stay at home, or leave after explaining that we were planning to go out?

Mrs.

Callers who drop in unexpectedly should naturally, be prepared to adapt themselves to the circumstances. If you and your family are just about to leave when the callers arrive, you needn't and shouldn't hesitate to explain. They are guests by chance, and they should graciously accept this chance.

As in all other circumstances that may be awkward, there are gracious ways of doing this explaining. For example, you may say, "It was delightful to have you drop in, and I do wish we could ask you to stay. But we were just leaving for Nancy Smith's, and she's expecting us to arrive for tea at five o'clock. Do let us know when you can come again—and please do make it soon".

Certainly no friend worth having could possibly be offended by a polite and straightforward explanation.

Formal Name Only

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

When a woman is at a community bridge party, and her name is called up for the press, should she give her name as "Mrs. John Robinson" or as "Mrs. Katherine Robinson"?

Reader

She should give her formal name . . . Mrs. John Robinson. Mrs. Katherine Robinson is never a correct form, under any circumstances.

Birthday Party

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

When attending a girl's birthday party, should a young man take a present, and if he should, what do you suggest?

Ted

It's a gallant gesture for a young man to send the girl a corsage to arrive at her home on the afternoon of the birthday party, or to take the corsage with him. Or he may bring her a box of candy, or a book, or some handkerchiefs, or some sheet music or phonograph records.

Anniversary Service is Held At Melville Church

On Sunday evening, October 25, anniversary service was conducted in Melville United Church with the pastor, Rev. Peter Tiller in charge and Mrs. Charles Kinnear, organist. Mr. Tiller preached a stirring sermon referring to the wonderful work of Moses under Divine guidance and claiming this guidance to us today in order that life might be worthwhile. A quartette of little girls, Sybil Hardy, Gladys Anne Kinnear, Una McIntyre and June Garbutt contributed a vocal selection and Mr. J. Wickson sang a solo with full choir chorus. A number from the Burr and Bowerman appointments attended the service.

Anniversary Social

On Monday evening a social was held with Rev. Mr. Tiller in the chair and opened with singing "O Canada" with Miss Velma Vandewater pianist. Musical selections included a vocal solo by Gladys A. Kinnear; two piano selections by Miss Vandewater; and an orchestra selection by the Misses Mikel. Humorous readings by Miss M. Hutchinson of Wellington and addresses by Rev. Mr. Adamson of Ameliasburg and Rev. Mr. Lane of Wellington, were much appreciated. A Hallowe'en chorus by the school children in costume was very nicely rendered. After singing the National Anthem, a social hour with refreshments closed a pleasant anniversary.

Not All Cases of Dry Pleurisy Due to Tuberculosis

When night sweating is excessive and the person has a temperature with coughing, tuberculosis is suspected. However, there is another disease of the lungs which may start in much the same way. In this trouble, however, there is no fever, but there develops a general illness with a pain in the chest. This trouble is brought on by what has been called dry pleurisy. Pleurisy means inflammation of the lining membrance of the chest cavity and over the lungs.

Dr. Joseph Smart of London, England, advises that it has been thought that in most cases this dry pleurisy was due to tuberculosis. So, in many cases those who were affected with it were put to bed for a period of from six to twelve months. However, Dr. Smart has recently made a study of a number of patients suffering from this condition, by taking X-rays after a substance known as lipiodol was introduced into the lung. He found that in some of the patients a condition known as bronchiectasis was present. By bronchiectasis is meant a stretching of the bronchi the small tubes in the lungs. He believes that bronchiectasis may cause pleurisy.

Bronchiectasis usually causes such symptoms as coughing and the bringing up of large amounts of sputum, but these symptoms are not present in all cases. It is Dr. Smart's belief that the pleurisy in these patients with bronchiectasis develops because of an infection of the lung around the stretched bronchus. These patients do not need a long period of rest in bed for recovery. During an acute attack of pain, it is suggested that the patient be kept at rest and warm, that the chest be strapped with adhesive tape to limit the movement, and that the cough be relieved by the use of such drugs as the physician may prescribe.

In between attacks of bronchiectasis an effort should be made to build up the patient's general health by giving him a well-balanced diet and various vitamin preparations. Efforts should also be made to keep infection from reoccurring. This is done by getting rid of any infections in the nose, throat or tonsils and the patient is also advised to keep out of crowded places because of the increased chance of picking up some respiratory infection.

While bronchiectasis and inflammation around the bronchi do not account for all cases of dry pleurisy, these conditions are responsible for a number of cases. It is true that in some instances the pleurisy is produced by tuberculosis. In order to make a diagnosis the use of the X-ray with lipiodol will be helpful. Of course, the sputum should be tested for the presence of tuberculosis germs. If it is found that the pleurisy is caused by the bronchiectasis, the treatment as outlined may be found helpful.

By ALICE ALDEN

The lure of lace never lessens. Whether it is used for a frock of fluffy ruffles or a model that is softly tailored, it is the ideal medium for dinner and evening clothes. It packs beautifully and if it is of good quality can go on blithely season after season giving good service and satisfaction. Barbara Britton wears a youthful and charming blue lace frock, one that is tailored yet feminine. It is made with a short-sleeved bodice fastened with jewelled buttons and with a turned-back collar of cut-out lace. The long slim skirt has knife-pleats stitched to the hemline.

Carmel

The October meeting of the W. M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. Frank Hicks. The president, Mrs. Seldon Homan presided, opening the meeting with a hymn. The president read the first two verses, the members continued to say the remaining verses. The verse was read by the president, "Building a Community of Christian Homes." A general thanksgiving prayer was then read together. A discussion on the lessons was indulged in after which Mrs. Simmons gave a reading connected with the lesson entitled "Our Most Valuable Asset." The business part was taken. Mrs. Simmons called the roll in the absence of the secretary, Mrs. Patterson. Twelve responded. Mrs. John Homan then took charge of the program giving the topic on the standard of living, after which a hymn was sung. A reading by Mrs. Morman and a solo by Miss Hazel Hicks, "It Pays to Serve Jesus" was greatly enjoyed. Mrs. Blake Pitman gave a reading on Thanksgiving. The temperance lesson was answered by a reading from Miss M. Jones, entitled, "Pink Silk Stockings" which was both humorous and valuable.

Mrs. Pitman outlined the high lights on Canada in the missionary work and Mrs. Frank Hicks read a piece connected with the Christian stewardship, "Responsible Leadership." The meeting closed with hymn 500 and the prayer. The hostess served refreshments at which a social half hour was spent.

SOMETHING NEW is the dressy wool trimmed with glitter, a nice thought in these reduced fuel oil times. Brown woolen dressed up with copper sequin rose appliques makes a nice and warm after-five frock.

EVERY PLACE is the place for colors, say the designers. And so a hat trimmed with silver fox has the fox head with bright red eyes and at the side is a paw cluster, its nails a matching bright red.

A USEFUL FRIEND in any wardrobe is the good fur-trimmed suit. Black woollen is used for a slim suit with mink revers and a scarf-draped collar of mink. Worn with a blouse of brown lace bands.

A GOOD IDEA is that of the coat of smooth woollen in a tawny gold color. It is made on topcoat style with a half-belt in back. It is possible to detach the fabric half belt and button in its place a half belt of leopard fur. Worn with a suit that has a leopard collar.

BRIGHTEN UP your after-five suit with a weskit of sequins in black or copper or midnight blue.

The First Commandment in First Aid

One of the good things that comes from the war is the interest in First Aid. Everywhere, even in small villages, First Aid classes are being formed and the members of the class learn the correct manner of handling the injured, and water, gas, and electricity accidents.

So widespread is the interest in First Aid that our humorists and cartoonists are using it in their strips or columns. I have spoken before of one class in which the young man being treated for a "supposed" broken leg was allowed to fall off the table and really did break his leg. In putting him into the ambulance he was not pushed far enough forward and the door being forcibly closed struck his head and caused concussion. The humorous comment was that with a few more lessons this class could be set against the enemy.

A dairly cartoon about youngsters shows the little heroine trying First Aid methods on youngsters whom her boy friend had damaged in order to give her the necessary cases on which to practise.

As a matter of fact, the first lesson taught by the instructor to a First Aid class is that they are not learning to be doctors but to do the right thing until the doctor arrives, thereby preventing complications and saving life. Many physicians, including myself, can testify to the skill and judgment of the members of these classes. I have taught First Aid classes and have worked with members of the Red Cross and St. John's Ambulance Corps.

My point in writing about First Aid is to emphasize the importance of the first lesson given by the First Aid instructors which is that what not to do is as important as what to do.

Dr. H. E. MacDermott, Editor of the Canadian Medical Journal, in his Editorial Comments says: "There is great value in a widespread knowledge of First Aid methods and there can be nothing but encouragement of the movement. At the same time experience shows that enthusiasm to learn and practise First Aid must be kept within proper bounds. The First Aider must realize his limits and never exceed them. That is the first and great commandment in his work".

"First Aid is largely a combination of physiology and common sense. Of physiology we can never know too much, and without common sense the most profound knowledge may be of no avail".

AMERICAN TROOPS

the American planes set shore installations on fire and destroyed four seaplanes boosting the Japanese plane toll of 413 since the campaign started.

Allied aircraft from Australia blasted at enemy shipping in the Solomons. Flying fortresses straddle-bombed five unidentified vessels at the Japanese naval base at Buin at the southern tip of Bougainville Island causing a heavy explosion on one ship.

Simultaneously, Australian troops were reported to be hurling the Japanese back in New Guinea. A bayonet charge yesterday (Australian time) resulted in capture of 20 prisoners and helped keep the Allied advance unchecked.

Japanese Treachery

An example of Japanese treachery in the South Pacific warfare also was made public by the navy yesterday in releasing a dispatch written by Sgt. Richard T. Wright, a marine corps combat correspondent.

Honoring a flag of truce borne by a Japanese officer, 28 of 30 marines were massacred when they sought to take custody of "a bunch of Japs" who, the officer said, were isolated on a nearby island and wanted to surrender."

As the 30 marines drew near the island they were met without warning by "a terrific burst from several machine-guns hidden in the underbrush", Wright wrote.

"They were mowed down like so many stalks of corn," he added, "except for the two who escaped and swam to safety".

Owner Warned Of Blaze By Pet Parrott

Wooler, Oct. 30—(Special)—Except for the excited calling of a pet parrot which wakened the owner after his bake shop was doomed with fire, the entire business section of this village might have been wiped out early Friday morning.

Mr. Jack Bull, Wooler bake shop proprietor, was wakened shortly after one-thirty this Friday morning when his parrot excitedly called "Jack, Jack." He looked out his window to discover his bake shop a mass of flames, and only the prompt work of a volunteer fire brigade hastily summoned held the flames from spreading to nearby buildings. The bake shop, together with two tons of flour and all equipment was a total loss.

The Trenton Fire Brigade made a quick eight-mile run to assist in fighting the flames, which threatened to spread in the stiff breeze which was blowing directly toward the centre of the village. At one time, it was reported, the entire village was in danger, but a bucket brigade, assisted by the Trenton fire-fighting equipment, held the flames in check.

No estimate of the damage was made by early morning although it is known to be considerable. It was not learned whether the bake shop property was covered by insurance.

Pte. D. Wellman Prisoner of War

Allan Mills, (Special)—Reported missing since December 15th, 1941, several days prior to the fall of Hong Kong, Private David Wellman, Canadian Royal Rifles, son of Mrs. Jennie Wellman of Bonarlaw, is now a prisoner of war at Hong Kong, according to a cable received yesterday from Ottawa by his mother.

Private Wellman was a member of the Canadian Royal Rifles detailed to Hong Kong last fall to strengthen the Imperial garrison there. Shortly after the arrival of the Canadians at the far eastern port, war was declared by Japan on Britain and America. Since that time Mrs. Wellman had received no word from her son and doubts were felt for his safety. According to the cable received last night Private Wellman is alive and well.

Reported Safe

Private Raymond Anderson, another Bonarlaw district boy who was reported missing following the Dieppe raid, is back with his unit in England. Last Sunday he spent the day with two other brothers, Clarence and Lorne, who are now in Britain.

Large Attendance At A.R.P. Lecture

Outspoken addresses by Captain McIntyre Hood, secretary, of the Ontario Civilian Defence Committee, at various meetings held in Belleville earlier in the week apparently had the desired effect of bringing local residents to realize the need for air raid precautionary training, it was reported by Mr. Harold Seldon, vice chairman of the local defence committee.

For the first time since the organization of the defence committee in this city several weeks ago, the lecture room at the Y.M.C.A. was filled to capacity on Wednesday night for the fourth of a series of lectures on basic air raid precautionary methods. Also for the first time since the lectures started, there were greater numbers of men than women in attendance.

Evident of the interest which members of the local organization are beginning to take is the fact that at this week's lecture meeting members expressed a desire to get ahead with the specialized training in the various categories into which the committee will be divided.

A great many of the men expressed the desire to volunteer for the auxiliary fire fighting unit of the civilian defence committee and arrangements were made to have these members attend a demonstration of equipment at the fire hall on Sunday morning.

More equipment will soon be received from the provincial headquarters, it was stated by Mr. Seldon. Arrangements were made for the shipment of the equipment at an executive meeting held during the visit of Captain Hood. Included in the air raid equipment scheduled for Belleville in the near future are 100 stirrup pumps, bomb scoops, steel helmets, first air equipment, stretchers and haversacks for the use of air raid wardens and first aid services.

This week's lecture was on war gases, the talk being given by Mr. William Dougherty, local Martin Senour representative.

Japs Slay Priest, 1,000 Orphans

Chungking, Oct. 30 — (AP) — Charges that the Japanese during their brief occupation of northeastern Kiangsi province last summer killed hundreds of Chinese Christians and wrecked more than a score of missions were made in a letter from a Catholic priest received in Chungking today.

The writer, whose nationality was not disclosed, said that a Yukiang the Japanse killed an Italian Catholic priest, Father Vedrini, and 35 Chinese orphans or aged persons under his car and threw the bodies into an open pit.

The letter estimated that at least 1,000 Chinese Christians were killed by the Japanese or died of cruelties inflicted by them.

VESSEL HARD AGROUND

Sudbury, Oct. 30—(CP)—Efforts will be made today to free a tug which is hard aground at the mouth of Blind River Harbor. The boat, the Spragge of Sault Ste. Marie, ran aground on a shoal about 10 o'clock Thursday night in heavy fog.

A heavy sea is rolling this morning along the north channel making it difficult to send another boat to its assistance.

PROVED HIS POINT

Spokane, Wash., Oct. 30 —(AP) —Joe V. Godfrey, a United States marine, came home from the Solomon Islands with a story of a marine who forgot the password when challenged by the sentry. "Don't shoot," he cried. "I'm a marine, too." Remembering that Japanese have trouble pronouncing the letter "L," he quickly proved his point by saying "sparkle, sparkle, sparkle!"

McCready and Watson Wrestle Ninety Minutes to Draw Each Man Securing Only One Fall

Both Wrestlers Injured by Falling From Ring but Continue Bout

MARTINEZ WINS

Late on the evening of October 21st "Whipper Billie" Watson and Earl McCready, both former British Empire wrestling champions, commenced a ring feud that hasn't seen a winner declared yet. Of course these two highly-rated/ musclebenders haven't staged anything like a six-day bike race in a rasslin' ring but after 150 minutes of as punishing rasslin' as the average bone-crushing fan could desire, the ring beligerents are no further ahead in their efforts than they were when Referee Phil Lawson sent them on their way on that delightful autumn evening at the Hume arena over a week ago.

In their initial meeting Watson and McCready staged a crowd-pleasing 60-minute scrap, that ended without either gaining a fall. Before 1,100 eager rasslin' patrons, at the local sports palace last night, Watson and McCready resumed hostilities and after 90 minutes of scientific wrestling they were just about where they started on the night of Oct. 21st. However, last night the feature attraction kept the patrons well entertained until long after the midnight hour as each clamped on a fall, both were counted out of the ring and had to retire to their respective dressing rooms to nurse injuries before resuming hostilities in a 90-minute scrap, that ended in a draw before the time limit gong ended the show at exactly 12.05, or one hour and 55 minutes after they had first entered the squared circle.

Strange Things Happen

Strange things happened during the bout as both Watson and McCready deviated somewhat from their usual favoured holds. McCready centred his attack on a full leg head scissors, while Watson reverted to hammerlocks in an effort to whittle McCready down. The bout was crammed with fast, clean and scientific rasslin' until the final few seconds, when both Watson and McCready reverted to a resemblance of roughness in a last-minute futile effort to win at any costs.

Cagedly the grapplers sparred at the opening, neither presenting openings with the result eleven minutes had elapsed before Watson gained the first drop to the canvas with a reverse rolling arm lock. McCready squirmed out and assumed the aggressive role of the picture with a full nelson, but this was no go. All concerned in the patrons seats were amused when Watson, McCready and Referee Lawson became tangled in a trio of legs and arms in the ropes before McCready applied the leverage with a full leg scissors for a full seven minutes, which naturally did "The Whipper" no good. Watson tried some muscle-bending on his own account and pitched McCready bodily from the ring and everybody was happy. When "Big Earl" attempted to return Watson drove with a flying tackle and both crashed out of the squared circle resulting in injuries to Watson's back and McCready's wrist. They lay prostrate outside the ropes as Referee Lawson tolled the fatal ten count. The official ruled they must return, as the bout was advertised over the 90-minute route, so with willing hands applying adhesive tape to Watson's kidneys and McCready's wrist the combatants resumed hostilities after 51 minutes.

First Fall to McCready

The first fall soon came to McCready, who centred his attack on Watson's injured back and literally had "The Whip" out on his feet and won following three torrid body slams in 24 minutes, or 75 minutes after the opening gong. Watson came back strongly, but had to revert to his famed "avalanche hold" to even matters at the 83 minute mark and the boys were still slugging it out toe-to-toe when the final 90-minute bell halted the longest wrestling bout ever completed in Belleville.

In the roughest bout ever seen locally Pedro Martinez, the villainous Mexican, did little orthodox wrestling to beat Ivan (the bearded) Kalminoff, from Benton Harbor after 18 minutes of anything but modern rasslin'. Martinez kicked, gouged and pounded his lighter adversary into submission, as he proudly displayed a new pair of bright red wrestling shoes. However, the fans did not appreciate the Mexican's ring antics and displayed their feelings by refusing to give him a hearing, when he entered the ring prior to the main bout to challenge the winner. Although the Martinez-Kalminoff bout was poorly matched, it marked the 12th straight win in a Belleville ring for the pugnacious Mexican and Promoter Frank Tunney promised him a main bout spot here soon, possibly next week against a suitable opponent.

In the curtain-raiser Walter Sirois, the globe-trotting Frenchman, wrestled a 30 minute draw with Jack Wentworth of Stoney Creek. Cliff Fox, Belleville, capably handled this bout, as Sirois delighted the patrons by demonstrating punishing holds on the would-be villain, Wentworth. Wrestling will continue at the Hume arena next Wednesday night.

BISONS DEFEATED BY PROVIDENCE

Reds Enter Game Minus Six Players They Had Counted On

By The Associated Press

Buffalo Bisons, who already had two victories in the young American Hockey League season, were defeated 5-2 by Providence Reds last night.

It was the Reds' first game and 3,500 fans came out. Providence entered the game minus six players it had counted on when the campaign opened earlier in the week.

They lost GGabby Sherwood, star forward during the last four campaigns, to the Canadian Army two days ago, and five of its members were detained at the border awaiting travelling permits. The Reds borrowed three players from the league, which is keeping several players in reserve for strengthening weak teams.

All told, only 12 Providence players were on hand.

Jack Forsey scored two goals, one of which came in the first period after Fred Thurier had put the Bisons in front earlier.

Rookie wingman Don Webster and Forsey sent the Reds ahead in the second period with one goal each.

Bob Dill scored early in thte final round for Buffalo but George Kelly and Ab Demarco each netted for the Reds' final two counters.

It was the only contest of the night and no more are scheduled until Saturday when six of the circuits' eight teams swing into action.

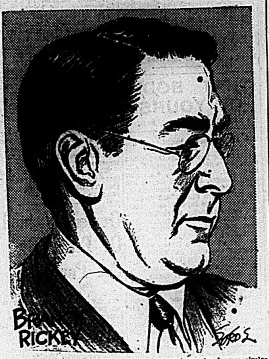
NEW DODGER BOSS



The man who originated the farm system in major league circles, Branch Rickey, who yesterday was signed to a five-year contract as President and General Manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers of the National Baseball League. He succeeds Larry McPhail, who resigned to take a commission in the United States Army. Rickey's salary was not announced by the Dodgers' Board of Directors, but his salary and commissions with the St. Louis Cardinals ran as high as $75,000. Rickey quit the Cardinals after differences with President Sam Breadon.

Toronto, Oct. 30 (CP)—Port Arthur Bearcats, who gave Ottawa R.C.A.F. Flyers a mighty battle in the Allan Cup hockey finals last spring, are contemplating a two-week barn-storming tour of eastern Canada because they are without competition in the Thunder Bay area this season. In addition to most of the Bearcat veterans, they have new talent such as Norm Larson, former Brooklyn Americans forward, Stan Robertson, one-time Port William Cornwall and Quebec centre, and Jim Hill, Lakehead goalie.

Dick (Port Arthur News-Chronicle) Elliot says: "The squad couldn't miss being a tremendous drawing card, particularly in Ottawa, Toronto and Montreal, where the 'Cats won thousands of new friends last spring....Presumably plans for the tour do not mean that on their return home the Bearcats will be through with hockey, and it may be that the trip will be arranged in such a way that shortly after their return the 'Cats will be ready for the more serious Allan Cup competition. In that event the tour would be not earlier than February."

Facts:

Clancy Loranger, who succeeded Stu (Royal Canadian Navy) Keate as Vancouver Province sports columnist, dug into the British Columbia hockey situation, still in the formative stage, and came out with "facts" such as: "Hockey on the west coast is played on artificial ice. All available pure ice is used for highballs....Hockey pucks are made of rubber. Please throw 'em back... The man in charge of play during a hockey game is officially called a referee. Unofficially, well—that's another story.

Puck Patter:

Toronto Maple Leafs were angling earnestly for Toomy Cooper, St. Catharines right winger, until they were advised no National Selective Service permit would be granted to allow him to play professional hockey....Before this decision cooled Leafs' ardor, Coach Happy Day had said of Cooper: "If we had him on a line with Gaye Stewart we would have one of the fastest pairs of wings in hockey....Major Gus Sivertz, army press liaison officer at Vancouver, says that the former Toronto Leafs star, Nick Metz, will not play with the Victoria army hockey team this season as previously reported but is likely to be playing coach with Vancouvers army entry.. Toronto's air force hockey team lost a pair of last season's National Hockey League rookies when Frank Eddolls of Toronto Leafs and Ken Mosdell of Brooklyn Americans were transferred to Montreal.

BALMY BEACH HIT HARD BY INJURIES BEFORE BIG GAME

Five on Sidelines Including Two Speedy Backs, McKelvey and Smythe

PLAY HURRICANES

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The injury jinx has struck again at Toronto Balmy Beach, this time in force, but the latest misfortune probably will be accepted with stoical calm. Beaches learned long ago that the football dice are always loaded. Against Beaches, that is.

Coach Alex Ponton, better than anyone else, could recite some tearful tales about how some sort of hoodoo, like the waterboy wearing a green tie or a halfback running the wrong way, always managed to overtake Balmies at the crucial psychological moment. He could, but he is probably too busy with his latest calamity to bother.

This time it's injuries. The casualty list includes Ross McKelvey (kidney injury) and Don Smythe (conked elbow). Both are swift young backs. Assorted injuries will keep linemen Jack Young, Leo Deadey and possibly Butch Alison out of the lineup. On top of that, Murray Griffin seems to have deserted camp.

It couldn't have happened at a more unfortunate time. A week ago, Beaches were at their peak with four straight victories. If anybody was going to catch Royal Canadian Air Force Hurricanes, it looked like the Balmies could do it. But now, if they take the Flyers Saturday in the first half of the weekly Ontario Union doubleheader in Varsity Stadium, it could go down in history.

Beaches have a special incentive against the undefeated Hurricanes. The last time the two teams met, Flyers won 40-6. Another trimming, even of more modest proportions, will probably unseat Ponton's club from second place in the standings. Toronto's navy entry from H. M. C. S. York is just a point behind and it has what looks like a soft touch Saturday against Kitchener-Waterloo Panthers, who have yet to win a game.

N. H. L. Training Notes

By The Canadian Press

History records that coach Frank Boucher of New York Rangers won the Lady Byng Trophy seven times as the National Hockey League's most gentlemanly player. Here he tells his Rangers how he did it:— "Sometimes you feel like taking a swing at someone out there, but if you stop and think for a few seconds, you realise it isn't very profitable. Fortunately, I was able to stop and think on most occasions."

Dick Irvin generally is associated with pigeons, but reports from Montreal say he raffled off a Scotch collie pup at the Canadiens training camp. Ray Getliffe held the winning number.

This one is literally a "honey." Defenceman Emile Bouchard keeps 12,000,000 bees as a sideline. It won't take much of his time, however. He has put them away for the winter and all he has to do is feed them sugar and water in his spare time.

Even before Maurice Richard signed with Canadiens last night, he almost won the distinction of being the first Canuck to miss a train this season. He thought the team was going to Cornwall by bus and wandered into the Forum just as the train was leaving Windsor station. He hustled into a taxi and made connections at Westmount.

Manager Paul Thompson says the coming hockey game is one featuring five forwards and a goalie. Apparently he wasn't just talking. Yesterday he used that combination as one of the teams in the morning and afternoon scrimmages, although stressing the idea is purely experimental. Mush March and Bill Thoms were the speed hounds serving as defencemen.

High scorer on the Ranger team this season will collect a pot made up of $10 contributions from each player.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 28—(CP) — Trapshooting, fundamentally a sport not practised by many, has come into its own as part of Royal Canadian Air Force training. . . . It gets plenty of patronage from air crews and air gunners polishing up on deflection angles. . . . The gunners, incidentally, get twice as much training in bagging the clay bird on the wing as do pilots and other air crew. . . . It builds up co-ordination between hand and eye and makes for fast thinking.

From cinder track to cockpit, with speed still a keynote. . . . That, in brief, tells the story of Sgt. Bert Kaplansky of Hamilton, Ont. Well known in Ontario track circles, he took first place in the 220 and 440-yard events in a recent R.A.F. track and field meet. . . Bert is an instructor now. . . . Ken McAdam of Ottawa, former all-round athlete at McMaster University of Hamilton, Ont., is putting the same effort into his work as Y.M.C.A. sports supervisor for the R.C.A.F. in Midlands as he did in his athletic and sport endeavors back home. . . . Ken not only played starry football with Syl Apps; he once won the Gold Medal as tenor soloist at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto.

One of Canada's better basketball players—Adelaide Child of Toronto—is in Britain with the R. C.A.F. as an Aircraft Women 1. Adelaide played for Toronto ladies and included the champion Edmonton Grads in her long list of opponents. . . . Which reminds that Canadiens have been seeking an outlet for basketball activity in London, but just can't connect. . . Such facilities are few and far between in Britain.

London, Oct. 30. (CP)—Hard-luck story of the week: Eddie Steward, formerly of Bradford and Southport Football Clubs, is 26, hard as a drill major's heart, and until recently was a physical training instructor in a crack British regiment. He wanted more action and applied for transfer to the air force as a gunner, or to the Commandos or the Paratroops. In short, Eddie yearned to liquidate a few Nazis.

He received his transfer just the other day. He went to another unit—as a helper in the stores' department.

Tragedy: Preston North End were travelling to Scotland to play Glasgow Rangers in a charity football match and broke their journey to visit their former winger, David Willacy, a fighter pilot.

They arrived at the station in high spirits only to find that a couple of hours earlier David had been killed in action.

Perseverance: Jimmy Tompkins fought his way up through Fulham junior soccer teams until in 1939 at the age of 27 he was a regular left-half on Fulham's big-league team. When war came Jimmy joined as a private and fought his way up all over again. Now he's a major and believed to be the only peacetime professional footballer to have attained this rank.

Oddity in the News:

Police attended a Bath City-Swansea Town soccer match with a bucket of disinfectant. Each time the ball went out of bounds into adjoining fields ball and shoes of the men who retrieved it were washed in the liquid. Foot and mouth disease has struck nearly every head of cattle in the district.

Dynamo Sports Club one of the oldest sports societies in Russia, replied thusly to a message of greeting in which the Arsenal Gunners football club expressed desire to visit the Soviet and play some football after the war:

"We certainly await with impatience the day when we shall be able to meet you on the football field. Just now we are possessed by a single thought—to rout the Hitlerite hordes.

"You write that the hour is near when the sportsmen of Britain will display their fighting ability on the territory of Europe. We are glad to read this statement, which reflects the spirit of our British friends".

New York, Oct. 30 (AP)—The heights of something: Every Thursday noon Columbia's football coaches hold open house for sports writers at the training table on Morningside Heights. . . At one end of a long table, head coach Lou Little is being badgered to pick a winner between Penn and Army, both of which drubbed his lions. . . . "I'd be a fool to do it", argues Lou. "They're both good teams. But I will say we should have done better against Penn. Remember when we were trying for our third touch down? Time and again I've told Governali— and Luckman too—never to pass down the middle, but he threw it right at that back". . . . And Lou starts drawing diagrams on a paper napkin. . . . At the other end of the festive board is Bob Kane, former track star who has come from Ithaca to speak for Cornell, and track is the subject. . . . "Les MacMitchell was fed up on running", someone is saying. "He began to fade right after beating Dodds twice". . . . "Did you hear about our new Columbia star, Len Kopeliovich?" asks another voice. "He started running in a compulsory physical education class last year. Now he has come out for track and says the only reason is that he wants to beat Gunder Haegg. That's why they call him a promising Miler". . . . You don't learn much at these gatherings, but the hame and eggs are good.

$9,000 Realized in Charity Game Provided for Toronto Fans

Toronto, Oct. 30. (CP)—Toronto Hockey fans had their last glimpse last night for the duration of the war of all the players who brought the Stanley Cup to this city last season as the Toronto Maple Leafs staged their annual pre-season contest in which Syl Apps' Blues defeated Nick Metz's Whites 3-2.

Its special purpose this year being to boost Canada's third Victory Loan, the game was also held in aid of war charities and the gross proceeds of $9,000 provided by 13,886 fans went for this cause.

Of the 27 players who took part in the game, 13 were members of the armed forces who came from all parts of Canada for their final fling at professional hockey until the war is over.

Short on hockey condition, the servicemen did not stand up to the grind as well as the regular Leafs, but they were in their plugging most of the way. Two of them figured in the scoring, L. Cpl. Don Metz getting the final goal of the game with just over a minute left to play, AC2. Frank Eddolls being credited with an assist.

AC2. Wally Stanowski also figured in the scoring but in reverse order. He threw his stick as youthful Gaye Stewart raced in on the White's goal after breaking away alone and Referee Norm Lamport awarded a goal to the Blues.

DID YOU KNOW — The recent resignation of Harry Geisel after 18 years of umpiring in the American League, left Bill McGowan as the only arbiter who was calling balls and strikes when William Harridge ascended to the presidency in 1931. Bill and Harry were signed in the same year, 1925, but McGowan has no intentions of retiring yet, he says.

Geisel is the seventh to be honorably retired to the pension rolls for long service in the circuit. The others are George Hildebrand, now living in California; Dick Nallin, taking life easy on a Maryland farm; Bill Dinneen, a resident of Syracuse, N.Y.; Brick Owens, who works for a meat company in Chicago; Emmett Ormsby, who is with the Cook County Highway Department and George Moriarty, connected with the league's promotional department of Lew Fonseca, movie director.

WHEN PAUL GOYETTE'S Albert College junior gridders trounced the B.C.I. kids 17 to 6 Wednesday night, the winners advanced into a mathematical tie with Jack Doran's "Irish" for the group leadership. Each team has won two games, giving them four points. However, the Albert sextette has played one more game than the Irish and have a loss to their credit, while the St. Mikes squad is undefeated. In their first meeting St. Mikes downed Albert College 31 to 6, but the boys from along West Dundas St. are a much improved squad today. As the interscholastic picture stands now Coach Doran's team must win all remaining games to become repeaters at group champions. The only deviation that might save the Irish in the matter of one defeat would come if the Collegians surprised the Irish today, forcing St. Mikes to win over Albert next Monday to insure a play-off. However, on the season's play thus far the Irish have shown too much speed and football generalship to worry about losing. But the element of chance helps to retain interest in the remaining games, as a loss for Doran and company would place a different hue on the entire picture.

JUST WHICH IS THE BETTER wrestler hasn't been decided as yet, well at least not in the Hume Arena squared circle. Reference of course is being made to Billie Watson and Earl McCready, who went at it hammer and tongs with a thrilling exhibition of scientific muscle-bending for 90 minutes last night without a winner being declared. Last week these two gave a crowd-pleasing 60-minute show with neither gaining a fall. Last night they went 90 minutes at the end of which they were no further ahead than when they started the week before, although both gained a fall each, were counted out, injured and returned to again send the patrons home well pleased with their show. Counting last week's 60 minutes the boys wrestled 134 minutes before McCready gained the first fall last night and a total of 143 minutes before Watson evened matters and they went on to wrestle 150 minutes in all without either gaining a decision.

ACTUALLY THE MAIN-BOUTERS entered the ring last night at precisely ten minutes after ten and the final bell didn't sound until five minutes after the midnight hour, which means Watson and McCready were in their wrestling tights just five minutes under two hours. As Referee Phil Lawson remarked after the show: "That's the most strenuous bout I've ever seen and one must admit both of these top-ranking contenders for the Empire title are in perfect physical condition and mean business when they say they're after Katan's crown." Towering Pedro Martinez, that villainous Mexican who apparently hasn't got a friend attending the Hume Arena bouts, was bedecked in new brilliant red wrestling shoes last night to chalk up his twelfth straight win locally. Martinez wasn't given a hearing when he challenged winner last night, but Promoter Tunney could do worse than give him a top-slot spot if only to see him in action against a suitable opponent.

REMEMBER WHEN Lou Brouillard, French - Canadian boxer was defeated in 15 rounds for the world's middleweight boxing title at Boston nine years ago tonight? Brouillard had won the title two months previously from Ben Jeby in seven rounds.

THIS AND THAT—After a lapse of several years Kingston Collegiate and Regiopolis College resumed football relations. . . . But only in the junior series with K.C.I. winning 6-2 yesterday. . . . Billy Southworth was initiated into the Saints and Sinners' Club at New York, all of which is the penalty for heading a team to dare beat the Yankees, the world champion Cardinals, to be exact. . . . Manager Lester Patrick only had eight players left from his 1941-42 New York Rangers, which isn't exactly encouraging to enter a big-time hockey campaign. . . . Especially of note is the absence of a tried and proven goalie, as Steve Buzinski, a Saskatchewan amateur will replace Sugar Jim Henry in the Rangers' nets. . . . Paul Thompson says he may try a five-man forward and goalie squad in many games, this winter. . . . Apparently the Chicago Black Hawks' manager has taken a leaf from the St. Louis Cardinals' book, namely offensiveness. . . So Branch Rickey signed a five-year contract as president of the Brooklyn Dodgers. As if that was any secret. . . . Rickey, the father of the modern baseball farm system, signed a five year contract at about $35,000, plus bonuses. . . . Mrs. Leo Goyer received a cablegram from her hubby overseas stating that hockey would open in the Canadian forces league tonight. Leo, who learned his hockey with the Belleville Juveniles, stated the opening game would be broadcast short wave and he would be playing for the Army team. . . Ah, the machine age!

CANADIENS BACK TO HARD DRILLING

Cornwall, Ont., Oct. 30—(CP)—Montreal Canadiens went back into hard drilling today following their surprise defeat Wednesday night at the hands of Cornwall's Quebec Senior Hockey League army team, but there were few worries in the Canuck camp over their first loss of the season.

Coach Dick Irvin figured his National Hockey League charges had under-rated the Q.S.H.L. entry and were unable to make the grade when they found themselves far behind to a good team. Cornwall won 5-4.

"The loss will do us a lot of good," said Irvin "it should let the players know that they have plenty of work ahead of them yet, and help make them realize that the tough days of the N.H.L. grind are at hand."

There was one absentee from yesterday's session. It was young Maurice Richard, rookie left winger who returned to Montreal. Irvin said Richard had not yet signed a contract but had returned to Montreal to straighten out passport arrangements.

"The Talk of the Town"

Cary Grant, Jean Arthur and Ronald Colman are starred in Columbia's exciting new romantic comedy, "The Talk of the Town," which opens next at the McCarthy Theatre. The film was produced and directed by George Stevens, maker of "Woman of the Year," and "Penny Serenade." Irwin Shaw and Sidney Buchman, author of "Here Comes Mr. Jordan" and other sensationally successful films penned the screen play for "The Talk of the Town," whose supporting cast includes Edgar Buchanan, Glenda Farrell and Tom Tyler.

With so important a cast and behind-the-camera crew, "The Talk of the Town" naturally became one of Hollywood's favorite topics of conversation from the moment production started. When filmdom finally saw the picture, "The Talk of the Town" immediately became the talk of the town! "Sneak preview" audiences outdid themselves in praising the performance of the stars, in applauding the masterful story and entertainment-wise direction.

"The Talk of the Town," presenting its star trio with roles of equal and valuable merit, is reported to be a motion picture made for laughter and for excitement. Grant is seen as a likable guy whose zeal for his fellow-men sets the officialdom of his town against him, so that he is unjustly accused of arson and murder. Escaping from jail, he takes refuge in the country cottage rented by Colman, who is cast as a bearded law school dean, dignified and impractical, a man convinced that the theory of the law is of sole importance; its practice is not his concern. Miss Arthur is the town gossips' favorite target, a warm-hearted, lovable young woman who aids Grant in his refuge, and joins with him in attempting to convince Colman that the theory and the practice must go hand in hand. When that idea finally is realized, Colman swings into determined action in his effort to prevent a miscarriage of justice.

And, through it all, there is said to run a thread of solid romance which leaves "The Talk of the Town" audiences anticipating the final climax.

"The Talk of the Town" is now in its second week at the Uptown Theatre, Toronto. Tomorrow at the McCarthy performances are continuous with matinee prices until six o'clock.

AT THE CAPITOL

"King of Dodge City"

Columbia's "King of Dodge City," exciting new western that features two top action stars in one song-filled thriller, is now showing at the Capitol. Bill Elliott and Tex Ritter, both ace favorites of western fans, are featured in the hit, while the supporting cast includes Judith Linden, Dub Taylor, Guy Usher and Rick Anderson. Lambert Hillyer directed from an original screen play by Gerald Geraghty.

"You're in the Army Now"

Only girls could transfer from the navy to the army without giving notice and get away with it.

Warner Bros. cast the famous Navy Blues Sextette in important roles in "You're in the Army Now," which features Jimmy Durante, Jane Wyman, Regis Toomey and Phil Silvers and was directed by Lew Seiler. The added feature is now at the Capitol.

The sextette is comprised of Georgia Carroll, Peggy Diggins, Alice Talton, Kay Aldridge, Lorraine Gettman and Marguerite Chapman, the six Hollywood lovelies who made their recent debut as a sextette in the recent musical "Navy Blues."

A colored cartoon and final chapter "Spy Smasher" complete the bill.

"Flying Tigers"

The Capitol will next be sweeping the skies with a big picture on their screen. "Flying Tigers" is the name given to heroic fighters of the American volunteer group in Burma, and "Flying Tigers" is the title of Republic's stirring and spectacular tribute to these men, starring John Wayne, John Carroll, and Anna Lee, with a splendid supporting cast. It is a picture that packs all the excitement of a behind-the-headlines story from Democracy's most hotly contested front, together with all the romance and color that come to men whose lives are measured by the hour and whose hearts keep time to the rhythm of roaring propellers and chattering machine-guns.

John Wayne, fresh from his triumph in "Reap The Wild Wind," is perfectly suited to his role as a gallant ace, mingling two-fistedness in a superb performance. John Carroll and Anna Lee win new laurels for themselves in "Flying Tigers," too. If it's thrills and excitement you're looking for don't miss "Flying Tigers."

AT THE BELLE

"Panama Hattie"

Utilizing ideas right out of the headlines, the film has Miss Sothern and the sailors busy rounding up spies in the Canal Zone. In addition to these zany antics, the story revolves around the romance of Miss Sothern with Dan Dailey, Jr.

"The Gay Sisters," Highly Romantic

Another great novel, "The Gay Sisters," has been brought to the screen by Warner Bros., who are noted for their fine treatment of important novels. The picture, which will be shown this weekend at the Belle Theatre, has an exceptionally fine cast. In the leading role is fiery Barbara Stanwyck as the eldest of the three Gaylord sisters, a sometimes fierce, brusque and level-headed person who thinks that sentiment is a silly emotion.

Her two sisters, the other members of the Gaylord family (the trio was dubbed by newspapermen, "The Gay Sisters") are played by Geraldine Fitzgerald and Nancy Coleman. Gig Young, a dynamic, breezy newcomer to the screen makes his debut in the film as a young artist, and advance reports have it that he is a sensation. George Brent, in his usual casual, but at the same time forceful manner, plays the role of a civil engineer who becomes a millionaire, and also is the reason why the Gay sisters are held practically penniless.

MURDER ON THE AVENUE

by CAROLYN WELLS

CHAPTER 3
Secret Business

From his point of vantage in the curve of the staircase, Hugh stood looking at the people and the rooms. It was such an attractive scene that he wondered why Alma should want to build a big house on Long Island.

Of course, her reasons didn't matter, if she wanted it she should have it, but what about his father and Emmy? Would Alma want them in her new home? He must have a talk with her about this.

His devotion to Alma and his devotion to his father and sister pulled him in different directions, and he often thought to himself that this was the only crumpled rose leaf in his smooth-running existence.

He supposed he would have to build two houses. Well, if that would satisfy his three dependents, it would be all right by him.

"Could I but stand where Moses stood
And view the country o'er."

The crooning voice was of someone coming up the stairs, and Hugh turned toward him.

Brand Herrick laughed. "I could not help it," he said. "You looked so satisfied, and yet something troubled you."

"Yes, I am troubled," Hugh was thinking of his father. "But it is nothing I can help. Not going, are you?"

"I think so. It's been a great party. And now I've a chance, I'm going to say something to you. I may be sorry, but I think it's my duty."

"The surest way to get into trouble is to do something you think is your duty."

"I'll take a chance. It's about Mrs. McCleod."

"Why do you call her Alma when you speak to her and call her Mrs. McCleod to me?"

Hugh was smiling, but there was an edge to his voice.

Herrick refused to take offense. "I don't know why I do. I daresay I thought it more polite, I'll write to Mrs. Post and ask advice on that point of etiquette. But, seriously, I want to say this: Don't let Alma see so much of Ogden Murray. I say this for her good and yours. He is not the right sort."

"Are you the right sort to defame a man, yet give him no chance to speak for himself!"

"Oh, if you're going to take it that way."

"I take it on the face of it. And now you will tell me more."

"I think there is no more to be told. You can find out for yourself the status of the man, and you will discover that I speak the simple truth."

"That won't do. You must tell me of what you accuse him."

A slight difference of tone was in Hugh's voice; it made Herrick answer him gently.

"I don't accuse him, but I fear he is concerned in some money matters with Mrs. McCleod, and I thought and still think you ought to know about it."

"I agree. What sort of deal is on?"

"That I don't know. I thought it right to tell you. I am going home now. Good night."

"Oh, I say. Stay on for a bit. I'll have a word with Alma and then, who knows? I may want to apologize to you!"

"What is this solemn conclave? Here on the stairs, of all places!"

Alma came running up the steps to them, Nadine with her and some men following.

Brand had turned from his host and had started up the stairs. Alma ran after him.

"Oh, Brand," she said, "come along with me into the rumpus room for a minute. I want to show you a statuette Gerald Vance made for me."

"I don't want to see it. His stuff is rotten. And I'm leaving now. I have a busy day ahead and I must get some sleep."

"I've hardly seen you at all tonight. Did you evade me on purpose?"

"What a question! You know I didn't. But Ogden Murray was with you early and often, and he is not one of my pals."

"If you had come along, he would have gone — I would have made him go. Do be nice to me, Brand. I can't think what has come over you."

"Nothing has come over me. But I'm sure you ought to be downstairs now. People are leaving, you know."

"Hugh can speed the parting guests."

She led him into the room and closed the door. "Now tell me what is the matter with you."

"Nothing. But I will tell you one thing. You're making a big mistake in your dealings with Ogden Murray."

"What do you mean by dealings? It sounds unpleasant."

"It is unpleasant. And you know what it means. What is he doing for you that involves payments of money?"

Alma froze at once.

"You have no right to ask me such a question," she said, in a hard voice. "How dare you be so intrusive?"

"Now, now, don't act like a dunce. Murray is trying to get you to subscribe to a swindle — or warning you before you get in too something like that, and I am deeply."

"When you say 'or something like that,' I can see you know nothing about it, and so please say nothing more about it. You are not my financial advisor and I don't want you to be that!"

"What do you want me to be?" Brand realized his mistake as he finished his question.

"Oh, I want you to be my friend—my—"

The last word was spoken so low that its sound was lost as the door-knob turned and the door swung open.

Nadine came in, exclaiming, "Oh, here you two are! I bet with Hugh I'd find you locked in this room!"

"If the door was locked how did you get in?" Brand asked, taking it lightly. "We're discussing modern art."

"So I see." Nadine looked around but found no art objects in view.

"I cannot think, Nadine," Alma said, coldly, "what business it is of yours, where I am or with whom. I believe this is my own home and I have a right to all its rooms. If my husband owes you a wager, I am very sure he will pay it. Why don't you go and ask him now?"

"I think he wants you to come downstairs, Alma," Nadine's voice was silky. "Some of the more important guests are taking leave, and you ought to be there."

"I ought to be there!" Alma stared at her. "Since when have you been my instructor in manners?"

"Not very long, but I resign. You need to learn the rudiments, I teach only advanced pupils."

Both Murray and Haynes had come in with Nadine. But Alma paid no attention to any of them.

She said, carelessly, "Come on, Brand," looked at herself in a wall mirror, and left the room.

Brand followed, perforce, and Van Dyke Haynes looked admiringly at Alma as she passed him.

Hugh was in the rotunda, gracious and courteous, and when Alma came and stood by his side, he included her in his farewells to the guests and the pair surely needed no instructions in polite pleasantry.

There were more people still present than Alma had thought, and she set herself about making them happy. She was charming to a few older people who were still there and she made a delightful impression on some others who knew her slightly; and Nadine came down to find the McCleods' star in the ascendant.

Hugh was beaming with pride in his lovely wife, and Alma, for reasons of her own, showed a delightful camaraderie with Hugh.

Several persons who had been about to go, delayed their departure, and indeed the party seemed to begin all over again.

But Alma grew tired of it, and to create a diversion, she proposed they go up to the rumpus room and play games.

"Yes," Nadine said, "and show us the statuette that Gerald Vance made you. I didn't see it up there."

"Too bad, dear," Alma said. "Come along now and see it."

"Have you really a Gerald Vance ?" asked Martin Delevan, an artist of the new school.

"Yes, a small one. But he made it especially for me. It's a pearwood carving."

They went upstairs again, and on a shelf that ran all the way round the walls, stood the statuette.

It was a beautiful thing, to those who could understand it. Martin Delevan was enraptured. He began a dissertation on the new art, and Vance's work, which was more than Alma could stand, and she started a game of skittles to make a diversion.

This brought Delevan's speech to a close, and then a few more of the guests went home and the rest went to the bar.

Ogden Murray found an opportunity to speak to Alma alone. They were in a small card room on the lower floor and Alma told him plainly that she could not talk about their business then for they were liable to be interrupted at any moment.

"Then let me come to see you tomorrow," he suggested. "We must get this matter settled up, you know. The opportunity will not be held open much longer."

"Why not?"

"My dear girl, I don't know. But I know it won't. If you won't accept my offer there are others who will. Who is that? Alma, there is someone at the door. I thought you locked it."

"I did. No one can come in. But I must go now, and you can't come here tomorrow. Hugh would think it queer. Meet me somewhere."

"All right. At the Chandos, at two, for a bit of lunch, and we can settle it."

"Very well. If I can't make it I'll telephone in the morning."

"You must make it! Understand?"

"No, I don't understand, and I shall do as I please."

"Unless you do as I please, you will understand."

They went back to the others.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating supper, being liver and onions in pops honor, and I thought of something, saying, Hay ma?

Dont you see I'm talking to your father? ma said. Where are your manners? I never saw such a chatterbox. For land sakes whoever said children had a duplicate of you at the table, she said.

Being a lot of words just for one Hay ma, and I thought, Well gosh shang it now I'm not going to say another single thing the whole meal. They wont know what's a matter, they'll think I've prove if I'm a chatterbox or not, I thought.

And I kept on eating to myself without saying a word, eating slow as anything so I wouldn't have to ask for more, and ma got through talking to pop and didn't even ask me what I wanted to say to her. Proving how interested she wasn't, and I thought, Even if they dont notice I'm not talking, I bet they'll notice if I'm not eating.

And I put down my knife and fork and hands and just kept on sitting there without eating, thinking. This is only my first platefull too, now they'll really think I'm sick.

The result still being nobody even noticed, so I made a fierce loud yawn to see if it would attract attention.

Which it did, ma saying, Now really, I mean really, is that any fit sound to make at the dinner table for land sakes? and pop saying, If you dont want the rest of that food on your plate, you may leave the table if the company bores you.

Me thinking, Aw heck, what's a use?

And I ate 2 more helpings of everything and talked normal.

Proving sometimes, the best way to have the least trouble with people is not to notice them.

Five to Six Months Given On Theft Charge

Vincent Edgar McCabe, Belleville, was sentenced to serve from five to six months in the Ontario reformatory by Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in police court here Friday after the accused had been convicted on three charges of breaking, entering and theft at the National Billiards, 293 Front Street.

McCabe, who was employed at the billaird emporium as a janitor, pleaded guilty to entering the premises on three occasions and stealing upwards of $30.00, a quantity of cigarettes, lighters and razor blades. P.C. Wright, who apprehended the man early on the morning of Oct. 21st after seeing him in the building, stated that McCabe admitted he had gained entrance through the building coal chute.

Mr. E. O. Butler, local barrister appearing for the accused, pointed out his client was paid $12.00 per week and also added he had received mental treatment at both Kingston and Woodstock. Assistant Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson made it known that McCabe had been convicted of theft and given a suspended sentence on one previous occasion.

"I wonder if this man can accept the gravity of his offences? After all robbery from an employer is a serious matter and could bring 14 years in the penitentiary," commented Magistrate Lloyd before he imposed the five to six months in the reformatory.

Dressed Poultry Prices Easier

Toronto, Oct. 30 (CP)—There is an easier tone to the dressed poultry market, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reports. Receipts of chicken and fowl are heavy and with more supplies of other meats now available, local demand for poultry has decreased to some extent, the surplus being packed for storage. Quotations on chicken have declined one cent per lb and, in some cases, also on fowl. Dealers are curtailing their buying to current needs until such time as the ceiling price for poultry is clarified. The quality of arrivals is fair. A few broilers are arriving costing 28 cents lb. but no ducks or geese. Small lots of fresh turkeys are appearing for which 30 cents lb. was paid this week on the basis of Grade A. Storage stocks of turkeys are low. There has been a very good movement to outside points, approximately 50,000 lbs., of poultry going forward to northern and eastern points.

Miss Olive Delaney Appointed Librarian, Corby Public Library

At a special meeting of the Corby Public Library Board Miss Olive Delaney, assistant librarian and in charge of the boys' and girls' department, was appointed chief librarian. Miss Delaney, who is a graduate of the Library School, University of Toronto, has been a member of the staff for eight years.

Miss Delaney's appointment fills the vacancy occurring through the resignation of Miss Kathryn Gallagher, chief librarian for the past two years, who is leaving the staff to be married. In tendering her resignation Miss Gallagher expressed appreciation to the Library Board officers and members for the co-operation and consideration shown her in her work during the thirteen years she has been on the staff, and to her colleagues for their very pleasant associations while working together.

THIEVES STEAL FOUR NEW TIRES

Thieves broke and entered the garage of W. D. Henthorne of Carrying Place, and stole four new tires Provincial Police learned yesterday. Entrance was forced through a small rear window. The tires stolen were new and had never been removed from the original paper wrappers used to protect the tires Inspector Frank Gardner of O.P.P. District Headquarters here, stated today the matter would be thoroughly probed as tire stealing is a serious crime under the War Measures Act. The tires were gone for some time before Mr. Henthorne missed them and reported the matter.

Cheese Board

Members of the Belleville Cheese Board voted a grant of $50 to the British Empire Dairy Show and Cheese Exhibition at their regular bi-monthly meeting on Thursday night, this amount being double the grant usually given towards the annual cheese show.

At the meeting Secretary Treasurer Fred Mallory read a communication from J. L. Irwin asking for as generous a grant as the members saw fit to give. Cheese Board members voted unanimously for the presentation of the additional grant.

A total of 7,984 cheese were offered on the board, all selling for the one price of 19⅝ cents. The factories represented were:

WALL STREET

New York, Oct. 30. (AP)—Specialties, led by air transports, worked up a little recovery temperature in today's stock market while many leaders suffered from mild selling chills.

Gains of a point or so were registered for Eastern, United and American airlines. Supported also were Texas Co., Twentieth Century-Fox, Montgomery Ward, Western Union, Anaconda, Air Reduction and General Motors. Laggards included Chrysler, U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Loew's, J. I. Case, Douglas Aircraft, U.S. Rubber, Westinghouse and Public Service of N.J.

Among Canadian Stocks Canadian Pacific, McIntyre and Distillers Seagram gained fractions. Dome eased 1-4.

RECTAL SORENESS AND PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY RELIEVED.

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store, and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

MORE THAN HALF

The court house and city hall, virtually the only undamaged buildings on the town square, were converted into receiving hospitals.

Rea Nelson, only undertaker in Berryville, said 22 bodies had been brought into the funeral home by 4 a.m., and "there's no telling how many more will come."

"They're laying the dead out on the lawns as fast as they can get them out of the wreckage and we're making regular trips picking up the bodies. Most of them are so badly mutilated that we can't hope to identify them until relatives start coming in."

Four of the known dead were infants.

The storm apparently was limited to this immediate vicinity, nearby towns reporting only minor atmospheric disturbances.

Amazing Escapes

Some escapes were amazing.

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Fanning were uninjured when the tornado wrecked their bedroom, but the feather bed on which they were sleeping and the comfort which they had over them vanished.

Berryville, one of the oldest communities in the Ozark region, is an important wholesale and jobbing centre, servicing the northwest portion of Arkansas, and adjacent areas in Missouri.

The prosperous wholesale houses and canneries, the life source for the community, were virtually all destroyed. The town's large school also was destroyed.

Station Collapses

About 25 persons were injured when the Missouri and Arkansas railway passenger station collapsed. Most of them were awaiting a northbound train which was late.

A passenger bus came through town less than 30 minutes after the storm. Its passengers alighted or stood up while their seats were given to injured being taken to the Harrison hospital. Two of the injured died on the bus before they reached the hospital.

An eight-man medical detachment from nearby Camp Robinson, with supplies, was dispatched to Berryville to assist civilian relief workers in caring for the injured.

BRITISH TREAT PRISONERS WELL

By FOSTER BARCLAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 30—(CP)—Britain sticks to the rules and treats her war prisoners well, according to an anonymous former British officer who has worked among Nazi captives in this war.

"She feeds and houses the men properly," he wrote in an article in the Daily Herald after Canadian and British troops captured during the combined raid on Dieppe had been shackled by Germany. "She neither bullies them nor subjects them to any unpleasantness except the necessary one of keeping them shut up in camps.

"Medical attention is free and visits to the dentist are frequent. In some camps the prisoners cook their own food, the same as that of their guards, except that, at their own request, they get less meat and more potatoes. The Germans like plenty of potatoes.

"Books and games are provided by the Red Cross and books are changed monthly. There are usually two roll calls a day, at the discretion of the commandant. Lights out is at 10 p.m."

Divided in Four Groups

The writer divided German prisoners held by Britain into four categories: the "I'm out of it and glad of it" type; "I'm a Nazi and don't you forget it type; the regular pre-war officer or man.

Authorities seldom have trouble with the first and last groups, he continued. They generally fade away among the mass as soon as they are placed in the compound.

"Type number two is different," he said. "One can never tell if he is bluffing or not. One man, for instance, arrived by parachute in Scotland after his plane had collided with an anti-aircraft shell. He looked as if the shell had hit him. To all questions he answered 'weiss night' (don't know).

(Instructions are issued to all military personnel that they are obliged to give only their name and number.)

"This type will not give these particulars. So after a half hour he is entered as Gefreiter (Lance-Cpl.) 'Don't Know.' But when a German officer explains that he must give his name, he comes back and does so."

RED ARMY TANKS

Heavy losses were declared suffered by the Germans on the new battlefield about Nalchik, in the central Caucasus 50 miles southwest of Mozdok.

The communique said: "Our troops defended their positions against large numbers of enemy tanks. In one sector in the Nalchik area the enemy succeeded in pressing our units back."

Red Star said that the Russians, who withdrew yesterday after the enemy wedged into some lines, fell back to new positions after repulsing four attacks in a fight for a waterline.

The Germans hurled huge forces of infantry and tanks into their initial thrusts and a dispatch to the army newspapers reported that fresh men and machines had been put into the combat for the foothills of the snow-blanketed Caucasian mountains.

Forced to Retreat

Nazi airmen bombed the Red Army front lines, its close rear and road communications.

Despite the weight of the onslaught, Red Star said the Germans were forced to retreat somewhat at one point in their roundabout drive toward Ordzhonikidze, starting point of the Georgian military highway which leads to Tiflis and the Kura River valley.

Red Star published a photograph of the first snowfall of the season on the north slopes of the mountains, showing them completely coated while Red Army troops bearing automatic guns filed through a valley knee deep in snow.

But activity in the south was accompanied by reports of fresh action on the northwestern and Kalinin battle lines.

"On the Kalinin front Soviet units penetrated into an inhabited locality, killing several hundred of the enemy," the communique announced. "Snipers of one Soviet infantry unit have killed more than 1,000 Germans during the past month."

Red Star reported that Red Army men operating south of Stalingrad advanced and occupied the outskirts of a settlement in a region strongly fortified by the Germans. A number of Nazi counter-attacks were repulsed.

Transport Reported Sunk

Soviet troops holding the northwestern front north of Moscow repulsed a series of attacks by tank-supported infantry formations in the last three days. The midnight communique said 1,500 enemy troops were killed and 12 tanks were damaged.

Red Navy warships in the Baltic Sea were reported to have sunk a 15,000-ton German transport.

Red Star said Russian Caucasian forces intercepted a message from an encircled German battalion reporting that food reserves were exhausted and that the unit had many wounded which it was unable to treat.

The Russians gave the battalion an opportunity to surrender and attacked when its commander refused, the newspaper reported. After a three-hour battle virtually the entire battalion was exterminated and the survivors were captured.

Another encircled German force was declared crushed with a loss of 200 dead. An inportant defile through which enemy communications had stretched was declared cleared by the Red Army.

274 Civilians Now Interned At Hong Kong

Ottawa, Oct. 30 — (CP) — Names of 274 civilians — most of them Canadians — who are at present interned by the Japanese at Hong Kong were made public last night by the external affairs department.

The department said the list was issued by the Japanese authorities and transmitted to Ottawa by the International Red Cross and added "It may be assumed that it is official."

In addition to Canadians, the list included some non-Canadians with close relations in the Dominion.

Names and addresses of relations of 246 of the persons in the list also were announced. The list also included eight sisters of the Order of the Immaculate Conception and 20 other persons, whose relatives are unknown to the department.

The defence department has announced during the past two weeks the names of 1,066 Canadian officers and men who now are officially reported prisoners of war as a result of the fighting for Hong Kong last December. Other names are expected to follow.

Last August a party of about 70 Canadian civilians returned to the Dominion from the Far East. They travelled by way of Lourenco Marques, Portuguese East Africa, where they exchanged ships with a party of Japanese being repatriated from North America.

Washington Spotlight

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Washington, Oct. 30 — (CP) — Retirement of Rear Admiral Robert L. Ghormley from his command as head of the United Nations' forces in the South Pacific, and his replacement by Rear Admiral William F. Halsey, has raised in Washington the whole question of unified command of American forces.

The explicit reasons for Ghormley's transfer never have been made public by the navy department but they are not difficult to find in any objective review of the progress of the fighting in the Solomon Islands, particularly the loss of one Australian and three American heavy cruisers like sitting birds.

The folks the president calls "typewriter strategists" see back of all this a lack of unified command, the lack of one competent leader with full authority over all forces and the personality and experience to enforce it.

The same thing featured the defence of Pearl Harbor when the Japanese first struck at Hawaii. It has been noticeable in Alaska and Panama — a lack of frank, open co-operation between the army and navy. The tendency too often has been to go separate paths and to stand on fine distinctions of jurisdictional control.

Ghormley's retirement may force this whole problem to a head.

Drys Lose Skirmish

The Senate last week gave the American dry forces their first major defeat of the war when it sidetracked a proposal to ban the sale of beer and liquor in and near all military establishments.

There is no doubt the dry forces are determined to bring back nation-wide prohibition under the guise of aiding the war effort and that they will return to the fight. There is equally no doubt, Congressional sources claim, that public opinion the country over is opposed to prohibition.

Under the National Temperance and Prohibition council, what has been described as a $10,000,000 lobby against liquor and beer is being operated in Washington and now the National Association against the return of prohibition is being formed to campaign for the status quo. It looks like a merry battle.

The Elusive Mr. Little

Elliot M. Little, director of Canada's selective service system, was in Washington a week ago for conferences with Paul V. McNutt, chairman of the United States War Manpower Commission. He arrived only a few days after the War Information Board had opened a Washington office as part of a big and costly organization designed, in part, to tell the American people of Canada's war effort.

Several American newspapermen did their best to get in touch with Little during his stay here. They wanted to write about what Canada has done in the manpower field and prepare the American people for something along the same general line here. But they never could find Mr. Little.

The Canadian official no doubt had several valid reasons for doing a disappearing act — even to the point where McNutt's office would not admit the two men were conferring. But, it was a bitter disappointment for the newly-arrived W. I. B. publicists to have to pass up a Heaven-sent opportunity to put over the story of Canada's war effort to the American people.

Election Lineup

Next Tuesday the United States will elect 469 members of Congress —435 representatives and 34 Senators. Most political observers agree that:

1. The public isn't greatly interested.

2. There is a Republican trend in many states but not sharp enough to challenge democratic control of the House of Representatives. It is mathematically impossible for the Democrats to lose control of the Senate.

Notes That Make News

As a result of a general decentralization policy, many minor agencies of the government have been removed from Washington. So far, 20,000 employees have been shifted —but in August alone 17,000 men and women were brought to Washington for the one purpose of filling jobs made vacant by resignations.

The official seal of the United States war department bears the words "war office." This is a throwback to the British War Office which the Continental Congress copied for the United States. Later the name was changed to the Department of War but the old seal remains.

Over at the National Inventors' Council, which receives 7,000 suggestions a week for machines of war, 99 per cent from crackpots and mechanical screwballs, there is a sign that reads: "You don't have to be crazy to work here, but it helps."

LIBERIA OCCUPIED

coast line of about 350 miles, is between the British colony of Sierra Leone, on the west, and the French colony of the Ivory Coast on the East. On the North it borders on French Guinea.

Dakar, France's important harbor and naval base in Senegal, is between 750 and 800 miles airline northeast of Monrovia.

As long ago as Oct. 17 Reuters carried unofficial reports that United States troops had arrived in Liberia and that R. A. F. patrols were using the country as a base for hunting Nazi submarines along the bulge of West Africa.

Both Struggles Paving Way For Fleet Actions

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

There is a curious similarity between the two crucial struggles half the world apart, in the Solomons and in North Africa, although one is primarily a sea battle and the other is essentially a land action. Both are paving the way for fleet actions, the results of which could decide the immediate issue and perhaps alter the shape of the war as a whole.

In the Pacific, naval fleets, with battleships as their major weapons, are groping for advantage. On the African deserts it is tank fleets, land battleships, that hold the power of decision. In the two theatres commanders on both sides are straining every nerve, using every resource and auxiliary, to arrive at that crucial fleet action in a position to deal the foe a crushing blow. By every indication each is holding his greatest striking power in reserve for that moment when he hopes to fight at a time and place and in tactical dispositions of his own choosing.

In the absence of any new word from the main sea-air theatre far off in the Pacific, it must be remembered that strict radio silence to guard fleet dispositions from enemy direction detictors is an essential element of sea warfare.

Tokyo Claims Suspicious.

That being an axiom of navy tactics, the Tokyo broadcast claiming heavy damage to the United States fleet in the first onset of a five-day-old battle is doubly suspicious. It is probable that neither Tokyo nor Washington has been in radio touch with the fleets themselves for some days except to transmit, not to receive, information.

That tends to lessen somewhat the weight of the assurance given by Director Elmer Davis of the Office of War Information in a speech in New York Wednesday night that up to noon of that day no report of major American sea losses not made public had been received from the Solomons action. In effect, however, it is an official denial of the Japanese victory claims and Davis' unique role and the authority conferred upon him makes his statement doubly important. It was aimed at gloomy rumors of disaster circulating by word of mouth in and out of Washington.

Whether the Japanese objective in the sea-air fight is an attempted stroke at American bases in the New Hebrides and Fiji Islands covering the Australian supply lanes, as a Pearl Harbor despatch suggests, or a diversion to draw American ships and planes away from Gandalcanal must be a matter of conjecture. It would require landing operations and long-distance troop transportation under dangerous conditions to blot out those bases effectively Face Deep Defences.

There is no mystery about the slow pace at which the British advance in Egypt is proceeding. The very depth in which Rommel set out his minefield and strong-point defence after his failure to turn the left flank of the British El Alamein-Qattara Depression line was a confession of his inability to resume the offensive.

That Nazi defensive zone has been estimated to average four miles in depth. Cairo reports it all but penetrated at three points. Nazi reports picture the northern salient, close to the sea, the main point of attack.

It seems probable. The only road and rail routes in the Egyptian corridor lie close to the beach. There, too, Allied warships could support the land advance with their guns to subject Axis tanks or gun emplacements to the triple fire of the ships, land batteries and air bombs. There is also always a possibility of night landings in the rear of enemy advance lines.

Rommel, however, must be sure which is the main attack corridor down which the weight of British troops is to be hurled before committing his own tank fleet. He is likely to get only one guess.

Juveniles Caught While Stealing Money

Bancroft, Ont., 30—Mr. F. M. Harvey who is in charge of the Penticostal Church on Station St., Bancroft, brought to light Sunday afternoon the climax to thefts which had been going on in his apartment which is a part of the mission. He had suspicions that on former occasions while he was absent person or persons had entered his home and taken things therefrom. He decided that if he were to lay in wait he might be able to corner the assailants. Sunday afternoon Mr. Harvey placed twenty-seven cents in a convenient place in one of the rooms and hid himself so that he might view the proceedings from a concealed position if anything were to happen. About two oclock two boys under sixteen years of age both of the village, broke into the home and of course swallowed the line, bat and sinker (the money) but their escape was cut short when Mr. Harvey rushed from the place of concealment out at the boys. He managed to catch one boy before he could get out of the house but the other made his escape. The boy made quick time in concealing himself and the efforts of both the local policeman, R. P. Delyea, and Provincial Officer S. W. Palmateer were unable to find him that day. However, he was accosted later and both boys admitted entering the home of Mr. Harvey on a previous occasion and stealing a sum of seven dollars therefrom. The boys were both charged with breaking, entering and theft and will appear in Bancroft court at a later date.

ALLIED AIR SUPERIORITY MAINTAINED IN EGYPT

All Objectives Set in First Week Of Drive Taken

General Situation Appears To Be Developing Favorably For Allied Cause

CRETE BOMBED

Cairo, Oct. 31. (AP)—The 8th army maintained its gains in the Egyptian desert yesterday and beat off a number of Axis counter-attacks with losses to the enemy, a British communique announced today.

Allied airmen, meanwhile, continued to hold control of the skies and blasted repeatedly at enemy airdromes, fortified positions and other targets, the bulletin said.

One formation of Allied heavy bombers was reported to have winged its way across the Mediterranean to attack Crete.

At least four enemy planes were shot down over the Egyptian battlefront yesterday and many others were damaged, headquarters said. Four large enemy aircraft were reported destroyed by twin-engined fighters which attacked the airdrome at El Adem.

Some enemy dive-bombers were active over British positions in the desert, the communique said but for the second successive day Malta was free from air attack.

British air losses in the Mediterranean theatre were set at three planes.

As the campaign to smash Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's Axis armies entered its second week dispatches from the front indicated the 8th army had gained and held all objectives set for it.

There was no indication of how far the Allied troops have moved through the maze of Axis minefields and desert strong points or how soon the expected clash of major tank units would come, but the general situation appeared to be developing favorably for the Allied cause.

One report said that Allied infantrymen had pushed back Axis troops more than 1-2 mile on the northern side of their salient Wednesday night. Many enemy tanks were destroyed and many prisoners taken, these reports said.

Desertions Claimed

(A Reuters correspondent with the South African forces in the desert said there had been desertions from Rommel's' army in the past few days. "It has been confirmed," he said, "that the Axis desert army contains a substantial number of conscripted Poles. Slovenes and former French Foreign Legionaires.")

There were reports of sharp engagements between British and Axis tanks, but the opposing tank armies have not yet been tested in strength.

Delayed dispatches from the front said hand-to-hand fighting broke out frequently during the advance Wednesday night and early Thursday as one enemy strong point after another was taken by British infantrymen, who charged shouting into the battle.

Enemy gun positions far back of the lines were shelled by Allied artillery in an effort to keep them quiet as Allied troops moved forward yard by yard through the barbed wire and mines.

United States fighters took part in a number of dogfights yesterday to contribute to the maintenance of Allied air superiority. U.S. Air Force headquarters reported one Messerschmitt 109 definitely shot down and several others damaged while all American planes returned.

Bodies of Crew Members Found

Isle Verte, Que., Oct. 31 — (CP)—Bodies of two crew members of a schooner that has been missing since Tuesday when she was last sighted off St. Jean Port Joli, were found on the beach here last night.

They were identified as Chief Engineer Gerard Lavoie of Petite Riviere St. Francois and Ernest Fournier of Cape St. Ignace.

Earlier Friday, members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police notified the Donnacona Pulp and Paper Company at Quebec that the lifeboat of the schooner that belongs to them was found on the shore of the St. Lawrence River at Riviere Du Loup. The equipment and usual supply the lifeboat carried were found intact, but there was no trace of any of the six-man crew who are believed to have perished with the schooner.

Thursday, a company official announced that one of their schooners and six crew members were missing and considered "lost."

"The schooner and her six-man crew now are considered lost," the official said. "Bad weather is believed to have caused the sudden sinking of the vessel."

Motorship Hibou Sunk 6 Years Ago Raised for Salvage

Goderich, Ont., Oct. 31 (CP).—After several unsuccessful efforts in rough seas sailors from Goderich during the night managed to fasten a line to the motorship Hibou and then anchored her 500 yards northwest of Goderich harbor. The Hibou was recently raised from 98 feet of water in Georgian Bay, where she sank six years ago, and was being towed to Sarnia when the towline snapped last evening.

The Hibou will be brought into Goderich harbor later in the day

Two men aboard the hulk when the towline snapped were taken off by Capt. Bera McDonald of Goderich but for some time efforts to secure the vessel were unavailing. A small fleet of lake boats stood by at various times until the Hibou finally was anchored. The work was aided when the seas calmed down after some hours.

Judge Cameron Conducts Inquiry Into Evacuation of Japs From Coast

Vancouver, Oct. 31. — Harold Winch, C.C.F. leader in the British Columbia legislature, said Friday many Japanese had told him during their evacuation from the Pacific coast that the British Columbia Security Commission was using a Japanese liaison committee headed by a man whom they did not trust and whom they feared.

In evidence given before a public inquiry conducted by Judge C. A. Cameron of Belleville, Ont., into allegations by the Vancouver News Herald that an affiliate of the Japanese Black Dragon Society was operating in British Columbia, Mr. Winch identified the committee as the "Morii Group" headed by Etsuji Morii, whose name the News Herald had linked with the alleged Black Dragon activities.

Mr. Winch followed as witness Col. F. J. Mead, assistant commissioner of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, and a member of the security commission which was charged with evacuating 23,000 Japanese from the coastal one, who said that the Morii Group provided co-operation unobtainable from Canadian-born Japanese, "hundreds" of whom had to be interned because of their opposition to evacuation.

Col. Mead said that the committee headed by Morii was the major Japanese instrument assisting the commission in arranging the evacuation. He said the Morii group represented those Japanese accustomed to "a tradition of discipline" whereas the Misei (Canadian-born Japanese) resented evacuation and refused to co-operate.

Mr. Winch said his informants had told him Morii had "great influence" of Jiu-Jitsu clubs which were "thug organizations in Japan and I believe the same here." He said his informants "were fearful for themselves and their families" in case their opposition to Morii resulted in a showdown with him and "very definitely informed me that the Morii group's loyalties were not to Canada but to Japan and said the commission should have worked with Canadian-born Japanese."

Mr. Winch declared his informants "were driven by a fear complex."

"Time after time I tried to get affidavits but was never able to get them," he said. "The answer to my questions was that I would have to understand Japanese to understand the situation."

The C.C.F. leader said he was told the Morii group used "very coercive methods of collecting money from evacuees." When he took this matter up with the commission he was told the collection was being taken not under instructions of the security commission but "by a Japanese benevolent collecting for welfare work among the Japs."

PREMIER CONANT AGAINST FEUDING WITH KING GOV'T

New Leader Claims There is No Reason For Election in Ontario at Present

SPEAKS AT OSHAWA

Oshawa, Ont., Oct. 31 — (CP) — Stating that the achievement of victory demands so much that personal or party considerations fade into insignificance, Premier Gordon D. Conant said here last night that as far as he is concerned there will be no feuding between the Ontario and Federal governments.

He was addressing a testimonial banquet tendered him by Oshawa and Ontario county fellow citizens of various political creeds and from all walks of life to celebrate his accession to the Premiership nine days before.

In a 50-minute speech Ontario's new government leader outlined the policy to be pursued by his administration. He said he saw no reason for an immediate general election within the province.

Ontario would be given a sound, businesslike, honest and economical administration so that from Ontario there could be contributed to the Canadian war effort the utmost of the province's resources. The government's chief aim would be to devote "all the resources of Ontario toward the achievement of victory."

As well as declaring that there would be no election and defining his administration's attitude toward the federal government, the premier dealt with these specific points of policy:

1. A special session of the Ontario legislature would be called to deal with a bill validating power agreements with Quebec and a bill making collective bargaining compulsory in Ontario as soon as the measures were prepared.

1. If it is possible to balance the provincial budget payments to recipients of mothers' allowances and old age pensions will be increased.

3. Every effort will be made to assist the farmers to increase food production "and at the same time obtain for their produce at least the cost of production with some profit."

ORDER LIMITS ALL HOLDINGS OF STORAGE BUTTER

Only 75 Per Cent of Amount Stored Last Year Can be Held Nov. 30

INCREASE PRICE NOV. 2

Ottawa, Oct. 31 (CP)—The foods administration of the Prices Board announced last night an order limiting all holdings of butter in storage warehouses and creameries at Nov. 30 next to 75 per cent of the amount held at the same date last year.

The announcement said the present rate of consumption is above that of last year but added that the Board "believes that with co-operation on the part of consumers it will be possible to maintain an adequate supply to meet normal demands."

The statement said that the Board felt the restriction in holdings "will facilitate the movement of butter within Canada and permit the best possible distribution of existing stocks.

The order also requires that beginning with November and until further notice all holders of butter carrying stocks in excess of 5,000 pounds must report their actual holdings to the Foods Administrator, J. G. Taggart, at the close of each month.

In accordance with the Board policy established last April, maximum prices of butter will increase on Nov. 2 by 3-4 of a cent a pound at wholesale and one cent a pound on retail prices.

This seasonal increase, said the Board, is a recognition of the need to encourage more extensive winter production and to provide for storage costs. The new wholesale price for creamery butter will be 3-4 of a cent higher than the prevailing schedules.

Everett Terry Given 5 Years

Cobourg, Oct. 31 — Everett Terry, of Trenton, was sentenced to five years in Kingston Penitentiary by Mr. Justice Greene in Assize Court Friday. He had been remanded for sentence from last Monday by a jury which found him guilty of carnal knowledge of a girl thirteen years of age and not guilty of rape.

In connection with a civil action for $10,000 brought by Mrs. Clarence Manley of Peterboro, against the C.P.R., Mr. Justice Greene dismissed the case. The claim arose from an accident which occurred last March at Port Hope when a train owned by the C.P.R. struck a car driven by Mrs. Manley.

VICTORY LOAN MOUNTS CLOSER TO OBJECTIVE

Friday's Total Amounts to $54,883,750 from 104,626 Subscribers

NOW $564,863,750

Ottawa, Oct. 31. (CP)—Cash subscriptions to Canada's Third Victory Loan Friday amounted to $54,883,750, bringing the cumulative total for the first eleven days of the 18-day compaign to $564,863,750.

This figure, announced by loan headquarters here, compared with $506,272150 at the camparative date in last February's Second Victory Loan, but the objective then was $600,000,000—or $150,000,000 less than this time.

The current drive is to close next Saturday, November 7.

The number of subscribers Friday was 104,626, described by loan headquarters here as "a new high", bringing the cumulative total of subscribers to 668,322 compared with 582,072 at the same point in the last loan.

The grand total of payroll savings subscriptions in this campaign now stands at 231,182 with a total value of $22,270,600, compared with 148,238 subscribers valued at $14,308,450 at the same time in the February drive.

Fraser Farms Ltd., at Richmond, B.C., has only thirty employees but they subscribed $8,700.

Burrard Drydocks' north and south plants, West Coast Shipbuilders Ltd., and North Van Ship Repairs Ltd., have subscribed close to $1,000,000.

Offices of the Prices Board at Winnipeg subscribed $2,500 more than their quota, for a total of $12,100.

University of Manitoba C.O.T.C. cadets waived their pay and so far have invested $4,500 in Victory Bonds. This year's graduating class has contributed $2,500 of this amount.

Subscriptions to the loan from personnel of No. 15 Service Flying Training School of the R.C.A.F. at Claresholm, Alta., are $35,000, and this figure was sufficient to send the Claresholm-Granum unit over its objective of $75,000 by Friday night. The Unit's Commando Dagger was flown to Calgary by Pilot Officer A. E. Hore and presented to Fred E. Osborne, chairman of the Alberta Victory Loan Committee.

Among large subscriptions of which headquarters was advised overnight were: The Robert Simpson Co. Ltd., Toronto, $2,000,000; Equitable Life Insurance Co. Waterloo, Ont., $400,000; Sovereign Life Assurance Co. of Canada, Winnipeg, $425,000; Continental Life Insurance Co. Toronto, $350,000; Maritime Life Assurance Co. Halifax, $100,000; Economical Mutual Fire Insurance C. Kitchener, Ont., $500,000; Molson's Brewery Ltd., Montreal; $500,000; Canada Cement Co. Ltd., Montreal, $1,510,000; and La Societe Des Artisans Canadiens Francais, $250,000.

REFORMED LINES IN NALCHIK AREA HOLDING FIRMLY

Nazi Attacks Repelled By Stalingrad Defenders in 68th Day of Siege

SETBACK AT MOZDOK

Moscow, Oct. 31 (AP) — Reformed lines of the Red army were reported holding in fierce fighting for the Nalchik Plateau of the central Caucasus today while German attacks were repelled again by the defenders of Stalingrad in their 68th. day of siege.

A battalion of submachine-gunners, supported by 60 tanks and armored cars, was repulsed during atttack after attack upon a community in the Nalchik area and 22 of the machines were destroyed, the Soviet information bureau announced at noon.

"In another sector," it said, "a Soviet unit repulsed two German attacks, killing 240 of the enemy. Twenty German trucks with ammunition were destroyed by Soviet artillery."

These defensive accomplishments were reported chalked up after three successive retreats by outnumbered Red army forces.

The Russians said three German tanks were destroyed and a German company was wiped out overnight in the repulse of attacks upon Stalingrad while Red army men consolidated their positions and carried out reconnaissance activities northwest of the city.

"One Soviet detachment wiped out 80 Germans and captured four machine-guns and 250 hand grenades," the communique reported. "Soviet artillery destroyed three enemy pillboxes and dugouts and three German tanks dug into the ground."

At Least Two And Probably Four Ships Damaged by Allied Aerial Bombs

A SUPERB JOB

Washington, Oct. 31 (AP)—The United States grip on the vital Guadalcanal airfield clenched tighter today as the Japanese fleet retired from the Solomons battle scene with at least two more ships, and probably four, damaged by Allied aerial bombs.

The threat of a major Nipponese naval assault to recapture the stubbornly-held island airbase was dispelled temporarily even as bombing planes from Australia again plastered an enemy shiping base with explosives, hitting a warship twice, setting another vessel ablaze and probably damaging an aircraft carrier and a cruiser.

Navy Secretary Frank Knox told yesterday of the retirement of the Japanese warships from the Guadalcanal area leaving a force of United States marines and soldiers in possession of every inch of ground we ever controlled" on the battle-ridden island.

Some Japanese ships had returned to their bases, Knox said, and others left for undisclosed destinations. But he made it clear there was no telling when they would return for a stab at Guadalcanal or at American bases in the New Hebrides, New Caledonia and the Fiji Islands.

Knox Expresses Pride

While cautioning against regarding retirement of the Japanese fleet too optimistically, he expressed "a great feeling of pride in the way our men have met the onslaught."

"They have done a superb job," he said, adding that "we are in as complete control of the situation in Guadalcanal as we ever have been."

Some quarters expressed belief the Japanese battleships, cruisers, destroyers and transports had left the Solomons area to bring back more troops for reinforcement of their Guadalcanal forces whose efforts thus far have failed to retake any of the ground the marines captured in early August.

Lose 14 Ships

At the end of round one, as Knox called it on departure of the enemy fleet, the Japanese, since opening of the battle of the Solomons, have lost at least 14 ships with three more probably sunk and 64 damaged.

Argentina's National Lottery Feels Effect of Unofficial Public Boycott

By J. F. McEVOY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Buenos Aires, Oct. 31 — (AP)—Rocked by the biggest scandal in the 47 years of its operation, Argentina's national lottery which annually takes in $20,000,000 from a willing citizenry is feeling the financial effects of an unofficial public boycott.

Principal victims of declining profits are various charities which share 30 per cent.—usually about $5,000,000—of the total amount of money bet on the 45-odd drawings held during a year.

It was estimated in advance that 1942 figures would be below par because of rising living costs and a decline in tourist travel. Then Congress began to investigate reports of irregularities in the distribution of tickets to be sold. While this investigation was in progress, seven youthful employees of the lottery and the father of one of them were arrested for manipulating the drawing of Sept. 4 so that 300,000-peso first prize (about$75,000) fell to a ticket they (about $75,000) fell to a ticket they

Police estimated the total amount of money affected by the fraudulent draw at 500,000 pesos since persons "in the know" also purchased tickets in provincial lotteries whose winning numbers are governed by the national drawing in Buenos Aires.

The accused manipulators, known as "ninos cantores" (boy chanters) because they sing out the figures as they pick numbered balls from various tables, re-enacted for the benefit of Judge Ramon F. Vasquez how the balls were "palmed" to produce the fraudulent result.

Reports of a "phoney" draw had begun to circulate in the capital the day before due to the desire of the "boy chanters"—only one of them is a minor — to tip their friends to a good thing. These tips were used to play in an illegally operated game called "quinielas," similar to the "numbers" racket in the United States, based on the lottery's terminal figures.

The word spread so fast on Sept. 3 that the next day's lottery top prize would end in "025" that "quinielas" bankers refused to take any bets on the number One newspaper even printed the rumor—an indiscretion which led to the gradual discovery of the whole fraud.

Woman Killed By Nazi Raider

London, Oct. 31 (CP).—One woman was killed and several persons were injured today when a German daylight raider dived through the clouds over an East Anglian village and dropped several bombs.

Another plane machine-gunned the district near a coastal village. There were no casualties, but a cow was killed.

No hostile aerial activity was reported over Britain during the night and there was no indication the R.A.F. had been busy over the continent.

Series of Strikes Reported in France

Berne, Oct. 31 (AP).—A new series of strikes was reported today to have broken out in France, especially in the Haut-Savoie Province of Unoccupied France, among workers called to report for work in Germany.

A dispatch from Annecy to the Swiss Telegraph Agency listed strikes in Annecy, Marnaz, Scionzier, in the watch-making region of Closes and at Annemace.

NEW ORDER ISSUED

London, Oct. 31 (CP).—A Stockholm dispatch to Reuters said today measures promulgated by the Germans at Oslo Oct. 12 provided the death penalty for anyone leaving or entering Nazi-occupied Norway without permission.

Oct. 12 was the date on which the Germans lifted the state of emergency in the Trondheim area after executing 34 persons and arresting more than 100 in an effort to halt sabotage. Presumably general orders replaced the temporary measures at Trondheim.

POLICE OFFICIALS WARN RESIDENTS

Maybe it was intended to be a pre-Hallowe'en prank, but it was hardly appreciated by the residents at 188 William Street, when they arose today to find their ash can over-turned and the contents all strewn about the premises.

Police warned today that any destructive Hallowe'en pranks tonight would be severely dealt with if the culprits are apprehended. "There is nothing against good, clean fun, but the wiful destruction of property will not be tolerated." warned police officials.

CAR STOLEN WITHIN SIGHT OF OWNER

Stolen almost within sight of the owner, a 1927 model Chevrolet coupe was taken off Front Street, late Friday night. The vehicle is owned by Glen Milligan, 28 Forin Street, and had been parked near the intersection of Campbell Street on Front Street. Emerging from a nearby restaurant, Mr. Milligan obtained a glimpse of his motor car being driven northward. Emmons, 211 Coleman St., and Gerald Way, 46 Catherine St., were in collision at the intersection of Front and Bridge Streets late Friday evening. No charges were necessary.

TWO PETTY THEFTS REPORTED TO POLICE

Two petty thefts were reported to Provincial Police headquarters here Friday. Clare Brennan, of Read, complained he had lost five gallons of gasoline from his motor car. Mr. Brennan was of the opinion the gas had been siphoned from the tank.

"The worst part of it they steal the wood that is cut and ready for the stove," complained Mr. Richardson.

CANADA AND U.S. FREEZE NEWSPRINT

Production Rate of Six Months April to Sept. Level Set

Ottawa, Oct. 31 (CP)—Canada and the United States moved jointly yesterday to freeze newsprint and magazine paper production at the average production rate of the six months April to September, 1942, in what was officially described as the first step toward "further reduction and concentration of the industry on an international basis."

The restriction, announced in Ottawa by the Prices Board and in Washington by the War Production Board, begins with November output and applies to paper produced for sale within Canada or the United States.

It was announced also that delivery of newsprint has been limited to a 90-day supply. Products of Canadian fine paper and specialty mills have been under the 90-day supply restriction for some time.

Ultimate objective of the new orders, said a Prices Board statement, is "to release for war purposes labor, power, transportation facilities and materials used by the industry in its operations. The current orders 'pave the way' for such further curtailments as may be necessary for these purposes."

Canada's $400,000,000 newsprint industry previously had been affected by restrictive steps designed to conserve power and labor.

R. L. Weldon, the newsprint administrator, was empowered last month to allocate newsprint production business to enable him to concentrate production where power was available and curtail or stop it at points where power could not be spared from essential war industries.

Power Shortage.

Newsprint plants in parts of Ontario and Quebec, where the power shortage is acute, have been placed on a staggered-days systems, instead of all working on week days and all closing Sundays.

Mills in the dominion have been operating at about 65 per cent of capacity in recent months and meeting all demands.

A war production board spokesman in Washington estimated that the freeze means a cut of something over six per cent in Canada, which supplies three-fourths of the newsprint used by United States newspapers.

The restriction is "the first step toward curtailment of the production and use of paper products" to be taken jointly by the two governments, said a joint statement issued here and at Washington.

The board said wherever curtailment measures are likely to involve allocations of materials and supplies to other industries on a sharply reduced basis, "it will be the policy of the board to discuss the effects of such curtailment with the industry affected."

It said in this connection before any action was decided upon, representatives of users and consumers of newsprint and magazine paper in Canada would be consulted by the board as to "the best and most orderly method of putting into effect such reductions of supplies as may be necessary in the national interest."

J. O. Herity Completes 18 Years Perfect Attendance in Rotary Club

An enviable record of attendance has just been completed by Rotary Past District Governor J. O. Herity here, according to Rotary Club officials.

By his presence at the regular weekly luncheon at Hotel Quinte last Monday, Rotarian Herity completed eighteen years of attendance without a single break. The period is from November 1, 1924, to November 1, 1942.

While Rotarian Herity is not a charter member of the club, he joined in the charter year of 1920 and attended his first meeting as a member on June 14, 1920. He entered the "millenial" class of membership in Rotary over two years ago and he has at the present time a record of attendance at 936 meetings at his own club and 170 at other clubs both within and outside this district.

During this period he has seen many Rotarians come and go and has visited many clubs in the Dominion and the United States. He was elected District Governor of District 168 a few years ago and held that office for the regular period of one year. Mr. Herity has been a regular attendant at the meetings of the Belleville Rotary Club for a number of years.

THE WAR TODAY

(By ALVIN J. STINKOPF)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

The German high command claim Friday that U-boats in the North Atlantic had attacked a fully-laden convoy on its way to Britain, "sinking nine ships totalling 68,-500 tons," has a familiar ring to persons who get themselves into a critical state of mind before reading Axis reports .

The claim sounds suspiciously like that late-in-the-week stimulant to German morale which the shrewd propagandists of the Wilhelmstrasse often find necessary on Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays.

One consideration prompting the cautious reader to regard such reports suspiciously is, of course, the record of proved exaggerations in Berlin and Rome recently. Axis communiques which didn't stand up include the reports of the "total destruction" of a 100-ship convoy to northern Russia. The imaginary sinking of transports on the way to Britain, and the Italian claims of the destruction of two United States battleships—vessels which Britain authoritatively identified yesterday as a corvette, which escaped, and a cargo ship which was sunk with 52 survivors landing in a South American port.

But the sprightly victory in the fag end of the week is a well-established device in German war reporting. It is based on the studies of psychologists who helped to plan the war. Their investigations have revealed that fluctuating German morale sags toward the end of the week.

There were many scholarly explanations. The German works hard, eats inadequately and the burden of worry and sacrifice gets heavier the longer he is removed from some relaxation on Saturday and Sunday. So, if reports from all parts of the Reich indicate any unusual tobogganing of the emotions, due to bad news or extraordinary fatigue, the thing to do is to have a victory on Thursday or Friday.

Recently, however, the emotional lows haven't been overcome so readily. No one in Germany can see the end of the war which was supposed to be over so quickly, and no matter how the story from Russia is edited it makes doleful reading.

Some German psychologists have held out for a fine communique on Sunday, but it appears that recently the better thought has been that on Sunday the German has enough other diversions to take care of his morale.

Perhaps the most categorical and complete denial of a wishful German communique yet to be issued was dictated by Lt.-Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Late in September the axis spread official reports that "several large ocean-going liners heavily laden with American troops" had been torpedoed. The commander of United States army forces in Europe waited three weeks and then, in a formal statement, said:

"These claims are completely unfounded, and are merely another example of the untrustworthiness of axis reports.

"This information has been withheld until every American soldier who was on the Atlantic at the time of the German announcement was landed safely in the United Kingdom and we could assure ourselves of the complete falsity of the German claims."

But, false or not, the claims probably served a fleeting purpose in bucking up German spirits.

The British Admiralty was just as categorical yesterday in denying and ridiculing the claim of the Italian submarine commander Grossi that he had sunk two American battleships. Both Hitler and Mussolini awarded Grossi medals. The United States navy remained silent, but the Admiralty yesterday issued an authoritative statement that the two ships were a cargo ship which was sunk and a corvette which escaped.

JAP FLEET RETIRES

The United States navy has announced 14 vessels sunk and one damaged.

Japanese losses in the Guadalcanal ground fighting and aerial combats about the island also have been reported much heavier than that of the Americans.

Meanwhile, Knox said "there has been no interruption in our communications" to the island.

27 Tons of Bombs Dropped

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Oct. 31 (CP)—Three waves of Allied bombers dropped more than 27 tons of bombs on Japanese ships in the harbor of Buin last night, scoring two hits on a heavy cruiser or battleship, probably damaging extensively an airplane carrier and a light cruiser and setting fire to an unidentified vessel, Allied headquarters announced today.

The raid was the second in two days on the harbor and part of a continuing effort by air forces to ease pressure on American troops in the Solomon Islands. Buin is on the southern extremity of Bougainville Island in the northern Solomons.

The first wave of heavy bombers scored the hits on the heavy cruiser or battleship and put other bombs "very close to a light cruiser and an airplane carrier, probably causing extensive damage," the communique said. Reports from the second wave of medium bombers have not been tabulated. A third wave of heavy bombers fired the unidentified vessel and scored two possible hits on a destroyer.

All Planes Return

All Allied planes returned to their bases.

Fliers who participated in the raid said the brilliance of the moonlight reflected from the waters of Buin harbor made it difficult to identify positively the enemy vessels bombed. There is a marked similarity between some Japanese heavy cruisers and battleships, especially the types which have two or three funnels trunked to form one bulging smokestack.

In ground fighting on New Guinea, it was announced that ground troops have occupied Alola, seven miles south of the Japanese-held village of Kokoda, and forward elements are continuing the advance.

Offer Stiff Resistance

The Japanese had offered stiff resistance in the Alola region and held up the Allied advance there for several days. The pocket of resistance was taken in an attack at dusk after an Allied flanking group attacked with hand grenades. A frontal bayonet assault completed the action and routed the Japanese.

The capture of Alola means that Allied troops will be able to continue their drive in more favorable country.

The Japanese apparently had established well-stocked strong points along the line of retreat where their men were expected to fight to the finish, dispatches from the front said.

Assembly, Oct. 5.—Assembly began with the cheering strains of "Pack Up Your Troubles" ably rendered by the band. The devotional exercises were conducted by Mr. Davies and included the hymn "Lord of the Lands" sung to the ever familiar air of "O Canada". Mr. Hill then gave the report on the sale of war stamps and certificates, the total up to date being $1139.25. Sales for the week amounted to $139.50.

It seems that the parking of bicycles against the building has caused several basement windows to be broken. Mr. Turner stated that hereafter, if any window was found broken, the owner of the bicycle nearest to it would be held responsible and must pay for the replacement of the pane.

Our principal extended deep thanks to all those that contributed to the concert last Friday evening—the band, glee club and those responsible for the pageant. He especially thanked the stage crew and our brilliant student-artist, Bill Davies.

Someone discovered that by breaking the glass in the fire alarms, the bell may be set ringing. As a result, there have been two false alarms. The masters were asked to watch for the offenders and all students were warned that the culprits would be severely dealt with.

A request was made for cardboard boxes 12 x 8 x 6 inches in which to pack items for refugees. So peer into your attics and cellars and send any boxes you may find to room 218.

Only seventy-one girls have reported for Junior Red Cross and more are urgently needed. The demand for finished articles is great this term and the older girls especially are asked to co-operate. A result of the splendid work done by this organization was shown when Mr. Turner read a letter received by Miss Dwyer from one of the crew on a British mine-sweeper, acknowledging the receipt of a pullover. He stated that it was a God-send, and urged that the good work be kept up.

A novel advertisement for XIII-B's tea dance to be held on Friday, was given by three of the students. The scene was "War-torn Europe". Two men entered carrying a stretcher on which lay a wounded man (there was a slight resemblance to our own Jack Carefoot); suddenly the victim sat up crying "Let me down. I'm going to the XIII-B Tea Dance—cider, soft lights, 'n everything.

Our principal then introduced the business manager of the "Rinso Revue" who to the delight of his hearers informed us that we were to be treated with a portion of the show. First on the program was a colorful film of the Canadian National Exhibition followed by an amusing short cartoon-comedy. Next, a clever ventriloquist, Mr. Rust, exhibited his prowess in sparkling repartee with "Pat" his dummy. He was followed by a magician, Mr. Cook, who before our somewhat skeptical eyes performed many mysterious tricks. However, he soon reduced our skepticism to genuine wonderment by causing four pigeons to disappear. Some of us are still wondering where they could have gone.

Mr. Turner thanked the "Rinso Revue" for giving us their time, and we showed our appreciation by loud applause. Assembly broke up with the National Anthem and we adjourned, rejoicing in having missed almost two periods.—W.J.

With the B.C.I.V.S.-St. Michael's game on Friday, we are hoping that the sum of money involved in XIII-B's "tea-dance to end tea-dances" will be recovered. Here's hoping that the best tea-dance within our short memories is a financial success......The stage crew of "Our Town" has been gazing with envy at the banks of spotlights and those scarlet and turquoise curtains that went with the "Rinso Revue." On the other hand, the rest of the school would like to keep the artists on hand for our Assemblies. Hmm! Plot, plot and counterplot.

The first flurry of snow-flakes stopped most classes for an instant—just that first glance at the herald of winter. And then, you should have seen the crop of overcoats that appeared that afternoon....XIII-A is having a Hallowe'en party at Christ Church Parish Hall. Apple cider and punkin pie. Ah, me!

Best story of the week concrns the decoration of the "Green Room" by an R.A.F. guest artist on the VicLoan program. The wall is covered with amusing signs of the times and a really splendid crest in all the colors of the rainbow....The grade-niners are being very good children at home just now. Reason? Well, they ARE taking their first report-cards home very soon.

Short Sport Shots:

Hallowe'en came about a week early this year, with regard to our goal-posts, didn't it? 'Nuff said, I guess.

It's getting to be so that anyone can write this column; the only difference in the results of our games being the date and the score. How about at least one win this season, eh fellas?

With wintry winds chilling the air, there is some talk of basketball practices commencing within a couple of weeks. Following last year's loss, due in great measure to the late start of and poor attendance at the practices, I sincerely hope that this talk develops into a reality.

Wartime Economics

I called on a friend the other day, and found her seated at her sewing machine, refooting stockings. A very neat job she was making of it, too. She cut off the worn out foot, and used it for a pattern to cut new feet, out of the good legs of discarded stockings, of the same shade. "Painting your legs may be all right for the young things," she said, "but you can't do that at my age. And these synthetic stockings don't wear too long." She had saved these old lyle stockings to hook into rugs, but was now putting them to a better use, for house wear.

A neighbor made three good sized fruit cakes, from a recipe that called for neither butter nor eggs, and they were delicious to eat. She put them away in covered cake boxes, with an apple beside each cake to help the cake ripen. This would be her supply of cake to use when unexpected guests arrived for a short stay.

Many who are investing small sums, or larger amounts, in the war effort, are attending fewer shows, and are finding enjoyment in books from our free Public Libraries. If you become friends with your librarian, she will come to know your taste in reading, and will help you to select interesting books.

Discussing baking economies at an executive meeting, one member asked if we ever saved chicken fat from stewed chicken. A Home Economics graduate spoke up and said, "yes, always. It makes marvellous shortening for cake, or cookies; and try a little with your other shortening in pie crust." "Strain the hot broth through two thicknesses of wet cheese cloth, placed in a colander," she said, "and your chicken fat will harden in the cheese cloth. Rinse with cold water and store in a covered container in your refrigerator." I tried it and have never had as delicious fruit pies as those I made this past summer, when I added about a quarter of chicken fat to the amount of shortening for the crust. I added a tablespoon of flour, and a tablespoon of minute tapioca to a cup of sugar, and mixed this with one box of berries for the filling. The pies were grand.

A friend who is a famous cook, was showing me recipe bulletins she had secured from the Department, giving recipes for almost every branch of cookery, and substituting honey or corn syrup for sugar. She had purchased a ten pound pail of light honey and was ready to try them.

I ate macaroons at a tea party, that were delicious. The hostess said the recipe called for jelly instead of sugar, to be whipped into the steamed egg whites and cocoanut, and then baked in a slow oven.

Perhaps it may even be fun, to surprise our friends, with results that are delightful and different, while practising war-time economies.

The Great Four

With Emphasis on the Fourth

By Agnes Jones

Many forces are involved in the winning of the present war. Some of them silent, but nevertheless a force. There is the stay-at home Army, whose work enables the fighting units to carry on. There is that great Spirtual Force which must be applied both at home and at the battlefront before any war can be won.

There are others, but this article deals with the more spectacular units which for our present purpose we shall call the Great Four. The Air Force, the Merchant Navy, the Royal Navy, the Army: all these active in our defence; buying our liberty with their lives.

The Air Force, that "new broom" of warfare, comes in for much adulation as well it should. It rises above boundary lines and fortresses, and from the skies, strikes at the very heart of our trouble—the enemy's munition plants. It forms a protecting umbrella over convoys and fighting men. But why list the deeds which are on the lips of everyone to-day.

The Land Force is an older story in battle. The glorious achievements of its heroes in history are reacted and resung to-day. The heroism and self-sacrifice of the soldier has always had the admiration of the world.

The Royal Navy, with glories to its credit which fill volumes, wears the same halo to-day that it always did. The halo needs no alteration to fit the modern brow. It never been to be burnished. It has always been the same and always will be. And why should this not be so?

Then, there is the Merchant Marine, for the first time given its proper title by King George VI—the Merchant Navy. The sagas which might habe been sung of this, one of the oldest and most heroic of our forces, are few; and the world at large knows little of that few.

Merchantmen plied rivers, and were important in the life of the known world, before men dared to venture out to sea. "A lot of water has run under the bridges" since they began. In fact a lot of water had run under primitive merchant craft before bridges were invented. Bridges have changed with the years and the world has grown from a little patch of land about the Mediterranean Sea, to a Globe. The merchant ship was the sole means of its growth, and has been the link between the countries right up to modern times.

From time immemorial they have plied the waters in peace, and armed themselves as best they could for war. Centuries before guns, or even navies, as such, existed, frail boats attached battering-rams to their bows, and their oarsmen drove them with such force as they could (often very effective we believe) against opposing vessels. In British history, her merchant ships have fought with guns, the barrels of which were strips of steel, bound together with strong cord. Wars would cease and the ships would begin again as merchant craft: discovering, exploring, carrying the people and products of one part of the world to another.

From the time of the Merchant Sailor's beginning to the present day, danger and heroic deeds have been daily experience with him. Without him, the world simply couldn't exist to-day. And yet, to many people the Merchant Navy is a little "side-show" in our life.

One group of people above, has worked for the well-being of the Merchant Sailor—alone, until very recent times. That is the British Sailors' Society which originated in England about 123 years ago, and which has been carrying on in Canada for quite a number of years. At the Canadian office, 50 Alberta Ave., Toronto, Mr. Geo. M. Speedie, the kindly and energetic Dominion Secretary of this Society, is living up to his name in promoting and extending the work. The Navy League is giving gallant help at the present time.

That the Merchant Sailors' welfare is a side-show in the life of many Canadians has been impressed upon my mind during recent weeks. In doing a bit of "war work" along this line, it has been my duty to contact many business men. Some percentage of these are annual donors to the cause. Some of these, again, fully understand the situation and cheerfully and generously give. Others, who give cheerfully and annually, really do not understand why they give. To them the association is just one of the many which daily solicit money at their door. "Yes, I give to that," remarked one cheery donor, "but, say, what's it all about anyway"

The majority of people seem strangers to the importance of the work. Said one impatient man (and I want it understood that impatience and discourtesy are rarely met in the work) "Look here! I'm getting fed up with something dropping in every day asking for money!"

I tried to impress upon him that so long as the "thing" that dropped in on him was not a bomb, he was still a lucky man.

"I know all that!" was the reply. "But I've given enough. I give very generously to every important thing. But this and that coming in for money, I just can't stand any more of it!'

Then, after a pause,—"I really hate, little lady, to send you away without anything. But 'pon my word, I haven't a cent of change on me to-day!"

For the Merchant Sailor—"Change!"

The Merchant Sailor counted among "this and that!"

Isn't it just too bad that men with money—happy to give that money to important activities, cannot see the importance of the Merchant Marine.

Some honestly believe that the Navy League of Canada looks after it all. But no, the impossibility of that is evident to anyone who knows the scope of the work of both these great organizations. In recent years the two co-operate, as best they can: For instance Mr. Speedie, the present Dominion Secretary, influenced the late Amelius Jarvis of the Canadian Navy League, to clear off the debt on a Lake Hostel for merchant sailors. And the Navy League has built an extra hostel in Halifax (modern and attractive) to accommodate the great influx of sailors from all over the world, to-day, in that port. Probably it has done many things of which I do not know.

The British Sailors' Society, for its part, helps the Navy League in many parts of the world—it turns over certain hostels to their use—the Institute at Malta is an example of this. It finances the famous "under-twenty" club at Malta, which trains young men for the Royal Navy. But space forbids that we continue the list.

Everyone knows, if he stops to think, that the Merchant Service is all-important both in peace and in war. This is written to help us to think. It is written in the hope that the people who have money to give, little or much, and who are blessing the world with their giving, will include the British Sailors' Society in the list of "important" activities.

STAFF OF HYDRO HONORS J. MUNRO

Presentation Made to Hydro Foreman, Now Retired After 43 Years

Yesterday afternoon at the close of business, the members of the staff of the Belleville Public Utilities gathered to honor Mr. John Munro on the occasion of his superannuation. Mr. Munro, foreman until the time of his retirement, completed forty-three years in the service of the Hydro, during which his great efficiency, his friendly personality, and his keen interest in training those under him in his department won the esteem of all his fellow-workers. Present with the staff yesterday were Mr. G. B. Smith, Mr. A. H. Fisher of the Belleville office of the H.E.P.C., also Mr. H. B. Tett of the Toronto office of the H.E.P.C. who have been associated with Mr. Munro for a great many years.

Mr. O. H. Scott, manager, gave an address in which he paid tribute to the faithful and excellent work of Mr. Munro during his years on the staff. Mr. Munro was a pioneer of Hydro in the city and many amusing ancedotes were related by Mr. Scott and Mr. Munro of the early days in Belleville when the Hydro workers walked to their jobs carrying equipment on their backs. In winter they had a sled on which to carry the tools, and then came the day when a horse and cart were provided. The difficulties of line construction, when irate residents opposed even the cutting of one limb from their trees were recalled.

Mr. Bill Phillips, on behalf of the staff, presented Mr. Munro with a Gladstone bag. Mr. Munro, in reply, thanked his fellow workers for the gift and their good wishes. From his rich store of reminiscences of the development of Hydro in the city he entertained the staff.

Refreshments were served before the close of the party.

Historical Landmark At Deseronto, Burns

"The Wigwam", historical residential landmark of Forester's Island, south of Deseronto in the Bay of Quinte, has passed into history. One morning this week, fire of an undetermined origin razed the remnants of the old dwelling to the ground thus destroying the last visible connection with the settling of the Mohawks on the Long Reach 160 years ago.

Forester's Island and the "Wigwam" has had quite a history. The island was given by the Canadian government to Captain John Deserontyou who led the Mohawks up the Bay of Quinte in the 17th century. For many years it was known as Captain John's Island.

After the purchase of the island by the Independent Order of Foresteers, a hotel, orphanage and other buildings were constructed. The Wigwam was built for the illustrious head of the Foresters, Dr. Oronhyalekha, but all the building with the exception of the residence were torn down following the doctor's death.

Dr. Oronhyatekha (pronounced Or-ane-teka) was a great figure in Canadian affairs for years through his connection with the Independent Order of Foresters. Picturesque head of that order, he was widely known all over the North American continent. He was descended from the original tribes headed by Captain Joseph Brant, war chief of the Six Nations Indians, whose loyalty to the British led to the entire tribe coming to Canada as United Empire Loyalists and settling at Deseronto.

The present owner of the "Wigwam," Mr. Arthur Pearce of Toronto, was in Deseronto recently making preparations for closing the building for the winter months. It is believed however that fishermen were in the habit of using the island and it is possible the fire originated from this source.

All-Star Show Planned by RCAF Stations of District in Furtherance Of Canada's Third Victory Loan

Apparently not content with donning the uniform of their country; contributing thousands of dollars to the Third Victory Loan, and other things of a patriotic nature, members of the Royal Canadian Air Force stations in this district, have again come to the fore in an effort to further the Dominion's war effort.

Here in Belleville on Tuesday night, Nov. 3 the general public will be given the opportunity to see entertainment stars of the dashing lads in air force blue in all out action.

Thanks to the commanding officers of the Trenton Air Station, No. 5 I.T.S., No. 6 Repair Depot and the Mountain View Air Station, a galaxy of radio, stage and screen stars now in the service, will appear on a program that for sheer variety, music and entertainment has never been equalled on a Belleville stage.

The show, appropriately termed by a member of the local Victory Loan Committee, "Wings Over the Footlights", will be given in the Belleville Collegiate Institute auditorium and will be sponsored by the Hastings County Victory Loan Committee.

The program numbers, drawn from the talent of the four district air stations, merges into an entertainment whole that bespeaks the last word in variety shows.

Outstanding Talent

For instance there is FO. "Buff" Estes, colorful master of ceremonies, and former member of Bennie Goodman's and Ozzie Nelson's famed radio swing bands, who will appear with his own rug-cutting gang; Flight Lieutenant Doney, the "Nelson Eddy" of 6 A.R.D.; Airwoman 1 Mary Barry, sweet-voiced Columbia Broadcasting System star from Dayton, Ohio; an Airwoman chorus; Sergt. Dowie, cartoonist extraordinary, who "wowed" his audience at the last performance here as did the humorous "Al Jolson" Scotty Burrell; a funny acrobatic act and a melodic officers quartette, besides a number of other stars and star acts.

In short, the show is an all-star all Royal Canadian Air Force production, that will be augmented by the fine melodies of the Belleville Collegiate Band.

Silver Collection

Directly responsible for the production is Flying Officer Howard, officer in charge of entertainment at the Trenton Station, who with Squadron Leader Norman A. Nunn, senior equipment officer, has done a fine job in organizing the show numbers.

There will be no charge of admission, but a silver collection will be taken to defray incidental expenses of the show and the balance will be turned over to the Red Cross for comforts and parcels of Canada's Dieppe prisoners of war.

Air Commodore Frank S. McGill, popular commanding officer of the Trenton Air Station, has consented to appear at the performance and will deliver a brief address. He will be introduced by Sqdn. Ldr. Nunn.

The general public is extended a cordial welcome to see some of the nation's finest entertainers, musicians, singers, and comedians in "action" at Belleville's first star-studded all-Air-Force show.

Alaska Road Open

One of the great achievements during the war has been the construction of the Alaska Highway, which has been opened for traffic weeks ahead of schedule with trucks making their way with supplies to Alaska.

This work is a direct outcome of the war. If Japan had not entered the war it would undoubtedly not have been built at this time and possibly not for a considerable length of time. Japan's action forced a great defensive and offensive program upon the United States, made her a combatant ally of Britain and the other United Nations. Out of this comradeship in arms of the United States and Canada, for the benefit of both countries, for the security of Alaska and as a bulwark against possible aggressive action by the Japanese came into being this strategic military road 1,671 miles long from the Canada - U. S. boundary to the boundary of Alaska. It opens up a vast territory as well as furnishing a great military road joining the separated portions of the U. S. territory. It is now serving in the war and will serve in the days after peace.

This highway is one of the finest evidences of the spirit of goodwill among the nations of the Allied world. Canada and the United States honor one another, they have the same ideals in war and indeed the same ideals in peace. Co-operation and mutual trust are features of their way of life.

Out of this emergency will come what will prove a great economic factor in this part of the world.

Hallowe'en

Youth and childhood have a few hours of pure make-believe and fancy at this season of the year. Hallowe'en with its imaginative element is one of particular appeal to children and even to those of maturer years because every human being likes the element of mystery and takes keen delight in masquerading. Hallowe'en furnishes ample opportunity with relics of abandoned beliefs which are fondly accepted only for the Eve of All-Hallows. In sportive mood and in a merry spirit of wonder people even try the charms, which once were believed in, and derive therefrom a great deal of pleasure.

Hallowe'en has a long history down the centuries. Something like it was known in the earliest days of various peoples recorded in folklore. It is thus a descendant and an inheritance of the imagination of primitive peoples. Supernatural influences were supposed to prevail, and divination played no small part.

In ancient Roman days there was the festival of harvest with the fruits and products of the soil in evidence. This element remains in the festival of Hallowe'en. When Christianity was young it exerted a great influence on folklore and the occasion was associated with the vigil of the Eve of All Saints or All-Hallows. Out of this blend of old pagan belief in witches and evil spirits and out of tradition were gathered all the elements which became Hallowe'en.

But much that was believed in of yore is now become innocent hilarity, and good spirits. The youngsters hold to masquerading and visitation of homes for the collection of nuts, candy and fruit. They go to much preparation for their fervent imagination finds its best expression in masquerading and in social functions and in the innocent pursuit of the make-believe of divination.

There has been suggestion that the Hallowe'en observance might well be passed up during wartime, but it is doubtful if the young will entirely forego the pleasures even if the streets are darker because of saving of electricity. They still have their imaginations to help them enjoy the time.

So today it is mostly a period of hilarity and good spirits and good will. Unfortunately sometimes some of the youth feel a spirit of mischief come upon them and they seemingly try to rival the imps and evil spirits by wanton destruction for which there is no place in ordered society. Sheer destructiveness or a false sense of fun are not enjoyment at all and are justly frowned upon and severely dealt with.

But for innocent merriment, the young will have their way.

WANTED — A SONG

Tin Pan Alley, stir yourself,
Ere your store of tin is gone,
Aid some lilting lyric write
That will herald victory's dawn.

You haven't pounded out a tune,
In three years of world-wide war,
That soldiers think is worth the crooning,
Let alone worth dying for.

Your forte is not heroic metre,
But that be sure's no alibi,
You've neither torch nor mammy songs
That can make Commandos cry.

Tin Pan Street, the tin is going.
You should tintinnabulate,
On falling arches, limping feet,
A real war song, 'ere it's too late.

Don't the fierce Don battles move you?
El Alamein or else Matruh?
The world that's waiting for the sunrise,
Tin Pan Alley, waits for you.
—Archelaus B. Vernon.

A-HUNTING WE WILL GO

The underbrush north of Weslemkoon Lake stirred and Old Pete the deer poked a dark muzzle through the foliage.

"Fanny," he yawned, kicking a buck rabbit out of the way, "my seventh sense tells me these humans are on the trail once again."

"Pete," came back Pete's woodland spouse, "at times you show signs of intelligence. Don't you know there's a shortage of beef, and some of these hunters won't be fussy what they take back as long as it's wrapped in deerhide. Why they might mistake you for a young buck, you seven-antlered old fossil."

"Let's not get away from the point," came back Pete. "It's hunting time. There's one born every minute and the woods are full of 'em."

"Shucks," snorted Fanny, "we've got nothing much to be worried about. The Americans won't be here on account of the gasoline shortage and this Hastings County bunch — well, you know them, they always take three shots when one would do, if you know what I mean."

Pete agreed. "Y'right, m'deer," he nuzzled. "I see by the paper that the tonsil lubricants have been cut to one crock a day. That means that someone will go deer hunting after the gang arrives."

"Which means," quoth his spouse, "that the mortality rate among the humans will be higher this year, especially the morning after 'the stags at eve have drunk their fill.'"

"All the same, we'd better watch that Belleville bunch. There's no telling what they might do. I remember last fall ~~a city~~ medical man who does some work for the army saying whether or not the boys are fit, knocked over that smart alec old buck from Frontenac County. Feeling the buck all over, the doc straightened up, took out his notebook and marked 'Category E,'" said Pete.

"Yeah," said Fanny, "and after the third snifter of the second day last year, some of the gang decided to dress up as buck deer, and go out in the woods in the hope of sneaking up on a young fawn or a deer of any description."

"Which means that for once they wouldn't be passing the buck, and in addition you better not be under the cedar trees with anyone else but me," warned Pete.

"You'd better stay out of that cornfield," smiled Fanny. "Your jokes are beginning to advertise that product."

"And furthermore, you old backwoods rogue, you'd better stay away from some of those young fawns around here. That old gag you pulled last year about paternal protection is the bunk."

"Don't worry," moaned Pete. "I won't have a chance. Whaddya think I am, a flight sergeant?"

"It doesn't matter what I think you are but you'll be a dead pigeon in either case, if I catch you. All I have to do is stand about fifteen yards from the bush where you're hiding, show myself to that Belleville bevy of nimrods, and you'd be decorating the inside of a frying pan within the hour."

"You are such an old deer," murmured Pete, as he ducked for the safety of a nearby thicket.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

The Importance of Being Mentally Fit for the Army

One of the findings already recorded in these war days is that an individual may have a good strong body, the average amount of brains and yet not be an "all round" or fit soldier.

Why? There is some little mental or emotional twist, some little behavior habit, that renders him unfit to obey instructions properly and safely, and prevents him "mixing" naturally with others. It is these little "behaviorisms" that render him unfit for military service.

When such an individual comes up for physical examination and is examined, he can often readily pass the prescribed examination because there is little or no opportunity for the physician to note any strange behavior and there is nothing in his personal or family history that gives any cause for investigation.

As the number of these cases is much larger that it should be in both the United States and the Canadian army, some means of preventing these young men entering the army is being sought.

While it is good sense to have a mental specialist (psychiatrist) on the medical board to which problem cases are referred, every examining physician cannot be a mental specialist and many unnoticed behavior cases are passed as fit and do not reach the medical board.

In an effort to overcome this difficulty, Dr. David Slight Professor of Psychiatry, University of Chicago, in Illinois Health Messenger, says "Psychiatrists have no corner on wisdom nor on the capacity to understand their fellow beings".

There is thus no reason why the average physician with his experience of life and men should not make a psychiatric examination while making the physical examination.

"What is a psychiatric examination? It involves talking with a patient, asking him questions, trying to find out what he thinks, does or fails to do". The physician can then determine in his own mind just what the reaction of this recruit is likely to be under stress, strain, or other difficulties or changes in his scheme of life.

While this will take some time it will save many a man for himself and for the country. He can do useful work at home and be neither a menace nor liability to the country.

Having the family physician send along his "observations" of the recruit is a great help to the army examining physician.

HALLOWE'EN

Who says that Age is dull and drear,
Must lonely be and somewhat queer.
I say that Age returns once more
The long lost joys of years before
And gives us back, at little cost,
The splendors which we thought were lost.
For instance, with long years between,
Again to us comes Hallowe'en.

Time was, with both our youngsters grown,
We thought such fun forever flown,
So long it seemed since goblins small
On us had dared to come to call
I'm sure we had forgotten quite
There ever had been such a night,
Full more than twenty years have been
Since we have thought of Hallowe'en.

But I've been told two goblins small
Tonight on us will pay a call
And when I greet them at the door
They'll try to frighten me once more,
And I'll pretend to be afraid
And call their grandma out to aid;
Thus both of us, by that gay scene,
Will be restored to Hallowe'en.

YOU'D BE SURPRISED!

NUGGETS OF KNOWLEDGE

"The aim of war," said Cicero, "is to be able to live unhurt in peace."

There is a common impression that Red Square in Moscow was named by the Bolsheviki after the revolution of 1917 because their emblem is red. That is not so. Red Square was so named by Ivan the Terrible, who lived in the 16th century and who was the first grand duke of Muscovy to bear the title Czar. "Krasny," Russian word for the color red, also means fine, beautiful, pretty. The Russians speak of a red girl, a red house, a red horse, a red park, etc.

"Grad" or "Grade" in Slavic names literally means an inclosure, about the same thing as garden in English. Gradually it acquired also the meaning of fortress or fortified city; hence, Stalingrad, Leningrad, Belgrade, etc.

In Russia there is a widespread popular belief that Alexander I, Czar of All the Russians when Napoleon invaded the country in 1812, did not die at Tagamrog in 1825, as reported at the time, but retired secretly to Siberia where he lived as a recluse until his death in 1866. When Soviet scientists opened his sarcophagus in 1927 they found it empty.

Residents of Corpus Christi, Texas, are called "Corpus Christians."

The idea of offering government prizes to encourage large families did not originate with Mussolini. Twenty-two hundred years ago Herodotus, the Father of History, wrote of the Persians:

"Next to prowess in arms, it is regarded as the greatest proof of manly excellence to be the father of many sons. Every year the king sends rich gifts to the men who can show the largest number; for they hold that number is strength."

Representative Charles L. Gifford of Massachusetts, recently told his colleagues in Congress: "You know, the nose is put over the mouth so you can smell a thing before it is put in."

The Soviet woman who killed nearly three hundred Nazis is merely living up to an old tradition among Russian women. A Russian woman named Vasilisa, wife of a village elder, killed hundreds of French soldiers during Napoleon's invasion of Russia in 1812.

No species of bison, buffalo or any other member of the ox or bovine family of animals was native to South America or any part of the New World south of Mexico what you will be able to buy after the war, if you save and invest in Victory Bonds NOW!

As a patriotic citizen, you are using every capacity you have to win the war—whether in production of war materials or in some essential industry or service.

You are getting paid for doing this.

There are, undoubtedly, many things you'd like to buy NOW, things you had been planning for a long time to buy, but things you COULD do without.

You can follow one of two courses. You can spend your savings on things you don't really need now, or you can put that money into the new Victory Bonds.

To meet war needs, the average Canadian would have to lend to Canada $1 in every $5 of income left after taxes and compulsory savings have been collected. Of course, the average may not fit your case. Your circumstances are your own. You may be able to do better than that out of current income and accumulated savings; or you may be unable to reach the average. Your share of voluntary savings is every dollar you can possibly spare.

It may mean some pinching—some figuring and belt-tightening. But think of what you'll be able to buy with it when it returns to you after the war!

You will be laying up for yourself the best of all investments. VICTORY BONDS are backed by all the resources of the Dominion of Canada. They yield a fair rate of interest, you can borrow against them, and they are readily saleable when you need the cash.

HOW TO BUY

Give your order to the Victory Loan salesman who calls on you. Or place it in the hands of any branch of any bank, or give it to any trust company. Or send it to your local Victory Loan Headquarters. Or you can authorize your employer to start a regular payroll savings plan for you. Bonds may be bought in denominations of $50, $100, $500, $1,000 and larger. Salesman, bank, trust company or your local Victory Loan Headquarters will be glad to give you every assistance in making out your order form.

WEDDINGS

SMITH—CORDES

The home of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Cordes, was the scene of a pretty Autumn wedding at two-thirty o'clock this afternoon, when their daughter, Evelyn Ruth, became the bride of George Ross Smith, son of Mr. Harry Smith. Rev. J. A. Dilts performed the ceremony. Wedding music was played by Miss Alison Vanderwater, and Mrs. S. P. Hagerman was soloist singing "I Love You Truly".

Pink and white streamers and Autumn flowers adorned the rooms for the occasion. The bride given in marriage by her father was charming in a powder blue wool street length dress with black accessories and she carried an old-fashioned nosegay. Miss Barbara Young-Leslie was bridesmaid wearing a cocoa brown frock with brown accessories and carrying an old-fashioned nosegay. Mr. Howard Smith, brother of the groom, was groomsman.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Smith left on a wedding trip to western points, the bride choosing for travelling a black suit with black accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Belleville.

MORROW—DOIG

A lovely Autumn wedding was solemnized in Smithfield United Church at two-thirty o'clock on Saturday afternoon, October 17, 1942, when Marjorie June, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Doig of Brighton became the bride of Lieutenant James Harcla Morrow, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar L. Morrow of Brighton.

Rev. R. B. Harrison of Smithfield United Church performed the ceremony and the church was beautifully decorated with Autumn leaves, yellow chrysanthemums and balsam, the pews being marked with sprays of balsam tied with satin bows. Mrs. Arthur Alexander was at the organ and Miss Norma Snider sang during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white slipper satin, on princess lines, with sweetheart neckline and long, petal-point sleeves. Her full-length veil was caught on a Mary Queen of Scots cap and she carried a bouquet of all white roses.

Miss Ruth Doig, sister of the bride, as maid-of-honor, was attired in sultana raisin taffeta, fashioned with three-quarter length sleeves and sweetheart neckline. Miss Helen Morrow, sister of the groom, and Miss Jeanne Harnden, both of Toronto, were bridesmaids, the former in sapphire blue taffeta and the latter in daffodil yellow. The bridesmaids' dresses were fashioned after the maid-of-honor's gown and they wore shoulder-length veils and halos of net, matching their gowns. Their bouquets were sheaves of mauve and yellow baby 'mums.

Pilot Officer Edward Jordon of the R.C.A.F. was best man and the ushers were the groom's brother, Bert Morrow and cousin, Murray Miller, both of Brighton.

At the reception at the home of the bride's parents, following the ceremony, the bride's mother wore a beige floor-length lace dress over taffeta, with mulberry accessories and corsage of American Beauty roses and bouvardia. The groom's mother assisted in receiving and wore a gown of fuchsia crepe, floor length, with matching shoes and hat, beige gloves and bag and a corsage of Talisman roses.

Spence preached at the morning service, choosing as his theme, Galatians 6 verse 7, "Be not deceived, God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." The choir, with Mrs. W. A. Jeffery as organist, rendered two anthems, "Rejoice and Be Glad" and "Show Forth His Marvellous Handiwork." Several young people assisted in the choir.

In the evening the Rev. J. G. McKee, pastor of Grace United Church, Trenton, took the service. The choir assisted in the service by singing two anthems, "Looking Unto Jesus" and "Memories of Galilee." They are to be congratulated on their work. GOOD MANNERS

Automobile Arrangements For Wedding Party

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

My fiance is expecting to get his next furlough in November, and we are to be married then at a church wedding.

My fiance insists that we must have a separate car for each of the two bridesmaids and the maid of honor. I suggest that with the gasoline rationing and so forth, it would be quite all right to have one car for the maid of honor and best man and one for the two bridesmaids and ushers. He doesn't at all agree with this!

G. S.

Your fiance's car-planning is unnecessarily generous—even too generous for the days before gasoline rationing. I never heard of having a separate car for each bridesmaid and one for the maid of honor except when each is driven in her own car to meet the bride at the church.

I agree with your fiance that your car-planning is not a good idea either. The best man should accompany the bridegroom to the church. The ushers should arrive at the church an hour before the wedding-hour to be on hand to do their ushering.

You may choose either of two proper car-procedures. The usual one is for the bride's attendants to meet at her house and from there drive to the church. One car could call for your three attendants—your maid of honor and the two bridesmaids—and bring them either to your house or if it seems more advisable directly to the church.

Since the bride's mother is seated before the procession begins she leaves in the first car and if the attendants are meeting at your house the maid of honor might drive with her. Then the two bridesmaids in the next car. Then, in the last car to leave, you and your father, or whoever is to give you in marriage.

Dress Circle

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My brother and I have been given tickets for a concert. The seats are in the dress circle. Am I right in thinking this means at least a dinner dress for the woman and Tuxedo for the man?

C. S.

You would be correctly dressed if you wear a simple dinner dress (or dinner dress and short matching jacket), and your brother may correctly wear a dinner jacket (Tuxedo).

However, with today's natural trend toward informality, you will undoubtedly find that many, if not most, of the women in the dress circle at the concert will be wearing simple street-length dresses and small hats. And that most of the men will be wearing dark business suits.

Blocked Nasal Passage Commonest Cause of Chronic Catarrh

Our bodies have an amazing air conditioning system. Air breathed through the nose is filtered and warmed and moistened. By the time the air passes through the windpipe and its branches to reach the tissues where the blood takes up the oxygen, it has been thoroughly cleaned. It is this complexity of our breathing mechanism that makes it vulnerable to all sorts of disorders.

Chronic nasal catarrh is a frequent complaint. In many instances it is due to infection of the nasal sinuses, which are air spaces in the bones of the face connected with the nose by narrow passageways. If there is blocking of the air passages and a great deal of mucous discharge, an examination of the sinuses should be made. If any of them are found to be inflamed, treatment should be carried out.

According to Dr. T. Ritchie Rodger of Hull, England, chronic nasal catarrh may be present without any infection of the sinuses and the majority of the cases are not caused by sinus infection. The most common cause of chronic catarrh, Dr. Rodger claims, is a mechanical blocking of the nasal passages due to abnormal bending of the septum of the nose. In addition, spurs or bony outgrowths from the septum may occur. This causes the mucous membrane lining over the septum to be pressed against the mucous membrane of the other parts of the nose. As a result, irritation of the lining membrane occurs and excessive mucous formation takes place. The mucous, collecting in the nose, may trickle backward into the upper part of the throat, especially when the patient is lying down. This causes the spitting and hawking in many patients when they arise in the morning. This type of nasal catarrh usually develops in young adults. Even a slight injury to the nose during childhood may cause some disturbance of the septum.

In treating chronic nasal catarrh, an operation on the nasal septum usually is required. This operation is called a submucous resection. It is not difficult and can be carried out without any loss of the lining membrane tissues.

Sometimes chronic nasal catarrh is due to oversensitivity to dust or pollen. Skin tests may be carried out to tell when this condition is present. The skin tests are made by injecting extracts from the various dusts or pollen under the skin and noting whether any reaction in the form of a red swelling occurs. If the red swelling appears, allergy is present.

In children the most common cause of chronic nasal catarrh, according to Dr. Rodger, is the presence of enlarged adenoids. In such instances, the condition clears up quickly when the adenoids have been removed.

Some persons make the mistake of trying to treat the nasal catarrh by washing the nose with various substances. This is not a good practice because the continued washing injures the lining membrane to a great extent. The same may also be said of antiseptic substances. Any antiseptic which is strong enough to kill germs in the nose is also strong enough to damage the lining membrane. Such washing of the nose should be carried out only if the physician advises it.

Fine Program Given in Frankford At Annual Victory Loan Rally

Frankford — A Victory Loan Rally was held in the auditorium of the Frankford school on Thursday afternoon with a program presented by the Continuation and the Public school pupils. The opening number was "O Canada" sung by all. Next on the program was a chorus "We're in the Front Line Now," a song written by Mr. Harry Moore of Trenton and sung by the pupils of grades 7 and 8.

Mr. G. A. Frost, principal of the Continuation School, spoke a few words of welcome, pointing out that with Canada producing this year the largest wheat crop ever, and with factories, mines, etc., working full time, it was everyone's duty to share with their country in the fight for freedom. The government had asked the schools to do what they could to encourage the people, with this thought in mind. He introduced the guests of the afternoon who would later in the program be speaking. He also extended an invitation to anyone who cared to do so, to visit the classrooms at the close of the program to see the work the students are doing.

A recitation by Marilyn Spencer of the primary room, "What Can I Do for My Country," was followed by a folk dance by the girls of the Continuation School. A song, "Whistling Farmer Boy," was given by the pupils of room 2. Jarka Novak gave a recitation "The Union Jack." Miss Dana Kunicek and Miss Nada Marek entertained with a piano duet. A calisthenic drill was put on by the boys of the Continuation School. A choral reading, "Afterglow," was given by the pupils of grade 6. Several girls from the Continuation School sang "When the Lights Go On Again." Another choral reading was presented by the pupils of Mrs. Grant's room, "Peterkin Spray." The final number was "A Victory Picture," painted by a student of the Continuation School, Miss Lucy Green, portraying the army, navy and airforce and their needs and how we, just ordinary people, factory workers, farmers and housewives, can do our part to win this war.

James Barclay Speaker

Mr. James Barclay of Belleville, County chairman of the Victory Loan Drive, spoke telling of the objective the County has to meet and that half of the time is gone and not quite half of the objective has been made. "However," he said, "we have every reason to believe that the amount will be raised." He explained to the children the meaning of Victory Bonds and urged them to ask their parents to buy.

Mr. Erle Denyes, clerk of the County and also chairman of the Rural Loan Drive, was the next speaker. He mentioned that in the last loan Canada went away over the objective set and expressed the hope that the same thing would happen this time. Looking at the boys and girls of the school, he said they are the men and women of tomorrow and that for their sake we should help to make it go over. The difference between Canada and Germany, he pointed out, is that in Canada people are asked to lend and in Germany they are told to give at the point of a gun.

Travelogue Presented

The Young People's meeting of the Frankford United Church met on Monday evening with a very good crowd in attendance. The president, Miss Kay Hibbert, opened the meeting with a hymn followed by a Psalm read responsively. The devotional exercises were conducted by Miss Wood. Mr. Maitland Duff read the Scripture lesson.

The main event of the evening was a moving picture travelogue presented by Rev. H. C. Vaclavik. The pictures were based on a trip through the Maritime Provinces and Quebec, the Alaskan Highway and Jasper Park and the Rockies. Mr. Vaclavik said that many people go to Europe and other far away places to see the beautiful scenery when we have scenery every bit as wonderful at home. Throughout the display Mr. Vaclavik explained the pictures, making it a very worthwhile evening spent. The meeting closed with God Save The King and the Benediction.

THE CANADIAN DEPARTMENT STORES LIMITED

COLUMN OF THREE'S

Soldiers of the Canadian army, far from wives and mothers, have on more than one occasion experienced difficulty in getting mending and sewing done on uniforms.

Wherever there is a large concentration of soldiers the army tailors are frequently overloaded with work, as are civilian tailors, and with only a limited time away from barracks during these days of intensive training the men in khaki have been unable to leave uniforms on which they have wanted chevrons, buttons, or badges sewn.

As yet, few Canadian women's organizations have branched out into this field as have women of the United States. Probably the women in Military District No. 3 can take a lead from these American ladies. All Canadian women take pride in the appearance of their soldier lads, and there is no doubt that they would gladly band together as have the good ladies below the border, to help the boys in battledress.

In one U. S. city the ladies have organized to sew and mend for the doughboys. They maintain an establishment where the soldiers can get minor repairs and such work as chevrons and badges sewn on their tunics. It is just the little jobs that are done, but the men appreciate their help. If such work were started in this district there is no doubt that our men, who have left comfortable homes to do their bit in the battle of freedom would be just as appreciative.

Most soldiers find it difficult to manipulate in a deft manner the needles of the "housewife" issued to them with other equipment on their enlistment. How about it, ladies?

Brigade Group News

Col. L. W. W. Slack, M. C., V.D., commandant of the 33rd Brigade (Reserve) Group of Military District No. 3, is greatly pleased with the way reserve units of the brigade have come through their summer and fall training, and intensive plans now have been made by officers commanding for winter training.

A great deal of equipment for training purposes was made available for the brigade during the summer, and all ranks were enthusiastic. As a result of their keenness they have become proficient in weapon and gas drill and other phases of basic training including fieldcraft, camouflage, and armed and unarmed combat.

He's After Hitler !

Although he broke his leg five months after joining the Governor General's Foot Guards on mobilization and was discharged as a result, Alexander George Richardson, of 8 Baldwin avenue, Cornwall, was anxious to join his three brothers in uniform overseas, and so he has again enlisted in the Canadian Army.

The 26-year-old soldier volunteered as soon as his broken leg mended and was again fit for long route marches. He was attested recently at Cornwall and was sent to Ottawa as a reinforcement for the 1st battalion. Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders (AF).

Born at Bridge End in the County of Glengarry, Private Richardson is one of a family of five brothers. The three in uniform overseas are Corporal Vincent Richardson of the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps, and Privates John and Benny Richardson of the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps.

Entertaining the C. W. A. C.

Realizing the necessity of providing entertainment, organized and otherwise, for personnel of the Canadian Women's Army Corps, the women of Kingston are making a survey of the situation in the area to ensure the girls in khaki are properly entertained.

"It is not that they want to be fed. They are well fed in barracks," Capt. Grace Russell, C. W. A. C. staff officer of Military District No. 3, told the Kingston local Council of Women. "Many of the girls are far from home. What they do need is someone to treat them as a friend; a place where they can go and have a chat, listen to the radio and read good books."

Members of the C. W. A. C. are also stationed in other areas of Military District No. 3, and it is expected that the effort of the Kingston women will be followed by civilians in other centres.

Did You Know . . .

THAT the Governor General's Foot Guards, of Ottawa, are allied with the famous Coldstream Guards, of London, England, and that the regiment's honorary colonel is His Excellency the Governor General? The Guards have now a 1st Battalion on active service and a 2nd Battalion (Reserve) which is part of the 33rd Brigade Group for M.D. 3. Battle honors for this famous unit include "North West Canada, 1885", "South Africa, 1899-1900", and in the First Great War "Ypres, 1915, '17", "Gravenstafel", "St. Julien", "Festubert, 1915", "Mount Sorrel", "Somme, 1916", "Pozierers", "Flers-Courcelette", "Ancre Heights", "Arras, 1917-18", "Vimy, 1917", "Arleux", "Scarpe, 1917-18", "Hill 70", "Passchendaele", "Amiens", "Drocourt-Queant", "Hindenburg Line", "Canal du Nord", and "Pursuit to Mons".

Japanese Fleet Forced to Leave Battle Area

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

A quantitative as well as qualitative superiority of American aviation in the Guadalcanal battle area appears to be at least one reason why the Japanese Fleet covering Nipponese forces ashore "has retired from the scene."

Navy Secretary Frank Knox, making this statement to a press conference, said of enemy craft that there "is no active operation on the surface near the Solomons." This seemed to confine his reference to the fleet supporting the operations of Japanese land forces, not to whatever units of enemy naval power that may be roaming other waters of the Southwest Pacific.

But the fact that the inshore operations of the Japanese Navy in the Solomons zone had halted indicated that the steady hammering of American Navy, Marine and Army planes had brought results, even if temporary.

There remains in possibility, perhaps even probability, that the Japanese surface force will return. But in the meantime, the Japanese army on Guadalcanal is on its own, without naval guns and aviation to support it.

United States Superior in Air.

It appears to be agreed in press discussions of the meagre reports furnished by the navy to date that the enemy enjoys a numerical, but not qualitative advantage both at sea and in manpower on Guadalcanal Island. But the matter of air

It appears that either exigencies different. If Japan had rushed planes in force from China, Burma or elsewhere to the Solomons battle zone, they have not come into action effectively.

Available information does not indicate they have been able to match the American air effort either in numbers or range of action. Army-marine success in beating off repeated Japanese attacks on Guadalcanal and quickly restoring any dent in the lines defending its vital air fields is in part traceable to that.

There is another factor on Guadalcanal tending to even up battle odds ashore. The defenders, although cramped in an area roughly six miles or less square, have the advantage of short interior lines. Japanese communications with their reinforcement and supply beachhead, ten miles westward along the island coast, are not good.

A substantial portion of the total force available on the island to the enemy commander must be continuously engaged along those supply lines. That is particularly true of the southern face of the American defence front. To get men, guns, ammunition and food to that zone promptly in order to exploit a wedge forced into the American front before reserves come up to pinch it off is a difficult job.

There are no roads available to the foe, only jungle trails. The terrain of the island except along the southeast coastal plain is studded with mountain peaks. Their volcanic origin makes for cliff and dead-end gorges, all concealed from accurate survey by jungle growths.

The perimeter of the airfield held by the Americans is heavily overgrown. The whole terrain problem is so utterly inhospitable to tank attack that success in stemming the initial Japanese efforts to apply armored blitzkrieg technique to the problem is understandable.

Tough Nut For Japs.

The foe has urgent need of air domination to supplement his indicated superiority in warcraft and men. While Henderson Field can be used by the Americans to launch attack planes, evacuate casualties, receive essential supplies, and, possibly, personnel reinforcements by air, it must remain a tough nut for the Japanese to crack. Here greater numbers of ground troops is not enough. It would take an overwhelming enemy quantative superiority, to be thrown in regardless of losses, to crush a determined American defence by weight of numbers alone.

It appears that either exegencies of the sea battle, in which planes are of primary importance both for scouting and for long-distance attack, have forced a concentration of Japanese naval air power at sea, regardless of the Guadalcanal situation, or that the Japanese cannot replace air casualties fast enough to permit sustained bombing attack over the airfield. Quite likely both explanations have a bearing. It is also a fact that the rising tempo of Allied air attacks in China and Burma tends to pin enemy air strength to those theatres which otherwise might head southeastward.

Japan is beginning to pay the penalty for wide dispersion of forces to accomplish her conquest dreams. Recent London disclosure that heavy British battle craft and at least one aircraft carrier are now somewhere in the Indian Ocean is another factor. It must compel the keeping of similar Japanese naval units in that ocean when they are urgently needed in the Southwestern Pacific.

Weekly War Commentary

By Maj.-Gen. Sir Charles Gwynn

Written for The Canadian Press

By Maj.-Gen. Sir Charles Gwynn

London, Oct. 31 — (CP Cable) — Lt.-Gen. B. L. Montgomery's offensive in Western Egypt so far has been as successful as could be reasonably expected. The attack on Axis positions of great depth with secured flanks, held by an adequate and powerfully-armed force, obviously could not be rushed.

The enemy had four months in which to elaborate his minefields and other defences. Any attempt to break through quickly with an armored force could only have resulted in the destruction of such a force and would have given the enemy an opportunity for what might have been a devastating counter-blow. To have gained a substantial footing in the enemy's position and not only to have held it against counter-attacks, but also to have extended it, is a great achievement.

Further successes will almost certainly, for a considerable time at any rate, have to be gained by a process of attrition. Continuous air attacks and artillery bombardments on the enemy's troops and air and sea attacks on his supply lines are bound to have a great, if gradual effect. That effect will be all the greater, if by constant pressure the enemy is forced to exhaust his resources, both human and material.

Rommel's Petrol Supplies

In their first appearance in the present battle Marshal Erwin Rommel's panzer suffered considerable loss while our own tank losses were light. It is not yet certain whether the enemy is husbanding his air reserves. So far he has made little attempt to dispute the air superiority which the Allies have established.

This is the more intriguing because he should have no difficulty in obtaining aircraft reinforcements. Maybe his real difficulty lies in obtaining adequate reserves of suitable petrol for the air force, petrol is most vulnerable to attack of all the supplies Rommel receives by sea and land and it cannot reach him in large quantities by air.

The Russians at Stalingrad have made another wonderful recovery from what a short time ago appeared to be a desperate situation. This despite the fact that a break in the weather, which may have afforded a temporary respite, seems to have been of short duration.

The Germans have been able to renew their attacks on a considerable scale, but with surprisingly little success. On the other hand, Russian counter-attacks have been immensely effective considering the difficulty they must have in obtaining reinforcements and assembling reserves in the restricted area they still hold in the north section of the city.

Strain on Transport

Russian relief forces, both from the north and the south, have not made spectacular progress, but they have evidently maintained heavy pressure and must have added greatly to the expenditure of German material. It is not surprising, therefore, that Berlin comments dwell on the difficulty of maintaining supplies. These difficulties are apparently increasing.

The trouble may be due partly to the weather and partly to deterioration in transport vehicles. How far back on the German lines of communication the difficulties occur isn't revealed, but it is probable they are not confined to forward areas. The strain on immense stretches of railway must be increased by the growing necessity of bringing up material to improve winter conditions.

It is now becoming evident that a large part of the German army will require improved shelter and will have to be maintained at strength in forward positions.

Hard Fight in Solomons

In the Far East, the progress of Australian forces in the Owen Stanley mountains of New Guinea is meeting with strong Japanese opposition. In view of the difficult line of communications it is possible the advance has gone nearly as far as intended.

The situation in the Solomons is admittedly critical. The Japanese navy, in spite of heavy losses, is in stronger force and has more conveniently placed bases than the Allies can make available.

American naval losses, according to Tokyo reports, appear to have been serious, but so far Washington has remained silent. Numerically, the Japanese are superior in the air in this zone of operations, though it is satisfactory that their aircraft are evidently much inferior to those of the Allies.

The Americans have successfully repelled what were apparently major attempts by Japanese to recover Guadalcanal airdrome. The most unsatisfactory feature of the situation is that the Japanese are in a better position to bring up reinforcements and at present to risk further naval losses.

Japan, of course, is able to concentrate the whole of her naval strength whereas the Allies' strength is widely dispersed. Although Japan's capacity to replace losses is so much less than the Allies, replacement of ships is a slow process.

Germans See Soviet Massing For Offensive

By FRANK M. BRUTTO

Associated Press Staff Writer

Berne, Switzerland, Oct. 31—(AP)—German news agency reports reaching here from Berlin said the Russians are massing "powerful shock armies" for a winter attempt to break through the Germans' Vitebsk-Smolensk line some 275 miles west of Moscow.

These reports said signs are increasing daily that the Russians, despite the continuing heavy German pressure on the Stalingrad and Caucasus fronts, are assembling troops with full aviation and armored support in the Rzhev-Toropets region.

The Russian plan, it was said, apparently is to send one of these armies westward from Rzhev toward Velikie Luki with strong armored and motorized support and then make a southward encircling sweep in an effort to reach the Dvina River near Vitebsk.

At the same time, the reports said, another shock group would set out from Rzhev southward to Vyazma, then wheel toward Smolensk in an attempt to form a junction with the northern wing.

Heavy Russian air forces were said to be massing in the Rzhev-Toropets region and better weather was reported to have improved roads sufficiently for heavy material movement.

The agency said that the Germans already are trying to forestall the offensive with heavy aerial bombardment of concentration central Russian front has been relatively quiet with Germans holding well-fortified lines hinged on Rzhev, Velikie Luki, Vitebsk and Smolensk.

-SAVE ELECTRICITY

Machines such as these, powered by electricity, produce .303 cartridges.

● We have the men, and they have the courage and the will to win. What is needed now is a steady increase in production of the weapons of war that will make our forces invincible.

Hydro powered machines in hundreds of Ontario's war plants produce weapons to provide greater fighting power for our men at sea, in the air, on the battle fields.

To train, equip, transport and maintain our armed forces, each of us must work harder, save a little more and lend all we can to Canada. The more Bonds we buy, the greater is our investment in Victory.

To safeguard and conserve our vital supply of electricity—in our homes, offices and shops—is a paramount duty. There are opportunities every day, every night, for each of us to save Hydro for our war industries. These plants need all the power they can get. Every Victory Bond you buy and every "bit" of electricity you save are contributions you can make to Victory!

YOUR SCRAP METAL URGENTLY NEEDED!

This New Method makes Scrap Metal Collection easy for you.

More scrap steel and iron is urgently needed if we are to produce the ships, tanks, planes, guns and munitions necessary to win this war. You are asked to do your part by turning in every available ounce of scrap metal you can find in your home or on your farm.

This campaign is from November 1st to December 15th, 1942.

In order to facilitate the systematic collection of scrap iron and steel in your County, Wartime Salvage Limited, a Government Company, and the Steel Controller have completed arrangements with your County Warden and Township Reeve to supervise the collection and sale of the scrap iron and steel you deliver.

HERE IS WHAT YOU DO

Dig out every ounce of scrap iron and steel you can put your hands on.

Township Groups have been formed in all Townships in the Counties listed in this announcement. Find out from your Township Reeve how and where he wishes you to take your scrap.

The price to be paid by Wartime Salvage Limited, a Government Company, has been fixed by the Department of Munitions and Supply as follows-

1. Price at Collection Point will be $7.00 per net ton on ground.
2. For scrap loaded on cars containing less than 25 tons, price will be $8.50 per net ton.
3. For scrap loaded on cars containing 25 tons or more, price will be $10.00 per net ton F.O.B. cars.

The above prices will be paid for all forms of scrap iron and steel excluding (a) Sheet Tin of any kind, (b) Automobile Bodies and Fenders, (c) Stovepipe, and (d) Wooden Attachments.

This price applies at any collection depot within the Counties listed in this announcement but does not apply to any Counties which are not listed in this special campaign.

HOW TO DISPOSE OF YOUR SCRAP WHEN COLLECTED!

When you have delivered your scrap to the place designated for your Group in accordance with the instructions of your Township Reeve, you can then—

★ 1. Sell your scrap metal to the Government Agency and divide the proceeds of such sale among the various members of your Group to which you will be appointed by your Township Reeve, or—

★ 2. You may donate your scrap metal to the Voluntary Salvage Corps or Committees functioning in your Community, or—

★ 3. You may sell your scrap metal to the Government Agency and then turn over part or all of the proceeds of this sale to the Local Salvage Corps or Local War Charities.

Your contribution to the war effort is simplified by this arrangement. Don't wait until you are urged by your Township officials to do this all-important work. Get busy right away. Canada needs, and must have, tons of scrap iron and steel now if we are to keep our fighting forces armed and ready to win through to victory.

St. Mikes Run Wild to Score 24-2 Victory Over B.C.I. Squad To Hold First Place All Alone

Full Game in Front of Albert College, Whom They Play Monday

TOO MUCH SPEED

Racing through little opposition Coach Jack Doran's St. Mikes "Irish" assured themselves of nothing less than a play-off position in the Bay of Quinte Interscholastic football conference with a 24 to 2 win over the B.C.I. "Collegians" here yesterday. It was the St. Mikes' third consecutive victory in as many games played, and elevated the "green and white" into sole leadership of the city Interscholastic rugby picture, a full game in front of the second-place Albert College sextette.

Carrying too much speed along the attack for a weakened Collegiate squad, the "Irish" led at the end of the first quarter by a score of 6-0 and added two more points in the second stanza. Prolific aerial attacks gave the ultimate winners eleven points in the third period and a touchdown gave them five more in the final frame. The only points scored by the losing "Collegians" were the results of two punts to the deadline for single counters.

St. Mikes Open Scoring

Early in the game Don Barrett ran back a B.C.I. punt and on a subsequent play Wilson took a pass from Bunton to open the scoring with a touchdown, which was converted when Wardhaugh pitched to Barrett making the score 6-0 for the Irish as the quarter time whistle sounded. In the second frame Chuck Potter broke through to smear an Irish attack, but his gain was thwarted when the B.C.I. were held. Bob Temple broke through to down Bishop for a safety touch and add two more points to the St. Mikes' count making the score 8-0. Bishop and Philp combined for a nice B.C.I. gain, but Bob Wilson leaped high to intercept a Collegiate pass as the half-time game ended.

Touchdown Off Pass

On the second play in the second half Wilson raced around right end for a 25 yard gain and Wardhaugh followed through to pitch a forward to Barrett for a major score, with "Little Jack" firing to Temple for the odd point. Barrett capably ran back a kick and Bunton pitched to Wardhaugh for another touchdown, as the Irish mounted the score to 19-0.

Philp made yards for the Collegiate, but the Doran-led crowd broke through to save. Clarke leaped high to intercept a St. Mikes forward and Don Clarke booted a single point to make the third period score 19-1 for the Irish. Early in the last frame Bush booted a point for the B.C.I. and later Barrett took a pitch from Wardhaugh to end the scoring.

The line-ups:

Belleville Collegiate: Bush and Philp halves; Bishop quarter; Clarke snap; Potter and York wings, Dodson, Flander, Hewson and Spencer.

St. Michael's Academy: Wilson and Bunton halves; Wardhaugh quarter; Adams snap; Temple and Barrett wings; Thomas, Donovan and McCauley.

Referee—"Red" Townsend.

WARTIME MOOD AFFECTS OPENING OF HOCKEY LOOP

All Six Teams in N.H.L. Have Suffered Drastic Losses

MAY BE WORSE

(By ALAN HARVEY)
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Selective Service . . . low labor priority . . . the Stu Smith case. . . Army callups. . . Selective Service again. Those are the melancholy impressions of the National Hockey League training season that keynote a new wartime mood tonight as the N.H.L., representing a $1,250,000 investment in the world's fastest sport, swings into its 25th year of continuous operation.

The gloom isn't entirely unwarranted. All six teams still in hockey's bigtime have suffered drastic losses. Brooklyn Americans lost all but four of its player strength and folded for the duration. Since then, no spokesman has ventured to place his own club higher than third in the usual pre-season forecasts.

The situation is likely to get worse before it gets better. Amateur leagues in Canada already rich in service personnel stand to acquire additional skilled talent every time the postman rings.

Even so the League the people wanted almost certainly will struggle through the season. Some of the principal doubts may be banished when Toronto Maple Leafs entertain New York Rangers and Boston Bruins meet Canadiens on Montreal home ice in the League's opening games tonight.

Eight Leave Leafs

Maple Leafs lack eight players from the club which brought the Stanley Cup to Toronto last season, but they still retain goaltender Turk Broda, defencemen Reg Hamilton and Bucko McDonald, and six forwards. Hank Goldup, a forward last year, is being converted into a defenceman. Any gaps will be filled by four promising rookies, notably defenceman Bob Copp. Rangers no longer have the brilliant Neil Colville-Alex Shibicky-Mac Colville line, but in quantity at least their freshman crop surpasses all others. Seven Ranger rookies will make their first N.H.L. appearance tonight.

Steve Buzinski's debut in the Ranger nets will be carefully noted by Leaf fans. Another rookie netminder—Sugar Jim Henry—was the chief reason for Rangers 4-3 victory over Leafs in their N.H.L. opener last season.

Canadiens May Be Better

Canadiens, picked by Coach Dick Irvin to finish third, have added high-scoring Gordie Drillon, last year with Leafs, to bolster their chances of improving last season's dismal showing. They are a young, improving club. Manager Art Ross speaks dolefully of his Bruins, but he has 11 seasoned players, including one of the game's best goalies, Frank Brimsek, and several youthful candidates.

Boston travels to Detroit to meet Red Wings on Sunday, and although Manager Jack Adams says the Wings will likely finish sixth "if we lose just a few of the boys", the other coaches don't share his opinion. Adams has 12 holdovers, more than any other team, a valuable acquisition in 19-year-old Harry Watson of Americans, three newcomers and lush reserve material at his Indianapolis Farm Club.

Chicago Black Hawks, the sixth team in the League, open the 1942-43 campaign against Boston Thursday.

By CHARLES EDWARDS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Oct. 31 — (CP) — Alan (Brantford Expositor) Rose warns against taking too seriously the reports of sensational new "kid lines" emanating from various National Hockey League camps. "Take that new 'kid line' with Boston Bruins," says Alan. "All three were in junior leagues last year, Bill Shill, 19 years old, coming from Toronto Rangers; Bep Guidolin, 17, from Oshawa Generals, and Don Gallenger, 17, from St. Catharines junior B entry . . . if those lads are skating with the regular N. H. L. players we want to know what they ate between now and last spring."

The expert says:

Casting an anxious eye on N. H. L. teams preparing for tonight's opening league games, Jim (Toronto Globe and Mail) Coleman commented: "If Red Dutton's 'old men of Manhattan' were in the league this year we would say that they were a copper-bottomed cinch to snatch the ruddy old Stanley Cup. If Mr. Dutton was operating with the assistance of such sterling operatives as Nelson Stewart and Reginald J. (Hooley) Smith, he wouldn't have to worry about the army draft — the only misgivings which he would have would be occasioned by the morticians who would frequent Madison Square Garden, observing with quiet detachment the gyrations of his venerable athletes."

The stuff to give the troops:

Dink (Montreal Gazette) Carroll quotes a letter, dated Sept. 16, from an R. C. A. F. officer now in England: "If you wanted an argument on the need for sports during war, you should see the boys hawking around for baseball news. They run a sports broadcast here every day for the benefit of the Americans. Believe it or not, the best paper for ball scores and an occasional brief comment is the stuffy old Times; we fight over it at breakfast. The Canadian Press is doing a great job with its four-page tabloid weekly; it is our only look at baseball standings. You should hear the chatter, mainly at breakfast, about the Cards-Dodgers race, wondering whether Reiser is back, etc."

Did you know?

That Saskatoon has produced or developed many of hockey's leading goal keepers, including Hec Fowler, George Hainsworth, Andy Aikenhead, Howie Dinsley, Bert Gardiner, Charlie Rayner, Ron Pickell, Russ Dertell and more recently Ralph Almas and Jack McGill.

Canada's Athletes at War

Toronto, Oct. 31 (CP).—The ranks of tennis playing stars who have joined the armed forces of Canada were enlarged recently by the presence of Willard Crocker of Montreal, who once held the Dominion singles title, in the R.C.A.F.

Doug Sinclair of Montreal, who at present shares the Dominion doubles squash championship with Ted Hay, has been commissioned in the army.

Sinclair has received an appointment as a lieutenant in the Intelligence Division of the army at Military District No. 4.

Gordon Brinkworth, greenkeeper at the Minaki, Ont., golf course, has enlisted in the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps.

Morden Skinner, 28, of Lockport, Man., a forward with Baltimore Orioles of the Eastern United States Amateur Hockey League last season, has joined the Royal Canadian Navy.

Doug Marsh and his brother Joe, well-known Montreal boxers are overseas with the Royal Canadian Artillery. Sammy Jacobs and Jasper O'Hanley, two more Montreal ring stars, are in the navy.

Dave Bristow, British Columbia junior tennis champion in 1941 and winner of the Vancouver Daily Province tennis trophy two years ago, has joined the R.C.A.F.

Sgt. Jack Redhead of Hamilton, recently romped home first in practically all the events at an aquatic meet held at an R.C.A.F. station in Scoudouc, N.B.

Sgt. Redhead won the diving, 50-yard free style, 100-yard free style events and was a member of the Winnipeg team in the medley race.

This energetic lad also participates in station basketball, softball, baseball and hockey games.

Hazen McAndrew, who played for a time with Brooklyn Americans in the National Hockey League last year, will be out of the professional hockey running this year. McAndrew is at present busy working in a war industry plant at Niagara Falls, Ont.

Sugar Jim Henry of Winnipeg, goaltender for New York Rangers of the National Hockel League last year, is in the army stationed at Ottawa and will be the net-minder for the Canadian Military Staff Clerks team in the National Defence Hockey League there. He was awarded to the clerks by a ruling by which available pro players were allotted to the various teams in the circuit.

Sports Roundup

New York, Oct. 31—(AP)—There's many a slip—which is about as good a way as any to sum up the prospects for the national hockey season that gets started tonight. Nobody knows how it will end, but you can figure that its showing will be a good indication of the future of baseball and other sports. . . . For instance, with about 40 per cent. of last year's players already in the armed forces, hockey clubs are loading up with guys like Ebbie Goodfellow and Sweeney Schriner, who either had retired or were about to; they're using former third-stringers and minor leaguers in some of the more important spots and bringing in as many 17 and 18-year-old rookies as they can.

And baseball men might take note that instead of cutting down their squads, the ice house gangs all are planning to carry about 18 players although they can only use 15 in any one game. . . . The idea, presumably, is to have the spares handy in case some of the kids don't come up to expectations or in case they get that 24-hour notice to return to Canada and get measured for a uniform.

CHICAGO HAWKS MINUS ROOKIES ON THEIR LINEUP

All Players Have Pro. Experience in Minor Leagues

A SMART TEAM

Bibbing, Minn., Oct. 31—(CP)—For the first time in 16 years, Chicago Hawks will begin a new National Hockey League campaign with not a single "rookie."

While the other five teams sport more newcomers from amateur ranks than in most other seasons due to wartime manpower demands, the Black Hawks will depend on four seasoned American Association men and goalkeeper Bert Gardiner of Saskatoon who has been with American and N. H. L. clubs to fill vacancies.

The American Association players—Leo Carbol, Aud Tuten and Joe Matte, defenceman, and Red Mitchell, a forward—have been training at Chicago's camp here for more than two weeks.

Carbol, more than 30 years of age, has been a professional 11 seasons, but never with an N.H.L. club. Last season he starred on defence for St. Louis Flyers.

Tuten, Mitchell and Matte are from Kansas City Americans. Tuten, 27, has played Minor League Hockey for three seasons and was on defence for Chicago last winter in six games.

Matte, 34, an American Association defenceman for nine seasons, has been a rearguard mate of Carbol for seven campaigns.

Mitchell, 29, played one game with Black Hawks last winter but has been in the minors six years.

TAMI MAUREILLO DEFEATS SAVOLD

Will Meet Bivins for War-time "Duration Champ" in November

New York, Oct. 31—(AP)—Boxing's war-time "duration champ" of the heavyweights probably will come out of a Nov. 27 Madison Square Garden bout between Tami Maureillo and Jimmy Bivins, and the prospect shouldn't make Joe Louis miss a minute's sleep or a platter of fried chicken.

For, while Maureillo shows plenty of power in the stretch to overhaul the tiring Des Moines veteran, Lee Savold, in the last two heats, win a ten-round decision in the Garden last night and get the shot with Bivins, he didn't uncover anything that puts him in Louis' league yet.

And as for Bivins, although he holds decisions over Maureillo and Bob Pastor in recent operations, he still is barely more than a light-heavyweight.

Out of last night's brawling came quite a few nervous breakdowns among the village's better-known bookmakers. They had installed Tami a 1 to 3 shot to knock off Savold, and the betting action was brisk. Yet, so close was the tussle that at the end of the eighth round, the "hedgers" made Savold 5 to 8 to hold on for the win.

Up to that point, the bristling belting was as close as one-and-one. And but for the fact that Tami's younger legs were moving in high gear against the wearying westerner through the ninth and tenth, Lee might have popped up with the top surprise package of the year for the entertainment of the 12,734 customers.

Scrap collection:

Fred Egan, veteran Lexington, Ky., harness horse driver has retired from the game, but he's going to keep his silks and equipment, just in case he changes his mind after the war. . . . According to the Bridgeport, Conn., Telegram, Gene Sarazen, the squire of Brookfield centre, wants to turn amateur now that he can't continue his old habit of sweeping up all the pro golfing honors.

CASUAL COMMENT
by K.J.C.

JACK DORAN'S ST. MIKES "Irishers" copped the top position and an assured play-off spot in the city interscholastic football picture with a 24 to 2 win over a weakened B.C.I. rugby squad yesterday. The "Irish" squad completely baffled the Church St. gang when Jack Wardaugh and Bob Bunton alternated in pitching prolific passes, while Bob Wilson was running amok mid-field. Weakened by the absence of players of the combination of Bush, Philp and Clarke tenaciously attempted to carry Coach Mott's worries, but without results. As in previous games Skipper Doran's sextette carried too much speed, but now the Irish have three wins and no defeats the picture game remains to be played at Albert College field Monday when a win for the Irish means champs. . . . But?

THE RECENT GREEN BAY Packers' 45 to 28 National Football League triumph over the Cleveland Rams proved one for the record books. The point total of 73 set a new league record. Previous high had been score din 1940 when the Chicago Bears whipped the same team, 47 to 25. In 1940 the Bears made 73 points all by themselves in routing Washington for the league championship, but this is a separate record.

Cecil Isbell, who has pitched hundreds of passes for five seasons in the general direction of Don Hutson, veteran Packer end, completed one pitch to his catching partner which was good for four inches. This is thought to be a record minimum gain for a pass in the league.

The combined total of 886 yards for the two teams also was considered a mark and George Strickler, league publicity director, is trying to verify it.

THE HOCKEY PERSONALITY of the late Douglas "Daw" Whalen was not forgotten over a span of 20 years by those who were most intimately associated with him throughout the period when he played hockey in Belleville. As a token of esteem to a friend and team mate a floral tribute, carrying the names of all local players who teamed with the late "Daw" Whalen to bring hockey prominence to Belleville in the early 20's, today stands beside their former left wing star. On the card of sympathy are enscrolled the names of Eddie Thomas, team manager, Pat Boland, "Bouncer" Holway, Frank Goyer, "Toots" Holway, "Gunner" Arnott, Sammy Symons, Vern Weir, Stan Hagerman, Bill Green, "Bunny" Frechette, Bill Canning and Bill Finkle. Others would doubtlessly like to have been included but have long since left the city.

AT LAST PEDRO MARTINEZ, that villainous Mexican grappler of the grunt and groan racket, gained his utmost desire—a main bout at the Hume Arena. True enough, "Big Pedro" of the bright red wrestling shoes, is a pugnacious and villainous ring actor, but there are a couple of phases in his favour. First, he has won twelve straight bouts at the local sports palace and was never extended. Then of course, he hasn't tangled with any top-ranking opponents. Next is the fact he wanted a shot at "Whipper Billie" Watson simply because Watson gained a questionable decision over the Mexicano in Toronto a month or so ago. In some manner Watson managed to heave Martinez out of the Maple Leaf Garden ring and he injured his back when he fell over the outer skirt. Pedro was counted out by Referee Al Dunlop, but contends yet he was not beaten by Watson, but merely couldn't continue at the moment. Now Pedro has his wish—a return bout with "The Whipper." The meeting should have its moments.

REMEMBER WHEN Mike (Twin) Sullivan, former world welterweight champion died five years ago today? He held the title for three years after winning it from Honey Melody in 1907 and went up to the middleweight class. In his 12 years in the ring he was defeated only twice. Sullivan vacated his title in 1910 to become a middleweight.

COMMISSIONER K. M. LANDIS called Hans Lobert, manager of the Phils, to him during the World's Series and asked him why he had raced into the upper stands after a spectator at Shibe Park, following the loss of a 14-inning game to the Cardinals in September.

According to Jerry Mitchell of the New York Post, Lobert explained the fan had abused him and his players and accused them of not trying. "But you left the field still in your playing clothes and went after him?" the Judge asked. Lobert said he had the idea exactly.

"Then shake on it," Landis is quoted as saying. "I'd have done the same thing."

Six-Man Football Gains Foothold In Air Force

By SCOTT YOUNG
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the R.C.A.F., Somewhere in England, Oct. 31 (CP).—Six-man football never gained much of a foothold in Canada because the 12-man game had the public by the ears, but it is rising in popularity among R.C.A.F. men in Britain.

These are the men who played in Western Interprovincial, Big Four or O.R.F.U. games two or three years ago, or saw the games, or sat comfortably at home on rainy afternoons and listened to them. They can't do any of that now, and for airmen who are lonesome for the splash of color of a Canadian football season, six-man football is helping to fill the gap.

At one central air station, where Flt.-Lt. J. C. Steele of Vancouver is the sports officer, a six-man league flourishes in the very shadow of war. Two Canadian squadrons are stationed in the vicinity, and air crew and ground crew alike take part.

"We wanted a game which is simple and does not require much equipment," Flt. Lt. Steele said. "We have found the answer in six-man rugby, which is strenuous, but not to the point where any of the boys get hurt. It's a good conditioner and a great many of the boys are playing it, too, so it fills a useful purpose."

The way these men play this game, it has all the driving excitement of the game they left behind. The roar of crowds is missing, of course, but it has a thunderous substitute in the roar of fighter craft rising into the usually-gray English skies to engage the enemy or accompany mighty allied bomber sweeps into France or Germany.

For small residences a Michigan man has invented a coal or gas burning heater to be built into the base of a chimney, a suction fan and blower helping to circulate heated air.

MY FIRESTONE DEALER HAS HELPED ME GET THOUSANDS OF EXTRA MILES

"I'm amazed at what mileage you can actually get out of a tire. In the good old days I'd turn them in after 20,000 miles, but now they have to go far over that. Right from the start I put the care of my tires in the hands of my nearby Firestone Dealer. First thing he did was to take them off the rims and give them a complete inspection. Luckily, there were no major breaks . . . only a few nicks and a few embedded nails and pieces of glass which were soon fixed up.

"Then my tires were 'rotated' . . . changed around to different wheels . . . to even up the wear. 'Now it's up to you,' I was told. 'If you make it a point to drive in and have your air pressure checked every week . . . and observe a few common-sense driving rules . . . you will get many more thousands of miles from those tires.'

"My Firestone Dealer was absolutely right. I have already got thousands of extra miles and the tires look good for plenty more. No matter what make of tire you have, I suggest that you, too, place them in the care of your nearest Firestone Dealer. See him today."

PREMIER CONANT

To Enforce Liquor Laws

4. Existing liquor laws will be enforced and if the Dominion Government imposes restrictions on sale of liquor as a war measure the province will co-operate but "such curtailment would certainly result in bootlegging with all the troubles that arise therefrom involving the problem of law enforcement."

Premier Conant said the Dominion Government would have the "utmost co-operation" from him, but as a citizen he has the same right to criticize as any other person.

"I intend to exercise that right if and when I consider it advisable to do so in the best interests of the prosecution of the war," he said, adding that "there will be no acrimony or bitterness in my criticism."

At the same time he said he does not believe the Dominion Government "has yet engaged the nation in an all-out war because they are not singleminded in their purpose to administer the affairs of the nation to that end."

In the administration of the affairs of Ontario the successful prosecution of the war must transcend all other considerations.

"I am not going to administer the government of Ontario to consolidate the position of any political party or to oil the wheels of any political organization," the premier said.

Regarding his stand that there should be no provincial general election, Mr. Conant said he has not sensed among the people any such demand which came only from "political opportunists."

Against Election Now

He said: "These people were talking about an election when ousands of our boys were giving ir lives for all of us at Dieppe. hink it is a sacrilege to talk ut an election amidst all the rk realities and horrors of war d the emergency that now exists."

An election could not possibly promote Canada's war effort but would impair it to some extent. It would use up large quantities of "precious" gasoline and rubber and would cost more than $1,000,000 of the taxpayers' money.

Concerning criticism of the manner of his accession to the premiership—through recommendation by former Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn to the Lieutenant-Government — Mr. Conant said he would not enter into any controversy with those who questioned the procedure.

"I know their attitude is prompted entirely by political considerations," he said. "They are concerned solely with political expediency."

Labor legislation in the process of formation concerned the giving of legal status to labor unions and recognition of the principle of collective bargaining, Mr. Conant said. Such legislation would tend to promote industrial peace which was a wartime essential.

"It will mean a new deal for labor in Ontario," he said.

Power legislation to be presented to the legislature concerned the obtaining of additional power from the Ottawa river to help alleviate a shortage in the province.

Willing to Co-operate

Obtaining of such power from the Ottawa River, while requiring an agreement with Quebec, also required the consent and aid of the Dominion Government which had expressed its willingness to cooperate.

Touching on Mothers' Allowances and Old Age Pensions, the Premier said recipients were suffering hardships because of increased living costs. Such people needed relief and if it was possible to attain a balanced budget and at the same time extend some help to them, the government would do so.

The Premier spoke of Ontario's farmers and said they have not received anything like the attention and consideration that had been given to industry and labor.

"At the moment I have no constructive suggestion as to what the province may do to help the farmers in the future", he said, adding however, that "we will do everything within our financial and legislative powers to assist in every possible way the farmers of this province so that they may maintain and increase the production of the foodstuffs and at the same time obtain for their produce at least the cost of production with some profit".

Upholds Liquor Law

Mr. Conant touched on the liquor question and said he thought Ontario's present Liquor Control Act and its regulations meet the problem as "well as it is humanly possible to do so".

He said that if, as a Wartime Measure, Dominion authorities find it necessary to curtail quantities or periods of sale, such curtailment would necessarily result in bootlegging with all the "troubles that arise therefrom involving the problem of law enforcement".

There would be liquor control in Ontario and the law would be enforced.

Expenses of government were being cut in the interests of economy and consistent with Wartime requirements.

The civil list was being reduced so members retired to enlist or enter other employment and the present government had only 12 Cabinet Ministers.

(Since Mr. Conant became Premier, Harry Nixon resigned as Provincial Secretary and Farquhar Oliver resigned as Minister of Public Welfare and of Public Works. The three portfolios were taken over by other Cabinet Ministers.)

Russian Setback at Mozdok

The midnight communique told of a fresh Russian setback in the campaign southwest of Mozdok, but coupled this with reports of a slow Soviet advance in the western Caucasus and a firm stand by Stalingrad's garrison.

The communique said 1,100 Germans were killed yesterday in vain attempts to expand invasion salients toward the Volga. eight tanks were disabled or burned, 16 siege batteries were silenced and eighteen planes were shot down.

Local combat persisted northwest of Stalingrad. Russian troops broke into enemy trenches and wiped out a company in hand-to-hand fighting while Red army men on another sector repelled attacks, killing 180 Germans.

About 1,000 invaders were declared newly added to the Axis death lists during the see-saw fighting for the western Caucasus, the victims of Red army troops and Red marines.

Advance at Tuapse

"Northwest of Tuapse our troops, overcoming stubborn enemy resistance, slowly advanced," the communique said. "In the area of one height the Hitlerites, after futile attacks lasting many days, went over to the defensive."

In narrative style, the communique told of the Red army's fight to hold the forested upland about Nalchik from which fan out trails to the high slopes of the Caucasus, to Wolfram and Molybdema mines, to the Georgian military highway, to the Grozny oil fields. Fruit and horse-breeding farms dot the region.

"Our troops fought defensive engagements against enemy tanks and infantry," it was announced. "In the area of a height, one unit repulsed fierce enemy attacks. Two tanks were disabled and about a company of infantry was exterminated.

"By the end of the day, under the pressure of numerically-superior enemy forces. our troops retreated to a new defence line."

ORDER LIMITS

The statement continued that when allowance is made for the subsidy of six cents a pound on butter fat delivered for making creamery butter, these prices mean an average of more than 42 cents per pound to farmers during November.

Observance to be Enforced

The board emphasized that no increases other than those provided in last April's order will take place and that maximum wholesale and retail prices will be maintained.

"Observance of these maximum price levels will be rigorously enforced," the statement said.

To maintain adequate supplies, the board asked all housewives, restaurants and other public caterers to avoid or prevent any extravagant use or waste of butter.

The announcement said "There has been evidence of a tendency on the part of some consumers to hoard supplies of butter but the board emphasizes that purchases of more than immediate requirements are contrary to the board's orders and evidence of hoarding of butter will be grounds for prosecution."

The prices board order issued last April established a schedule of maximum wholesale butter prices taking into account normal seasonal variations in prices.

It provided a flat price of 35 cents per pound in the Maritime provinces, Quebec, Ontario and British Columbia, and of 33 1-4 cents in the prairie provinces for the six months period, May to October inclusive, but rising to a maximum of 38 1-2 cents for March and April.

The board said at that time that this sliding scale of maximum prices allows for necessary storage and carrying charges "and at the same time offers an incentive to production during the winter months by permitting an increase in producers' prices."

SIX-TEAM GROUP FOR JUNIOR "A" HOCKEY SERIES

Barrie Colts Given "A" Rating and a Bye Into Playoffs

GUIDOLIN SUSPENDED

Toronto, Oct. 31 — (CP) — Delegates representing Ontario Hockey Association junior clubs decided last night to operate a six-team group comprising entries from Oshawa, Brantford, Hamilton, St. Michael's College, Young Rangers and Marlboros. The last three are Toronto clubs.

Five teams will enter the playoffs after playing 10 games apiece during the regular schedule. The fifth team will meet Barrie, which was given junior "A" rating and granted a bye into the playoffs.

Stratford planned to enter a team but its resignation was received last night by W. A. Hewitt, O.H.A. secretary.

Another announcement was to the effect that the S. P. A. junior series would be dropped this year, owing to transportation difficulties in bringing teams to Toronto.

The delegates agreed to increase the group insurance from 5 to 7 1-2 per cent this season.

The season will probably open Nov. 18, but the junior "A" schedule will be announced later by W. A. Hewitt, Toronto.

Senior "A" to Open Nov. 13

The Niagara peninsula senior "A" group will open its schedule on Nov. 13, with Port Colborne playing at Niagara Falls and St. Catharines invading Hamilton.

The senior Niagara Falls team will be coached by Johnny Mitchell of Hamilton and will use several players who planned to play in Buffalo but were unable to obtain travel permits.

Regarding the senior series, the proposed international series involving teams of the peninsula group and Buffalo was shelved for the coming season due to present travel conditions.

Armand Guidolin of Timmins, Ont., who played last year with Oshawa Generals, has been suspended indefinitely on receipt by the C. A. H. A. of a notification from the N. H. L. on behalf of the Boston Professional Hockey Association, Inc. The protest stated that Guidolin had failed to carry out agreements signed March 27, 1942.

The senior schedule will be released at a later date.

AT THE CAPITOL

"FLYING TIGERS"

"Flying Tigers" will be presented at the Capitol Theatre starting Sunday midnight with the following all star cast: John Wayne, John Carroll, Anna Lee, Paul Kelly, Gordon Jones, Mae Clarke, Addison Richards, Edmund MacDonald, Bill Shirthe Universal News complete the gart.

With money bags wide open, a real job has been done on "Flying Tigers". You'll find in it some of the best aerial photography ever turned out, with planes zooming, diving, rolling and crashing in every second foot of film. Exactly how it was accomplished, we have no idea. Possibly a great deal of it is miniature, but just try to detect the faking.

The story's about the brash, mouthy guy who sees his part in the war (pre Pearl Harbor) as simply for financial reasons. He shoots down Japs, not because he considers them to be a threat to civilization, but because each one he eliminates means a bonus for him. He's callous and, of course, he is directly or indirectly responsible for the death of two of his buddies. Then, when he sees the folly of his ways, he turns hero . . . in this case, by suicide diving in a transport plane, laden with nitro glycerine, into a Japanese freight train.

There's a new slant on the war in this one . . . dealing with the Americans who flew for China before the U.S. entry into the war, and with the Japs as the villains instead of the inevitable Nazis. Much of the action takes place in and around a Chinese airport which has been simulated, with enough authenticity to fool an untravelled North American, somewhere in California, and with a cast of Chinese players who might have been left over from "The Good Earth".

The Three Stooges in their latest comedy "Some More of Samoa" and the Universal News completes the bill.

AT THE BELLE

"THE GAY SISTERS"

Three wealthy sisters who live in a spacious home that is daily seeping into a greater stage of decay, and who are obviously trying to keep dark some closely guarded secret of the past, is the intriguing story of Warner Bros.' newest film, "The Gay Sisters", which is now playing at the Belle Theatre.

The picture features a brilliant cast made up of Barbara Stanwyck, George Brent, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Nancy Coleman and a fine newcomer for whom film critics and preview audiences alike predict a bright future, Gig Young.

The story is adapted from the best selling novel by Stephen Longstreet, whose powerful writing was transplanted in all its strength from print to film. The three Gaylord sisters (nicknamed the 'Gay Sisters' by the press), Fiona, Lady Burton and Susanna, played respectively by Barbara Stanwyck, Geraldine Fitzgerald and Nancy Coleman, are theoretically worth a fortune but are actually up to their necks in debt. This situation is due to the fact that one Charles Barclay, played by George Brent, has contested his father's will and has managed to keep the case in various courts for over twenty years in the hope that the Gaylords would be forced to sell him their property. But Fiona, who had it instilled in her from childhood that a Gaylord never sells the land, has another, more personal reason for refusing to give it to Charles Barclay. It is her secret relationship to Barclay that surrounds the Gaylord family with an aura of mysticism until the day the entire, thrilling story is exploded in one mighty blast.

Irving Rapper directed the film which was written by Lenore Coffee. The excellent supporting cast is made up of such Hollywood favorites as Donald Crisp, Gene Lockhart, Larry Simms and Donald Woods. The fine musical background was written by the incomparable Max Steiner.

The Belle News of the World and "Horton Hatches Eggs", a clever color fun cartoon completes the program. Continuous shows will be presented today.

AT THE McCARTHY

"THE TALK OF THE TOWN"

Co-starring Cary Grant, Jean Arthur and Ronald Colman, Columbia's exciting new romantic comedy "The Talk of the Town" is now on the McCarthy screen. Briefly it is a swell picture and one which should find favor with every movie lover in Belleville and district. "The Talk of the Town" is also now in its second week at the Uptown Theatre, Toronto. Performances at the McCarthy today are continuous with matinee prices until six o'clock.

The roll call was answered with a verse containing the word "home." The treasurer gave a good report. Mrs. James R. Bateman thanked the society for a card of sympathy.

The worship service theme, "Co-operating with God's Purposes, for My Community." Mrs. Melburne Adams and Mrs. A. S. Doggett, delegates to the sectional rally held in Marmora gave an interesting report.

Mrs. J. Chappelle, group leader, conducted the program. Mrs. L. Fox gave a reading entitled "The Christian Home." Mrs. Ed. Way gave a reading on Temperance. Two verses of hymn No. 393 were sung. The Scripture lesson was taken by Mrs. George Jones. The meeting closed with the singing of a hymn and the Mizpah Benediction. Candy and apples were served by the hostess. CHAPTER 4

The Tragedy

"You're jittery, Alma," said Nadine, as her hostess rejoined them at the bar. "You were shut up in that little reception room, with somebody. Who was he?"

"No one interested in you, dear. Don't distress yourself about me. Brand, fix me a nice long mild drink, will you?"

"I'll make it, Alma," Van Dyke offered. "I know a new one; you'll like it."

"Then you sit by me, Brand. I want to tell you something."

"I want to sit by you, Mrs. McCleod." Doctor Lloyd took the place she had meant for Herrick.

"Yes, do," she smiled at him. "And you can take my pulse, and calm Nadine's nerves."

Suddenly Foo Chow came to them. After a formal bow, he said: "Misser MacAllowed go topside to see the old Father. He velly muchee sick, and Misser MacAllowed say Doctor Lulloyd go up to him. Me show way."

"Oh, go right away, Doctor," Alma said. "Doctor Larkin has gone home. It's probably one of Hugh's father's sinking spells."

"Why do you talk that gibberish," the doctor asked his guide. "You are an educated man."

"Yes, sir, but my lady likes me to talk so, it amuses her and entertains her guests. I think the old man is not worse than usual, but Miss Emmy is alarmed."

He led the doctor to the little staircase, opened its door and Lloyd went up alone.

Emmy met him and took him at once to her father's bedside, a quick diagnosis told the doctor that it was a temporary faintness.

"I'm an ill mon, doctor," said old Angus. "Do give me a tide-over, I wadna dee while the pairty is here."

"You're far from dying while you can talk so clearly. But I will give you a dose and then you must have a good sleep."

"Aye, aye." The invalid's eyes closed.

Lloyd gave him medicine, and waited to see its effects.

The doctor stepped into the next room and Hugh followed him.

"Your father will not die tonight," Lloyd told the anxious man. "He may live a few weeks, perhaps longer. Much depends on his being kept quiet. If he has too much excitement, it will be bad for him. Doctor Larkin is a splendid man and understands the case."

"Do you think we ought to ask the people downstairs to go home?"

"Oh, no; he cannot hear them, and it would be a pity to break up Mrs. McCleod's pleasure."

"Is it pleasure?" asked Hugh. "I thought she seemed lanquid. Do you think she will get overtired?"

"No, indeed. She is a bit worried lest you think she ought to send her friends away; but I hope you won't ask her to do that."

"Indeed, no; since you say she is all right. I am a sort of comfort to my sister. And I am not needed downstairs, but I will look in on them now and then to please Alma."

"What are you going to do to please Alma?" said a soft voice, his wife took his arm and drew it round herself.

"Anything that will add to her happiness. Doctor Lloyd says I can go downstairs and stay, if you wish, but I would rather spend part of the time with father."

"So you shall, my darling. How is Emmy?"

"Brave as can be."

Hearing Alma's voice, Emmy came to them. "Father is very low, Alma," she said.

"Yes, dear, I know. I am so sorry for you, and I wish I could help in some way."

Emmy gave a sniff which said as clearly as words, "Pouf for your silly talk! It means nothing!"

And Emmy was right. Alma's one idea was to get away from the sick room atmosphere, and from her husband's relatives. She kissed Emmy's cheek and patted her shoulder, and then started down the little stair.

"I'll go with you," Hugh said. "Lloyd will stay for a little, and then I'll come back."

They went down and Alma went to her own dressing-room to take a look at herself. Hugh followed, saying, "Give me a kiss before you put any more of that red stickum on your lips!"

She laughed, granted his request and then, with a few light touches to her make-up, she was ready to go downstairs.

They left the room by a door opposite to the one by which they had entered, and passed through one of the guest rooms, which was turned into a men's coat room. This opened into a small alcove which was part of the hall. The plan of the apartment was complicated, and the hall made two turns before they reached the head of the marble stair.

They went to the bar, and Alma bade Van make one of his newfangled recipes for Hugh.

Presently Hugh went away, and Alma said. "Why don't we have a dance? Will you be my partner, Mr. Delevan?"

"With great joy." The artists rose with an air of importance and came to her.

They crossed the hall and stood near the door of the dance room, waiting for the others. Martin Delevan took up his favorite subject.

"You are in great luck to have a bit of Vance's work. It is one of his masterpieces. You understand it?"

"Oh, yes, in my simple way. I can't talk the lore of the studio, though."

"Then don't try. The most terrible thing in the world is the serious talk of an ignorant man."

"Yes, isn't it? And most talkers on serious subjects are ignorant."

"You mean most of those you hear."

"I admit that. I know few people intellectually, worthwhile."

"What a pity! I must help you. Will you come some time to my studio parties?"

"I'm not sure. I think I'm frightened of them."

They were dancing slowly.

"Then you cannot be happy. Fear kills happiness."

"Not in my case. I'm afraid only of things or people that I do not understand. So, I must avoid them, to preserve my happiness."

"Ah, yes, you have your vanity, the vanity of ignorance."

Alma began to think this man was trying to annoy her.

"Yes, I have," she returned, with a charming smile. "And it contents me." She had glanced at Haynes, and willingly enough he came to them and took Alma from her partner.

As they danced off, she said, "He is the stupidest person. Do you know him?"

"He is a celebrity."

"Yes, I know," but he doesn't please me. Now run me up against Brand, I want to speak to him."

"But Alma, you haven't given me a moment this whole night! You must stay with me now!"

"No! You heard what I said."

"But I have something for you, —a present."

"Oh, you dear! But you can give it to me later. I must see Brand. There he is—turn this way!"

Van Dyke obeyed, everybody obeyed Alma. As they reached Herrick, she said, "Our dance, I believe," and put a hand on his shoulder.

"I've been waiting for you," he said, and they danced.

Brand Herrick liked beautiful women—and he greatly admired Alma—but he resented any hint of invitation on their part. He wanted to conquer not to be enslaved. Sometimes Alma bored him by a seeming insistence on his attentions.

But now, her lovely eyes were looking into his own, and she was assuming an imperial air, which won him completely.

"I want to ask you something," she said. "Take me over toward the hall door."

They danced to the door, and then, as they stood a moment, she said, "Follow me," and went swiftly, ahead of him into a side hall.

"What's this place?" he said, gaily. "Looks like adventure!"

"It is. Open that door."

Herrick obeyed, and saw a tiny, beautifully appointed automatic elevator. "Where does this thing go?"

"Up to my own rooms. It's my escape in case of bores."

"I see. You don't propose to take me up to your rooms, do you?"

"Not in the face of your evident unwillingness. But I want to talk to you a little."

"Oh, come now, Alma, why not talk in civilized fashion?"

"You look so handsome when you are put out! I adore you."

"Well, put me out of this. Then I might adore you, but not shut up in this box!"

"Oh, Brand, how I wish you would love me! I believe you do, only you're afraid to say, so, on Hugh's account."

"Nonsense. I'm afraid for your reputation. Suppose some one sees us shut up in this place!"

"Oh, well, then, we may as well get out."

"Better. And I don't mean to be hateful, dear, but. . . ."

"But you are hateful! kiss me, then, and we'll get out of this. I thought you'd like it."

"I like you, but you mustn't behave like a child!"

"Oh, very well, open the door. And I won't forget the secret about you,. . . .that you told me not to tell!"

Herrick's face took on a stern expression. "Don't you ever dare tell that!" he exclaimed angrily. "Remember, Alma, you promised, you swore you'd never tell." Alma turned a little catch, and then she opened the door of the elevator. They stepped out, and she drew his head down and whispered; "I didn't get my kiss, you must give it to me before you leave."

She laughed roguishly and ran away. As she turned a corner of the hallway, she saw Dickson, Hugh's man. She smiled at him, laid her finger on her lip and ran on.

When she saw Brand Herrick had returned to the dance room, she went back to the little elevator and rode up to her own rooms.

AIRDROME STRAFED

New Delhi, Oct. 31 (AP) — R.A.F. fighter planes swept the Shewebo area of Burma yesterday, strafing an airdrome, while Blenheim bombers, on offensive patrol, bombed a railway station at Seywa.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was reading his paper and ma was reading hers, saying, Well, how perfectly silly. Why cant generals mind their own business, especially when they have a big war to look after? It says here that women's shoes with a hole in the toe have been banned in England, she said.

And by gollies if the ban spreads to this side of the Atlantic I'll begin to think that even war has its advantages, pop said. If you saw a man with his toes out of his shoes you'd call him a tramp. Is a woman's big toe any more inspiring than a man's, except perhaps to a near sighted poet? he said, and ma said, Well no I cant say it is, generally speaking and unfortunately, but there's no accounting for style and in fact that's just what style is, an unaccountable passing whim of the moment, so a comparison of big toes regardless of sex is neither here nor there.

You're right, yes sir you're right, and this account in my paper of what happened to Garbo proves it, pop said. It seems Garbo, disguized as usual, was out shopping for a new pair of flat heeled shoes with closed toes, and it seems the hem of her slip was showing below her skirt. Well, a passing woman, not recognizing Garbo behind her disguize, rudely giggled and impolitely pointed, whereupon Garbo indignantly slapped her face and then, tearing off her dark goggles and false mustache, she turned to the assembled shoppers and insisted that she was wearing her slip purposely for the effect. Whereupon every shopper immediately loosened her own slip till the hem showed, and I understand the style is sweeping the country like wildfire, pop said.

William Potts you're not only imposible, you're incorrigible, ma said, and pop said, Just a same, it could be.

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Ottawa, Oct. 31 (CP)—Plans for increasing the output of Canadian war industry through more efficient operation and better use of the men and women already at work are under study by National Selective Service and the Munitions Department, with lessons learned by British labor administrators as a guide.

Progressive steps now are being taken to channel workers from civilian industry into war jobs, but there is wide belief that even with existing staffs, war production can be boosted. Officials point to the manpower savings accomplished in Britain through widespread introduction of labor-saving devices and suggest that further steps along the same line are possible here.

The possibility is seen that Canada ultimately will follow the United Kingdom's lead in using "labor supply inspectors"—men skilled in plant procedure who go into individual factories and determine whether some of the highly-skilled workers can be replaced by less-skilled help. The extent of "labor-hoarding" in Canada is not accurately known, but both Britain and the United States have encountered it and labor supply inspectors are one way it can be curtailed, if not eliminated.

Formation of labor-management committees in war and civilian industry is being urged. A start in this direction has been made, but only a start. It is believed officially that plant committees on which both workers and employers have representation would prove of great assistance in ironing out petty grievances and improving working conditions.

These are things which lead to absenteeism among employees. And obsenteeism in some war plants is known by Selective Service to be as high as 20 per cent—a pure waste of manpower at a time when efforts are being made to get women out of the home and so increase the nation's total working force.

It seems the Gentlemen With Wings prefer blonds—not necessarily the way you're thinking but at any rate from the point of view of flying operations.

One of the many delicate instruments on a modern fighter or bomber is a hygrometer, an instrument to determine the relative humidity of the air. How it works doesn't matter but the fact is a human hair is one of the requisites for determining the relative humidity of the air.

Over at the munitions department they tell us blond hair is more sensitive than any other.

The House of Commons subcommittee on salvage collections has heard a lot of stories about the waste-rubber campaign but none better than the tale of a small Quebec village and the way it responded.

The parish priest had been asked to help the salvage drive so one Sunday he told his congregation:

"I see you come to church today with your cars and buggies. I ask you to come next Sunday with your farm wagons. And bring all the rubber salvage you can find."

The congregation did. The wagons next Sunday brought 5,000 pounds, two and a half tons, of scrap rubber.

When Washington announced the other day that the "pioneer road" to Alaska was open to traffic nobody here was more interested then the Deputy Mines Minister, Dr. Charles Camsell.

He knows the northwest like a backwoodsman. Son of a fur trader, Dr. Camsell as a boy lived at Fort Laird in Northern British Columbia and when no more than a youth made notable journeys through much of the territory which was filled in on maps only after aircraft began to roar across the mountains to find landing places on the inland lakes.

If it wasn't Autumn, the Centre Block on Parliament Hill would be undergoing its spring cleaning. Since it is Autumn, we don't know what to call it. But there's a great to-do of window washing and carpet cleaning in the off-season between sessions.

It even got around to the elevator mechanism and most of the "lifts" are undergoing repairs. Civil servants who haven't climbed the stairs for ever so long are marching (not too nimbly) to their offices.

Labor Minister Mitchell has been a land-lubber for a lot of years but he hasn't forgotten the days when he used to go down to the sea in ships. It's a favorite topic of conversation with him and he tells some good stories about the first Great War days when he served at sea on Royal Navy aircraft.

When people speak of sacrifice, Mr. Mitchell like as not will speak briskly—and bluntly—of what sacrifices mean to the men in lumbering freighters and comfortless warcraft, what with submarines, long watches and foul weather.

Smaller Amount Market Produce With Prices Firm

Threatening skies apparently were responsible for a decreased rural attendance on the local produce market Saturday morning, although urban attendance seemed to maintain the usual numbers.

Winter apples were featured on the outside market with No. 1 Spies bringing up to $2 per bushel with good Talman Sweets bringing the same figure. Snows sold generally at $1.50 per bushel with the general run of cooking apples selling from $1.25 to $1.50 per bushel. A few pears sold at 50 cents basket.

Large Offering Fowl

The offering of fowl in the inside market was quite large with well-finished chickens bringing up to $1.90 each, the average price being from 30 to 32 cents the pound. The general price asked for fowl was from $1.10 to $1.35. A few ducks sold from $1.50 to $2.25 each.

Butter maintained the usual 40 to 42½ cents per pound with Grade "A" eggs holding firm at the 50-cent level. Mediums sold at 48c and pullets at 45c the dozen.

Potatoes $2 a Bag

Potatoes held steady at $2 per bag on the outside market, although the offering did not appear overly large. A few tomatoes were still offered, selling at 25 cents the basket. Cauliflower sold up to 30 cents each, Spanish onions 70c the peck and carrots, parsnips, turnips and beets, 35 to 40c the peck.

Whitefish brought 28 cents the pound, with pike, and herring selling at 20 cents and suckers, three fish for 25 cents.

One of the largest offerings of young porkers to be seen on the local market in some weeks was in evidence with prices ranging all the way from $5.50 up to $7.50 each.

Weekly Livestock Report

Toronto, Oct. 30. (CP)— Cattle prices were down 15 to 25 cents on most grades of killers in trade on the Livestock Market here this week. Lambs gained 25 cents cwt., sheep were steady. Calves and hogs were unchanged.

BRIDGE MUSKEGS FIGHT VARMITS AS ROAD SPEEDS

Alaska Highway Buildera Overcame Many Difficulties to Push 1,599-Mile Highway Through to Fairbanks

By ERIC SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Construction of the Alaska Highway — vital link in the vast North American defence scheme — has been a race against time.

The 1,599-mile highway from Dawson Creek, 50 miles south of here, to Fairbanks, Alaska, now, however, is receiving the finishing touches and traffic is expected to roll over its entire length by Dec. 1.

Starting last March 9, the men staged a race with the spring thaw to transport supplies over the Peace River. Now they are having a race with winter to slash remaining uncleared links.

The United States Army Corps of Engineers took on a tough job when they started construction. The troops arrived at Dawson Creek March 9. Their first job was to transport supplies from that point, end of steel for Northern Alberta Railways. Equipment trains rolled into the Creek and men worked day and night to unload the flat cars. Citizens of the town, truckmen, garagemen, traders, guides, all helped to get the supplies to headquarters at Fort St. John, 50 miles north of Dawson Creek, before the spring thaw, expected in mid-April.

A road existed between Dawson Creek and Fort St. John. It crossed the Peace River, frozen solid in winter. Ferries are used to cross in summer, but there is an "in-between season" of three weeks or more before the boats can operate. A sudden thaw in early April almost stopped the steady flow of supplies, and trucks could make the crossing only during the coldest hours late at night. Finally the last load was over —and the river ice broke up behind it. The first obstacle had been mastered. All that was left was to build the road.

Contractors' Part

Meanwhile, the Public Roads Administration set up offices at Edmonton, since transferred to Fort St. John, and from there hired Canadian and American civilian contractors to follow the army corps, whose job was to construct the pioneer road. Job of the P. R. A. engineers and surveyors was to check grades and elevations, design bridges, and culverts and measure out road allowances.

Canadian contractors were hired to clear the right of way between Dawson Creek and Fort St. John. Route of the original road between these points was changed as it was not in line with specifications of the P. R. A. The contractors gave the stretch the primary layers of heavy rock and in some cases applied the final layer of gravel.

Now army engineers who tore a path through from Fort St. John to Fort Nelson — a distance of about 300 miles — have been sent farther north to aid men who throughout the summer have been cutting their way from Watson Lake, Yukon, just north of the British Columbia border. Another group has been working southward from Whitehorse since last spring. Still another group, which started at Fairbanks, is hacking its way through near the Alaska-Yukon border.

Throughout the summer months, the men worked in shifts around-the-clock, taking advantage of the long daylight hours.

The engineers have faced immense difficulties and report that stretches of muskeg, at first believed impossible to overcome, have been skirted where possible or have been crossed successfully with a corduroy road.

Many Pests

The men had to work in intense heat during the summer and staged a further battle against swarms of mosquitoes, black flies and horse flies during the evenings. Sleeping proved a major problem but the men survived and today the long-hoped-for highway stretches through to the north.

Bridges have been built and forests hacked through so that for the first time in history motorized traffic can travel between Alaska and the rest of the North American continent.

Under an agreement between the United States and Canada, construction of the highway was undertaken by the army engineers as a military project but after the war the highway will be taken over by the Canadian government.

Over the road will roll supplies and equipment to Canadian and American forces in the north.

Persons who have travelled the route report it is not a rutted wagon trail or pioneer road but an artery which will afford two-way traffic over most stretches.

Rand Paper Tells Why He Went — Highlights of News From Southern Union

Cape Town, Oct. 30—(CP)—All South Africa is throbbing with pride over the honor bestowed on the Union by the reception accorded Prime Minister J. C. Smuts in London. High Point of his visit so far has been his broadcast from the British House of Commons where he declared the time had come to pass from defensive to offensive action.

The Rand Daily Mail asserted this was an immediate message for all the United Nations, and concluded, "We think it was to say this that he went to England." Even the Transvaaler, journalistic organ of the opposition Nationalist party, spread the story across its front page.

Acting Prime Minister J. H. Hofmeyr has issued a statement regarding the recent United Party victory in the Hottentots-Holland by-election: "What you did will be great encouragement to Prime Minister Smuts in the great work he now is doing in London for South Africa and the world."

The date for formal opening of Union parliament has been set as Jan. 16, and will be on the same restricted scale as last season. The government has not yet completely arranged its legislative program which is expected to be confinned to only the most urgent matters.

High tribute has been paid by Maj.-Gen. George Brink, General Officer Commanding the Inland Command, to those non-European units which served in North Africa. "They stood by us through thick and thin and never flinched," he said.

Women's Demonstration

Three thousand, mostly women, joined in a meeting at the Johannesburg city hall emblematic of the sympathy and solidarity of the women of the Witwatersrand with the women of the Soviet Union in their heroic participation in the war against German aggression. A special mesage was read from Mrs. Winston Churchill, wife of the British Prime Minister.

All game in areas adjoining the Hluhluwe Game Reserve in Zululand has been ordered destroyed to check the spread of magana, a disease caused by the tse-tse fly, to domestic animals. It is estimated this will involve the slaughter of 15,000 head of all varieties. Game within the reserve, including the only surviving white rhino in the world, is to be spared.

Men wearing the blue of the Royal Air Force and the khaki of the South African Air Force paraded together near Pretoria when they received their wings from Lord Harlech, High Commissioner in South Africa for the government of the United Kingdom. This was the first group of R.A.F. men graduating in the Union under the Empire Flying Training Scheme.

The government has taken steps to alleviate the position of building societies which have been adversely affected by the drastic curtailment of private construction. Under the new ruling, requirements that full amount of deposits must be covered by mortgages as set down in the Building Societies Act have been suspended, and the societies now are permitted to hold government bonds and similar liquid securities against deposits.

Youths of 15 and over who join the Union Defence Force as signallers will be able to obtain employment as civil servants in the Post Office after the war as a neew scheme evolved by the government and the Post Office Department.

Smoked Fish Adds Zest To Wintertime Menus

Clever housewives are meeting the challenge of present food limitations by increasingly bringing into play variety in flavor and methods of serving it.

Smoked fish has a piquant flavor that lifts a simple meal out of the routine class. As well as being nourishing, it has many other factors in its favor. Because already partly cooked, the cooking time is very short, and only a low temperature is required. If it is felt to be too strongly flavored it can easily be freshened by simmering in hot water to cover, (either on the stove or in the oven.) It combines pleasingly with cream sauces, to which may be added grated cheese or mushrooms. It lends itself to combination with vegetables, fresh or leftover, in casserole dishes or souffles.

Simplest method of serving Finnan Haddie which ranks high on the smoked fish list, is to cover with water and simmer for a few minutes. Drain and add a cup of warm milk and 2 tablespoons of butter. Place in the oven to keep warm but don't leave it in the oven long enough for the milk to curdle. (The fish is simmered in water because smoke in the fish would curdle the milk if cooked in milk first.) A garnish of parsley gives it a decorative dash. Two pounds will serve six.

Here is another fish food suggestion recommended by the Department of Fisheries: try the racy flavor of spiced herring, mackerel or pickerel in potato salad or as stuffing for partly quartered tomatoes served with tartar sauce on lettuce.

WHAT IT MATTERS TO TALK FRANKLY IN NAZI GERMANY

Canadian General Tells His Officers of Interesting Experience in Hinterland Before the Outbreak of War

(By WILLIAM STEWART)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

LONDON (CP) — Lt.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar recalled a personal experience in Nazi Germany to illustrate pointedly for officers of the reconnaissance regiments of the 1st. Canadian Corps the reason why Canada is at war.

The Corps Commander, speaking briefly during an informal dinner held by the regiments, remarked on the friendly atmosphere of the gathering. He added: "Your conversations tonight will cover a wide range of subjects. I wonder if many here realize how restricted would be your topics if by some trick of fate this regimental reunion was being held in Hitler's Germany."

Following the Imperial Conference held here five years ago," said Gen. Crerar, "I took two weeks' leave to visit Germany and gain some first hand impressions of the results of the National Socialist revolution which had been initiated some four years previously. I had very good introductions and met a number of important Germans. In the main, I got little out of what they said."

Nazi Conditions

"Under the circumstances that was to be expected," the General went on. "Even in those days, in Germany, men lived longest who talked least. But from one German, and on one occasion, I got a lot.

"This German and I had been brought together by an Englishman who knew us both and was trusted by both. The three of us dined together under arrangements which would secure us against being overheard. Until coffee was served we got literally nowhere, so far as frank conversation was concerned, but then a remark of mine concerning my early return to Canada to rejoin my family provided the key which unlocked his heart and his thoughts.

"For over two hours," said Gen. Crerar, "he told us of the hell-on-earth which life had become to any man or woman of independent views whose fate it was to live under the repressions and brutalities of the National Socialist State.

Living Death

"I suppose there was little in his story that has not been stated or written about by others who have escaped from Hitler's grip. Still, because it was a personal experience, it impressed itself profoundly on my mind. Nor was that impression lightened when, on this German driving me back to my hotel, realizing that his life, and his family's life, lay in my hands, he pleaded with fear on his face and tears in his eyes that I should forget that I had ever met him or had heard his name or knew anything at all about him.

"It is to prevent this 'living death' encompassing ourselves and our families that we have gone to war, for we believe that it is better that we should lose our lives than lose those fundamental values in human relations which make life worth living.

"Well, that is all I have to say," concluded the Corps Commander. "It seemed to me appropriate that we should remind ourselves on this free and friendly occasion that we don't inherit freedom and friends —we always need to fight for them."

French Resistance In Madagascar Is Growing Weaker

London, Oct. 31 (CP).—The war office announced tonight that East African troops, completing Britain's occupation of Madagascar, had entered Fianarantsoa, the most important town in the southern part of the island, yesterday.

Capture of the town, until recently French headquarters, marked an advance of 260 miles from the captured mid-island capital of Tananarive.

The communique said it was doubtful that the Vichy French could offer any further effective resistance, but said that time-consuming road obstacles were "likely to continue".

A short engagement sixteen miles to the north preceded the occupation of Fianarantsoa, it said, with the British suffering "very slight casualties"an dtaking 440 prisoners including two lieutenant-colonels.

Torch Should Be Given Best Possible Attention

These are days when all Canadians are metal conscious. Because of the importance of critical materials for the manufacture of flashlights and batteries everyone would do well to take the best possible care of the flashlights and batteries he has on hand.

Consumer Information Service points out that flashlights should never be used continuously. Snap them on only when absolutely necessary. Needless use of flashlights materially wastes "juice".

Keep flashlights out of the reach of children. They are not to be considered toys.

Don't throw away flashlights that aren't working. They may only need fresh batteries or a new bulb or lens. And remember to keep flashlights in the same spot at all times so that they will be handy in an emergency.

NO LANGUAGE PROBLEM

London (CP)—When 14 non-bilingual fighting French sailors enlisted on H.M.S. Wells (former U.S. destroyer) they found the skipper spoke French and Italian, another officer German, French, Italian, and Spanish and a third Swedish, Danish and German.

A program to encourage increased production of high grade rotenone bearing roots in the Amazon valley has been undertaken by the governments of the United States and Brazil.

Whitehall Notebook

By DOUGLAS AMARON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Oct. 29—(CP)—Members of parliament have as much difficulty setting their own problems as they do those of the nation.

Ever since Sir Stafford Cripps rebuked M. P.'s who left for lunch after Prime Minister Churchill's speech during a war debate members have been discussing the posibility of altering the hours of sitting so that hunger won't interfere with attendance in the House of Commons.

There have been many informal discussions by members of all parties. However there is little likelihood of a change in the opening time, at present 11 a.m.

In pre-war days the house met after lunch and the sitting ran into the evening. That was all right for peacetime, but now most members prefer to come and go early in order to avoid the blackout.

If each series of sittings were lengthened by one day, as some members propose, that probably would raise ministerial objection for members of cabinet rank want as much time free from the preoccupation of parliament as posible.

So at present it looks as though the existing arangement will continue with members who are speaking at the lunch hour pitting their oratorical skill against the drawing power of an empty stomach.

Latest M. P. to join the ranks of cyclists is Richard Law, under-Secretary for foreign affairs. One of the shyest men in parliament, Law usually dismounts well before reaching the House, apparently preferring to walk the last 100 yards rather than ride in full view of his colleagues. Law is the son of Andrew Bonar Law, Britain's only Canadian-born Prime Minister.

Hugh Dalton, Board of Trade President, is considered the most methodical minister in the house. There is no frenzied turning over of pages when he is asked a question out of chronological order. He has an indexing system of his own.

Answers to all questions are bound like a loose-leaf notebook with the numbers ranged on the index tab system. When the number is called, Dalton places his finger on it and the book opens at the right place. On one side are the question and answer. Opposite is additional information in case someone asks a supplementary question.

The Lord Chancellor, Lord Simon, said he was "completely flummoxed" when a Belgian jurist asked him to describe briefly the duties of his office. He then proceded to detail some of these duties.

They are both judicial and ministerial, Lord Simon said, "a curious combination, but it works." In addition, the lord chancellor has ecclesiastical patronage and special jurisdiction over lunatics. He also is keeper of the king's conscience and custodian of the great seal.

He recalled that when Lord Eldon was lord chancellor he took the great seal to bed with him. There was a fire at his house and Lord Eldon ran out in his nightshirt with the seal, which he hid for safety in a geranium bed—and then forgot where he had buried it.

Anthony Eden, Foreign Secretary, had completed an important address on post-war relations before an all-party gathering at Leamington and Capt. W. L. Dingley, a prospective liberal candidate for the House of Commons, rose to propose a vote of thanks. The audience was startled when he began by complaining he had not been allowed to speak at the meeting. It was astounded when he declared:

"Nothing contributed more to the war than Eden's statement that he considered it an honor to convey the Hoare-Laval proposals to Mussolini for the partition of Abyssinia."

Eden was somewhat perturbed by this strange "vote of thanks" but smilingly retorted: "I am not going into past controversies: there are quite a lot of things I could say too."

In the gossip category is the report the government plans a premanent air raid precautions organization for after the war. A skeleton service would be maintained with a "staff college" to keep leaders up to date on air attack and defence methods.

Miss Megan Lloyd George has become the first woman member of the Welsh Church Commission, set up in 1914 as a temporary body to administer the large secularized parts of the old Welsh established church endowments. The commission, which was supposed to wind up in 1919, has come in for severe criticism in recent months. Some parliamentary quarters feel the £2,000,000 fund it administers should be handed over to local authorities.

A strange souvenir of the first great war was found near the chancellor's gate in the House of Lords. It was a three-inch stokes trench mortar bomb and how it came to be left at Westminster is still puzzling authorities.

Lord Woolton's son, Hon. Roger David Marquis, is an aircraftman in the Royal Air Force . . . Employees at the war office and air ministry get artificial sunlight treatment to offset the effects of working in bricked-in quarters. . awards for bravery and leadership at Tobruk included a Distinguished Service Medal for acting leading seaman Marmaduke Winston Spencer Churchill Snow . . .Son of a Churchill admirer no doubt.
